MARKET NOTIONS

SOMETIMES trends, influences and movements, like the weather, get so broad and prevalent that they escape the attention they deserve, or perhaps require. Perhaps it was in that area that this journal last week presented a piece entitled "War-and-Defense No. 1 Influence on Grosses".

That examination of the box office scene, reported in considerable detail, indicates that the over-all picture is as spotty as the map of employment under the war-plan. There is, so far, no nationwide adjustment to the wartime economy. The motion picture manifestations are particularized.

All this means, in final effect, that more than ever the individual exhibitor, operating his own retail situation, is rather much on his own—and that the total success of the box office is to be controlled by the sum total of the individual showman's skill and efforts, rather than by any nationally designed campaigns, drives or other hoopla.

Further and considerably larger effects of the war effort on the pattern of industry and payrolls are indicated.

In a special dispatch from Washington by Mr. W. H. Lawrence, the New York Times, under a Washington dateline, said last Saturday: "Defense officials predicted today that adoption of the new 'victory' military program would mean the virtual cessation next year of the manufacture of durable goods for consumers. . . . "

That will be notice to any showman who offers his screen wares in any community that depends on payrolls, or the production of materials for manufacture, to have a look about as to where the buying power of his patronage is to come from.

In theory the development would mean that those who work on the wares of peace would be working on munitions of war; but, as the employment maps of today, and the relief map, too, show, the national picture is not the local picture—and the theatre of the screen is made up of some fifteen thousand very local points. Each is an operation special unto itself.

IN broader prospect one may see opportunity for some of the more lightsome and frivolous merchandise, including fleeting shadows on the screen, when the wage earners' money cannot be spent for motor cars, trick washing machines and self-timing cook stoves, and especially not on the installment plan.

It is just possible that as guns take over and butter goes to war, the wage earners, where they get the wage, will be finding more quarters heavy in the pocket at the show hour. Hungry retailers in every order of business permitted to operate, from feathers to soda pop, will be after those quarters. It will be necessary to indicate that the seat at the movies is a big value.

This will be turning the pictures more and more to the mass and volume market.

There is more than a hint in that direction appearing currently in an institutional campaign addressed at the motion picture exhibitor in the pages of Motion Picture Herald by Republic Pictures Corporation. It dwells on the screen service of the great common people, at movie prices with movie product.

Another expression of significance comes to hand in a brochure presenting a dissertation from Mr. Kerwin H. Fulton of Outdoor Advertising, Inc., who, while urging pictorial appeal, color, contrast, repetition, remarks that two-thirds of all food products, seventy per cent of automobiles, "are bought by people earning less than $40 a week. Mass consumption by families with low incomes is the backbone of your market. You can't get rich selling the others, because there are too few of them".

APPARENTLY there is in progress a new empowerment of the least sophisticated strata of box office buying power and by reason of strictures, direct and indirect, in taxation and other pressures on higher bracket consumers, no encouragement of their spendings.

In consequence, one may expect that the motion picture makers will be turning more to the pabulum of the mass magazines, the comic strips, and the like, less to the socially conscious drama of the minorities, less to the books of the reading few.

The boys from the assembly line, and the girls that go with 'em, want action.

THE Appeal Board, known as the "supreme court of the motion picture's arbitration machinery," in overruling an award on clearance to a New Hampshire showman said in the course of a lengthy dissertation:

"Complainant's opinion is based on some twelve years of experience as an exhibitor, which has been his only connection with the motion picture business. . . . "

You can write your own headline on that one.

A CROSS-SECTION of a decidedly positive sector of political and social thought is represented by the New Canaan express plying between sub-suburban Connecticut and New York's Grand Central. An eminent barrister and solicitor who travels that way is observed always to turn first to the obituary page of his morning Times. In answer to "Why?" he has replied, "I am ever aware that a few good obituaries might have a large bearing on what is ahead in the news section."

PLEASANT to record, that Rockefeller Center garden, down in the bottom of the canyon off Fifth Avenue, concerning which we have complained of Mexican cactus and Siberian crabapples, is now heartily all-American with a field of shocked corn and pumpkins. Mr. Merle Crowell, impresario of that fitful and ever-changing piece of landscape, has been petitioned to add a flurry of snow and some rabbit tracks.

Bundles from Britain

GREAT BRITAIN, in London, on Monday formally approved a new monetary agreement with American motion picture producers permitting them to withdraw up to $37,500,000 in blocked currency and future revenue after November 1st. Almost immediately home office lawyers, foreign managers, and executives of the eight majors met at New York to discuss how the released funds will be divided.

Fifty per cent of the frozen film holdings may be withdrawn starting November 1st and up to $20,000,000 in current revenue will be released during the ensuing year. An immediate withdrawal of $5,000,000 in current revenue is permitted, with subsequent quarterly remittances in a like amount. Removal of the fifty per cent of blocked funds can take place in two equal installments, on November 1st and April 1st, the agreement specifies.

Wednesday, the eight major distributors announced an agreement to leave one-eighth of the newly unfrozen money in England as a revolving fund. A total of $12,000,000 will be removed immediately, it was said. Seven million dollars represents blocked funds, $5,000,000 is from revenues.

Estimates of the amount of American film money frozen in Great Britain range variously from $20,000,000 to $35,000,000. The unremitted balances were accrued under the 1939-41 agreements. The $20,000,000 withdrawal limit for current revenues increases the 1940-41 quota by almost $7,100,000. The total amount which Britain will release this year is estimated at from $30,000,000 to $37,500,000.

Indications are that the $20,000,000 in new earnings will be divided next year, as last, on a percentage ratio based on each company's billings.

Division of the blocked funds is said to be more complicated inasmuch as some American companies have used a part of their frozen balances to pay English debts, purchase rights to British films, buy theatres, conduct business enterprises, and produce in Great Britain.

Aid for Russia

CABLE reports from London last week revealed that continued protests against Metro's "Comrade X" as "untimely ridicule of Russia," resulted in withdrawal of the film in England. Australia and New Zealand are expected to follow. MGM had inserted a foreword which pointed out that the picture was all "in good fun" and intended as "good-natured entertainment, in no way reflecting upon the gallant and heroic struggle the Russians are now waging against the Nazis," but the protests continued. Meanwhile, in Mexico, the film was shelved after trade unions there voiced disapproval.

Film, stage and radio stars joined with politicians and diplomats, Monday, in launching a "Russian War Relief" campaing in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Viscount Halifax, Great Britain's Ambassador to the U. S., and Joseph Davies, American Ambassador to Russia, headed the speakers. Diplomats from most Nazi-conquered countries were present.

Plans for a mammoth "V" for Victory dinner for the benefit of 49 anti-Hitler refugees, currently in French concentration camps, were launched this week in Los Angeles and Hollywood under the auspices of the American Committee to Save Refugees, the Exile Writers Committee and the United American Spanish Aid Committee.

The dinner will be held at Ciro's in Hollywood, on November 10th. Ida Lupino, film star, and Louis Bromfield, author, will be co-chairmen. Principal speakers will include Walter Duranty, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Philip Merivale and Heinrich Mann.

The Ontario Board of Motion Picture Censors this week lifted the embargo on Russian films, after a three-year prohibition, passing the Soviet musical, "Volga, Volga," with minor deletions. The feature is booked to open at the Hollywood Theatre in Toronto on Monday.

Flying Talent to Army

FIRST of a series of camp shows for servicemen stationed at outlying defense posts, and arranged by the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy and Hollywood, will get off to a "flying" start on Monday, in an Army transport plane. A ten-day tour of camps and stations at Caribbean bases was announced Wednesday by the War Department. The shows are being arranged with the cooperation of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense.

Puerto Rico is the first port of call for the entertainers—John Garfield, as master of ceremonies, Oliver Hardy and Stan Laurel Chico Marx, Mitzi Mayfair, Jane Pickens, Benay Venuta, et al.

Active operation of the shows will be handled by Camp Shows, Inc., which filed incorporation papers in New York this week, and of which Eddie Dowling, Broadway producer, is president, and Bert Lytell and Y. Frank Freeman are directors.

A talent pool composed of leading film stars is being established by the Committee in Hollywood and a pool of stage and variety talent is being formed in New York. Entertainment provided by these two sources will supply 186 Army camps and naval stations at the rate of one show every two weeks on a grand circuit.

The story of where the Army stands as a film customer appears on page 36.

ASCAP Back on Air

WEDNESDAY afternoon, at 4:00 o'clock, in the offices of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, at Rockefeller Center, New York, the nation's longest, costliest and bitterest music-war was terminated. ASCAP formally signed contracts with National and Columbia broadcasting systems, which returned ASCAP music to both networks for the first time since last December 31st, at midnight, Wednesday.

Signing for the Society were Gene Buck, president; for NBC, NilesTrammell, president; and for CBS, Mefford Runyon, vice president.

Terms of the contract agreed upon by all the parties in August, remain unchanged. Basic provision is blanket payment of two and three-quarter per cent of net time sales to ASCAP for network programs which are cleared at the source, and two and one-half per cent for stations managed and operated by the networks. The deal also provides for a two per cent payment on telecasts of ASCAP music. Affiliated stations and independents will make their own agreements in buying program music with the ASCAP, or with Broadcast Music, Inc., the organization set up by the networks last winter when the ASCAP catalog-ban became effective.

Clark Postpones

RESUMPTION of Senate subcommittee hearings on motion picture propaganda was postponed indefinitely at Washington on Wednesday. The four majority members of the investigating subcommittee of the Interstate Commerce Committee have dropped the inquiry for the time being, it was announced, in order that they might join fellow isolationists in the fight against revision of the Neutrality Act by the Senate.

Senator D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, chairman of the subcommittee, announced the postponement after a conference Wednesday morning with Senator Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire. It was planned to resume the hearings on November 3rd, but Senator Clark said, "The Committee met Wednesday and decided that they would not hold hearings until the neutrality debate has been completed because it is of transcendent importance."

Washington observers predicted that the Senate debate would continue through next week. They considered it unlikely that the propaganda sessions would resume until after the middle of November—if and when.

Charges last week by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana isolationist and reported sponsor of the propaganda probe that coin-in-the-slot film machines exhibit "lewd and lascivious" films brought denials this week from sponsors of the "juke box" machine and its product. Sam Coslow, president of RCM Productions, which makes films for the James (President's son) Roosevelt-Gordon Mills "Soundies" machine, offered to screen any of his pictures for the Senator and pointed out that they were all reviewed by censors. John F. Barry of Minoco Productions, and other coin film producers, indignantly joined in the denials.

Shows for Soldiers

FILM theatres in the South, principally Louisiana and the Carolinas, long darkened to Sunday shows, are opening Sundays to entertain servicemen on Army maneuvers. The United Service Organization has succeeded in inducing many Southern communities to relax Sunday film taboos in those locations near maneuver grounds for the period of Army operations. A USO spokesman pointed out that soldiers on maneuvers have virtually no means of entertainment while in isolated sections where war games are being held.

Circuits, AFM Agree

CIRCUIT executives of Warner Brothers, Paramount, and RKO on Wednesday agreed with James Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, to sign standard union contracts, with certain amendments subject to future revision. A dispute over payment of social security for theatre musicians prompted strike threats in Pittsburgh and other cities in which the union and circuits had contracts. See page 47.

Agreement is still to be reached on amendments to certain clauses of the Form B contract, it was reported. These amendments will be the subject of further discussions, the circuits said, and the contracts will be revised in accord with the eventual agreement. The union's Form B provides for payment of social security by the employer, but it is reported that this is still open to discussion under the terms of today's agreement. Mr. Petrillo said telegrams had been sent to 98 locals authorizing bands to play the circuit theatres.

International Ladies

THE melting pot of showmanship did a bit of blending for the cause of internationalism, and the box-office, when Morris Rosenthal, manager of Loew's Majestic theatre, in Bridgeport, Conn., promoted his engagement of "International Lady" with a committee of local women representing the various nationalities, and called, oddly enough, "International Ladies." The group served Mr. Rosenthal in welcoming the stars of the picture, in town for the opening, and in other directions reflected in sizable newspaper attention, all of which is detailed in this week's Managers' Round Table starting on page 53.

Installment Buying

DAVID SELZNICK, producer-partner of United Artists, has worked out an unusual deal for the purchase of screen rights to "Keys of the Kingdom," Dr. A. J. Cronin's novel.

Terms of the agreement include a basic price of $100,000 with payment spread over a year. An initial $10,000 payment goes to Dr. Cronin for four weeks' work on the screen treatment. If, at the end of six months, Mr. Selznick still desires to hold screen rights, he must pay $40,000 to the author; at the end of a year if he still intends to film the story, an additional $50,000 is to be put on the line, a total of $100,000.

"Keys of the Kingdom" was published by Little, Brown and Company, which says 436,000 copies are already in print, 300,000 copies having been sold.

Mr. Selznick is considering Ingrid Bergman for the part of Maria Veronica, the nun, in the story. However, there have been no other selections for feature roles.

No Theatre Television

THAT widely-touted 'new medium' of theatre television appears increasingly remote. The first effort to place a large-screen receiver in a theatre, at the Arthur Mayer's Rialto, in New York, ended this week in litigation.

The Midtown Theatre Corporation, of which Mr. Mayer is managing director, filed a suit in New York Supreme Court against Scophony, Ltd., of London, which installed an experimental large-screen receiver in the Rialto last July.

The action asks the court to confirm an arbitration award of $1,891 against Scophony for an alleged breach of contract to supply equipment at the Rialto, the British engineering firm being charged with failing to adapt the receiver to revised FCC television standards effective on July 1st. Paul Raibourn, Paramount executive in charge of television, arbitrated the case which was begun several weeks ago.

PITTSBURGH IS NO. 1 BOX OFFICE BENEFICIARY FROM WAR-AND-DEFENSE

Although Second Group of Territories Surveyed Shows Theatre Attendance Lagging Behind Other Business Indices

Pittsburgh, capital of the nation's heavy industries, and a center of the defense arsenal, about tops the list of cities in which defense expenditures have increased entertainment incomes by as much as 25 per cent. The Iron City is a typical example of the booming centres of heavy industry, where, a MOTION PICTURE HERALD survey reveals, new munitions factories, shipyards, airplane plants, army and navy base construction and other defense activities have added millions of dollars to payrolls.

Showmen in the western Pennsylvania area and in other centers of heavy industry, which received the initial rearmament appropriations, anticipate record boxoffice grosses during the coming season. Many, however, report that boxoffice receipts, to date, have failed to keep proportionate pace with expenditures for consumer goods and other indicators of rising business.

Attendance Up 20 Per Cent

Although Pittsburgh exhibitors estimate that boxoffice incomes have risen by 20 per cent they report that they have failed to match the upward curve of department store sales, auto purchases, home building, luxury expenditures and many competitive entertainment activities. This has been true in other heavy industry cities, too. Payrolls in many heavy industries, in Pittsburgh and elsewhere have doubled and tripled, it is reported. Also, many thousands of new workers have been attracted to the areas.

Cities engaged in other than heavy manufacturing, or in agriculture or specialized production have been slower in adopting themselves to the new "defense economy" the HERALD survey indicates. Except in cities adjacent to new or expanding military posts the rise in theatre grosses has been much less. Exhibitors generally are hopeful, however, that the policy of subcontracting and the eventual wide circulation of heavy defense industry wages soon will reach their ticket windows. There are indications of this in a number of cities already, including Philadelphia, Boston, Atlanta, Birmingham, St. Louis, Kansas City and the Pacific coast cities.

Other manifestations in the motion picture trade of the defense program include the replacement of ushers of draft age, the sale of defense bonds and stamps by theatres, cut rate admission prices for members of the armed forces and shifts in matinee and evening screening times to meet new factory schedules. These effects, are shown to vary widely, according to the section, by the HERALD survey.

Theatre Grosses Up

Motion picture grosses are up 15 to 20 per cent in most locations throughout Pittsburgh's industrial arsenal district, due primarily to national defense manufacturing. Even so, film increases are lagging behind gains shown in other branches of the entertainment business.

With total payrolls in metropolitan Pittsburgh now averaging about 75 million dollars monthly, and 22,000 more jobs to be created in new and enlarged defense factories during the next 15 months, the majority of exhibitors expect the coming season to be the best in history.

Paradoxically, skeptical theatre men point to the industrial boom as prime reason for pessimism. Believing that factory workers are so busy that they have few hours in a day for amusement, some exhibitors claim that theatres are suffering while night clubs, pinball machines, and radio occupy the wage-earners' scant spare time.

Except for occasional bookings that receive critics' and customers' thumbs down, the eight downtown first-run theatres have been enjoying above-average grosses for the past two months. Their percentage increases, however, are smaller than those of most neighborhood and suburban houses, because more families than ever are going to the newest theatres when they want to attend a movie.

150 Theatres Play Daily

Pittsburgh is the center of a metropolitan area of more than 50 boroughs and townships whose total population is nearly two million. In this territory, more than 150 theatres are in daily operation. Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, managed by Harry Kalmine, operates 31 houses, the Harris Amusement Company, headed by John H. Harris, operates nine.

Thus far only one theatre has changed its opening hours to fit in with defense plants' working shifts. It is the Harris Jeannette in suburban Jeannette, site of rubber and glass factories, where opening time has been moved to noon from 1 P. M.

Warner Brothers experimented recently with changed opening hours in Ambridge and Johnstown, but discovered that attendance remained approximately the same.

"Workers have from 7 to 12 hours at their jobs, consume five to eight more hours sleeping, and they'll use the remainder of the day in whatever way they prefer," Warners' publicity director, Joe Feldman, said. "If they want to go to a movie, they'll fit it in, and if they don't, our revised opening and closing times won't change their minds."

One house, the Harris Newsreel, downtown, opens at 9 A. M., but its schedule has been in effect for several years.

Most theatres close at midnight, or before. Only the Casino, burlesque theatre that includes an hour's film shorts on its program, is regularly open during early morning hours, once a week, with a Sunday midnight show. On holidays, most theatres present programs at midnight.

Independent theatres have not changed schedules, because they believe that the potential boxoffic gains would not pay for the added operating costs, according to Fred Herrington, secretary of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of western Pennsylvania.

"Rare is the theatre that can show 30 per cent increases during the past three months over the same period a year ago," said one of the major distributors. A consensus of Film Row executives, independent exhibitors, and officials of the Warner and Harris offices considered the 10 to 20 per cent gain as average. Paradoxically, the larger increases are in areas where white collar employment is as important as factory labor, rather than in strictly mining or mill towns.

Neither high defense payrolls nor the Army draft has caused much of a change in theatre operation, yet. Naturally, in a thickly populated market of almost 2,000,000 people, theatre personnel has been affected by Selective Service and regular Army calls. No major executive changes have been necessary, and in only a few instances have house managers been called. Most draftees and enlistees have ben ushers or ticket-takers. However, the houses have had few employment problems, because most of the ushers in this district are of high school or college age and ineligible for military call.

Only four theatres in the district have replaced ushers with usherettes, All Weiss' three houses in McKeesport, and the Casino.

Very Few Reopenings

New theatre building or old theatres' reopenings are also sparse, with exhibitors believing that present seats can handle anticipated patronage increases.

Warners reopened the Arsenal a few weeks ago after having closed it for several months for remodeling. Last spring they took over the new Shadyside theatre after it was built by the Finkel-Mervis interests. In Wheeling, Michael Halm has reopened the Marsh theatre.

Unlike past years, few houses were closed for the summer this year. In the small mining and agricultural communities, where exhibitors formerly shuttered except for Saturday trade, the theatres remained open throughout the week. In certain Pittsburgh neighborhoods, where a similar practice prevailed, exhibitors likewise decided to stay open and and risk summer losses.

Military activities have affected theatre policies somewhat. Both Warners and Harris have established reduced admission fees for men in the armed services. They charge 20 cents plus defense tax on tickets that retail up to 40 cents, and 25 cents plus tax on tickets above 40 cents. Some independent exhibitors are adhering to the same price scale. Some are admitting uniformed men without charge, while others are assessing them the same admission as civilians pay.

Attendance by uniformed men in this territory is an almost negligible part of the total audience. The only servicemen in Pittsburgh are those home on furlough or awaiting call to duty. The nearest Army camp is at Indiantown Gap, 200 miles away.

Most exhibitors, particularly the chains, emphasize defense angles of full-length and short subjects, as well as the newsreels.

The Harris company is offering bank night winners their choice of defense bonds or cash. Some exhibitors have discussed selling defense

HOW DEFENSE EFFORT AFFECTS BOXOFFICES

The reaction of boxoffices in every section of the country to the nation's widespread defense program is the subject of this special MOTION PICTURE HERALD survey. The accompanying article is the second of a series revealing the reaction in the entertainment field to defense expenditures, the draft, new working schedules, labor migrations and other manifestations of the national emergency in every section. The third article in the nationwide study will appear in MOTION PICTURE HERALD next week. The first appeared on page 13 of the issue of October 25th.

INDIANA, ARKANSAS REPORT GAINS

stamps in their lobbies, but as yet, the U. S. stamp and bond business has been confined to the postoffice, banks, credit union offices, and certain retail stores.

Entertainment entrepreneurs other than exhibitors are expecting their best season, too. Moreover, many are expanding clubs, cafes, bowling alleys, etc., to take care of the bigger patronage anticipated. Many are increasing their budgets for talent and operating personnel.

Under the new resident management of owner Sam Nixon, the Nixon theatre began its season September 15th, the earliest opening in years. The city's only legitimate theatre on a full-time basis, the Nixon has booked attractions through the middle of January, seven of them for a fortnight each. American Theatre Society subscriptions, too, are passing last year's sale, according to Dorothy O'Connor, secretary. Last year's gross at the Nixon was approximately $350,000.

In November, Pittsburgh, will get a second legitimate theatre for the first time in eight years, when the Harris Senator is converted from a picture house for two weeks of "Life With Father." The drama circuit here this winter will also include the Pittsburgh Playhouse, presenting 21 weeks of amateur casts under professional direction, and more than 30 little theatres.

New Night Clubs, Ballrooms

After being closed for three months, dance rooms are being reopened by the William Penn, Schenley, Roosevelt, Webster Hall and Ritz hotels, while the Fort Pitt hotel restored dancing after a lapse of several years. Bars with entertainment are also flourishing.

More than a dozen large night clubs, and a score of smaller bright spots, are enjoying packed houses several nights weekly. They present headline shows, and advertise more heavily than ever. Ballroom operators likewise are expecting their biggest year, and several dance floors that formerly opened only occasionally will be on a regular schedule this fall.

Ten roller skating rinks are open six nights weekly, some of them on afternoons also. Two ice skating rinks, one indoor at the Gardens and one outdoor, are also expected to reopen.

Motion pictures are given other competition by the Buhl Planetarium, which produces four shows daily at 25 cents per admission, three college football teams and the professional Steelers grid outfit, weekly boxing matches, dances sponsored by dozens of fraternal and racial organizations, and scores of semi-public bingo games.

Changes in the radio network outlets in Pittsburgh, plus the opening of three new stations in suburban communities, may also cut into theatre attendance. With KDKA taking on NBC-Red, KQV getting KDKA's NBC-Blue, WCAE airing Mutual exclusively after years with NBC-Red, WWSW with its new FM station W47P, and WJAS pushing Columbia, radio listeners are in for a season of fancy program promotion by all stations. WISR opened September 26th in Butler, 30 miles away, and new stations are expected in McKeesport and Washington.

Camps No Help Yet To Carolina Film Men

Theatres in the Charlotte, N. C., area, which includes the big Army camp at Fort Bragg and the Charlotte air base, have not made cut rates for servicemen, nor have they noticed any appreciable box-office increase because of defense activities.

Neil McGill, manager of the Carolina theatre, says that, while business has not shown appreciable gains because of the air base and Army camps, it will probably pick up as more men come in. Mr. McGill says the draft has not caused any theatres to substitute young women for men as ushers.

Charlotte theatres have not yet undertaken to sell defense stamps and bonds.

An interesting sidelight on box-office receipts in colored theatres in this tobacco growing state, is the effect of "oodles of money" on the Negro population in some of the tobacco centers. It is said by theatre operators in Winston-Salem that as long as the Negro makes a medium wage he is a regular attendant at the Negro theatres. But when the peak season is on in tobacco harvesting and marketing and money flows freely as water the Negro will go in for a bigger time, including plenty of "refreshments," and not go near a theatre.

At Belmont, N. C., yarn mills, as a part of their entertainment program for employees, sponsored a new theatre which has been installed by E. E. Wade, in a North Belmont recreation center. Mr. Wade, who operates two motion picture theatres in Belmont proper, has installed $7,000 worth of equipment for the mill workers. North Belmont is 14 miles from Charlotte.

Engine Factory Payroll Spurs Indiana Business

Indianapolis' defense industry—led by the Allison division of General Motors Corporation—has contributed to a huge rise in business at Hoosier boxoffices. Payrolls have increased 50 per cent in a year.

The city's 50-odd theatres are taking in several thousand more dollars each week this fall than they did a year ago. Many of the defense workers live in surrounding cities and towns, and, presumably, spend their movie money in those communities also.

No changes in schedules to accommodate night workers are reported, nor has the proximity of Fort Benjamin Harrison, which has its own theatres, had any effect on business. No new theatres are rising.

All the principal downtown houses, the Indiana, Circle, Loew's and Lyric, charge men in uniform 20 cents, plus tax. Regular admissions are 25, 30, 40 cents, plus tax.

Defense work and the draft have taken many ushers and many assistant and student managers, but these have been replaced, both in the neighborhoods and downtown, without too great hardship. The Lyric, which used to have usherettes, now has ushers.

Indianapolis theatres are not selling defense stamps and bonds.

Receipts in Arkansas Aid Building, Repairs

Arkansas has come in for its part of the national defense projects. A number of film theatres have been constructed, some reopened, and much remodeling has been done. There has also been a noticeable increase in boxoffice receipts.

At Little Rock both the chains and independents are doing an overflow business. Soldiers at Camp Robinson and those employed on defense projects are responsible for this increase. Exhibitors in small towns over the state say that business has increased only to a small extent.

Little Rock theatres are observing the usual hours, closing about 11:45 or midnight. No usherettes are employed. They are not selling defense stamps.

At Hope, Ark., construction of the Government's proving ground employs approximately 800 persons. Cost of this project is said to be $10,000,000. It is also reported that $1,300,000 will be spent for an airport at Hope.

The Saenger theatre at Hope, said to be the largest theatre in the state, has been remodeled and redecorated and was recently reopened.

At Jacksonville, Ark., a fuse and detonator plant has been started which will cost $33,500,000, it is reported. About 8,000 persons will be employed on this project. Jacksonville is 12 miles from Little Rock.

S. A. Arnold and L. U. Cassinelli, Little Rock theatre men, are scheduled to construct a 600-seat house at Jacksonville soon.

A munitions plant, which will employ 1,000 persons and cost $8,000,000, has been started at Marche, Ark., between Little Rock and Conway. At Adams Field, Little Rock, a quartermaster corps army motor depot, employing 300, is under way. Annual payroll for the project will amount to more than $300,000.

One of the largest projects in the state is at Barling, a few miles from Fort Smith, second largest city in Arkansas. This is where Camp Chaffee is to be constructed at a cost of $20,750,000. About 25,000 soldiers will be stationed at the completed camp, it is reported.

In this section several film houses, which have been closed, have reopened and most have been remodeled.

Camp Joseph T. Robinson, near Little Rock, was constructed at a cost of about $14,500,000. About 25,000 men are to be stationed here. A shell loading plant, to cost about $45,000,000, and an ammunition storage depot, which will cost $9,000,000, is under way at Texarkana. More than 200 will be employed on this project.

Box office receipts in the Little Rock area have shown a considerable increase, it is reported. A film theatre has also been established at Levy, Ark., between Little Rock and Camp Robinson.

Five Per Cent Increase In Albany Territory

Despite a big increase in employment in Albany, N. Y., the unanimous answer to questions on what this has meant to the box office is "negligible" or "nothing at all."

The few exceptions report a very slight increase, less than 5 per cent in Schenectady, where General Elctric is employing more men than ever before, and in the small city of Watervliet, where the U. S arsenal's boom has spurred two independent subsequent runs. Al-

WAR EXTENDS PLAYING TIME IN TURKEY

In an effort to conserve film stock, theatres in Turkey are holding films for a far greater length of time than was the practice before the current European conflict, according to a report from the United States Department of Commerce in Washington.

The loss of the French product has caused an increase of the number of English-speaking films shown. Theatre attendance is holding up well. Admission tickets are taxed a total of 20 per cent, but exhibitors are required to absorb the levy. The United States is still the most popular source of product exhibited in Turkey, supplying 108 films of the 164 exhibited in Turkey during the first six months of this year.

EXTRA SHOWS TRIED IN FAR WEST

bany, Troy, Utica, Hudson, Glens Falls and Saratoga, report that people are spending money otherwise or saving, rather than increasing amusement budgets.

The only army camp in the exchange territory, located near Watertown, has aided the boxoffice in the few Schine theatres thereabout.

No early-morning or late-night performances are held for defense workers as the territory is not largely industrial. For the same reason, no new theatres are being built.

A survey did not disclose any Albany territory theatres selling defense stamps and bonds.

All circuits and the majority of independents have made special rates available for men in uniform. The Warner and Fabian circuits, for instance, charge 20 cents plus tax on 44 cent admissions and 25 cents straight on 50 cent admissions. Most independent houses have a straight 10 or 15 cent admission for service men.

The draft has not as yet caused replacement of male ushers by usherettes. Most ushers are young men attending college or high school.

Philadelphia Early Matinees Popular

National defense matinees, inaugurated by the Warner theatre circuit in Philadelphia, continue to spread to other areas. In southern New Jersey, Harry Orlow, manager of Warner's Levoy theatre at Millville, has introduced the early afternoon shows. Workers reporting for work at 3:30 P.M. come to the theatre at 1 P.M. and see a complete show. Regular matinee patrons come at any time up to 2:10 P.M. and see the same complete show. Cards were planted at all industrial plants in the area calling attention to the matinee.

At Bethlehem, Pa., defense matinees were introduced by Harold Hirschberger, manager of the Palace theatre. In Camden, N. J., Joseph Murdock, manager of Warners' Stanley, introduced midnight shows on Fridays for workers who have unusual hours.

Two more Philadelphia houses have fallen in with the policy of scheduling special feature showings for the convenience of defense workers. The Stanley-Warner Stanton and the Studio theatre, both downtown, have special late showings Saturday nights. Gil Fradeneck, manager of the Rialto, upstate at York, Pa., has inaugurated defense matinees.

Warner theatres in Philadelphia, in addition to the early afternoon matinees, have added special late performances for the benefit of workers in defense industries. The last complete show starts at midnight, in defense shows introduced on Fridays at the Stanley theatre, Camden, N. J., and on Saturdays at the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia.

Three Philadelphia theatres, the Warner Family and Savoy and William Goldman's News are operating all night.

Workers' early matinees, introduced at the Philadelphia theatres, has been spreading to the upstate territory. The early matinees were introduced for the first time in York, Pa., by George Flicker, manager of the Hiway theatre. The week previous, Al Ritz, manager of the Ritz theatre, inaugurated the matinees in Allentown, Pa.

Women will replace the males as ushers, it is expected by Philadelphia houses, both circuit and independent, if present circumstances continue. A shortage of replacements for those called for military service and lucrative employment in the national defense industries represent an acute problem for theatre owners. A number of exhibitors have indicated that they are seriously thinking of employing a female service staff.

A Kiddies' Club developed at Saturday matinees was enlisted in the defense saving program by Max Kuperstein, manager of the Tioga theatre, Philadelphia. At the Saturday sessions he called up six youngsters who had birthdays during the week and presented each with a booklet containing a 25-cent stamp "to start the saving habit, so they can help themselves and Uncle Sam."

Extra Evening Shows For Portland Workers

Speaking of defense, as it affects the theatre business in the Portland, Ore., area, Albert J. Fink, representing the Evergreen Theatres, advises that various houses for some months have been running extra evening shows, but no early shows for defense workers.

Box-offices, especially in the first-run houses, are showing a steady increase, principally on account of the defense industries, although shipyards and machine shop orders were received late, as compared to other parts of the country.

RETAIL SALES TOP LAST YEAR'S MARKS

Indicative of increasing circulation of defense dollars, according to financial statisticians, are reports of rising department store sales, bank clearances, and wholesale orders in many cities. The Federal Reserve Board this week reported that department store sales in 12 large cities during the four weeks ending October 18*th were* 20 per cent above 1940. The largest gains were reported in Ceveland, 29 per cent, St. Louis, 26 per cent, San Francisco, 24 per cent and Chicago 22 per cent.

The New York Times also reports increasing sales, capacity factory operation, and large wholesale orders from many sections. Three shift operation is reported from many New England factories. Philadelphia dry goods wholesalers are shipping 46 per cent more orders than last year. Chicago wholesalers are up 10 per cent and department sales 5 to 7 per cent. Minneapolis retailers say they are 10 to 12 per cent ahead of 1940. Kansas City wholesale volume averaged 24 per cent over 1940, last week, and furniture and hardware lines were 40 per cent ahead.

California retail sales were 18 per cent better than last year. Apparel, furniture, radios and household wares rose over 30 per cent while lumber and building supplies were up 52 per cent over 1940 last week. Texas department stores report gains of 3 to 25 per cent. Cleveland last week reported the heaviest coal loadings in history by lake steamers. Apparel, furnishings, electrical appliances and furniture were among New York leaders last week.

Theatres have generally used usherettes, and therefore no changes have been made on account of the draft.

Army camps at Glatsop, Wash., and Vancouver, Wash., house several thousand men who find their way into Evergreen houses in both Vancouver and Portland in increasing numbers. Soldiers are given a 30 per cent reduction.

No additional houses have been contemplated by this chain as the result of defense spending.

Defense stamps were put on sale at various houses, but managers report sales only fair, although extra efforts were made to sell patrons during the week of September 15th to 21st.

Hamrick-Evergreen's Music Hall theatre in Seattle dark for several seasons, is being reopened for week-end film programs to meet the tremendous increase in week-end theatre business there as a result of the defense boom.

The Music Hall will be operated on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, showing return engagements of the bigger productions of the last season at regular first-run prices of 58 cents top. "Gone With the Wind" is the opening attraction under the new policy. Subsequent week-end programs will be double-feature bills, it was announced.

Early Night Shows for Milwaukee Workers

Although payrolls in the Milwaukee area have reached their highest point in years due to defense work, theatres only within the past several weeks have begun to feel any marked improvement at the box-office as the result of this new ready cash.

The employment trend has been steadily upward for the past year. The number of wage earners on Wisconsin factory payrolls increased by 6,600 from July 15th to August 15th to a high of 291,400. This was an increase of 2.3 per cent, while payrolls over the same period rose from $8,899,000 to $9,406,000, or a 5.7 per cent increase.

Exhibitors anticipate that with fewer outdoor attractions to occupy the public's attention, theare business will continue to tend upward into the winter months.

While there are no Army camps in the immediate Milwaukee area, there are numerous industrial concerns engaged in defense work. To woo workers on night shifts, Fox attempted a policy of continuous matinees at key houses. With the exception of the circuit's Paradise, however, which is located in West Allis, home of Allis-Chambers Manufacturing Co., the policy was dropped after several unsuccessful weeks.

Other exhibitors are following a policy of starting shows at 6:30 P. M. so that men on night shifts can leave early enough to get to work. Fox has also spotted Saturday midnight shows at various neighborhood houses with only fair success.

Central Illinois Business Unaffected by Defense

Business in Central Illinois has been stimulated but little by the national defense program, a survey of representative houses around Springfield reveals.

Chief reason that the Central Illinois theatres have not reflected the results of the industrial increases is that there are few plants in the area with defense contracts. There are no military camps located in the area.

Reports received in Springfield from other sections of the state, however, indicate that box office receipts have increased substantially in those parts of the state where military camps or big defense industries are located.

WILLIE BIOFF DEFENSE ACCEPTS THE ACTION BUT CHANGES SCRIPT

Admits Handling More Money Than Witnesses Charged but Says He Carried It as a 'Messenger' for Executives

October winds were stripping little brown leaves from little trees in New York's Foley Square this week, scurrying them across the steps under the looming facade of the white stone Federal Court building. Soon the trees would be very bare.

Up there a jury and Judge John C. Knox, sharp-eyed and carefully quizzical, heard Willie Bioff, on trial with George E. Browne on an indictment charging labor racket extortions from motion picture companies, taking the stand for his own defense, recite a million dollar tale in which he cast himself as just a little carrier pigeon flying between New York and Hollywood with bundles of money that he said Nicholas M. Schenck was asking him to take to his brother Joseph M. Schenck, to deal with "sandbagging legislatures."

Bioff pictured himself as pal, friend and oft-time guest, including a trip to Rio and Paris, of the motion picture industry. He retold that often told story of that matter of the $100,000 that Joseph M. Schenck loaned him in a real estate matter, and revealed that he had been thwarted in an ambition to be an alfalfa farmer. He raised the figures of prosecution testimony on the money handled to above a million dollars—certainly no hay.

Trend of Defense Shown

True to the trend indicated for the defense by straws of direction in the prior cross-examination of prosecution witnesses, Bioff's testimony aimed at establishing a status of collaborator with the accusing picture executives.

Direct intimation was given first last week when Major Albert Warner quoted a Bioff statement about "splitting up with the boys" and George Breslin, of counsel for the defense, leaped in with: "Who were the boys—the Schenck boys?"

That was the defense keynote.

Wednesday came with Bioff on the stand for the third day and with Mathias F. Correa, prosecutor, leading him into a morass of conflictions of sworn statements, aliases, geneology, marriages and associations on the Chicago labor front.

The contradictions gave point to that interjection of the judge late Tuesday when he asked Bioff if he knew "the sanctity of an oath."

"I certainly do," he told the judge.

More and more as the examination and cross-examination of Bioff went on it was indicated as principally the trial of Bioff. Even he had put into testimony that George Browne, of whom he had boasted, according to testimony, as union president of his own making, was "never present" when money was handled.

Bioff, garbed ever in his subdued executive tailorings, sharply pressed, carefully knotted matching tie, bore on the stand and off his manner of a half-stolid nonchalance. Browne in his habitual blue and gay as to scarf, sat somewhat rumpled, decidedly poker faced.

At midweek it appeared possible that the trial would end in a few more sessions, unless the government were to find occasion to call more rebuttal testimony than seemed indicated. It was said that the defense intended to offer but two or three more witnesses after Bioff, only one of them, perhaps, Charles Russell, tax expert, of major importance to the story.

The Government had rested its case, conditionally, Wednesday, October 22nd, with the calling of seven witnesses, who, like predecessors, testified about money payments to Bioff.

Those witnesses were Austin Keough, vice-president and general counsel of Paramount; Samuel Carlisle, Warner comptroller; Eileen Forman and Shirley Frankel, secretaries to Major Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer of Warners; Henry Herzbrun, former studio attorney for Paramount; A. C. Martin, the company's studio comptroller, and Arthur Israel, Jr., a Paramount attorney.

Government Testimony Concluded

Previous principal witnesses in approximately two weeks of the Government's case were Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's; Major Albert Warner; Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers; William C. Michel, executive vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox; David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer of Loew's; Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of the Loew studio; Norman Thor Nelson, Bioff's brother-in-law; Nicholas Nayfack, Loew studio executive; John Wesley Smith, of Smith and Aller, California raw film distributors.

These and other corroborative witnesses testified to paying Bioff a total of $828,877. He and Browne are charged by the indictment with extorting $550,000. Mathias F. Correa, United States Attorney, estimated they had asked $2,000,000—may even have received that much.

Conclusion of the Government's case, with the accompanying assertions by major executives that they paid tribute to keep their companies in business, brought three stockholders' suits, two against Twentieth Century-Fox and one against Loew's, asking accountings and charging the money was "improperly" spent.

At the same time, the Government hinted it would ask an income tax accounting of the monies admittedly paid by the majors to the two labor leaders.

Thursday morning began routine legal moves; arguments for dismissal, by the defense. The jury was excluded.

The arguments contended that the Federal anti-racketeering law, upon which the indictment was based, was unconstitutional; that the evidence did not disprove every reasonable hypothesis of innocence; that crimes charged were committed three years before the indictment, and, hence, barred by the statute of limitations; that no evidence was presented showing crimes by Browne.

John Burling, assistant U. S. Attorney, retorted that the extortion charged was one continuing scheme; therefore, if one company made a payment within the past three years, the limitations statute not only was invalid for that company, but for all; and he thereupon pointed out testimony that Twentieth Century-Fox vouchers to raise money for the defendants, had been prepared as late as 1940.

In this argument, Mr. Burling disclosed the Government's theory on RKO's absence from the case. RKO was "under the Federal court jurisdiction (in receivership) at the time, so that it couldn't be victimized," he said.

Browne's attorney, Martin Conboy, argued that payments to Smith and Aller, up to the date of the indictment, in a commission arrangement previously outlined during the trial, did not bar dismissal of the case, because the raw film distributing firm was not a complainant, nor was it victimized.

Judge Knox ruled that the arrangement with Smith and Aller could be extortion, part of the intimidation of Loew's—"equivalent to taking money out of it's till." He said the jury would decide the issue.

Casey Tells of IATSE Meetings

Principal defense witness Friday, its first day, was Pat Casey, producers labor representative, whose testimony in essence was that the IATSE grew, and wages of its members increased, under the leadership of George Browne.

Immediately before he took the stand, Emily Pote, Postal Telegraph employee, certified that Bioff received a bon voyage telegram February, 1938, presumably from Harry Warner, "presumably" because records indicate transmission but do not confirm the sender's identity. This evidence was given to bolster defense evidence that Bioff and the major executives were friendly.

Mr. Casey asserted that when the IATSE withdrew from the studio basic labor agreement in 1933, after a squabble with the electricians' international, its membership dwindled from 5,000 to 150.

He then described a meeting between labor and film industry leaders in the Drake Hotel, Chicago, following the 1935 projectionists' strike. He said he suggested the Alliance re-enter the basic pact. He added Nicholas Schenck supported the idea.

Browne had succeeded William Elliott as IATSE leader, and also wanted re-entrance. The other labor men demurred, whereupon, according to the Casey account, Browne declared he was "tired of being kicked around," and rushed from the room. Mr. Schenck ran after him, persuaded him to return and then per-

INDUSTRY PAID BIOFF $828,977

Willie Bioff tapped the industry's pocketbook for at least $828,977, the executives of four major producers have testified for the prosecution at his trial for extortion. The indictment on which Bioff and George E. Browne, IATSE president, are standing trial, mentions $550,000 as the sum allegedly collected as the price of labor peace. U. S. Attorney Mathias F. Correa, however, has estimated the total demands at $2,000,000.

Following are the payments and the years of payment reported by witnesses:

Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's
1935	$150,000
1937	50,000
Mr. Schenck testified that to settle the theatre strike RKO paid in 1935	$50,000
John W. Smith, Smith & Aller, 1937-41 (MGM film purchase commissions)	236,477
William C. Michel, 20th Century-Fox
1936-40	90,000
Major Albert and Harry Warner, Warner Brothers
1936-37	102,500
Austin C. Keough, Paramount
1936	27,500
1937	72,500
Total	$828,977

SAYS HE WAS INDUSTRY 'MESSENGER'

suaded the other labor leaders to consent to IATSE reentrance.

It was in Mr. Casey's testimony that the first point of factual difference with the Government story was raised. Mr. Casey said that Mr. Schenck was not present at a basic pact meeting April 18th, 1936.

During the Government's case, Mr. Schenck has testified it was at the April 18th meeting a deal was made by the companies to pay $50,000 annually.

Subsequent cross-examination brought explanation that Mr. Casey had given the dates to Mr. Moskowitz, had told him Mr. Schenck was present.

Mr. Casey denied that any executives had told him of the "shakedown."

Of Browne's "attitude" from 1936 until the present, Mr. Casey remarked he had not noticed any change. He said Browne had been "pugnacious" at all basic agreement meetings, and had always pressed for wage increases which, granted periodically, have gained the union's members $5,000,000 more annually than they received in 1936, he added.

Cross-examination elicited from Mr. Casey the admission that Browne, by control of projectionists, had the power, from 1936 to 1940, to put the companies out of business. He asserted later that better business, with consequent reserves by the majors, has placed them in a position now to withstand a strike.

Also, later in the day, to newspapermen, Mr. Casey asserted that the recent wage increases, to seven internationals with studio unions, and pending increases to studio locals of the IATSE, would cost producers from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000 annually. (See labor story, page 47.)

Monday came the surprise of the case: the disclosure of the defense line. Willie Bioff took the stand in his own defense—and limned a new story.

Says He Was Messenger

Every cent of more than $1,000,000—he admitted this sum—was collected by him, in 1936, and 1937, from other producers, for the use of Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox. Mr. Schenck, he added, he "was told," was to use this money for appeasement of legislators in various states —legislators who, to use the words of Nicholas M. Schenck, as "transcribed" by Bioff in testimoney, were "sandbagging the industry."

Bioff said he had made approximately a dozen trips to Mr. Joseph Schenck, in Hollywood and New York. He added, when Judge Knox asked how much money he estimated he had "delivered,"

"I would say over a million dollars."

Then he qualified: "I took the figures used by the defendants on the stand, and added to them some others they didn't mention."

Reminded that the "defendants" were really witnesses, Bioff acknowledged the correction, smiling.

Bioff said he delivered the money to Joseph Schenck as a "favor" to Nicholas Schenck, with whom he had been "friendly" since 1934.

Mr. Schenck had testified he first met Bioff in 1936.

The request for a "favor" came in late summer of 1935, according to the Bioff tale, part of which follows:

"He told me about conditions in the industry and said that I could be very useful to him by helping in the transfer of money to his brother Joe on the west coast," the witness asserted. "I was to call on certain people to make pickups and then to make the transfer. He told me that the industry was being sandbagged in different parts of the country through legislation. That they used to be able to handle their affairs differently but they now have to use cash money and they can't show it on their books."

Bioff readily fell in with the suggestion, the story continued. After several other discussions with Mr. Schenck on the same subject, Bioff said, he received instructions from the film executive to call on John Balaban of Paramount and James Coston of Warner Brothers, both of whom were stationed in Chicago. Mr. Schenck had made arrangements for Mr. Balaban to have $60,000 in cash ready and Mr. Coston $30,000 which was to be transferred to Joseph Schenck on the coast, Bioff averred.

Said "Nice Things"

This done, Bioff hurried to the Coast home of Joseph Schenck, who greeted him with the remark that "Nick" had said "nice things" about him. They ate breakfast leisurely, with no mention of money. They then went upstairs for "business." When Mr. Schenck finished counting the money, he said, according to Bioff:

"People in this industry look upon me and Nick to do things. It's a thankless job if they go right, and if they go wrong, we get the devil."

The story continued: Only a few days after his return to New York, Bioff again was asked to be a messenger—and again in Nicholas Schenck's office, and again by him. According to the labor leader, Nicholas told him Joseph also thought him "a nice fellow." Again, according to Bioff:

"He gave me the impression that neither he nor his brother was getting any benefit out of the money, but that it was strictly for the benefit of the industry."

The second "errand" to the Coast made him collect $62,500 from Marvin Schenck and Charles C. Moskowitz of Loew's, Major Leslie Thompson, of RKO; and Major Albert Warner, Warners, he said, and added Nicholas Schenck warned him not to tell Marvin anything "because he's a young boy, and would talk too much."

Bioff said his last delivery was in March, 1938. He "picked up some money from Mr. Keough."

Prior to this testimony, Bioff was obliged to review his background, thus: On arrival here, from Russia, at five; a permanent truant from school at the third grade; a truant from home at 14; a newsboy, a truckers' helper; an experimenter in other odd jobs; an organizer for the teamsters' Chicago local. He met Browne, in 1923, in that city.

He did not mention his 1922 conviction for pandering; his serving of some weeks then of a six month term, and his serving of the remainder last year. That came out later, with low-voiced reluctance under examination by the Government.

In addition to the above named by Bioff as contributors of money for his errands to Joseph Schenck, the labor leader, in ensuing testimony, also named Sam Brenner, Chicago attorney; Henry Herzbrun, former Paramount studio comptroller; Harry Warner; Sidney Kent, Twentieth Century Fox president; Sam Carlisle, George Skouras; Hugh J. Strong, personal aide to Mr. Kent; Charles Skouras, Jules Ruben, Mort Singer.

Previous to his testimony Monday, the defense put on the stand Stephen B. Newman, IATSE West Coast representative; William C. Elliot, its former president; and Herbert Aller, business agent of the cameraman's union.

Mr. Newman certified that Browne was elected IATSE president in 1934 by 700 delegates' unanimous vote. He added that Mr. Kent had praised Browne at the 1938 convention.

Speech Not Allowed

Defense lawyer Michael Luddy attempted to have this speech referred to by Mr. Newman, further, and also read. The Judge refused.

Mr. Newman, cross examined, agreed that a dispute with Paramount had been used as an excuse for calling out the projectionists in Chicago in 1935 while the real reason for the strike was an effort to return to the basic pact.

Copies of letters received by the IATSE in which various members of that union had notified the international's officials of an intention to resign in November, 1935, were identified by Herbert Aller, business manager of the photographers union, who was the next witness. This evidence was presented to substantiate the defense claim that the Chicago strike was caused by pressure on IATSE members by Paramount which had resulted in a number of resignations from the union.

Mr. Elliott testified the Alliance withdrew from the basic pact in 1933 at his order.

To Industry in 1934

In relation of his background Monday, Bioff disclosed his first connection with the film industry came in 1934. Browne, made Alliance head, asked him to "take over" New York Local 306 affairs. In that work, he made acquaintance of Mr. Moskowitz and other Loew officials—and then Mr. Nicholas Schenck.

These acquaintances, a key of the defense, were again dwelt upon after the main Bioff testimony Monday, that he merely carried money for Nicholas Schenck from other industry figures to Joseph Schenck. The defense has pointed up Bioff's alleged close friendship with some of these figures.

According to Bioff, Joseph Schenck suggested, and paid for, a 22 day Rio de Janeiro trip in 1938. He also traveled to Europe the same year.

Mr. Schenck, he said, said Government agents were investigating Fox accounts, and the trips were to "avoid questioning."

He was entertained well in London by Francis Harley and Robert T. Kane, Fox officials and he was entertained again in Paris. A car and chauffer were given him for a tour of Belgium and Holland, he added.

Following all of which, Joseph Schenck told him "there is nothing to worry about. He advised me to stay out of circulation, however," Bioff added.

THOSE "EXPENSES" MAY BE TAXED

The Government may concede that the majors' "payoffs" to Willie Bioff were "necessary", but it apparently will not regard them as "business expenses", for, over the weekend, U. S. Treasury men were reported at the New York Federal Courthouse tabulating the sums admitted paid by majors' officials, and checking them with their expense vouchers. Their object, it was said: taxation. Undisclosed: whether they will also penalize the companies.

PROSECUTOR CITES BIOFF RECORD

Joseph Schenck was described by the witness. According to his story, Mr. Schenck in 1937 extended the loan to aid the defendant in purchasing an alfalfa farm. After Bioff had placed an initial deposit of $6,000 with the seller, Lou Anger, Mr. Schenck's real estate broker, advised against the deal, the witness said. Accordingly the deal fell through, he added. In allegedly obtaining the loan of $100,000, Bioff quoted himself as telling Mr. Schenck, "my receiving money from you won't look good. Let's do it some other way." A loan was thereupon secured from Arthur W. Stebbins, Mr. Schenck's nephew, he said, with the defendant in turn signing a demand note for $100,000.

Stock Deals Made

When Bioff allegedly returned the $100,000 to Mr. Schenck the latter offered to "make some money" for the defendant through the transfer to him of stock, he testified. In accordance with this offer, he said, 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox stock which had risen to 24½ on the market were given to Bioff at the price of 21½. Through Miss Ruth Nolander, Mr. Schenck's secretary, arrangements were made with the brokerage firm of Mervin Ash & Co., for the transfer to the defendant of 1,000 shares of Consolidated Oil, he testified. Bioff said the note which he had signed for Arthur Stebbins was held by Mr. Schenck as security for the stock transactions.

Bioff's testimony continued Tuesday, on stock deals with Mr. Schenck. The latter's final purchase for him, he said, was 500 shares of Continental Can. But, when in 1938, Mr. Schenck told him to close out the stock because Government agents were investigating that matter also, Bioff said he told the brokerage firm to sell it and credit Mr. Schenck with the result.

Bioff asserted he made "something less than $1,500" on the deals.

There were also deals with others: Harry Warner, for instance, he said. From Mr. Warner, he said he received 100 shares of Hollywood Turf Club stock, after forwarding a check for $10,000. He received a stock certificate in his wife's name. The money was given to Harland Holmden, Alliance vice-president, who had advanced the original money to Bioff, the latter asserted.

Not only did he benefit from stock tips given by industry friends; he was let in on their poker winnings, Bioff insisted. He told of receiving $8,000, cash, from Mr. Schenck in 1937, explaining: "He told me that he had been a pretty good winner in a poker game, and had cut me in on the profits."

He added he had received $4,000 similarly, in 1938; and he noted he reported these gifts in his tax reports, as gambling winnings.

Cites Kent Speech

Bioff then adverted to the Kent speech at the Cleveland 1938 IATSE convention, asserting Joseph Schenck suggested Mr. Kent's appearance, characterizing him as "our front man, and a fine speaker who'll do a great job."

Mr. Kent not only spoke at the meeting; his attendance resulted in his doing a favor for Bioff, according to the latter, who explained that immediately before the convention, he told Mr. Kent how embarrassed he was at the publication of an article charging Bioff had "shaken down Mr. Schenck for $100,000."

Thereupon, Bioff insisted, the Fox president asked his publicity department to attempt to stop the unfavorable publicity.

More favors from the industry's great were showered upon the labor leader, he continued. Thus, Joseph Schenck gave him an ultra-violet ray lamp and cabinet.

That gift was worth $20,000, approximately, he said, to Judge Knox's query.

Mr. Schenck also gave him $2,500 for Senator Sheridan Downey's campaign fund, he said. Further, Bioff averred, he was asked by Mr. Schenck to help defeat Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Senator Downey's opponent.

Then there was a conference between former United States Attorney General Frank Murphy, Bioff and Schenck attorneys, Charles G. Russell's, Bioff's tax consultant, and Messrs. Bioff and Schenck—at which, the labor leader claimed, Mr. Schenck defended the Bioff character by stating: "I would loan him $200,000 if he asked for it."

Followed evidential introduction of a large photograph of Mr. Schenck, inscribed: "To my friend, Willie, affectionately, Joe Schenck."

Mr. Schenck was not only thus a friend to him, one whom he saw "a hundred times" since 1936; he also was a counsellor, in Bioff's definition. Thus, Mr. Schenck advised to him to resign the IATSE post, in 1938 until "affairs cooled."

Mr. Schenck promised Bioff he would "not have anything to worry about."

So, therefore, the narrative continued, Bioff resigned, "drew a year's salary" for his "accomplishments—with the promise that the door was always open for me to come back." But at the insistence of Browne, he returned in the Fall of 1939, after IATSE advances to producers were fruitless; and demanded an agreement from them by Thanksgiving. The agreement came; but his part ceased with arrest at the request of Chicago police.

Tells of Conviction

What had been avoided in Bioff's relation of his background now came: his justification and explanation of his conviction in 1922 for pandering, and of his rearrest and service of the remainder of the six months Chicago jail sentence.

Bioff said he was about 21 when arrested first; that he was released from the House of Correction in Chicago after several days service of sentence; that he then remained in that city for 14 years without concealment; that, after fighting extradition in 1939, he served the rest of the term.

The tale of friendship with the industry's great resumed. He visited Harry Warner "many, many, times" and his visits were returned. On one 1938 cruise, Mr. Warner presented him with cigars, and Mrs. Bioff with orchids.

Mr. Warner even introduced him to Claudette Colbert, advising her to join "the IATSE, a good union," he continued.

Explaining the Smith and Aller raw film commission arrangement, related in previous testimony, by the Government witnesses, Bioff called it merely an example of another service to his industry friends, thus:

Mr. Schenck had complained that the unfair trade practice laws were preventing Loew's from obtaining 7½ per cent rebates. The arrangement was then made, according to Bioff, to have his brother-in-law made a subagent of Smith & Aller, sales agency of Du Pont, with the understanding that commissions were to be turned over to Joseph Schenck.

Concluding direct testimony Monday afternoon, Bioff denied demanding money or threatening strikes; and insisted Browne did not know of his errands, and never was present when executives handed Bioff money.

Came cross examination Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, by Mr. Correa, during which at least three times Bioff was forced to admit misstatements. Courtroom observers also noted he lost poise. He floundered first when he admitted he publicly denounced Mr. Schenck for having caused his 1939 arrest, and yet, in the words of the prosecutor, "continued to turn over raw film commissions" to him.

Earlier, he had said his first job with the Chicago teamsters' local was under Jerry Leahy. He was then reminded that at a criminal hearing in that city in March, 1940, he said he was originally employed by Mike Galvin. He said the falsity was at the latter hearing.

Mr. Correa made game of the omission because Galvin is "a notorious labor racketeer." Bioff replied he cited Galvin "because he was a big Democrat" in Chicago.

Judge Knox interjected: "You mean that you used the name because it might influence the judge?"—to which Bioff replied he merely wanted friends in court to be influenced.

Bioff admitted that, in addition to occupations listed, he had been a bartender and superintendent in a brickyard; but he denied having been a bodyguard. The brickyard job was in St. Joseph, Missouri, for "six months on and off," he said.

Policy Exhibited

Mr. Correa showed him his 1926 insurance application, stating he had been employed in that yard ten years.

Judge Knox then asked why he had falsified the application, and Bioff answered he was unemployed then, and wanted a policy for his wife. Employment was a condition of the policy.

Bioff denied he was ever a stagehand, whereupon the prosecutor confronted him with the fact of testimony before the California legislative committee on capital and labor November 17th, 1938, that he had been a stagehand for 14 years.

Bioff countered: "If I made that statement, it wasn't so."

Reminded that falsehood was under oath, Bioff justified it with: "The committee was just a bunch of Communists."

Judge Knox asked him if he felt "at all bound by the sanctity of an oath."

Earnestly, he replied: "Judge, I certainly do."

Wednesday, continued cross-examination of the labor czar by this time "squirming," in the newspaper phrase, brought a surprise in the trial perhaps equivalent to the defense line assumed Monday.

Bioff asserted he was Morris Bioff. He knew nothing of a "William Bioff," listed in an application for citizenship filed in Chicago, January 20th, 1916, by his father, Lazar, who listed Morris as a son, and William as a stepson.

Bioff had signed his passport application in 1938 "Morris W. Bioff."

Mr. Correa developed these facts during Wednesday's questioning, endeavoring to illuminate Bioff's reliability—and identity.

Aliases Examined

Bioff's aliases were the subject. He insisted he was known as William, and that Morris William were his given names.

When Mr. Correa asked who was the Morris, listed by Bioff pere as the full son, Bioff replied: "Morris was me, but I wasn't 17 years old."

When Mr. Correa asked about William, Bioff said he didn't know his father had any other children.

He was forced to admit that for five years he had lived as "William Berg," by introduc-

'Volunteer or be Asked', Fitzgibbons Tells U.S. Industry

Urging that the American motion picture industry should organize now "to fully cooperate" in the nation's defense efforts, J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., speaking at the meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., in New York on Wednesday, said, "If you don't do it now, you are going to be asked to do it later, and the glory will not be near as great as it is when you take the initiative."

Mr. Fitzgibbons, who came to New York from a brief trip to Halifax, N. S., on the morning of the AMPA luncheon, detailed for 300 AMP members at the Hotel Edison, the methods by which Canada's independent and circuit theatre operators had rallied in helping the Government's war-time efforts. He characterized the industry's aid as a "justification of our existence" during the war crisis.

Cites War Burden

Of the 20 per cent amusement tax on theatres and in some sports which his Government imposed on May 19th, Mr. Fitzgibbons remarked, "We don't welcome the tax; it is heavy, but we are hoping for relief." Not a man in the industry, he said, suggested that "because we are in the motion picture business, we should be exempted. The Government is now taking over price regulations, of wages paid to employes and of the amount of money paid for commodities. We expect regulations of our admission prices," he said, and added, "Whatever legislation is successful in Canada will be followed pretty well in the United States."

Mr. Fitzgibbons gave a graphic account of how independent and circuit operators and other film interests in Canada joined together to put across the war-savings' stamp sale. He reported that on July 15th, 600,000 people went to 90 per cent of Canada's theatres for a free show, at the expense of the industry. Their admission was the price of one 25-cent savings' stamp, receipts for which were turned over to the Government. He explained that projectionists and other employes were not asked to give up their day's wages, but that many of them volunteered to buy stamps equivalent to their day's pay.

He expressed the view that "Now, in wartime, institutional advertising is more important than ever before," and urged AMPA members to consider seriously ways and means to spread through advertising the story of industry efforts in behalf of national defense, as Canadian film interests have done for their public.

Mr. Fitzgibbons was introduced by Austin Keough, Paramount general counsel. Jesse L. Lasky, producer of "Sergeant York," the other principal speaker at the AMPA luncheon, was introduced by Mort Blumenstock, Eastern advertising manager of Warner Bros. Mr. Lasky recounted the "inside story" of how he came to produce "York."

Vincent Trotta, AMPA president, and president of National Screen Service, presided. Among those seated at the dais were: Hon. Douglas S. Cole, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, who made a brief address; Adolf Zukor, Barney Balaban, George Dembow, Stanton Griffis, Mr. Keough, Mr. Lasky and Mr. Blumenstock.

Greene Appointed to Canadian Board

The National Film Board of Canada announced on Monday that Wesley Greene, formerly of the International Film Bureau in Chicago, had been appointed supervisor of non-theatrical film distribution for the Board in the United States. Mr. Greene takes on the job at a time when documentary production in Canada is developing rapidly. In Ottawa, the Board is in charge of co-ordination of Government film activities. It recently absorbed the Dominion Government Motion Picture Bureau.

A revised policy relating to the circulation and sale of films from the Dominion is being drawn up by the Board and will be put into operation at once.

Mr. Greene will continue his address at 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago. Inquiries concerning Canadian productions should be addressed to him there.

Hanson Deals

Following the split between N. L. Nathanson and Oscar Hanson, announced in Canada recently, Mr. Hanson established an organization known as Foto-Nite Distributors, Ltd., in Toronto, and then incorporated another firm, Pioneer Films, Ltd., an independent exchange with offices at 277 Victoria Street, also in Toronto. It is reported that he has already applied for charters for two more companies, one of which will function in the 16mm. field and the other which will handle theatres.

Mr. Hanson also has acquired an independent theatre, the Palace, in St. Catharines, Ont., in association with Douglas Fairly. He will continue to hold a stock interest in the Empire Universal exchange controlled by Mr. Nathanson; Esquire Films, which distributes English pictures, and Associated Theatres, a booking group. He also retains his stock holdings in the jointly-owned Nathanson-Hanson circuit of 25 theatres of which he was general manager before resigning.

Bioff on Stand, Accuses Leaders

tion of a Metropolitan Life Insurance Company check of January 10th, 1931, endorsed by Bioff, Mrs. Bioff and an "L. Berg."

Also, Mr. Correa showed Bioff had instructed that company to address all mail to him in care of L. Berg.

Then Mr. Correa pointed up Bioff's affidavit in the California extradition in 1939, that he was employed by the IATSE Local 2 from 1929 to 1934—to which Bioff replied he didn't remember the statement, Mr. Correa then remarking: "If you discussed this (the extradition proceedings) with your attorneys, didn't you discuss that statement with them?" Bioff then denied remembrance of the years mentioned.

Bioff also did not remember telling an "Officer Kehoe" of Chicago police, in 1933 that he worked four years as a Van Heusen Publishing Company linotypist.

His union cards, produced upon request, showed him an Alliance Local 2 member from December 15, 1933; and a Local 476 member. The court was told the Local 2 roster did not confirm this.

Bioff testified his first marriage was in 1925, when he gave his age as 27 while he was 25. Thereupon, Mr. Correa remarked upon a "Mary Bioff," to whom Bioff admitted he was "once married."

Of that, he said it happened in Peoria, Illinois, when he was 17; and that his wife died a year afterward.

Reminded of direct testimony that Joseph Schenck advised him to use "Mr. Link" as a telephone name, he was also reminded he had sworn, in the California affidavit, that he never used assumed names.

Asks Date of Return

Admitting use of the name "Berg" in "some letters," he also then admitted he used other names "maybe in hotels."

When Mr. Correa asked him to date the return of the $100,000 to Mr. Schenck, he exclaimed: "You are trying to put me into the position of making misstatements, and I don't want to do that."

When reminded of testimony before the Sacramento, Cal., County Grand Jury in July, 1938, that he put the $100,000 in a safe deposit box, Bioff admitted this was false. It contradicted his direct testimony in this case, that he drew the money from the bank, returned it directly to Mr. Schenck.

There then arose the civil suit in Los Angeles Superior Court, against the IATSE, by members of Local 37. Bioff had testified, according to Mr. Correa's reading of the report, that Bioff called the assertion that Mr. Schenck gave him $100,000 a "lie," and had denied it directly.

To this, Bioff asserted he was trying at the time to "protect" Mr. Schenck.

Mr. Correa asked him if, in this case, he would lie to protect another. Bioff replied he would not, and that the case differed because "the oath here is different."

Judge Knox asked him what he meant and Bioff replied:

"I have more respect for this court than for Communist income tax committees and those others who questioned me."

When Judge Knox suggested the misstatements in the California affidavit had been to protect Bioff himself, he denied it, thus:

"It was just that I didn't think the little details were important."

Bioff confirmed that he had not recorded his collections of money for Joseph Schenck, but denied this was from fear he would be charged with crime, asserting:

"Joe Schenck would have protected me."

PARAMOUNT LEADS FIGHT TO BREAK BLOCKS-OF-5 CLAUSE IN MINNESOTA

Distributor Applies to Court in New York for Order Allowing Block Sales There; Acute Product Shortage Seen

After barely two months trial the blocks-of-five clause, No. 1 requirement of the Government's film consent decree, is back in Federal Court for loosening, at the specific request of Paramount which is taking the lead in the fight by the major distributors to obtain relief from Minnesota's state law compelling the distributors to offer all of their pictures for sale, rather than the blocks stipulated by the decree.

Paramount's application for relief from the decree was a show cause order, obtained from Federal Judge Henry Goddard, in New York federal court, and returnable before him Friday, at which time Thomas D. Thacher, company sounsel, was to present the merits of Paramount's appeal.

Meanwhile, this week, Northwest Allied, proponent of the Minnesota law, asked other companies to follow Paramount's lead. An official statement said:

"There is no legal reason why any theatres in Minnesota should be forced to close for lack of the latest motion pictures, or why the other four consenting distributors cannot follow the same course of action to meet the requirements of the state law as has now been taken by Paramount."

The unit added that Paramount's position supported the Allied contention, that Section 23 of the decree is as binding as Sections 3 and 4. The latter enforce trade-showings and selling in blocks-of-five films; Section 23 pertains to relief from the decree in the face of state legislation.

Allied also again pointed up the decision of Judge Hugo Hanft, of Ramsey county court, St. Paul, several weeks ago, terming the state law constitutional. In his decision, Judge Hanft ruled there was "no merit" in the argument that obedience to the Minnesota law would be contempt against the New York Federal Court.

Product Situation Acute

The product situation became more acute in Minnesota this week, with no hope of alleviation afforded by the criminal charges instituted last week by the state against RKO, Paramount, and Twentieth Century-Fox; for that case will not be heard until November 24th, and also probably will be lengthy.

Allied's appeal was regarded as evidence, as were admissions previously by its spokesmen, that theatres will begin to close for lack of product, by November 1st. The charges of violation of the law, against Fox, RKO, and Paramount, have admittedly stopped any attempt at sale of new product by the other two majors.

As Minenapolis exchanges operated on a curtailed scale, and industry observers there puzzled over the situation, and hung upon word from New York, in the latter city on Monday it was reported two decree-bound majors might go into federal court Friday, along with Paramount, and oppose that company's attempt to seek decree relief.

The report was not confirmed. It was based, however, on the admitted attitude among majors' counsel that if the New York federal court grants the petitions for decree relief, exhibitor organizations in other states will hammer through legislation similar to Minnesota's, anticipating further court relief from the decree. The Minnesota fight will have "shown the other states how," the attorneys believe.

Tuesday, also in New York, it was not possible to obtain an indication of action from the other majors, whether they would oppose Paramount, seek relief similar to Paramount's, or stand firm until the constitutionality of the Minnesota law is decided by ruling in the criminal violation case now pending.

Decision Delay Expected

The Paramount application for decree relief specifies it shall be until the constitutionality of the Minnesota law is decided.

Decision is expected to be withheld for some time. At hearing Thursday, October 23rd, in Ramsey county court, Minnesota, November 24th was set as tentative trial date. The date may be changed; there will be many hearings and there will be appeals. In any event, product difficulties in the state are expected to develop seriously before the case is ended.

The companies pleaded not guilty in Thursday's hearing. They also preserved privilege of withdrawing those pleas. And they filed demurers to the state's complaints, which charge them with selling in blocks of five and ten films to two theatres in the St. Paul territory.

Trial as far in advance as possible was asked by Joseph Findley, Minneapolis lawyer, for Paramount. He cited distances witnesses must travel. Noting his client's appeal in New York Federal Court for decree relief, he said:

"Paramount does not wish its customers in Minnesota to be without its pictures if they desire to exhibit them while this litigation is in progress in Minnesota courts."

CONTINUE SUIT AS SETTLEMENT FAILS

Considered settled out of court during the Summer, the Harrison Brothers' $250,000 triple damages anti-trust suit against the majors and the Warner circuit will be continued in Philadelphia Federal Court, November 10th. The plaintiff's attorneys charge the settlement is unsatisfactory in practice. They add the circuit will be dropped as defendant; and that they will seek monetary award only, because the Harrisons no longer operate the suburban Lansdowne Theatre. The circuit operates the house under the settlement. The suit was filed in 1939.

Hoffberg Acquires Film

Under the terms of a contract consummated with the producers, J. H. Hoffberg announces that his company has acquired the rights for Latin America to "Les Otages," featuring Annie Vernay. This picture was released in the United States under the title of "Mayor's Dilemma."

Admissions Up In Some Cities

Experimentation in adapting admission prices to varying living costs has led to fluctuations in those prices in the Milwaukee area. Warner Brothers recently announced matinees at its Oriental and Tower theatres, at 22 cents until 5:30 P. M. Fox countered with daily matinees at its Parkway, 17 cents until 6 P. M. Previously, none of these theatres had played week-day matinees. All are neighborhood.

Stiffening admission prices, the Parkway, Lyric, Tivoli, Comet, Liberty, and Violet have agreed to drop dime nights. They have also increased admissions from five to 15 cents. Two theatres in the city, however, the Fern and Atlas, have restored dime nights, after several weeks' abandonment.

Lewistown, Pennsylvania, theatres have raised admissions. Examples are the increase in adult admissions at the Embassy and Rialto to 29 cents for evenings, 28 cents for matinees.

Saturday and Sunday matinee admissions have been reduced by Warners at its Stratford theatre, Chicago. Saturdays it was 30 cents plus tax, until 6 P. M.; now it is 25 cents. Sundays it was 40 cents plus tax, all day; now it is 30 cents from 12 P. M. to 2:30 P. M.

The Loew-Poli New England theatres have raised admissions, except in Springfield.

Toledo, Ohio, houses, with the Savoy and the Esquire the exceptions, have increased admissions.

Service men in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, are receiving passes for two from the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The passes admit them to most amusement places there.

Thompson Heads Georgia MPTO

J. H. Thompson, of Hawkinsville, Ga., was elected president of the MPTO of Georgia at an organization meeting held at the Henry Grady Hotel in Atlanta, this week. Mr. Thompson is a member of Marvin and Thompson Theatres.

Ed Beach, of the Thomaston Theatres, was designated first vice-president; Mrs. Willingham Wood of Wood Theatres, Washington, secretary, and Hobson Johnson, of Brice Theatres, Vidalia, treasurer.

The 34 directors chosen are:

Mr. Thompson; R. E. Martin, Columbus; Ed Beach, Thomaston; Mrs. Willingham Wood, Washington; J. B. Hardy, Thomaston; Hobson Johnson, Vidalia; Mrs. Louis Bach, Atlanta; Hugh Manning, Marietta; Nat Williams, Thomasville; Adolph Gortatowsky, Albany; Mrs. Violet Edwards, Monticello; Charles Powell, Moultrie; O. L. Gaston, Forsyth; T. E. Bell, Trion; Frank Montezuma, J. H. Carter, Brookhaven; E. E. Martin, Columbus; Alpha Fowler, Douglasville; Bill Jenkins, Atlanta; William Karr, Swainsboro; William Collins, Toccoa; Hal Macon, Statesboro; Fred Weis, Savannah; M. G. Lee, Cuthbert; Ellison Dunn, Camilla; Claire Hilders, Albany; Mrs. F. Osborn, Commerce; Tom Bailey, Atlanta; Jimmie Harrison, Atlanta; Fred Coleman, Atlanta; W. T. Murray, Atlanta; O. C. Lam, Rome.

BERNHARD, KALMENSON TAKE OVER AT WARNERS; SEARS, LESERMAN RESIGN

Blumenstock To Be Appointed National Manager of Advertising; Changes Follow Series of Conflicting Announcements

Joseph Bernhard and Benjamin Kalmenson this week became general, and sales managers, respectively, of Warner Brothers Pictures.

Gradwell L. Sears resigned from the general sales managership last Friday and Mr. Kalmenson, western and southern sales manager, was promoted to fill the vacancy. Mr. Bernhard, president of the Warner circuit management subsidiary, was named a vice president of Warner Brothers Pictures and placed in charge of both distribution and theatre operation.

Carl Leserman, executive assistant to Mr. Sears, also resigned.

Blumenstock in National Post

Promotion of Mort Blumenstock, who has been in charge of Warner advertising and publicity in the east for the past four years, to "more important and extensive duties as national manager of advertising and coordinator of all sales promotion, merchandising and exploitation activities for the company," will be announced by Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, when Warner branch managers and sales executives meet in New York Friday for their first conference with Mr. Kalmenson.

In his new post, Mr. Blumenstock not only will have full charge of the national scene as relates to the advertising and merchandising of pictures, but will also have complete control of advertising budgets and full charge of the national field promotional forces.

The move will necessitate the appointment of a national publicity manager, according to Mr. Einfeld. Mitchell Rawson, eastern publicity manager, will continue in his present capacity.

The upset in Warner sales department leadership came unexpectedly. It was attended by a unique series of conflicting decisions and counter-decisions by company heads as to who was to be what, and when. Almost a dozen different versions of sales management were reported from the home office on Thursday and Friday before the final realignment was formally announced by Major Albert Warner.

Mr. Sears, it was reported, had submitted his resignation a few weeks ago because of reported differences of opinion. It had not been acted upon. Meanwhile, conversations were reported between Mr. Sears and United Artists pointing to his assumption of the company's presidency. These did not materialize.

Almost hourly through Thursday and Friday reports of shuffles and reshuffles in the Warner sales generalship were forthcoming from the home offices on West 44th Street, New York.

First word of the impending changes came late Wednesday, October 22nd, with the information that Mr. Sears was the number one probability for the presidency of United Artists. At 10:45 Thursday morning Warners commenced to prepare announcements of Mr. Sears' departure and the elevation of Mr. Bernhard to vice-president in charge of sales. The order was countermanded by noon.

Shortly after luncheon Mr. Bernhard was reported remaining in the theatre division and Mr. Kalmenson was being named sales manager succeeding Mr. Sears. A telephone inquiry at 5:30 P.M., however, brought word that Mr. Sears was to remain and that Mr. Kalmenson had resumed his western and southern division post.

Friday morning Mr. Kalmenson was actually named sales manager, and Mr. Sears started removing his personal belongings from the Warner offices. The changes were formally announced late Friday.

Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager and vice-president of Vitagraph, under Mr. Sears, resigned Monday morning. Major Warner issued a formal statement confirming Mr. Kalmenson's appointment and expressing regret at the departure of Mr. Sears and Mr. Leserman.

Mr. Sears released a statement in which he said his plans for the immediate future were "quite indefinite." He said he planned to rest for two months on a hunting trip. His press release paid tribute to the three Warner brothers, Major Albert, Jack and Harry, and Mr. Sears added that he left the company "with the greatest friendship" and "a great deal of feeling."

The board of directors of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., on Tuesday elected Mr. Bernhard a vice president and enlarged his executive duties to include supervision of both distribution and the operation of the company's theatre circuit. He retains the title of president of Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation.

To Name Divisional Chiefs

Three division sales chiefs will be appointed by Mr. Kalmenson and Mr. Bernhard it was reported at midweek. An executive assistant in the theatre division will also be named by Mr. Bernhard. He indicated that the posts will be filled from the ranks.

All branch managers meanwhile were summoned to New York by the new sales manager for a meeting on Friday and Saturday to discuss the personnel changes and future sales policy. All home office executives, including Major Warner, Charles Einfeld, Sam Schneider, Morton Blumenstock, Roy Haines, Norman Moray, Arthur Sachson, Al Schwalberg and Mike Dolid will attend the meeting called by Mr. Kalmenson. The field men will stay at the Hotel Warwick and return to their posts on Monday.

The branch managers who will attend are:

Paul C. Krumenacker, Albany; R. L. McCoy, Atlanta; Norman J. Ayers, Boston; Max Roth, Buffalo; John A. Bachman, Charlotte; Rud Lohrenz, Chicago; Robert H. Dunbar, Cincinnati; Charles Rich, Cleveland; F. M. Jack, Dallas; Earl A. Bell, Denver; E. J. Tilton, Des Moines; James Winn, Detroit; Fred Greenberg, Indianapolis; H. C. Borg, Kansas City; Henry Herbel, Los Angeles; W. O. Williamson, Jr., Memphis; Robert T. Smith, Milwaukee; Art Anderson, Minneapolis; Roger Mahan, New Haven; Luke Conner, New Orleans.

Ed M. Schnitzer and Sam Lefkowitz, New York; J. O. Rhode, Oklahoma City; A. J. Shumow, Omaha; William G. Mansell, Philadelphia; Harry Seed, Pittsburgh; Veté Stewart, Portland; William F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; Al Shmitken, San Francisco; William Shartin, Seattle; Hall Walsh, St. Louis; Robert Smeltzer, Washington; Sid Ross, Chicago; Doak Roberts Dallas, and W. E. Callaway, Los Angeles.

Also Wolfe Cohen, Canadian district manager, and Philip Sherman, Montreal, and Joseph Plottel, Toronto.

Major Warner, in announcing the resignation of Mr. Sears, observed that he had been, during his 21 years with Warners, "a vital force in the growth of this company to its present position of prominence in the entertainment field."

Benjamin Kalmenson, the new sales manager, joined Warner Brothers at Pittsburgh in 1927 as a field salesman. Previously he had been with the Crucible Steel Company of America. He later became manager of the Albany and Omaha branches and returned to Pittsburgh in 1932 as branch manager. From 1934 to 1937 he was chief booker for the Pittsburgh area. He was appointed western and southern manager in 1937.

Joseph Bernhard has been with Warners since 1929. Previously he was with the Stanley Company of America, theatre circuit operators. He became head of Warner theatres in 1931 after two years in the real estate division. He will retain his circuit posts in addition to his new duties. He is chairman of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense and has served on several New Jersey state commissions, and the New Jersey Council.

Worked for Schaefer

Mr. Sears, who began his film career as a projectionist, entered sales work for George J. Schaefer at the World Film Company, New York, after his discharge from the AEF. He worked in St. Louis for Republic Distributing Corporation, Selznick and Vitagraph.

He joined the First National sales organization at Chicago in 1920, moving to Cleveland as manager in 1925 and returning to head the Chicago exchange in 1928. In 1929 he became western and southern division manager. In 1931 he was made general sales manager for the area, and four years later was elected to a Vitagraph, Inc., vice-presidency. He advanced to general sales manager in August, 1937, and became president of the Warner distribution subsidiary, Vitagraph, in February, 1938.

Major Warner, in accepting Mr. Leserman's resignation, announced that he did so "with sincere regret. His association with us has been most pleasant throughout the many years of his service," Mr. Warner said. "We all wish him success in whatever new undertaking he is contemplating."

INDIVIDUAL SALES FOR BALLET SHORTS

Warner Brothers in New York claim that for the first time in the history of the motion picture industry, short subjects will be sold separately, according to an announcement by Norman H. Moray, Warner's short subjust sales manager.

The short subjects are "The Gay Parisian" and "Spanish Fiesta." Both were made in color and given the full benefit of feature-length productions the company said.

United Artists Debates Presidency Candidates

With the United Artists partners still engaged in discussion of a number of candidates for the post of president of the company it was reported Tuesday that the company might appoint a temporary operating executive. Two executive counsels, in California and New York, may also be formed, it was said, to administer company affairs. Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, is acting head at present.

Negotiations with Gradwell Sears, who resigned as Warner sales manager this week, are reported to have ended.

MAJORS MOVE FOR 'ALL-OUT' TRADE UNITY, TAKING CUE FROM ALLIED

Kirsch, Samuelson Confer with Distribution Chiefs in New York on Operation of Plan; 20th-Fox Officially Approves

The probability, in these troubled times, of developing unity of interests and relations between the buyers and sellers of motion pictures now appears stronger than at any time in distribution-exhibition history, with all its codes, committees and commitments down through the years.

Allied States Association, long considered a militant, proposed, several weeks ago, a move for unity in trade practice and operation; spokesmen for the distributors quickly expressed a sympathetic interest even before a document was fabricated; last week came that fabrication, and, this week, came word from official sources in film companies that not only do many of them approve of the blue-print, but some added that efforts should have been directed toward such unity years ago, and attempted by the distributors themselves.

Plan Submitted

Actual official commitment from presidents of majors regarding the extent of their cooperation is expected any day.

Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatre Owners of Illinois, and Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager of AITO of Eastern Pennsylvania, of Allied's special unity committee, were in New York this week conferring with leaders of distributing firms, all of which had already received copies of the plan detailing specific proposals for all-industry consideration.

Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Samuelson met with William F. Rodgers, Loew's vice-president and general sales manager on Tuesday. No statement was made following the conference.

The result of the sessions between Allied's representatives and the major distributors probably will be the appointment of a distributors' committee to confer with Allied's group. It is understood that the distributors also would invite other organized exhibitor groups. and production forces, to join in one large joint session for the purpose of rounding out effectively a unity program.

In discussing the need for such unity one leading executive of a major company declared, "Distributing firms should have taken the initiative long ago to develop unity in the industry. From time to time during the years, there have been many exhibitor organizations who voiced complaints and dissatisfaction concerning exhibitor-distributor relations. We should have gone directly to them, talked over their problems. We should have tried to work out, first by setting up a committee of our own group, and then by getting all exhibitor groups to establish a committee representing them, the best method for achieving equitable unity for all branches of our industry. If the distributors had organized on a unity basis first, getting the exhibitors to come in, a common unity program would have been comparatively simple."

On Monday, Twentieth Century-Fox was the first producing company to pledge its cooperation with Allied, based on the specific proposals, for uniting all branches of the industry. MGM and Paramount, through William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, Henderson M. Richey, director of public relations, both of Metro, and Claude F. Lee, director of public relations for Paramount, already have gone on record expressing the need for unity and being in accord with Allied's original move for such unity; the idea also has been approved by A. Montague of Columbia; Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists, and W. A. Scully, of Universal. Fox, however, was the first firm to line up with Allied on the basis of its seven-point program. Sidney R. Kent, its president, wired Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, this week, that he approved of the proposed all-industry round-table conferences.

Meanwhile, other producing-distributing firms are studying the plan before making any final commitments.

Early this week, Mr. Rodgers reiterated, "Metro as an organization has always been interested in any move for unity in the industry. As to the individual proposals submitted by Allied, however, these must be explored, considered and talked about."

Mr. Lee said on Monday, "From my point of view, in the interest of public relations for the whole industry, I can only repeat what I said in Philadelphia, that Paramount quite naturally is ready to agree to cooperate with any well-conceived and unselfish plan that seeks to benefit the entire industry. As for what proposals will be made to any one branch of the industry for unity, I am not informed, and any response to such proposals will naturally have to come from the heads of those branches themselves." Mr. Lee pointed out that effort towards unity "has got to be really in the spirit of a round table," and that each branch must come together with a real understanding and recognition of the problems of the other."

Richey Approves

Mr. Richey indicated early in the week that in his opinion the Allied plan was "very constructive and very conservative." He said, "There has been no official announcement that MGM will cooperate with this specific wordage of the plan. That naturally will have to come from Mr. Schenck." He added however, "We are glad the plan has veered in the direction that it has. Naturally, in any consideration of a plan to follow the consent decree, unofficially we would give consideration to the exhibitor's viewpoint." Mr. Richey again expressed the view that "Metro's policy has always been one of continuing public good will and public relations for the industry as a whole. We have always said we would sit down with any group and discuss better relations with them and we have always felt that it was not only desirable but profitable to get along with our customers," he said.

RKO, Universal, United Artists, Columbia and Warner Bros. made no statement concerning the plan other than that it was being considered. George Schaefer, RKO's president, who is expected to return to New York from Hollywood later this week, probably will take up the matter for discussion, it was said. Arthur W. Kelly, acting president for United Artists, said "Any comment on Allied's plan will have to come from the company's new president," whose selection had not yet been determined on Monday. Columbia also is awaiting the return of its sales manager, A. Montague, from Hollywood, before making any statement concerning its probable participation in the Allied plan.

Seven Points Listed

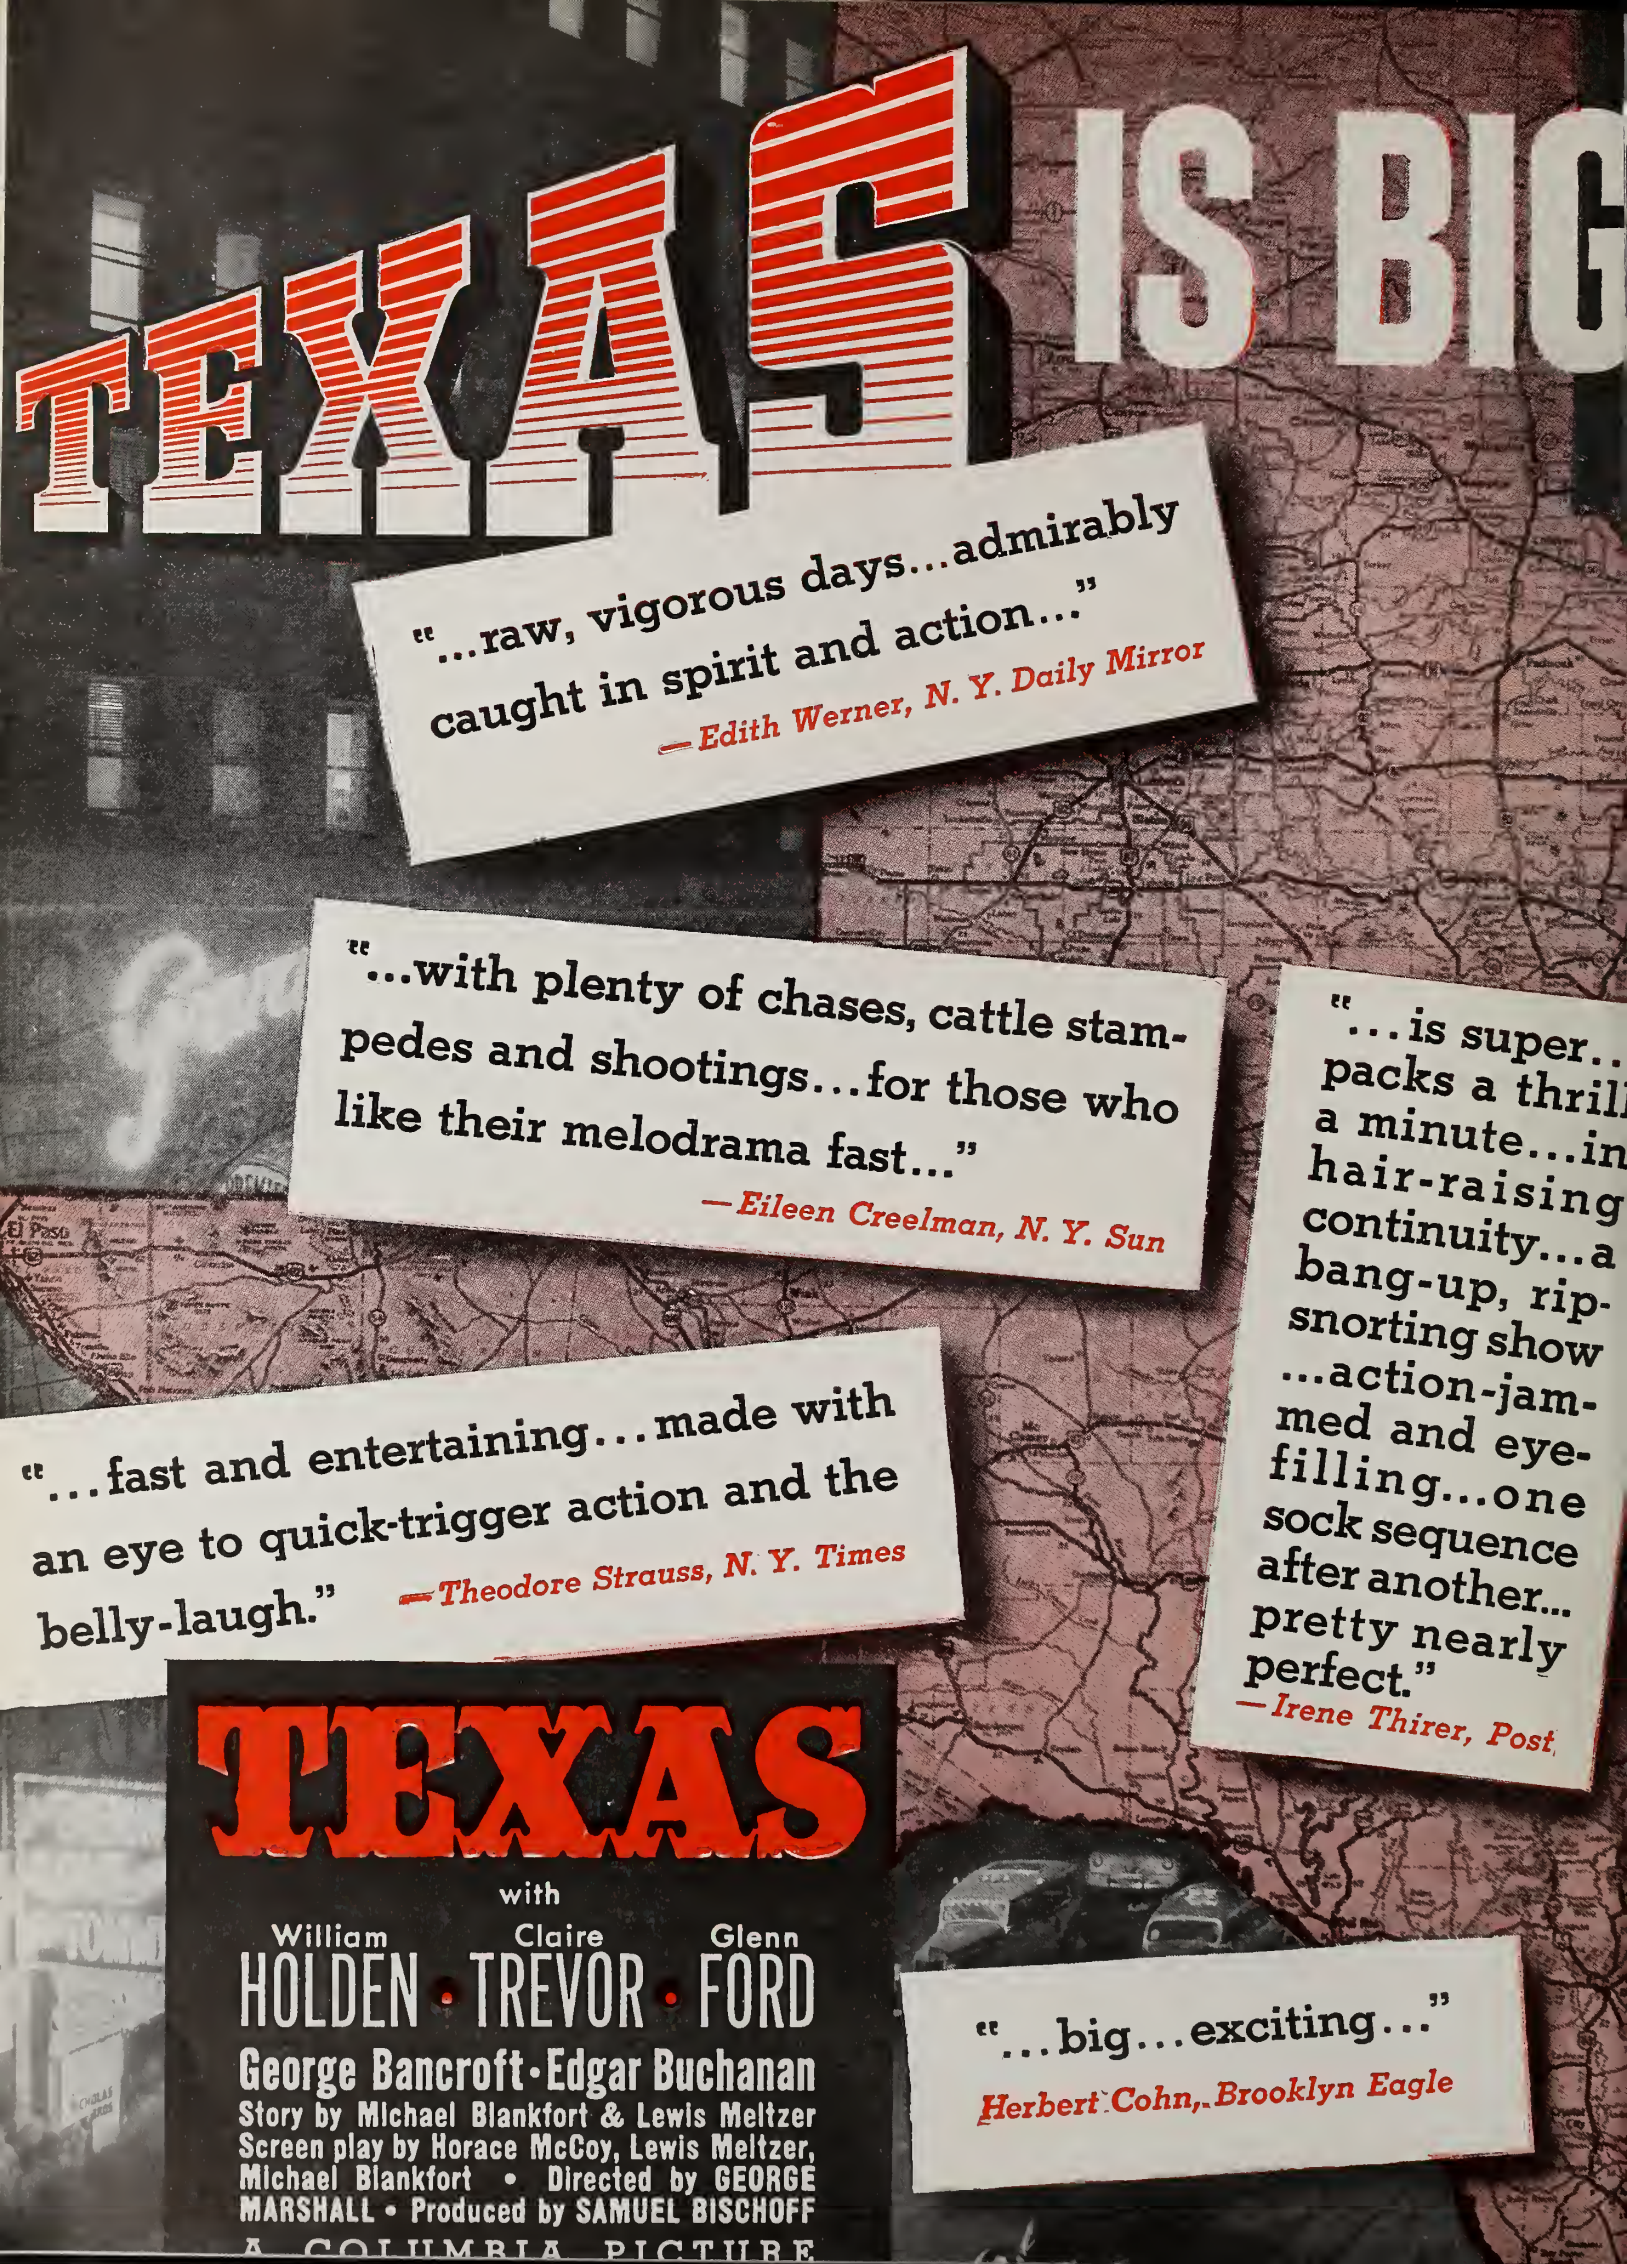
The seven-point program which Allied proposed and which executives of distributing firms are now studying includes:

1. Coordination of policy and action in reference to taxation.
2. Coordination of policy and action in protecting the good name and integrity of the industry as a whole.
3. Formulation of plans for meeting the increasing competition of rival forms of entertainment.
4. Formulation of plans for institutional advertising and other good-will activities.
5. Protecting the necessary priorities ratings.
6. Formulation of an acceptable distribution system to be adopted when the consent decree lapses.
7. Discussion, and if possible, adjustment or modification of the policies or practice of one branch or member thereof which are opposed by any other branch or a substantial portion thereof.

As Motion Picture Herald reported last week, this program was approved by the board of directors of National Allied and by the 15 regional Allied groups which convened in Pittsburgh for the annual convention of Allied of Western Pennsylvania. The committee appointed to set the plan in motion includes Col. H. A. Cole, National Allied president; Roy E. Harrold, Mr. Kirsch, Mr. Samuelson and Martin Smith. It was said at that time that as a party to such a committee, Allied would take no outside action until efforts to adjust grievances within the committee were exhausted.

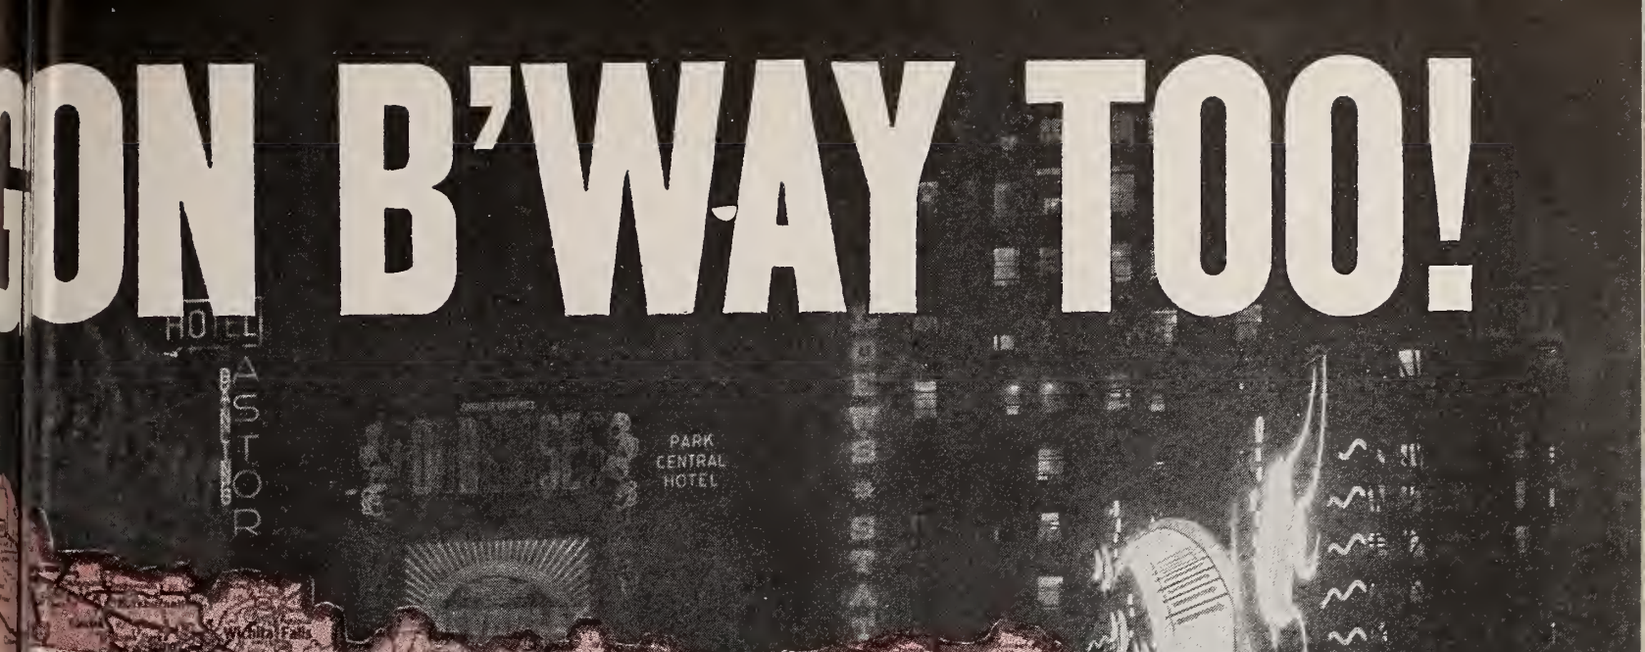
FRIENDLY RIVALS SIT DOWN TO EAT

For the first time in their history, theatres in Lewistown, Pa., will get together at the banquet table to observe the friendly spirit existing among the personnel and management of the rival houses. A committee representing each of the three theatres has been appointed to handle all arrangements for a fitting feast to be held in November and the theatre owners have agreed to share all the expenses equally.



ITOA Plans Meeting In New York

Meanwhile, Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, announced in New York on Monday that the ITOA had canvassed all unaffiliated exhibitor groups and the heads of the two national associations for their reactions to a proposal whereby a general meeting of exhibitors would be held in New York late in November. Mr. Brandt reported that replies to date were favorable and that several acceptances for such a meeting, with unity as its goal, already were received.



The ITOA chief pointed out that his organization's plan was different from the Allied unity proposal in only one respect: that Allied seeks an all-industry harmony program, but that ITOA hopes to promote an all-exhibitor program. Regarding Allied's unity conferences, he said, "If I am invited, I most certainly will be there."

The New York meeting, it is understood, would aim to develop a unity drive and in addition would open for discussion all current exhibitor problems such as the consent decree, sales policies, et al.

Mr. Brandt remarked that past legislation against the industry and attacks from within and without have been "pink tea parties" compared with what may come unless all exhibitor groups get together.

It was understood that Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, had expressed a willingness to attend the ITOA proposed November meeting.

Weekly "round table" discussions of the New Jersey Allied are reported much favored by members, who feel they help in negotiating film contracts. The next such conference will be held next Tuesday at the Walt Whitman Hotel in Camden.

Myers To Speak At ITPA Meeting

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of National Allied States Association, is among those scheduled to address the convention of Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, in Milwaukee, November 4th and 5th, at the Schroeder Hotel. Others scheduled to speak are: Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager, Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, Inc., and J. E. Flynn, Chicago district manager for MGM; Charles M. Reagan, assistant general sales manager of Paramount.

Jack Kirsch, president, Allied Theatres of Illinois; William A. Scully, general sales manager of Universal, and S. S. Broidy, vice president and general sales manager of Monogram, are also expected to participate.

Iowa Group To Protest on 16 mm.

A committee recently appointed of Iowa film industry members to investigate the 16 mm. and portable circuit situation in that state, were to meet this week in Des Moines to discuss this problem. F. E. Judd, Monogram local franchise manager, is chairman. Other members are: E. J. Tilton, Warner manager; Joseph Manfre, Paramount manager, and Mrs. C. S. Hoffman, W. H. Eddy, W. P. Grossman and A. B. Pettit, exhibitors.

The committee was formed recently when theatre interests voiced concern over the large number of portable film units which were operating in Iowa.

Illinois Allied Holds Meeting

Fifty exhibitors representing 105 theatres were present on Monday at the meeting of Allied Theatre Owners of Illinois, at the Congress Hotel. New season's sales policies were principal topics of discussion. Following the meeting, Jack Kirsch, president of ATOI, left for New York to confer with distribution officials on National Allied's unity plan. Mr. Kirsch was joined in New York by Sidney E. Samuelson, also a member of the Allied unity committee.

Gould Sails for Trinidad

Dave Gould sailed Thursday for Trinidad to represent Republic's new branch. In the pictorial section of last week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD, a photograph of Mr. Gould was inadvertently captioned Dave Prince.

SCHOOL CHILDREN CRITICIZE FILMS

At a preview showing of educational films to members of the sixth grade in the Horace Mann School in New York City, the children chose "lifelike Indian raids" in the films showing the life of Kentucky pioneers, and "more action" on the part of Joan of Arc.

To allow children to express their opinions regarding the suitability of films for use in the country's schools, officials of the H. W. Wilson Company, a distributing concern, brought five 10-minute educational films to the school auditorium where the "reviews" of 50 12-year-old students were recorded.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of the nine motion pictures reviewed by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were found unobjectionable for general patronage and four were approved for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Down Mexico Way," "Gauchos of Eldorado," "Riders of the Timberline," "Roaring Frontiers" and "Silver Stallion." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Appointment for Love,' "The Chocolate Soldier," "How Green Was My Valley," and "Suspicion."

Home Office Delegates At RKO Branch Opening

A delegation of eleven RKO home office employes attended the formal dedication ceremonies for the company's new exchange building at Philadelphia on Wednesday. The party, which left by train that morning, included Ned E. Depinet, Andy Smith, Cresson E. Smith, Bob Mochrie, Harry Michalson, S. Barret McCormick, A. A. Schubart, Bill Savage, M. G. Poller, Harry Gittleson and W. J. McShea. C. Zagrans is RKO's branch manager in Philadelphia.

Kansas City Safety Trailer

The first fall meeting of the Kansas City, Kans., Theatre Managers Association was held this week, with all local theatres represented. The association decided to run a series of trailers on safety in all theatres, in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and the local safety council.

Brinck Plans Theatre

Ben Brinck, theatre operator at West Point, Iowa, whose theatre was recently destroyed by fire, has made plans for construction of a new $12,000 theatre building to be completed for opening at the Christmas holidays.

William Mason Promoted

William Mason, former district manager in Eureka, Cal., for the Mann Circuit, has been named assistant general manager. He replaces D. P. Isabella, who resigned to operate the Vacaville theatre in Vacaville, Cal.

Film Conference Set for Worcester

A conference of organizations interested in promoting the best in motion pictures, is scheduled for Thursday, November 6th, at the Hotel Bancroft in Worcester, Mass.

The Worcester Better Film Council will co-operate with the Child Welfare Committee of the Massachusetts Civic League and the Boston Chapter of the Motion Picture Research Council in presenting prominent people in the motion picture field, and in sponsoring a Round Table for the exchange of ideas and the discussion of the problems and accomplishments of the various film groups.

Mrs. Robert T. Bushnell, chairman of the Research Council, will preside at the conference, and the following speakers will address the group: Mrs. Katharine V. Lyford, Civic League; Mr. Stephen P. Cabot, Research Council; Mr. Arthur K. Howard, independent exhibitor, and others from the Affiliated Exhibitors and from Film Councils.

McKenzie Back in Films, Joins Col. Joy at Fox

Maurice McKenzie arrived in Hollywood over the weekend to become associated with Col. Jason Joy at the Twentieth Century-Fox Studios at Movietone City. He will probably do some script and other reading, Col. Joy having charge of Fox writers in addition to assisting Darryl Zanuck.

Mr. McKenzie resigned in ill health nearly two years ago as executive assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA. in New York, to retire and engage in some gentleman farming at his place at Crown Point, Indiana. He had been with Mr. Hays since the days of his political beginnings in Indiana some years before the Harding campaign and postmaster generalship.

Mr. McKenzie's recent recovery of health has sent him back to movieland.

"Love on Dole" to UA

Lou Jackson, head of Anglo-American Pictures, of London, sold "Love on the Dole" to United Artists for United States and South American distribution. The deal was completed in New York on Tuesday. Mr. Jackson previously had sold the U. S. and Latin American rights to United Artists for "Pimpernel Smith." Canadian distribution rights to both films have not been included in the deal, but will be turned over to the new Canadian firm which Mr. Jackson is forming in association with N. L. Nathanson.

James Monks in Film

James Monks, currently appearing in the role of "Owen Morgan" in Twentieth Century-Fox's "How Green Was My Valley," is the third member of the Broadway cast of "Brother Rat" to attain success in Hollywood. Eddie Albert and Jeffrey Lynn were the other members who appeared in the stage presentation.

Dramatists Guild to Elect

The regular annual election of the Dramatists Guild in New York City will take place November 7th at a theatre yet to be selected. Present incumbents are: Elmer Rice, president; George S. BRITISH MOVE TO SAVE NUCLEUS OF PRODUCTION FOR THE FUTURE

Producers Favor Presentation of Ultimatum to Government on Minimum Labor and Technical Requirements for Operations

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Two years of war having rolled around the calendar and the industry with all its difficulties and obstacles still surviving, it will not be surprising that attention during recent days has been concentrated upon what Mr. Wells might have called, "The Shape of Things to Come." The continued call-up of men to the Colours, the threats of the Ministry of Labour to de-reserve all but a minimum of technicians, synchronizing with the intentions of the American companies here to launch forth on production, has produced a situation which is nothing if not anomalous.

During the past week, movements have been forthcoming from various industry sections all set to preserve some nucleus for the future.

Plans, Advice Offered

Superficially most significant of all has been the clarion call issued by that elusive and incalculable body, the Films Council, who have respectfully advised the Government that plans should be made to protect the industry on an agreed war status. No less importantly, but with less spectacular sweep, Mr. Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, has stepped into the battlefield and promised his help in preserving the production industry, asked them to get together and say just exactly what they want preserved, how much, and to what extent.

The Labour group, as represented by the Association of Cine Technicians, have thrown the cat among the pigeons by revealing that the Ministry of Labour's plans are to leave the industry with no more than 450 technicians.

In the constructive field Independent Producer Michael Balcon has presented a plan which would, he contends, offer a basis upon which the industry could survive.

Of all these, Balcon's is perhaps the only contribution which concerns itself precisely with the shape of things to come, apart from the question of dimension.

With its official status the Films Council should, naturally, be considered the most valuable of all in its contribution to the present problem. The Council, after all, contains members of the industry as well as representatives of the public at large, makes its recommendations or leads to the Board of Trade on how the industry should be protected, maintained, or otherwise.

In its Annual Report, dealing with the second year of the war, the Films Council analyses present conditions, offers the suggestion that something should be done about it, scouts entirely the more relevant question of just what should be done about it. After an exhaustive survey of what is wrong with the industry, and why it has been brought to its present pass, the Council in their Report say: "Only by going to the root of the matter and by tacking the problem besetting film production could there be any permanent improvement in the position . . . we strongly recommend that plans should be made at once to give a nucleus of the industry a war status which would adequately protect to a certain agreed level the maintenance of its man power, studio space and supplies."

This planned scheme for British production, irrespective of what the planned scheme might be, is the principal kite flown by the Films Council after an examination of the industry in all its branches, branches including those of production, distribution, exribition, documentary and labour.

The Quota Act concerning itself in the main with production, it is natural that the Films Council should devote its consideration to the industry situation from the point of view of the producer and his associates. The Council seem aware that: "adjustments are necessary if the industry is to render the maximum contribution to the war effort," but the main burdens, they contend, have fallen upon the producers.

Five Causes Listed

So, in an examination of conditions, they come to the conclusion that the production difficulties of today are due to five prime causes:

(1) Industry man power has been diverted to other war work; key personnel has joined Government Departments or the Services. The solution to this, they contend, lies with the Government, of whose policy they do not presumably approve.

(2) Studio space has been over-requisitioned, studios put to various other uses without regard to industry needs. This situation, however, they seem to think has improved and all that is needed is a certain stabilisation.

(3) Protection has not been accorded the materials needed by the industry; "materials" including technical equipment, film stock, timber, clothes, etcetera.

(4) Finance has been lacking. In this regard the Council nebulously stress their consistent urging on the Board of Trade to proceed with constructive plans for the future.

(5) The lack of co-operation between the various Government Departments now concerned with film production.

As a result of all this the Films Council sees that there has been a marked decline in production; that many distributors and exhibitors will be unable to fulfil their quota for the current year.

They scout the exhibitors' suggestion that the quota should be reduced, as providing no basic solution, see a permanent improvement only "by going to the root of the matter," omit to opine what is the root of the matter, or how the Government can get there.

Examining statistically the question of Quota defaults, the Council reveals that in the first war year conditions have to some extent improved as compared with the previous year. On the question of Exhibitors' Quota for the past year, when by an increase of 2½% percentages were set to 17½% for long films and 15% for short films, there were only 316 defaults, as compared with 437 in the previous year which ended, of course, on September 30, 1939.

For the Renters' Quota year ending March 31, 1940, when the percentages were raised by 2½% to 22½% for long films and 17½% for short films, there was a minute increase but only 12 defaults in all.

On more specific matters the Council in its Report recalls how it frowned upon the use of foreign labour for crowd scenes when British labour could have been used; how it decided not to press for the distribution of Ministry of Information films without registration as British; how it felt unable to recommend the institution of a cost or quota clause for short films; how gratified it is that a scheme of insurance was made possible by the Board of Trade against war risks in British production.

More concrete than the Films Council's contribution to the situation has been the contribution of Mr. Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, who, with a practicality with which he has long been credited, having been approached by certain British producers and asked to do something to protect the industry, agreed to do so if the industry would do something to protect itself. Mr. Bracken expressed his willingness to do all he could to help and suggested immediately that producers get together and formulate their plans for an agreed period, namely the next twelve months.

Deplored Crisis Theory

Under the mantle of the B.F.P.A., which but a week before had piously expressed its abhorrence of statements by producers and press that the Government was not doing all it could to help production, deplored the expressed theory that the industry was faced with a crisis, and emphasized the immediate and constant need of the Government was for man power to help its war effort, a clarion call was issued to British and American producers here. These last were asked, post haste and instanter, to say just what films they wished to make during the next twelve months, number, type, names of the leading actors and actresses they needed for these productions, including those already in the Forces; details of production difficulties, apart from the general shortage of man power in the studios; and information as to the extent to which they have studio space at their disposal and where.

When this statistical data is gathered it will form virtually a programme of production for the forthcoming year, and upon this basis it is not unlikely that the Ministry of Information may be persuaded to give a lead to its fellow Government Departments and not impossibly to the War Cabinet itself.

That such a plan has not suddenly been thrust upon the industry is a fact which was recorded in Motion Picture Daily as far back as August 9th, when record was made of a proposal before the B.F.P.A. and with Government inspiration on precisely these lines.

Just what the Government's plan to call technicians to the Forces means has been made clear statistically by the Association of Cine Technicians, who during the week passed revealed that the Government's plan meant leaving no more than 450 technicians and craftsmen remaining in the industry to carry on. As a result, suggest the A.C.T., the Services and

GB—GENERAL FILM DEAL AT $3,600,000

Reports from London last week indicated that the deal by which General Film Distributors' interests would take control of Gaumont British from the Ostrer Brothers involves £900,000, approximately $3,600,000. The deal was expected to be terminated shortly with all details understood to be settled.

Existing operations are expected to remain as they are, it was said. Arthur Rank of General Films, financing the arrangement, who will be chairman of the new setup, also is a director of the Odeon Circuit in England.

"So Many of Them"

Over the entrance to the towering pile that is the office of the New York Daily News, Joseph Medill Patterson, its editor and publisher, has caused to be inscribed the line "because He makes so many of them." It is a reference to Abraham Lincoln's observation of the evidence that God must love the common people. The greatest daily paper circulation in the world is built on that.

For six years Republic Pictures Corporation has adhered to its announced policy of delivering entertainment for the whole family, that great public which is at once the mainstay of both the box office and the nation.

The most entertainment for the most people, is the idea.

The formulae are plain to unmuddled minds. The ideas are as old as humanity, and as new as a baby's smile. They pertain to love's young dream, the devotion of mothers, the heroism of brave young men, the anxiety of fathers, the races for success, the lure of beauty, the zest of living, hope and faith and a good intent—all these among the dramatic struggles and frailties of humanity in pursuit of happiness.

This formula of Republic's has not much to do with the sophistications of what is called "cafe society," nor the interests of Newport, Southampton, Aiken, Palm Beach, or Sun Valley. Republic pictures are made for that larger audience of those who work for a living, like corned beef, and take their coffee in a big cup. That takes in more than admit it.

This is reminder, not argument. Six years of growing Republic success is six years of exhibitor success. Republic is made of, operates on, its share of dollars that come to the box office.

British Ask Aid For Production

other Departments of the Government would be unable to get the films they require and the public would be unable to see British films at all. Laboratory staffs would be depleted and even the American films and newsreel stories from Russia and elsewhere could not and would not be printed.

Before the war, they point out, 8,000 persons were engaged in film production here, today less than half that number are employed. One-third of the A.C.T. members are serving with the Forces.

One company, staffed entirely by male labour before the war, has replaced one-third of its staff with female employees.

Thrusting these figures back at the Ministry of Labour, and spotlighting the thrust in full view of the industry and the public, the A.C.T. asks the Government to make up its mind.

Is a film industry essential in wartime?

If it is, as Government spokesmen have repeatedly agreed, then is not a fifty percent reduction in manpower already the limit which should be made by the industry commissioned to carry out a pre-war volume of output and at the same time maintain its high technical standards?

The most concrete contribution of the week, however, has probably been made by independent producer Michael Balcon, who, not merely theorising or offering pious generalities to the discussion, has put forward proposals which amount practically to a plan. It is true that his proposals, put forward in his personal capacity as a producer, have met with the immediate and uproarious dissent of certain of his colleagues on the B.F.P.A., but they are probably worthy of reporting, none the less.

Proposals Detailed

Mr. Balcon suggests that the future may be preserved if the following can be achieved: night.

(1) The pooling of all studio space by producers, with or without Government benison.

(2) The pooling of contract artistes, who do not amount to a large total.

(3) The establishment of a priority principle in production.

(4) Government control of the formation and registration of new companies.

(5) An exemption order for technicians and studio employees, they to stay in the same employment and not go from job to job.

(6) Employees engaged in motion picture production to stay in it as a work of national importance.

In more nervous mood Mr. Balcon, who has always worn yellow spectacles when regarding the activities of foreign interests in this country, is afraid of the use of frozen currency by American distributors here because it would allow them to offer higher rates of pay.

Producer Maurice Ostrer concurrently suggests that the Board of Trade should suggest the minimum number of future films below which it would be impossible to operate the quota.

It would seem not unlikely that some process of rationalisation may well be evolved from the present tangles, just as it would seem not unlikely that the larger funds available to American producers here, such as 20th Century-Fox, United Artists and M-G-M, who have announced ambitious production programmes, may enable them to scoop the pool of what technicians and talent may be available.

Whether the industry may be able to convince the Government or, if it reaches that stage, the Cabinet, that its production activities are as essential to the ation's welfare as the production of Vickers-Wellingtons, anti-tank guns and radio-location devices remain yet to be seen, and is a question to which there would seem to be more than one answer.

Zanuck to Washington With Film Chiefs

Lt. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, Sig. C. Res., producer of Twentieth Century-Fox and chairman of the Research Council of Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, left Hollywood by plane on Monday for Washington for a short tour of active duty in the Office of the Chief Signal Officer of the U. S. Army. Col. Zanuck was accompanied by Col. Nathan Levinson, Sig. C. Res.; Major John Aalberg, Sig. C. Res., and Capt. Gordon S. Mitchell, Sig. C. Res. The officers were to confer with War Department officials on the Army Training Film production program being carried on by the Research Council.

While in the east, Col. Zanuck went to New York for the opening of his new production, "How Green Was My Valley," which premiered at the Rivoli on Tuesday night.

Republic Plans Spring Convention

Republic Pictures will hold an "international" convention next April or May at the studio, Herbert J. Yates, board chairman, announced at the second quarterly regional sales meeting in Hollywood last week. Delegates from the foreign offices will attend with domestic sales forces to discuss the 1942-43 program.

Rosenfield Joins Fox Advertising Department

Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., formerly with the Donahue & Coe advertising agency in New York, has been named advertising copy chief for Twentieth Century-Fox by A. M. Botsford, director of advertising and publicity.

Mr. Rosenfield replaces Frank Moneyhun, who was promoted to executive assistant to Mr. Botsford.

Hoblitzelle Receives Awards

Karl Hoblitzelle, Dallas theatre chain operator, received two prominent awards in the past week. Governor Coke Stevenson named Mr. Hoblitzelle chairman of the Texas Centennial of Statehood Commission in preparation for celebration of 100 years of statehood in 1945-46 and on October 25th he was elected a member of the board of director of the Texas Technological College at Lubbock, filling the unexpired term of the late J. M. West, Houston. Governor Stevenson also made the college board appointment and in both instances praised Mr. Hoblitzelle for his work in behalf of the state of Texas.

Comerford Meeting

House managers, district managers and officials of the Comerford Theatres Circuit met on Thursday at the Inn at Buck Hill Falls, where final plans were completed for the annual theatre managers' drive scheduled to start on November 1st. Postmaster General Frank C. Walker and Paramount officials were scheduled to attend.

Monogram's Profits

Monogram Pictures Corp. announced in Hollywood this week that its unaudited report for the first quarter ended September 27th, showed a net profit of $39,459 after provision for all taxes.

Swiss Fight Move To Join German Film "Chamber"

The question of Switzerland joining or not joining the International Film Chamber, founded at the European Film Conference held in Berlin last July, has been made the subject of many controversial discussions in Switzerland, according to word reaching New York.

Switzerland was represented at the Conference by the president of the Swiss Film Chamber, Dr. Masnata, assisted and advised by the Zurich film producer, Hans Rudolf Meye. Dr. Masnata collaborated with the committee set up to draft the statutes of the IFC and actually signed the statutes—this signifying Switzerland's accession to that body as one of the founder states. Dr. Masnata's signature is subject to ratification by the Federal Council.

Criticized in Press

As the Swiss newspaper, Neue Zurcher Zeitung, said, the questions raised by Dr. Masnata's action in signing are four-fold:

(1) What are the aims and objects of the International Film Chamber?

(2) To what would Switzerland commit herself by joining the Chamber?

(3) Is membership of the European body compatible with Switzerland's status as a neutral country?

(4) Did the Swiss delegates to the conference act in the national interest?

The newspaper continues that many of the statutes of the film Chamber are general and contain much of a technical nature with which all can agree, but adds that the address with which Dr. Paul Goebbels, German propaganda minister, received the members of the Congress at the Ministry of Propaganda in Berlin, clearly showed the extent to which Switzerland would be committing herself by joining such an association. Dr. Goebbels told those present at the Conference that the Film Congress provided a framework within which European culture would, after the war, be able to stage a gigantic demonstration. He further said the present "intolerable state of affairs" which allowed America to offend European susceptibilities by exploiting Europe's dependence on the United States in the matter of films would be abolished.

If Switzerland were to join the IFC she would have to cheerfully accept the privilege of playing films of the IFC group, to the exclusion of American and British made productions. Such one-sidedness would, said the Swiss newspaper, be opposed to Swiss neutrality.

The Neue Zurcher Zeitung further pointed out that censorship in Switzerland was strict enough in all conscience and the Swiss public could certainly not be accused of discriminating against the German films, "though it may sometimes show a special preference for a particular French, American or English film for artistic reasons."

Recent reports from Switzerland on the matter seem to indicate that Dr. Masnata's signature will not be ratified by the Swiss Federal Council. However, if it is ratified a very difficult and equivocal position would arise and there certainly be an outcry.

Other Swiss newspapers, the Volksrecht and the National-Zeitung, have followed the same general policy as to Switzerland's joining the International Film Chamber as the Neue Zurcher Zeitung.

In 1919, nearly a decade before the actual appearance of commercial 'talkies,' Mr. Schertzinger fooled a Broadway audience into thinking that in some miraculous way he had synchronized the human voice with the pictured singers. During the filming of "Civilization" he arranged for a group of women representing "Mothers of Men" to move their lips in what looked like song. When the picture was presented in New York at the Criterion Theatre he concealed 60 living singers in a pit under the stage and timed their singing with the women on the screen. But the attempt was soon abandoned, for the 60 people under the stage found the temperature unendurable.

AN "I. Q." TEST FOR THEATRE MANAGERS

The Independent Theatre Owners Association, of Little Rock, Arkansas, insists, demands, commands and threatens its independent exhibitor membership to participate in an "I. Q." Quiz pertaining to the regular business of running a movie house, under warning that those not participating will be fined one pint of bourbon, to be delivered personally to the ITOA officers.

THE QUIZ QUESTION:

IF YOU WERE A THEATRE MANAGER, HOW WOULD YOU HANDLE THE FOLLOWING SITUATIONS:

1. A man staggers out of your theatre and into your office to inform you very indignantly that he tripped on your rotten rug and fell, ramming a chair arm straight into his gut.

2. You discover a ten-year-old toughie in the audience with a sack of staples, a rubber band, and four holes in your new screen.

3. You have your house half full of people ready to see the show and discover your picture hasn't showed up.

4. You learn the identity of the lovely lady who yelled "FIRE" when she smelled the trash burning next door.

5. Your house is packed, the lobby is jammed, and a patron in leaving remarks to the doorman in a loud clear voice, "That is about the lousiest show you have ever had."

6. You have just installed new seats. The next day you walk proudly among them to discover five cut to ribbons.

7. You are seated in the audience and see the picture stop dead on the screen and a small brown spot appear at the center, gradually growing larger.

8. A print arrives 10 minutes before show time, and your operator tells you it wouldn't run through a log roller.

9. You have spent two weeks promoting a special picture, spreading the news far and wide, to learn that it is appearing today in the nearby town three days before your run.

ARMY SETS 2,210 BOOKINGS WEEKLY; HAS PLANS FOR 'ENEMY' CAMPS IN U.S.

555 Theatres Now Operating in 277 Posts; 'Tent Shows' Being Replaced by Permanent Structures; 3,156 Showings Weekly

The United States Army Motion Picture Service operates, or has plans, for 555 motion picture theatres in 277 posts. The service more over, is making 2,120 feature bookings weekly for 3,516 film showings.

The number of theatres in operation, however, increases daily, it was said, as war and defense preparations increase. Tent theatres are now largely being replaced by housing of various types, and the season is fast approaching when all remaining large out-of-doors theatres will be closed until spring. And if certain proposed "enemy concentration" camps are established by the Army, as is expected, the number of theatres will be further increased. Location of such "prison-camps," of course, will not be divulged at present.

Army theatre business has been considerably affected by maneuvers involving large bodies of troops, such as the field work now being done by the Second and Third Armies. However, by the end of the week, maneuvers will be over and thereafter men will be much more closely confined to their stations, with expected substantial increases in theatre patronage.

Controlled from Washington

Control of the vast entertainment program of the Army Motion Picture Service continues centered at national headquarter offices in Washington, D. C., at 703 Mather Building, 916 G Street, N.W. Raymond B. Murray and Fred Bund, Jr., are general manager and assistant manager respectively. Thomas H. Martell is chief booker. Six district offices are operated by the Service: the central district, with offices at 3312-A Olive Street, in St. Louis, Mo., T. G. Kemper, manager; southwestern district, 312½ South Harwood Street, Dallas, Tex., W. E. Crist, manager; southeastern district, 101 Marietta Street, N.W., Atlanta, Ga., Michael W. Smith, manager; eastern district, 904 RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, Thomas H. Martell, manager; southern district, in the same offices as the national headquarters in Washington with Michael W. Smith, manager, and the western district, at 402 Orpheum Building, Seattle, Wash., Richard O. Schmidt, manager.

In New York last week, representatives of the United Service Organization and the Citizens Committee of the Army and Navy met at the USO headquarters offices in the Empire State Building, to iron out remaining details of presenting talent entertainment units for Army and Navy servicemen. According to present plans, the objective of both groups is to have some 16 show units routed to camps by November 15th, and more than 30 in operation at the beginning of 1942.

Last Thursday, Harper Sibley, president of the USO, announced that contracts had been let by the Quartermaster General's office of the United States Army, for construction of 41 USO clubs before Christmas. It is reported that work already has been started on nine of the buildings, in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina, Tennessee, Ohio and California. Construction on the others probably will begin this week.

Raising funds to supply recreational materials for the men in the nation's armed forces, particularly those in Army camps, took an unusual turn into the field of fashions on Monday this week, when the second region council of the Citizens Committee sponsored a fashion show of American designs at the Colony Restaurant in New York. Since last November, the committee has been working to supply everything from triptychs to trophies to servicemen who require some help from the citizenry and the Government in whiling away their leisure time. The show was under the direction of Mrs. Junius Spencer Morgan, vice-chairman of the second region council.

With the approval and advice of Major General William N. Haskell, commander of the 27th Division, stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala., Mrs. Morgan and her group have been busy knitting sweaters and other garments needed by the boys in camp. However, the committee is far more concerned with dispatching recreational facilities "in kind" to the various camps, such as books, cameras, comfortable chairs, albums of popular songs of the last twenty years, dance records and musical instruments, among other items.

Broadway Hit Shows For Boys in Service

Lawrence Phillips, executive director of the Citizens Committee, announced over the weekend that three former Broadway attractions would be seen in Army camps during the next month through an arrangement with the committee. The plays are "Goodbye Again," "The Patsy" and "Brother Rat," in which Private Ezra Stone, who appeared in the Broadway production of the comedy hit, will be starred.

"Goodbye Again" received its first showing last week with the Gilbert Reportory Company at Fort Wadsworth; "The Patsy" was done by Metropolitan Reportory Company in Fort Hamilton, and "Brother Rat" played at Camp Upton.

From Hollywood last week, Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Seiences, announced the Paramount studio was starting a War Department Training Film to be produced for the Council.

The picture, "The Motor Vehicle Driver," deals with proper operation and maintenance of all types of Army motorized equipment including trucks, reconnaissance cars, combat cars, "jeeps," and half track tanks.

The film has the most extensive production schedule for a war training picture, with 49 shooting days scheduled at the Paramount Ranch in San Fernando Valley. It will comprise, when completed, six "chapters" each of approximately four reels in length.

Troops and equipment have been sent to Hollywood from California's Fort Ord, to work under the direction of Major Charles S. Stodter, War Department Liaison Officer, assisted by Major Frank Hierholzer, Army Motor Vehicle expert, who is in Hollywood on temporary duty from his station at Fort Sill, Okla.

Exhibitor Protests Showing

Universal's branch manager in Indianapolis, L. J. McGinley, investigated an exhibitor's complaint last week that the film, "Boys From Syracuse," played a free show near the exhibitor's theatre. Mr. McGinley found that the picture had been loaned to the house by a CCC camp commander who was unaware of regulations governing approval of showings. The commander had loaned the film which was booked for a screening at his camp unit.

As a result of Mr. McGinley's investigation, a bulletin was sent to all CCC camps advising them that pictures made available to them are for exhibition only to CCC members and not to the general public.

The War Department announced in Washington last Thursday that more than 200 broadcasting stations in 21 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and Alaska, were cooperating with the Army Morale Branch in providing entertainment and news programs for soldiers in camp.

At a meeting of the Screen Actors Guild, held in Hollywood last Wednesday, Class A members were given details of the New Army and Navy camp entertainment program. Professional actors are to appear at 72 theatres at various camps. Stars and feature players will receive traveling expenses, it was explained, all others being paid full salaries.

The program is being financed by the Citizens Committee of the Army and Navy, which will obtain funds from the United Service Organization. Admission charges of 25 cents will be made.

Eight theatres, with a total seating capacity of 7,800, will be construeted at a cost of $407,000 at Camp Blanding in Florida, it was reported last week, to replace three tent theatres now in use and seating approximately 2,000 spectators each. Two of the new buildings will be equipped with stages, footlights and dressing rooms: all the theatres will be of frame construction set on concrete.

AAA APPEAL BOARD APPROVES LOCAL DECISION IN FULL FOR FIRST TIME

New York Theatre Files Demand Under Three Decree Sections; Settle New Haven, Washington, Philly Clearance Cases

The decision of a local arbitrator was approved in full, without interpretative comment or amendment, for the first time when the appeal board of the motion picture arbitration tribunals in its eighth decision, Monday, upheld the dismissal of the clearance action filed at Philadelphia last May by the Hill theatre. The ruling of the "highest court" of film arbitration upheld William A. Wiedersheim, arbitrator, who dismissed the complaint filed by Edward I. Singer.

The three Appeal Board members in their decision quoted extensively from Mr. Wiedersheim's findings of fact and analysis of the clearance situation in the Germantown area of Philadelphia. They praised the equity of his ruling and affirmed the award with costs.

Clearance at Issue

At issue in the original complaint were the clearances betwen the Hill theatre, in Chestnut Hill, and the Rialto and Sedgwick theatres in Germantown, a Philadelphia suburb. Warner Brothers, Paramount, and RKO-Radio were the distributors cited. The Rialto theatre intervened in the case but the Sedgwick did not.

Mr. Wiedersheim ruled that the seven days clearance held by the Rialto over the Hill was reasonable even though a seven day margin held by the Sedgwick over the Rialto often had the effect of increasing availability for the Hill to 14 days after the Rialto. A section of the complaint asking that the arbitrator set the Sedgwick's clearance over the Hill at seven days was dismissed by the arbitrator on the grounds that it involved specific run rather than clearance. Mr. Singer did not appeal this portion of the ruling.

The arbitrator upheld the existing clearance on the grounds of its historical development, the larger revenue accruing to distributors from the Rialto, and the operating policies of the two theatres.

He also said that only three months had elapsed since the Hill reopened after an extensive remodeling. This, he said "is hardly a sufficient length of time within which to enjoy the benefits naturally and rightfully anticipated by the management." He observed, "Provisions of the decree are wisely enough drawn to permit any exhibitor to secure proper redress when operating conditions change.

Costs were divided among all parties by Mr. Wiedersheim. The Appeal Board affirmed his action.

The sixteenth appeal was filed this week by Fred W. Rowlands of Columbus, Ohio, who asked that the dismissal of his clearance complaint in behalf of the Parsons theatre be reviewed. The Parsons action, Cincinnati Case No. 2, was one of two complaints filed by Mr. Rowlands. Anthony B. Dunlap dismissed it after the parallel complaint for the Main theatre was dismissed three weeks ago. The Main complaint has already been appealed by Mr. Rowlands. The Neth circuit and all consenting distributors are involved.

Samuel Mellitts, operator of the Dentonia theatre in Denton, Md., this week won elimination of the seven-day clearance held over his theatre by the Reese in Harrington, Del. Joseph A. Cantrell, arbitrator of the case, Washington's seventh case, set clearance for the Dentonia as "immediately following the Reese." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was the only consenting distributor cited in the complaint. Costs were assessed against MGM and Reese B. Harrington, operator of the Reese theatre.

Complaint Dismissed

The Philadelphia clearance complaint of N. Herman Bornstein's Hatboro theatre in suburban Hatboro, Pa., was dismissed last Friday by Arbitrator S. Eugene Kuen, Jr. Case No. 7, it was directed against all the Big Five and Warners' Grove theatre at Willow Grove, Pa. The arbitrator found that the present seven days clearance of the Grove over the Hatboro is reasonable. Costs were assessed equally between the complainant, defendant and intervenor.

The seventh Chicago complaint, the K & S Theatre Corporation clearance demand against RKO for the Sheridan theatre, North Chicago, was dismissed Tuesday by Alexander Eulenberg, arbitrator, at the request of complainant. The consent settlement restores the second run of general release which RKO and Warner Brothers had taken away and given to the Times theatre in Waukegan, two and a quarter miles away. Warners were dismissed three weeks ago after restoring the run asked by the Sheridan.

At New Haven, A. A. Ribicoff, arbitrator, on Monday reduced from 30 to 21 days the clearance of first run New Britain theatres over the New Newington in Newington, Conn. The five consenting distributors were named in the complaint, along with the Strand and Embassy, New Britain key houses. Warner Brothers, who operate the two theatres through a circuit subsidiary, was exempted from the award. The Palace theatre, New Britain subsequent run, which intervened, was declared not affected by the award.

Robert A. Bruce, arbitrator of New York's ninth case on Tuesday, reduced the clearance of six Perth Amboy and Raritan theatres over the Colony theatre, Sayreville, N. J. Mr. Bruce ruled that the 14 day margins held by the Capitol, South River, operated by the Wilbur Amusement Company and the Majestic, Ditmas, Strand, Crescent and Perth Amboy theatres in Perth Amboy over the Colony were unreasonable. He ordered a maximum clearance of seven days for the Capitol and a maximum of seven days on first run for the Perth Amboy theatres.

Costs were divided among all parties. The Perth Amboy Raritan Theatre Company operated the intervening Perth Amboy theatres.

New Cases Filed

New York's 24th arbitration complaint, filed on Monday, by the Waverly theatre at Sixth Avenue and Fourth Street, New York, seeks relief under three sections of the consent decree.

The Luxor-Bleecker Amusement Corporation, owner of the Waverly, in the Greenwich Village section, asks that clearance held by the Art theatre, on Eighth Street, be declared unreasonable and that RKO, MGM, Warner Brothers and 20th Century-Fox be ordered to grant both some run and specific run to the Waverly.

Under Section VIII of the consent decree, the Waverly complains that a seven day clearance which it has held over the Art has now been given to the Art. It asks that this be declared unreasonable and the former status restored. Under Section VI, the complaint asserts, distributors have refused to offer the Waverly a run on new pictures unless it foregoes its previous availability ahead of the Art. It asks that the specific run requested under Section X of the decree be awarded because the Art "enjoys preferred buying status" as a member of a circuit affiliated in "stock ownership, common ownership, or common buying agent or otherwise." The Rugoff and Becker circuit operate the Art.

A new Washington complaint, on clearance, the tribunal's tenth action was filed Tuesday by the Bayne-Roland Corporation operators of the Bayne theatre, Virginia Beach, Va. The action, against Warners, asserts that while the Bayne is sold first run pictures, it is subject to 21 days clearance by the Newport theatre in Norfolk, Va. The Bayne asks day and date first run.

One in New Orleans

New Orleans' arbitration tribunal received its first new action since March on Friday when the Ashton theatre, operated by W. A. Fonseca and Sons, in New Orleans, filed a clearance action against the Big Five. It is the city's fourth case.

The complaint charges that the distributors have refused to license the Ashton until 60 days after the Poplar theatre. Mr. Fonseca asserts that the two theatres are too far apart to warrant a two month margin and asks that they be declared in separate, non-competitive zones. Also, the Ashton seeks a run immediately following Canal Street first run houses.

Professor Rupert C. Schaeffer, Jr., of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, will arbitrate Philadelphia Case No. 13, clearance complaint of Columbus Stamper for his Rivoli theatre. Hearing has been set for November 6th.

Four Arbitration Complaints Filed

plaint of A. M. Ellis in behalf of his Parkside theatre, Camden, N. J., was continued until Nov. 7 after an all-day session last Friday.

Lewen Pizor, operator of the Tioga theatre, Philadelphia, withdrew his clearance action Tuesday on the eve or its first hearing.

Detroit

Hearings on two clearance cases and one specific run complaint are scheduled for three successive days at Detroit on November 5, 6, and 7.

The hearing on the complaint of the Gale theatre, Galesburg, Mich., started Wednesday, was adjourned until November 5th by Edmund M. Brady, arbitrator.

On November 6th, the clearance complaint of the Booth theatre with Jerome G. Thomas arbitrator, and on November 7th the specific run complaint of the Parkside theatre will be heard. Wilbur M. Brucker, former Michigan governor, will arbitrate this case.

The Gale complaint was adjourned after a day was spent in taking preliminary testimony. D. E. Frank, complainant, charged that his 410-seat theatre completed in June 1941 at a cost of $42,000 was not being given reasonable clearance over Kalamazoo theatres. Mr. Frank seeks a reduction from 67 to 7 days. He said that other small theatres the same distance from Kalamazoo and of the same seating capacity and admission were enjoying a clearance less than his.

Hearing of the clearance case of the Ritz theatre, Watervleit, has been postponed until November 13th.

Chicago

First hearings of Chicago's Oriental theatre clearance case against the Big Five with Balaban & Katz, the McVickers, Monroe and Esquire theatres as intervenors, were held last week. The case was then postponed until December 15th due to previous commitments of Hayes McKinney, arbitrator.

During the proceedings many attempts were made to dismiss the case, Chicago's sixth. Counsel for the defense filed nine different motions. Most of the time was consumed in explaining the complicated Chicago clearance system to the arbitrator, who exclaimed at one point that he thought it was "terrible".

The Portage theatre clearance case, Chicago No. 4, scheduled for October 27th, has been postponed until November 17th by stipulation of all parties.

New Haven

At New Haven the Windsor theatre, a Lockwood and Gordon house, has filed as intervenor in the clearance complaint of the Plaza theatre, Windsor, operated by Joseph Shulman. The complaint, filed October 7th, seeks to eliminate the Windsor clearance over the Plaza.

Milton F. King, Washington attorney, will arbitrate the board's eighth case, clearance action of the Linden theatre, Baltimore. Hearings will begin November 5th. Mr. King, treasurer of the District of Columbia Bar Association, was appointed from the Washington panel by the American Arbitration Association. It is the first time that parties to a motion picture arbitration have failed to agree on an arbitrator.

Buffalo

Hearings on the seventh Buffalo case, clearance action against the Big Five by the Dipson Theatre Corporation for the Bailey theatre entered their seventh day Tuesday. Only three witnesses were heard during the first six hearings. Andrew Gibson, a Dipson Corporation executive, and two other company witnesses explained operations of the Bailey, its contracts, and the purchase of the theatre from the Shea circuit.

St. Louis

Hearings of two St. Louis complaints ended this week. John J. Nangle, arbitrator, has under advisement the some run action of Mrs. Mildred Karsch, operator of the Ritz at Rolla, Mo. She denied testimony by exchange managers that they had offered her some first and second run pictures and third run.

The clearance complaint of Victor Thein, operator of the Palm, St. Louis, was heard on October 23rd before J. Wesley McAfee.

FROM READERS

THE STATE DEPARTMENT ON "CENSORSHIP"

STATE DEPARTMENT

Washington, D. C.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

There has been brought to my attention an article published in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of October 11, 1941, under the title of "'Censorship' by State Department Stalls 'Good Neighbor' Program."

The Department wishes to point that the Department does not, as stated in the article, review for approval "all non-theatrical films intended for South American distribution." This statement is quite incorrect. The Department reviews films produced with Government funds for distribution abroad, and also reviews privately produced non-theatrical films only when they are distributed abroad through Government agencies, or when the private producer requests an official attestation of the international educational character of a non-theatrical film in order to facilitate its entry into foreign countries.

I shall not attempt to point out numerous other serious misstatements of fact in the article.

Very truly yours,
For the Secretary of State:
CHARLES A. THOMSON, Chief of the Division of Cultural Relations.

[Mr. Thomson appears concerned over the fact that the phrase in the lead of the October 11th article, "all non-theatrical films intended for South American distribution," did not include the phrase, "by the U. S. State Department."

The lead paragraph in the article (p. 15, October 11th) refers specifically to the "program to promote the good neighbor policy through motion pictures" and to the "free educational films promised South America."

The State Department and Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (Rockefeller, Whitney, Macgowan, et al.) are the only agencies, government or private, with such a program. It has been referred to frequently in MOTION PICTURE HERALD and elsewhere. Mr. Thomson appears to have had no doubt about what films or program we were discussing.

Elsewhere the story described the $200,000 budget earmarked for the Rockefeller group's film work, how it is being carried on by Whitney, Macgowan and others and how it is subject to State Department censorship, "attestation" or whatever they call it. The story points out that practically all 16 mm educational films sent to South America have been, and are to be, distributed by the State Department and its cultural attaches. This is financed in part by the Whitney appropriation.

The only program for sending non-theatrical films to South America is the State Department-Rockefeller project.

All persons connected with the project who have been questioned say that other exports of non-theatrical films are negligible.]

Film Pioneers Honor Willkie

The Picture Pioneers in New York honored a non-industry figure for the first time Wednesday evening at their autumn dinner conference, when Wendell L. Willkie former Republican presidential candidate and special defense counsel at the Senate propaganda hearings, delivered an "off-the-record" speech.

Approximately 175 members attended the gathering at Toots Shor's restaurant. Jack Cohn, president, was toastmaster. Other special guests invited were Judge Ferdinand Pecora, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, and Gracie Fields, English actress.

Sixteen new members were initiated into the organization: Harry Cohn, Harry Moskowitz, Charles W. Koerner, Louis Rosenbluh, Nathan Hirsh, W. C. Michel, Harry C. Arthur, Jr., H. S. Eskin, H. E. Rosenquest, Nathan E. Goldstein, William R. Ferguson, Haskell M. Masters, Phil Hode, Hal Horne, Jack H. Levin and Russell C. Roshon. Two candidates were initiated in absentia, Peter Smith, of Hollywood, and Max Lefkowich, Cleveland.

The Canadian Picture Pioneers will hold their 1941 convention on November 18th, at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. Claire Hague is president. Because of the war he said that the annual frolic will be omitted and the meeting will close with the election of officers after a luncheon. Mr. Hague will not seek reelection.

FCC Again at Full Strength, with Durr

Appointment of Charles J. Durr to the Federal Communications Commission, with Senatorial approval this week, again brings the FCC to full strength, for the first time since June 30, when Frederick I. Thompson left.

Mr. Durr's nomination by President Roosevelt, sent to the Senate October 13, was approved without opposition by its Interstate Commerce Committee.

The new commissioner is from Montgomery, Ala., 42 years old, and since 1937 has been on the legal staff of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Lester Isaac to South America

Lester Isaac, head of all projection for Loew's, left Tuesday for Miami, Fla., from where he was to embark by air for Rio de Janeiro to attend the formal opening of the company's second new theatre in that city's suburban area.

Following the premiere, Mr. Isaac will inspect projection facilities in the company's theatres located in Sao Paulo, Montevideo, Santiago, Valparaiso, and Lima, as well as the Metro exchange in Buenos Aires.

AAA Home Office Moves

The New York headquarters of the American Arbitration Association were moved on Friday from the U. S. Rubber Company Building, 1230 Sixth Avenue, to the Time and Life Building, 9 Rockefeller Plaza. The New York tribunal and the national motion picture tribunal administrative officers will both be located on the 11th floor at the new address.

SUMMARY OF ARBITRATION DOCKET

The following is a tabulation of all arbitration cases still pending before local tribunals or the Appeals Board. Cases completed during the first half year of arbitration will be found on the chart published in Motion Picture Herald on July 19th, pages 49 to 55. Listed below are only those cases still pending, or settled subsequent to the tabulation in the issue of August 13th.

Of the 134 cases on the docket of the AAA as of October 28th, 37 were settled or withdrawn, 29 were dismissed, exhibitors won their complaints in whole or in part in 31 cases, and 58 are still pending. Of these, eight are before the Appeals Board.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Captain Courage

Hollywood procedure in independent picture making is to arrange for distribution and then get financing. Or get financing and arrange for release; then make the picture.

John Hall is different. He got the literary property, the players, the writers, the director, and arranged the financing.

The picture is finished.

Now he is arranging for a release.

That's courage. In fact, it's more than courage when the budget of the picture is $200,000.

Onetime worker in the European film industry, onetime executive of the American-Hungarian Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hall has become one of the few producers in years to embark on such a venture.

The picture is "The Captain of Koepenick."

The players are Albert Basserman, Mary Brian, Eric Blore, George Chandler, Luis Alberni, Sig Arno, Herman Bing, Bernard Gorcey, Else Basserman, Calude Allister, Robert Cavanaugh, Russell Hicks and Frank Orth.

The director is Richard Oswald.

Writers Albert Joseph and Ivan Goff adapted the story by Carl Zuckmeyer.

Originally made in Germany in 1930, "The Captain of Koepenick" portrays a burlesque of the love and respect the German people have for a uniform. It is based on a true story. Entangled in economic stress, an elderly German in 1907 bought an Army captain's uniform, ousted the mayor of Koepenick, a small town near Berlin, and took over the town. He over-awed the residents with his brass buttons for a year and then the police caught up with him.

He was sent to jail, and the story became an international news sensation.

In 1930, Director Oswald, then working in Germany, made "The Captain of Koepenick," which was a box office sensation in Europe and in the United States, getting the Critics Circle award as the best foreign picture of 1934, the year it finally reached America.

So when Mr. Hall decided on an English language remake of the picture, he cast about for a director—and found Mr. Oswald, the original director, now in America.

So the man who made the German version is now directing the English version.

Mr. Joseph, one of the writers on the new script, had worked on the German version.

The picture as first made was a farce, a burlesque. But now, with the characters saying the same words expressing their worship of the uniform, a new significance is attached, in view of the current state of world affairs.

Mr. Basserman, noted refugee actor, is playing the title role. He's the only player in the cast on a percentage deal. The rest are paid.

The picture is now being edited. When it is completed, it will be shown to executives of major distribution companies and if a satisfactory deal can be arranged, the release will be set. If not, Mr. Hall is going back further into the practices of the industry, by throwing the cans in the back of an automobile and going out and booking the picture to the theatres himself.

That's also courage.

But Mr. Hall is not making a one picture bid in Hollywood. He's lined up several other properties, the only one of which he will discuss is "The Lower Depths." His next picture will be the filmization of the Maxim Gorky play. Mr. Hall says Max Reinhardt has agreed to enact the lead.

Samuel Goldwyn has engaged Howard Hawks to direct his film biography of Lou Gehrig, baseball star. Paul Gallico is currently engaged in putting the finishing touches on the film script.

Larry Darmour, Columbia producer, has replaced Ralph Bellamy with William Gargan in the title role of "Ellery Queen," detective pictures.

SLANGUAGE AS SHE IS SPOKE

If newspapers headline an explosion this week at the Samuel Goldwyn studios, don't be alarmed. It'll merely mean that the sound system, the re-recording apparatus, the dubbing channels and the sound heads have blown out.

The machinery will have balked at assimilating the potpourri of strange syntax, maniacal metaphors, crazy conjugations and peripatetic parses that it is in for.

Samuel Goldwyn, striving always for accuracy in film production, has hired one "Muggsy" Meyers and one Lester V. Berrey to check on the authenticity of the slang used in "Ball of Fire". Mr. Meyers is a ticket scalper ("ducat hustler" in his jargon) and is touted as an avocational expert in the art of the idiom. Mr. Berrey is an occupational philologist whose book, "An American Thesaurus of Slang", will appear next month.

Mr. Goldwyn's aides are negotiating a contest between them.

Products Parade

MGM continued to lead the production parade with eight pictures before the cameras, 20th Century-Fox following with seven. A total of 39 are in work, as 10 finished and 12 started. Thirty-two are being prepared and 83 are being edited.

ANOTHER $3,500,000 ADDED TO THE EXHIBITOR'S BILL FOR STUDIO LABOR

Casey Sees That Amount in Recent Increases; Back Pay Under Wage Law Asked in Suit by Screen Actors Guild

More than $3,500,000 per year is what the recent, and continuing, wage boosts given the studio unions will cost the producers, in the estimation of Pat Casey, producers' labor representative, a principal defense witness Friday, October 24th, in the Browne-Bioff extortion trial at New York Federal Court. It is assumed that these costs will eventually be added to the exhibitor's bill.

Seven international labor unions received wage increases and altered working conditions for their studio locals, in renewal of the studio basic labor agreement, last month, in Newark; and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' locals are this week continuing negotiations for new contracts for nine locals, the tenth, the cameraman's, having already obtained one.

Mr. Casey pointed out the wage increases were necessary to retain for the industry the skilled labor for which defense industries, with high pay rates, have been bidding.

Actors Seek Back Pay

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, the producers face a bookkeeping headache in the Screen Actors Guild suit of last week against 13 companies, asking back pay, overtime pay, and penalties, under the Fair Labor Standards Act. The suit was brought in behalf of 6,000 extra players. It names 1,000, specifying the amounts due them for working allegedly in excess of 44, 42 and 40 hours per week, since the Act's inception. The total which may be wrung from the companies, may be hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The suit is in federal court. If it is not settled it will force the companies to prove, by records, that the players mentioned have not worked overtime.

Observers note the studios must certainly check each working week of 6,000 names.

Defendants are Alexander Korda Films, Fox, Universal, Columbia, MGM, RKO, Republic, Warners, Paramount, Walter Wanger, Hal Roach, David Selznick and Edward Small.

The Guild had already started negotiations with the producers on the overtime pay assertedly due the extra players, after the final studio workers' classification some time ago, by the Department of Labor; a classification which ruled extra players were not exempt from the Act's provisions.

Inasmuch as the negotiations brought no result, the suit is regarded as the Guild's answer.

Lawrence Beilenson, Guild attorney, said this week that if the suit was settled before trial, the Guild would not apply for the double penalties provided by the Act.

In New York, a new union, announced some weeks ago, last week appeared to have successfully entered the listing, this time for adherence of theatre managers and assistants. The Exhibition, Exposition, Entertainment Employees National Union won a collective bargaining agency election sponsored by the New York State Labor Relations Board, among the "front office" employees of the RKO circuit's Westchester and New York houses. The vote was 51 to 39. Ninety of 91 eligible voted. The Board was to certify the election this week.

Gustave A. Gerber, attorney for the union, said petitions for similar elections in the Loew and Skouras chains in the New York territory, would be filed with the Board this week.

In the same city, musicians' union action was awaited this week, as the Warner, Strand and Paramount theatres continued booking bands with their stage shows without signing the American Federal of Musicians' Form B contract. That contract makes the theatre liable for Social Security taxes of individual musicians. The theatres' ignoring of the new contract was in violation of an AFM "deadline" of Oct. 27th. The matter was expected to be settled by conferences to be held later in the week by James Caesar Petrillo, AFM president, and Warner and Paramount officials, in New York.

IATSE Conferences Continue

Conferences continued on the Coast, this week, between producers' representatives and those of nine IATSE locals, following earlier meetings in New York offices of Mr. Casey. The meetings are expected to result in new contracts or revised contracts, with increases in pay, as asked by the unions in New York. The unions' business agents have returned to Hollywood with producers' counter proposals.

Last of the union agents to leave New York for the Coast was Harold V. Smith, representing Local 695, Sound Technicians. It was understood as he left that Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount studio head and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, and Edward Mannix, that organization's vice-president, were to negotiate on the Coast with the local, with Mr. Smith joining. It is also understood Local 695 is asking for a completely new contract, provisions of which are reported to be a full day call with time and a half for overtime, triple time after 16 hours' work, a closed shop, and the union handling of all calls.

Local 165, studio projectionists, has signed a contract with the producers, embodying a pay increase of $1.66 to $1.85 per hour, and a minimum call of six hours. The projectionists, under the new pact, will receive time and a half for Sundays, and double pay for holidays. Process projectionists have their pay raised from $1.66 per hour, to $2; and they are to receive time and a half after six hours' work.

The film exchange employees will move for new agreements and increased pay, this being foreshadowed by a special meeting over the weekend at Kansas City of the locals' representatives, presided over by Richard F. Walsh, IATSE vice-president. They were said to have discussed a new master contract.

That contract will replace the one expiring November 30th, after two years.

Publicists Vote on CIO

After some delay, a previous postponement of a mail ballotting of members, the Screen Publicists Guild, New York branch, is now holding a referendum on affiliation with the CIO's Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, which received a charter last week from the United Office and Professional Workers of America; and which represents the first CIO screen employees' union in the East. The referendum was voted at a special membership meeting of the Guild Thursday, October 23rd, at New York's Hotel Piccadilly.

The Guild has repeatedly asserted the negotiations with the major companies' New York home office are proceeding too slowly, their inference being the majors are "stalling." The projected affiliation with a national labor organization is reportedly the Guild's form of reply.

New York Local 802 of the AFM last week cabled an "unstinted support" pledge to the British Musicians' Union. Said Jack Rosenberg, the former's president and William Feinberg, its secretary: "We pledge our voice and strength to help make American conscious of its own great stake in your ultimate victory."

Picketing Decision Upheld

Declaring "that it does not appear from the record that the Federal question presented by the petition was necessarily decided by the lower court," the United States supreme court, at Washington last week declined to review a decision of the Ohio supreme court restraining the American Federation of Labor from picketing the Liberty theatre, in Springfield, Ohio.

In appealing the case, the IATSE, Local 352, said that the picketing, which was peaceful, resulted from the theatre's refusal to employ union operators. The petition specifically stressed violation of the constitutional right of freedom of speech. The theatre countered with the claim that the union had but 14 members at the time the demand was made, and that no union operators were available, even if the contract had been negotiated.

The Ohio court ruled that the theatre employees were not members of the union, and there was no dispute between the theatre and the employees over wages, hours or working conditions.

Negotiations Continue

Negotiations still continue between theatre owners and projectionists and stagehands, in Hartford, Waterbury and Bridgeport.

The Philadelphia chapter of the American Guild of Variety Artists has adopted a new, higher scale for night club performers, effective November 21st. It asks $75 per week per performer at Class A places; $55 for Class B; $40 for Class C; $30 for Class D. Transportation is extra.

The Theatrical and Amusement Janitors union, Chicago, this week closed a new pact with the city's building managers' association. The janitors will receive a monthly increase of $10.

PENNSYLVANIA CENSOR BANS "ECSTASY" AGAIN

After being submitted for the eighth time, the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors has again rejected a seal of approval for the French-made film, "Ecstasy". The board's decision was appealed to the censor body according to regulation on Monday, October 27th, which results in re-reviewing of the picture to make the rejection definite for the eighth time.

Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman of the censor board, speaking before the Women's Christian Temeprance Union in Philadelphia last week at its 67th annual state convention, urged the women to write more letters to the censor board. She said that too many organizations discuss what should be done about motion pictures but never follow it up.

NAVY AGAIN LENDS A HAND FOR PREMIERE

Service Relief Society Gets Proceeds of "Valley" Opening at New York's Rivoli

Special promotions of Hollywood's new product were attended this week by ceremonials in which the U. S. Navy again participated and for which officials of New Orleans and Memphis literally "turned out" their cities incidental to the debuts of "How Green Was My Valley," 20th Century-Fox, and "Birth of the Blues," Paramount. The Hal Horne Organization handled the opening of Twentieth Century-Fox' screen version of "How Green Was My Valley," which bowed Tuesday night at the Rivoli Theatre in New York to a distinguished audience of Naval officials, film critics from 31 out-of-town newspapers, luminaries of the stage, screen and radio, and leaders of New York society. It is understood that 20th-Fox, through the Horne agency, spent about $10,000 alone on decorations for the interior and exterior of the Rivoli theatre, and that an additional $25,000 will be spent by the film company in advance advertising.

Tribute to Ford

The premiere of the picture which is based on Richard Llewellyn's novel, was a tribute from Twentieth Century-Fox and the motion picture industry, to Director John Ford, upon the occasion of his retirement and the completion of 25 years as a motion picture director. Upon completion of the film, Mr. Ford went into active service in the U. S. Navy, as a lieutenant commander. He directed the Darryl F. Zanuck production which stars Walter Pidgeon and features a host of notable screen players.

The U. S. Navy dominated the premiere of "How Green Was My Valley," which followed close upon the Navy Day celebrations throughout the country. The Navy Relief Society of the Third Naval District sponsored the opening. Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District headed a contingent of high ranking naval officers who were present, including Rear Admiral Lamar Leahy, Rear Admiral Edward J. Mauquart, Captain Booth McKinney and Captain J. L. G. Stapler, chief of staff of the North Atlantic Coastal Front. Mr. Zanuck came to New York from Hollywood for the occasion, as did Walter Pidgeon, star, and Donald Crisp who is featured in the film.

One of the largest delegations of important out-of-town newspaper film critics was brought to New York by Twentieth Century-Fox for the occasion. The critics invited were:

Norman Clark, Baltimore News-Post; Charles Howard and Marjory Adams, Boston Globe; Helen Eager, Boston Traveler; Prunella Hall, Boston Post; Peggy Doyle, Boston Record-American; Joyce Dana, Boston Sunday Advertiser; W. "Blues" Twin-Debut

Paramount's new musical film, "Birth of the Blues," which provoked an interstate pique between Louisiana and Tennessee in the battle to determine who held prior claim to the title of birthplace of American "blues," finally debuted on Friday, at two simultaneous openings, one in New Orleans, at the Saenger Theatre, and the other in Memphis, at the Malco.

New Orleans turned back the clock to celebrate the premiere of the Bing Crosby-Mary Martin musical. Hollywood film stars who arrived in New Orleans from Hollywood via plane, boarded a river yacht for a harbor-sightseeing trip, and then proceeded along the main stem, Canal Street, in old-fashioned carriages to their quarters at the old St. Charles Hotel, hard by Basin Street, the thoroughfare which tiffed with Beale Street, Memphis, as original birthplace of the blues. Basil Rathbone, Charles Ruggles, Chester Morris, Patricia Morison, Dona Drake, Ellen Drew, Phil Regan and Jean Wallace, bride of Franchot Tone, were on hand for the New Orleans premiere.

"Purchase" Plans

A world premierc trade-showing of Paramount's "Louisiana Purchase" will be held by that company in Chicago at a meeting of district managers Novembcr 14-15th, Neil Agnew, Paramount general sales manager announced this week. Sales plans for the picture will be discussed during the sessions and the meeting will be attended by a delegation of home office executives including Mr. Agnew, Charles M. Reagan, J. J. Unger, G. A. Smith, Oscar Morgan, G. B. J. Frawley, Robert M. Gillham and Alec Moss.

Christy Wilbert of Twentieth Century-Fox's home office exploitation department, directed the world premiere of the studio's film, "Swamp Water," at the Fox Theatre in St. Louis on Thursday. Mr. Wilbert was joined by Tommy Thompson, Fox field exploitation man, in setting up the advertising, exploitation and publicity campaign with which the Walter Huston-Walter Brennan-Anne Baxter-Dana Andrews film will be launched.

Debut on Ark Royal

The first meeting of "Ships With Wings," the Michael Balcon production which will be released in this country by United Artists shortly, will take place aboard the British aircraft carrier, Ark Royal, the ship around which the film's story is based. The picture will open to the public in London on November 9th, at the Gaumont Theatre.

Feautred in the cast of "Ships With Wings" are John Clements, Leslie Banks, Jane Baxter, Ann Todd, Basil Sydney, Edward Chapman, Hugh Williams, John Stuart and Frank Cellier. Sergei Nolbandov directed the production, and also collaborated on the screen play treatment with Patrick Kirwan, Austin Melford and Diana Morgan.

Paramount short subject sales manager, Oscar Morgan, and Harry Donenfeld, president of Superman, Inc., were joint hosts to 58 independent wholesale newsdealers from Illinois, Indiana, Southern Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota last week in Chicago at the Stevens Hotel. A screening of Paramount's first "Superman" subject at the firm's Chicago exchange preceded the luncheon-meeting.

An extensive campaign has been laid out in conjunction with the newsdealers which will entail the use of numerous pieces of printed matter, posters and cards in their co-operation with theatres running the series. In Chicago a tieup has been affected with the Chicago Times which will distribute 300,000 heralds, advertising both the cartoon in the paper and the motion pictures, which will have first run in Balaban & Katz theatres. In addition 150 sniped 28 x 42-inch posters will be put on news delivery trucks and 4,000 cards will be used on newsstands. Effort is one of the biggest pre-selling jobs on a short subject ever attempted in the Chicago territory and surrounding states.

Universal's "Shorts" Contest

Universal has set aside $2,400 in prize money, furthering its "Exhibitors' Good-Will Short Subject Contest," to be paid out to theatremen on outstanding shorts and chapter-play promotion during the next three months, beginning November 1st and ending January 1st, Bernard Kreisler, Universal's short subjects manager, announced this week.

Leading exhibitors and trade paper editors have agreed to form a committee of judges for this contest. Among exhibitor judges are: Eddie Alperson, Sam Dembow, Gus Eyssell, Sy Fabian, Eddie Grainger, John Harris, John Hattam, Irving Lesser, Arthur Mayer, John Nolan, Eugene Picker, Sam Rinzler, Harry Rosenquest, Herbert Scheftel, George Skouras and John Wright.

Rules of the contest set up the United States into two main divisions with the Mississippi River as the dividing line. In each division there are four sub-groups, arranged in accordance with population figures. This obviates the possible inequity of having small community theatres competing on an equal basis with deluxe theatres in the metropolitan centers. Prizes of $200 and $100 are offered for the best and second best campaigns in each of the sub-groups. All campaigns must be submitted by Feb. 15, 1942.

The contest is open to all exhibitors in the United States.

Academic Completes Fifth

Academic Film Co., Inc., of New York, has announced the completion of their fifth two-reel short subject in its series of American Historical series. The latest release is "Our Louisiana Purchase."

Variety Clubs Plan Banquets

The Pittsburgh Variety Club is completing plans for its banquet Sunday night, while the Philadelphia Variety is still in the midst of preparation for their dinner dance which was postponed this week from December 11th to the 14th.

The out of town contingent arriving in Pittsburgh for the Variety Club banquet will be entertained on Saturday night by local exchange managers. In the past, the Saturday night affair has been tended by John H. Harris, chief barker.

Football Game Feature

This year's event will be held in the Club headquarters as a postlude to the Pittsburgh-Ohio State football game.

The exchange managers who will welcome the visitors include:

James Alexander, Republic; Nat Beier, United Artists; Ira Cohn, 20th-Fox; Pete Dana, Universal; Mark Goldman, Monogram; Herb Greenblatt, RKO; Dave Kimmelman, Paramount; Lew Lefton, PRC; Art Levy, Columbia; Perry Nathan, NSS; Harry Seed, Vitagraph; B. D. "Buck" Stoner, M-G-M; and Harry M. Kalmine, Warner Theatres.

Special plane service has been arranged for New Yorkers who will attend the Pittsburgh Variety dinner and who plan on attending the Pitt-Ohio State football game. TVA has scheduled a non-stop flight, leaving LaGuardia Field at 9 A.M., and arriving in Pittsburgh at 11:14 A.M.

For those desiring to return by plane a special section of Flight No. 34 will be operated out of Pittsburgh Sunday night at midnight, arriving at LaGuardia Field at 2:30 A.M.

The annual banquet of the Philadelphia Variety Club has been postponed from December 11th to December 14th at the Bellvue Stratford Hotel. Frank L. McNamee and Harry N. Ball are co-chairman, and James P. Clark and Isaac D. Levy are associate chairmen.

Other committee heads include: Melvin Koff and Samuel D. Schwartz, program book; Charles H. Goodwin, tickets; Everett Callow, publicity; Nat Levy, Jay Emanuel and Jack Beresin, reception; Benjamin Fertel, dinner; William A. MacAvoy, Jr., decorations; Abe Freman, technical activities; Elmer O. Wilschke, Louis Krouse, public relations; Victor H. Blanc, seating; Ted Schlanger, dais; Samuel H. Stiefel and Harry Biben, entertainment; Clinton Weyer, transportation and hotel accommodations, and Dr. J. Alex Ritter, physician-in-charge.

On Monday night, almost 1,000 persons attended the testimonal dinner at the Bellvue-Stratford sponsored by the Philadelphia Variey Club in honor of James P. Clark.

Although started as an all-industry affair to honor Mr. Clark's elevation to the chairmanship of the Philadelphia Democratic City Committee as well as his many charitable endeavors, the dinner was well attended by prominent political figures in addition to representatives of the trucking business. Mr. Clark, a former chief barker of the local Variety Club, is head of Horlacher's Film Delivery Service and the independent Clark's Film Distributors exchange.

Speakers included president Judge Harry S. McDevitt, of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court No. 1; State Auditor General F. Clair Ross; former Democratic City Chairman John B. Kelly; State Treasurer G. Harold Wagner; Democratic State Chairman Meredith Myers; U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey; and Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of Philadelphia Baptist Temple. Former Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, was toastmaster. Jay Emanuel was chairman of the arrangements committee.

Mr. Clark, this week, was named associate chairman for the Industry and Finance Division in the 1942 United Charities Campaign. Charles R. Shipley, president of John Wanamaker's, was named sectional chairman over the theatres field.

A benefit show will be held on November 16th at Fay's by the Philadelphia Showmen's Club. Meyer Adelman, welfare fund chairman, appointed Sid Stanley, manager of Fay's, as chairman of the committee for the affair.

Gracie Fields, who is touring this country for the benefit of British War Relief will appear in Constitution Hall, Saturday, November 1st, under the auspices of the Washington Variety Club. Harriet Hoctor will also appear, and a leading motion picture star, yet unnamed, will be master of ceremonies. Carter Barron, Eastern division manager for Loew's, is general chairman, and Sidney Lust, of the Lust Theatres, is in charge of ticket sales.

Department of Interior Releasing Petroleum Film

A new educational motion picture film in sound, running about 30 minutes, entitled "The Evolution of the Oil Industry," and prepared in cooperation with one of the large oil companies, is currently being released by the Bureau of Mines, United States Department of the Interior. The film tells a story of the petroleum industry, starting with scenes depicting Biblical episodes, in which petroleum pitch or bitumen may have been an important material and progressing up to the modern petroleum industry.

Copies of the film, in 16 mm sound, are available for exhibition by schools, churches, colleges, civic and business organizations,

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

This is the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address your reports to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Columbia

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson, Barbara O'Neil, John Beal—Did nice week-end business second run.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Madeleine Carroll, Francis Lederer—What a picture. Thought it awful. Who said Lederer could act? It's a shame to put Madeleine Carroll opposite him. Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I WAS A PRISONER ON DEVIL'S ISLAND: Sally Eilers, Donald Wood—Seemed to fill the bill, O. K. Played it second run with "The Ghost Breakers.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PENNY SERENADE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—This definitely has pulling power. To those who enjoy a good cry, this gave them every opportunity to do all the crying that their hearts desired. But this is really more than a crying picture; there is something about it that grips. I wouldn't be surprised if I see this listed among the ten best of the year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RETURN OF WILD BILL: Bill Elliott, Iris Meredith—A real western with plenty of fast action and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 11-12.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—Smallest gross of 1941. Another reason why we are forced to dual bills. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 15-16.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Ann Miller, Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Three Stooges—Poorly directed, no continuity, missed fire, was disappointed. Business only fair.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Tony Martin—Very good and nice box office. These pictures have always done business for all exhibitors and Metro is cutting them out. Never let it be said that Hollywood is in the business of making box office attractions. Played September 12-13.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Tony Martin—Business about normal. In connection with announcement of this feature being their final, we might add our indorsement as our bookings have changed from original Sunday-Monday to double featuring on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Very good color and a fine picture combined with a church benefit just managed to get through fairly well. It is well worth playing but does not draw very well. That's really too bad. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 14.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Very good drama in beautiful color. Average business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 19-20.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—To our surprise, this one played to best mid-week business of the year thus far. Should have been played on Sunday. The women ate it up. Greer Garson gives one of best bits of acting we've played this year. Running time, 100 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Here is one of those productions that come along only so often. Very beautiful color, and very good picture. They are sure to enjoy it. Blossoms to Pidgeon and Garson on their fine performance. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 4-5. Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Contrary to previous reports, thought this up to series standard. Very good story and well acted by all of cast, as usual. Red Skelton looks like a comer. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Conrad Veidt, Nazimova—Wonderful picture, photography and sound. Pleased 100 per cent. MGM is small town theatres' meal ticket. Have yet to play one of theirs that wasn't good box office. They cost more, but certainly add prestige to any theatre. Played September 22-23.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Bable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland—A superb and excellent portrayal of the story of the old South. A really good, interesting picture and appreciated by inmates here. Running time, 255 minutes. Played September 20-21.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

LAND OF LIBERTY: Historical—What a gigantic task it must have been to assemble this picture. They certainly did a swell job and holds the interest. Most movie-goers will recognize some of the scenes and recall the pictures they were taken from. As to drawing power, I was rather afraid of it, so it was doubled with "Caught in the Draft." I knew that it couldn't do any harm doubled with that. The minute that the general public gets a hint that a picture is something along the educational line, they will stay away in droves. If ever a picture was made worthy of getting the schools to co-operate, this is it.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE NELLIE KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger—Just a natural for a small town. Plenty of comedy and the songs that please just plain folk. This class of picture makes show fans of my people. Can recommend this for any spot. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 11.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Gail Patrick—A darn good comedy and good for anyone's money. Sorry we did not play on Sunday. Metro can really specialize in comedy if they want to. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE, THE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Another honey from MGM. Pleased everyone from Junior to Grandpop. Lots of laughs, and Lionel Barrymore never better. Every doctor should hear his speech to the jury, as well as every patient. A must play picture for every exhibitor.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

ROSE MARIE (REISSUE): Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Still the best picture these stars ever made. Many patrons came who had seen it three times before. We had new print in excellent shape, and story as good, if not better, than "N. W. M. P.," as it is all Canadian. Played September 26-27.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clarke Gable, Rosalind Russell—Boys, this is as thin as boarding house soup. Hollywood seems intent on glorifying the British Empire intead of the American box office. Played October 17-18.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—Business just fair which is about all this picture could do in a similar location. Rental too high, but aren't they all? Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 12-13.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

Paramount

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—From start to finish, the house was in a continuous uproar. Just the picture to drive the blues away. As good a comedy drama as there is on the market today. Army camps should get a real bang out of it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 12-14.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—We expected this to be a record breaker, but I guess that too many saw it at those theatres that play ahead of us. While it did not do what we expected, still it did above average business, so we have no special kick coming. This was doubled with "Land of Liberty."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DOOMED CARAVAN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—A "Hopalong Cassidy." Nice week-end business. "Cassidy" a definite draw.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FLYING BLIND: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker—A very poorly produced aeroplane picture that did only fair business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GHOST BREAKERS, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, Richard Carlson—Played with "I Was a Prisoner on Devil's Island." Did real nice business second run on this.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre. Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—Picture is quite long and draggy, but patrons thought it fine drama. They were disappointed in the build-up given Veronica Lake, as they did not think she rated so high. Running time, 132 minutes.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—This one really brought them in. Will welcome more like this. Running time, 130 minutes. Played October 10-11.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

LADY EVE, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—IN OLD COLORADO: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—This double gave us the best mid-week business in some time. "The Lady Eve" drew the ladies and "In Old Colorado" drew the men and action fans, so we will credit both of those for the extra business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LADY EVE, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Not so good. Stanwyck will suit our rural patrons if she stays where she belongs. Played August 29-30. —John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, "Rochester"—Swell picture for small situations as they all hear Benny on the air and want to see him and with Fred Allen, too. Well, this was really good for my patrons. Mary Martin swell and entire picture pleased all who saw it, and they were all I could get in. Played September 19-20.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT AT EARL CARROLL'S, A: Ken Murray, Rose Hobart—A beautiful picture, but not quite a bell ringer. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 12-13.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

POWER DIVE: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker—Fairly good airplane picture. Should go over with air-minded fans. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 3-4.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

QUARTERBACK, THE: Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale—Morris plays a dual role to rather an interesting picture. Plenty of laughs and good football. Cast also included old-timers as Edgar Kennedy. Bill Frawley and Walter Catlett. If you want a good change, give this a try. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 8-9.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew, Eddie Bracken—A fine little picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 3-4.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—This picture kept patrons in a continuous uproar. Need we say more, other than the fact we sincerely believe Paramount is above par in pictures these last few months. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 5-7.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—This was a natural. Hit the spot. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 26-27.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Gave this one usual big advertising campaign for radio star pictures, but didn't get results. Enjoyed by most who saw it, but didn't do business for me. Neither did "Rhythm on the River," so am afraid of Crosby's from now on. Played September 29-30.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Betty Field and Harry Carey stole top acting honors. It outgrossed "Billy the Kid" and "Caught in the Draft." Nearly all our customers liked it and even though it didn't follow the book too closely, no one criticized too severely. This picture should put Betty Field among the top "young" stars of the screen; she was excellent. John Wayne has been better. Played October 2-4.—Morris V. Beisner, Dream Theatre, Glasco, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—A repeat after five or six years and it still holds its own with the new color picture. Swell business on Tuesday and Wednesday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TYPHOON: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman—Picked this one up. Was worth the time. A very beautiful picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played August 1-2.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Stirling Hayden—Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much. The color was very good. Good patronage. Played on double bill, but it will easily stand alone. —Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

WORLD PREMIERE: John Barrymore, Frances Farmer—If not the worst picture of the year, then it will run a close second. Although it got a few laughs, the customers really panned it when they left. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 16-17.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE THE ONE: Bonnie Baker, Orrin Tucker and his Band—Not as good as talked up, but a nice picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 15-16.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

Republic

DOWN MEXICO WAY: Gene Autry—Good picture which pleased the week-end trade. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, Carol Adams—Drew the general Autry crowd and was enjoyed by all. A little different to the general run. Taken on a show boat. Play it. Enough said. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

UNDER FIESTA STARS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Joseph Strauch, Jr.—We can usually bank on doing above average business on the Autry pictures, and this did a nice business for us. Smiley Burnette's younger brother is a good addition. Doubled with "Dark Streets of Cairo."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

GIRL, A GUY AND A GOB, A: Lucille Ball, George Murphy, Edmond O'Brien—This was a good picture all the way. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 8-9.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—A make-up of pictures, "Fang and Claw," "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Cargo." Very clear photography and interesting. Description very good and clear by Buck himself. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Thetare, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTORS TO DEPARTMENT

Two new contributors reported to the What the Picture Did for Me Department this week and three others resumed after a lapse of some months. The new contributors are:

WALTER R. PYLE, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can.

MEL JOLLEY, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can.

The contributors who resumed after an absence are:

A. N. MILES, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky.

ALEX SLENDAK, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich.

JOHN STAFFORD, Royal Theatre, Leonardsville, Kan.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Kent Taylor, Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie—Rather interesting and honest endeavor to show the accomplishment and progress man has made in aerial flight, but not too well taken here, although it was enjoyed for its entertainment value. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 27-28.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Burgess Meredith—The poorest business in six months. It is not a small town picture.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY (REISSUE): Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, James Ellison—This reissue is worth time on anyone's program. Running time, 92 minutes. Played September 5-6.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

State Rights

RADIO RANCH (FORMERLY PHANTOM EMPIRE, THE): Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Frankie Darro—The picture was old and in bad condition, but the patrons ate it up. Running time, 70 minutes.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney—Swell action drama that is a cross between "Jesse James" and "Gone With the Wind." Both stars are excellent and the color is beautiful. Drew well at box office. Running time, 88 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—The rather small crowd that came liked it all right, but thought it too long. I wish the companies would keep length down unless it is really necessary to carry the plot. The color is very excellent and I enjoyed watching it for that reason alone. The "Blood" represents the red ink and the "Sand" represents its long grind. Running time, 123 minutes. Played October 16.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis—Fair picture and fair business. This plot has about enough material for a good two-reel comedy. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Poor picture, poor business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE NURSE: Jane Darwell, Brenda Joyce—Just a program picture which failed to draw. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES, THE: Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney, Jackie Cooper—Fine acting, good plot, plenty of thrills and swell receipts. Played mostly to men and kids. Running time, 93 minutes.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

RIDE ON, VAQUERO: Cesar Romero, Mary Beth Hughes—Played this on a dual bill to satisfied customers. Didn't think it so hot.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WE GO FAST: Lyn Bari, Alan Curtis—Good little action picture with plenty of comedy, but it failed to draw because it had no star power. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

THAT HAMILTON WOMAN: Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier—Another good picture that is far too long. My patrons resent the necessity of cutting down on shorts. An average crowd enjoyed the acting and thought the final battle scenes were extremely well done. The acting is the major point in this historical film. Thank goodness for the new Streamliners. They prove a good picture does not have to be endless. Running time, 125 minutes. Played October 17.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Universal

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA: Robert Stack, Ann Rutherford, Richard Dix, Frances Farmer—A swell action-filled picture for audiences that like this kind. In addition, there are plenty of good laughs. This one drew well at box office. Running time, 73 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DARK STREETS OF CAIRO: Sigrid Gurie, Ralph Byrd, Eddie Quillan—This was doubled with "Under Fiesta Stars." This is really a condensed serial. Those who want lots of action, regardless of story logic, will find this much to their liking.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Mischa Auer—Very, very old and very, very good. A super deluxe western. My patrons came expecting an Autry type, and were delighted. A real money-maker for western fans, but will spoil them for the usual guitar-type three-reeler. I had excellent print and did some business. Excellent. Played October 3-4.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Dick Powell, The Andrews Sisters—Although good, it is definitely not as good as "Buck Privates." Fair business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

IT STARTED WITH EVE: Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton, Robert Cummings—Although a swell, high-class picture, well made and with top performances by everyone, this picture was a flop at box office. We have never made any money on Durbin pictures. Next time don't let her sing, unless it's something we've at least heard of out here in the sticks. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 11-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SANDY IS A LADY: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer, Tom Brown, Nan Grey—Played this old one in response to some feminine requests, but no more Sandys for me. A flop at box office and many unfavorable remarks. May be O.K. to double bill with a good picture, but I would be afraid of even that. Played October 13-14.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery—A grand picture with two stars, as well as those in minor roles, contributing swell performances. One of the best pictures of the year. Business very good for mid-week on this one. Our only criticism is Irene Dunne, who is a little too old to be playing parts such as this. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis—In the opinion of the management, by far the best picture either star has made for a long time. Audience reaction was mixed. Those who like Bette Davis in heavy dramas said they had seen her in better pictures; those who care mostly for comedy said it was her best. Anyway, it was her best grosser here for quite a while. Our customers would rather see Cagney do the beating than take it. Played October 5-7.—Morris V. Beisner, Dream Theatre, Glasco, Kan. Small town patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino, Joan Leslie—A fine piture. We think it, perhaps, Bogart's best. Running time, 100 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—This was late, but it was a dandy. Don't know why we passed it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played August 22-23.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich, George Raft—A good cast with excellent acting

by each one. The supporting cast was fine, particularly Alan Hale. Good weather, but no business. People out here just don't like Dietrich. Played September 21-22.—Morris V. Beisner, Dream Theatre, Glasco, Kan. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—A clever picture that kept the audience laughing throughout. The novel preview brought in some extra business. When patrons praise a preview, that's something to be proud of. Jeffrey Lynn is a favorite here. Played September 28-30.—Morris V. Beisner, Dream Theatre, Glasco, Kan. Small town patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Jack Oakie, Ann Sheridan—A very light musical comedy with accent on the comedy that drew very well. Jack Oakie steals show from everyone as usual, although Herbert Anderson is very good. Ann Sheridan not such a hot actress, but makes a swell ornament for any picture. Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 11-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell—It cost us our 1941 profit.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

SEA HAWK, THE: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains—A historical picture with plenty of action and one that pleased everyone. Running time, 126 minutes. Played October 4-5.—W. J. Overstreet, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE, THE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—This picture pleased our patrons and pleased the cashier, too. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 19-20.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn, Kaaren Verne—Truly a grand picture, telling you a true story of a rotten Nazi gang of butchers; killers who through their leader are trying to gain world powers. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Sylvia Sidney, Eddie Albert—A very interesting and exciting picture. Not quite as thrilling as "High Sierra," but enough. Pleased all. Caesar the Lion probably will have the kids chewing their nails. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 11.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABDUL THE BULBUL AMEER: Color Cartoons—A swell little color cartoon that made them laugh.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

CRIME DOES NOT PAY SERIES: They are all good. Have never heard of one of this series that didn't please.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

DANCE OF THE WEED: Color Cartoon—A very good cartoon and enjoyed by all. Was quite different. Could have been a bit of "Fantasia." Running time, 9 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

FOOTBALL THRILLS OF 1940: Pete Smith Specialties—Swell. Can't miss on this one. Annual pigskin highlights of previous year and good, too. Trick shots and very funny commentary as only Smith can do it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

GHOST TREASURES: Miniatures—A very good short dealing with a search in Death Valley for gold by various historical characters. Very outdoorsy, weird and unique. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

MEMORIES OF EUROPE: Miniatures—Outstanding short of clips from Europcan countries before the war. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MEMORIES OF EUROPE: Miniatures—What our patrons say about this is not fit for print. Three out of every 65 like it. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT SNACK, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—A fast moving and funny cartoon in color with the usual cat and mouse idea. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MILKY WAY, THE: MGM Cartoons—Cute. Pretty little color cartoon that will please the kiddies.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Metro might have a good newsreel if they only had some commentators. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

> To the Editor:

PENNY TO THE RESCUE: Pete Smith Specialties—Good colored film. Everybody is interested in new and fancy dishes of kitchen goodies. Give this a good build-up. Featuring Prudence Penny. Running time, 10 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

ROMEO IN RHYTHM: Cartoons—Just another cartoon. A few kiddies snickered a little.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SPOTS BEFORE YOUR EYES: Pete Smith Specialties—An old Pete Smith that is up to his usual high standard. Lots of my women patrons went right home and tried the methods shown to remove stains and say it worked.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING SOCIAL: MGM Cartoons—A color cartoon that didn't even please the kids. Just a lot of boom boom music, not even jive.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

THEIR FIRST MISTAKE (REISSUE): Laurel and Hardy—If you want to roll them in the aisle and bust your own sides, play this one.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

FLIES AIN'T HUMAN: Popeye The Sailor—Only a fair Popeye. Running time, 7 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

FORGOTTEN MAN, THE: Benchley Comedies—A good comedy. Let's have more Benchleys.—Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

GAY KNIGHTIES, THE: Madcap Models—This one of the animated model series is just as well done as the others, but the story is extremely silly. It got some laughs. Some of the knights' armor was really clever. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

HOOLA BOOLA: Madcap Models—This is our second one of these animated models. Quite novel and different. Beautiful color and enjoyed by all. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

JOHNNY MESSNER ORCHESTRA: Headliners—A fair band piece, but not up to standard of Headliners. Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

JOHNNY MESSNER ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Just another orchestra short and the interview or informal chat session is painful. Who tells these musicians they can act?—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTORCYCLE STUNTING: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A real single that will please all. Great action and thrill short that will long be remembered.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NATURE'S NURSERY: Paragraphics—A "must have" on your short list. A wise old owl tells what he sees of the animal children.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

OLIVE'S BOITHDAY PRESINK: Popeye The Sailor—A fair Popeye. Running time, 7 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

LEND A PAW: Disney Color Cartoon—Pluto, Mickey and a stray kitten present plenty of cuteness, but not much in the way of real laughs. Of course, it is worth playing. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: "Norway in Revolt"—Well done, as usual, and very interesting. Norway some day will strike back to gain her freedom. Norwegian air force growing. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 13: "Peace—By Adolf Hitler"—This one emphasizes the V campaign and Hitler's peace ideas. It makes a very good combination of subject matter and turns out to be one of the best of the series. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

OLD McDONALD DUCK: Walt Disney Cartoons—Good Disney cartoon showing how troublesome a fly can become while Donald is trying to milk a cow. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PRACTICAL PIG, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—A good one. Running time, 8 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

QUAIL QUEST: Sportscopes—Here is a dandy. An old plantation down South, used just for hunting. What dogs and what hunting! Swell. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theater, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

SOCIETY DOG SHOW: Walt Disney Cartoons—and that means tops. Running time, 8 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ESKIMO TRAILS: Father Hubbard's Alaskan Adventures—One of the most interesting of Father Hubbard's reels. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

FROZEN NORTH, THE: Terrytoons—Good enough black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HIGHWAY OF FRIENDSHIP: Adventures Newscameraman—Just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

SWINGIN' IN THE BARN: Two-Reel Musicals—The best two-reeler that ever went through our projectors. Play it, and you will have many congratulations. I did.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

ALL THIS AND RABBIT STEW: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—A very excellent color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

AVIATION VACATION: Merrie Melodies—A dandy cartoon. Merrie Melodies are all good. Always novel and bring the laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CRACKPOT QUAIL, THE: Merrie Melodies—This was a fine colored cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

ELMER'S PET RABBIT: Merrie Melodies—A good short. Pleased kids both big and small. Running time, 7 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH ½, THE: Merrie Melodies—Merrie Melodies are a fine short and this one is up to par. Running time, 8 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

HAUNTED MOUSE, THE: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Good cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

JOE REICHMAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Bands—Not bad, but there is plenty of room for improvement in producing this type of reel. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

PROGRESS NOTED

It was not the prophet in us that brought out on this page time and again over the years the necessity of selling "the" motion picture rather than "a" motion picture. The reasoning behind our platform was obvious and to the effect that this industry is too big to depend upon the ups and downs of individual attractions; that the screen means too much to millions to have its health vary dangerously with the public acceptance of one feature over another. We maintained the day-in, day-out values offered by the motion picture theatre were more than sufficient to keep grosses at a consistently profitable level, providing that exhibitors made these values known to the public as a part of regular theatre advertising and publicity.

The immediate exhibitor-acceptance of the Movie Vacation advertising campaign bore somewhat in this directon. Now comes the "Michigan Allied Plan", described in last week's issue. This plan proposed by Earl J. Hudson to sell the motion picture institutionally has already been snapped up for execution by a majority of the state's exhibitors. Interest in the project by exhibitor groups in other sectors is reported as rising. Solid goodwill and prestige are expected to come from it.

The "we aim to please" school of exhibitor advertising currently hailed, of course, is no sudden awakening to its needs. Examples of institutional forethought are noted with sufficient frequency to indicate that much land already has been broken to the plow. As an instance, Henderson M. Richey calls attention to the newspaper institutional series by J. R. Denniston, Butterfield circuit city manager in Monroe, Mich., the message featured in the regular theatre advertising layout. The theatreman's copy is homy, convincing. It aims to, and does make more friends for the theatres. We quote:

"Entertaining the people, making them happy and glad to be alive, giving them a broader vision and making them better satisfied—that is the chief function of the entertainment business. I am glad and proud to be a part of it. . . .

"It is not at all unusual for ten thousand people to visit our Monroe theatres weekly. This tremendous popularity is not a flash in the pan but has continued week in and week out, year in and year out. We submit that this enviable reputation could have been won on no other basis except merit".

Turning civic events of importance into lines at the ticket window is hardly sleight of hand. It's just showmanship. Matt Saunders illustrates currently by taking over the celebration attendant upon the opening of passenger air service at the Bridgeport, Conn., municipal airport. It was done by a reception at Loew's Poli with the Governor, the Mayor and other prominents on stage to welcome the new service. There was a big to-do about it with page-one stories and such. Plenty of goodwill was had for the theatre. And better yet, plenty of extra tickets were sold.

HOME OFFICE TO DOOR STEP

The little feller, the exhibitor away from the key city spotlight and the main highways now edges back into the picture with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's introduction of "The Show Builder", a travelling automotive unit conceived by Howard Dietz. Aimed particularly at the smaller situations, what will soon grow to a fleet of peregrinating demonstrators manned by expert promotional representatives and supervised by Billy Ferguson will be brought directly to the theatreman's door to assist in building up his advertising, publicity and exploitation.

Exhibited at a trade luncheon, the travelling unit revealed the many evidences of the physical machinery of M-G-M showmanship. Work tables are provided for the development of actual campaigns by exhibitor and company representative. Facilities for screening are also arranged, among other ingenuities. It is in all, a well-tooled job and set to produce.

AT the State, in Springfield, Ohio, Mike Chakeres reports pulling a lot of the folks away from their radios to the theatre with a direct line from Station WIZE from which "flash" news events are piped to the theatre between breaks. The line is also used during opening hours to pick up any particular program that the customers otherwise might miss. The only obligation is a slide crediting the station while the broadcasts are on.

Round Table In Pictures

Located in front entrance of main branch of the Cleveland Public Library was Dave Bachner's display on the new March of Time release, "Revolt in Norway", currently playing at Warner's Hippodrome. Exhibit, featuring scene stills, was set up two weeks in advance of opening.

Unique lobby display arranged by Carl Rogers at Loew's Granada in Cleveland ahead of "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" consisted of a series of boys' and men's shoes in various sizes, beginning with a small pair worn by Mickey in "Family" and on up through the entire Hardy series, each appropriately tagged.

Effective lobby display ahead of "Hold That Ghost" at Warner's Orpheum, in Philadelphia, as arranged by R. Lee Kline, featured animation. The large ghost hovering over the house had small green lamps in eyes that blinked. Second ghost nodded its head and waved its arms.

Arranged by B. B. Hamilton ahead of "Sergeant York" at the Palace, in Norwich, Conn., was attractive portrait of Gary Cooper done in oils on canvas. Panel at side carried critics' rave reviews.

Homemade display made by Al Buist at the Rialto, in Westfield, N. J., from an old packing case, wallpaper, etc., was used in lobby ahead of "Blossoms in the Dust". Miniature furniture with dolls in bed, one dressed as nurse, completed the nursery scene.

Hung on clothesline under marquee and ranging from infant's size to adult's, was the array of shorts used by Barney DeVietti of the Huish Theatres, in Price, Utah, to sell his featurettes. Copy on largest pair of shorts read: "We have a dandy lineup of shorts tonight".

As a street attractor, Manager Bob Sidman of the Harris Senate Theatre, in Harrisburg, Pa., used sidewalk stunt shown below as part of his exploitation ahead of "Parachute Battalion". A toy airplane, operated by "remote control", attracted the attention of passersby.

Billy Ferguson's latest animal bally, "King Tarz", used to plug the latest Tarzan picture, is being toured around the country in advance of the date to build up added interest. In Boston, as noted above, Loewman Joe Longo directed the extra doings for some circus activities at prominent corners, with Tarz doing his stuff.

For animation on his "Jungle Cavalcade" lobby at the Fox Strand, in Salina, Kans., Don Alldritt dressed lad as native boy and seated him beneath two simulated palm trees in lobby. Large copper cauldron in which dry ice was placed gave impression of steaming water.

"A flaming new personality, mixed well with Adventurous fury against Injustice", appended with brilliant color background and striking enlargements, was the theme played up by Manager Al Reh when he sold "Belle Starr" at the Warner Fox Theatre, in Philadelphia.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon from the brush of Harold Armistead, of Lyric Theatre, Easley, S.C.

Street Ballys Found Effective by Stearn

For street attention and more specifically as concerned "My Life With Caroline" Harry D. Stearn at the Schine Strand, in Lexington, Ky. had lad dressed in baseball uniform carry radio tuned into the recent world series games. Window blind was rolled up around the boy's neck and as folks gathered to listen to the game, lad would unfurl the blind which carried copy "It's a swell game, boys. Now see" etc.

Another street bally used for "Tillie the Toiler" was girl who boarded busses with armful of comic sheets. When seated comfortably, the attractive miss would open one of the sheets, entire back of which carried copy "Now she's in the movies. See Tillie the Toiler at the Strand Theatre."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Well Rounded Campaign Given "Jordan" in Buffalo

To usher in the new season product at the Lafayette, in Buffalo, full column story was run in daily by A. C. Hayman, circuit head heralding the new attractions to open at his houses, more specifically as concerns "Mr. Jordan," campaign reported on by Dick Walsh. Special postcards calling attention to the date were mailed to all doctors with a postscript reading: "And Doctor, you yourself might need a little cheering up, so better see Here Comes Mr. Jordan." Through tieup with Postal Telegraph, miniature wires were distributed carrying picture copy, title and cast. Hotel menus were imprinted, scene still was landed in roto section of Sunday paper with readers.

Dancing Contest Arranged By LaFalce for "Rich"

Launched ahead of "You'll Never Get Rich" at the Warner Earle, in Washington was the dancing contest put on by ad head Frank LaFalce to find the "Fred Astaire" and "Rita Hayworth" of nearby Fort Belvoir from among the draftees and Washington girls who volunteer to attend the Fort's social activities. Officially representing the Army were Major Lanvoight and Mrs. Edythe Dewey, senior hostess, who were on hand night of finals to present winners with silver loving cups donated by the stars, guest tickets going to runners-up.

Soldiers en masse together with their friends were on hand for the judging which was done by a former ballerina, managing director of the Washington Arthur Murray Studios and local dancing instructors.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Fitz Sells "Honky Tonk" With Gable Radio Contest

Reported as a first-timer was the full page promoted in local daily for Ed Fitzpatrick's opening on "Honky Tonk" at the Loew Poli, in Waterbury, Conn. Page consisted of special layouts from former Gable pictures. In conjunction with this page, a contest was promoted over Station WBRY, two days ahead on a 15-minute program each day. Listeners were required to name seven of Gable's previous screen sweethearts, the titles of seven of Gable's films and to give a brief description of each film, whether comedy, drama, etc. Guest tickets went to winners.

Ladies Committee Welcomes 'Lady'

Since many nationalities are prominently represented in the population of Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal struck upon the idea of appointing a committee of International Ladies to welcome his date on "International Lady" at Loew's Majestic. Each national group was asked to select one of its most popular women to serve as a reception committee to Ilona Massey, in town for the opening with Alan Curtis.

In addition, since the General Electric had opened their House of Ideas at nearby Southport, with Station WNAB conducting a daily broadcast with celebrities attending each day, Rosey arranged for Miss Massey to go on the air with the International Ladies as a background. As a result of this tieup, the theatre netted some 279 inches of free newspaper space and about five hours of radio time with transcriptions and programs.

Starting about eight days ahead, newspaper coverage started with stories and art, culminating with a smash page one picture and a full page on page two. For additional attention, Morris grabbed about 400 papers from the press and had them overprinted in red with title and playdates, boys on streets at noon distributed their wares in restaurants, hotels and taverns. Starting a week ahead, teaser spot announcements were landed over Station WNAB building up with a transcription of the picture and feature announcements to the big broadcast with Miss Massey from the GE house. The utilities company got behind the program and publicized it in their plants and employe's paper, which is read by about 25,000 people. In addition, four photographers were on hand to cover the event, which was tied in on all their factories and retail outlets around the country, thus giving the affair a national buildup.

Much was made in the papers over a reception to the star at the railroad station with police escort heading parade to Southport. Further publicity was gained through a luncheon to the press with Mayor Jasper McLevy presiding.

Stoltz Ties "Lady" to Utica

Discovering that one of the scenes in "International Lady" was laid in Utica, N. Y., Arnold Stoltz made capital of the break by building up this background for extra publicity on the date at Warners Avon. Stories went to some length to compare the picture settings with actual Utica scenes, the Round Tabler also taking extra space to call attention to the local hookup.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ties "Le Moko" to Schools

The first Miami showing of "Pepe Le Moko" at the Colony in Miami Beach brought results because Manager Ralph McEntyre went after the picture from every angle. He wrote letters to the French teachers in nine schools, to professors at Miami U. and to every other organization in Miami with French speaking members asking them to announce his showing. One hundred window cards were distributed and extra ad space was taken in all three dailies. Publicity breaks were secured in all papers.

Midnight Ghosts Click for "Kal"

For a special midnight screening of "Whistling in the Dark" at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., Kal Kalberer put together a midnight ghost show which he advertised over the entire area ahead in extra newspaper coverage, special trailers, ghost and skeleton lobby decorations.

Actual routine of the show described by Kalberer had all lights dimmed out front with the exception of marquee back lighting and channels in upright sign. Stage bunch lights with green gelatine were hung under marquee to flood the entire front. Boxoffice was lighted in green. Inside house was completely dark with the exception of exit lights, these replaced with green back of glass. Ushers carried flash lights with green gelatine over spots with entire house staff attired in ghost costumes —sheets with skull masks. While the house filled, creepy music was played on the non-sync with chain and thunder sheet working back stage.

At a designated time two large flash bulbs were exploded on stage, followed by two huge heads in luminous paint carried across the stage. One represented a skull and the other a devil head lit up inside by red and green flash lights. Added ghost effect was obtained with audience runway over first few rows covered with black cloth over which the giant heads were walked, the illusion maintained by covering the attendants in black. Other touches by Kal were shooting revolvers, screaming girls and ushers in black with luminous paint on their hands working the audience.

Special Scare Trailer Prepared

After a few minutes of this, special sound trailer with weird music was started, accompanied by more barking guns and flashing lights. Just before the picture started, a life size cardboard skeleton was pulled from stage to booth on trolley wire above heads of the audience, the figure completely luminous in the dark to heighten the chill. For his last shot, Kal had the lenses of his projection machine covered with green gelatine to color title and opening frames.

Yuroski's Punch Board Sells Policy Change

Working on the theory that everyone likes to take chances, William Yuroski at the Warner Sedgwick, in Philadelphia, took a novel means to acquaint his patrons with his price change policy. Boys were sent out on a house-to-house canvass with punch boards, housewives invited to try their luck, with two winners each receiving two passes to the theatre. Persons punching the 100th chance were also permitted to punch out name of winner, and select another at random.

Addresses of chance-takers were properly noted on back of card and passes awarded immediately. Front of card carried price-change copy and in addition solicitors explained the special student's price and distributed two-week programs. In the new housing developments, the residents were also advised of the shortest route to the theatre.

Girl Shaves 'Gable' All Day Long As Simons' 'Honky Tonk' Barber

The folks in Providence, R. I., were somewhat startled last week to find that a vacant store in the downtown district had been rigged up as an old-time tonsorial parlor, with a lady barber in attendance. Posters in all windows noted the new venture as the "Honky Tonk Barber Shop", with copy in keeping. The single chair was placed near the doorway so that the action of the stunt rigged up by Jack Simons for the date at Loew's State could be observed by the continuously passing throngs.

Every now and then a customer would come in for a "shave" to keep the gag in character and at regular intervals a man resembling Clark Gable would enter, upon which the female tonsorial artist would indicate the proper thrills. After sitting "Gable" in the chair and tucking him in in the best barber fashion, the girl would draw down a blind, in center window, reading: "That's Clark Gable, folks. Shop closed for 15 minutes". After the "star" went through the business of grooming to the evident satisfaction of the crowds of curious, he would leave the shop, returning after a bit to repeat the performance.

Since traffic-blocking was the purpose of the stunt, it was entirely successful, according to Simons, who notes that it was necessary to post a policeman nearby to keep the street open for passage.

Careful Drivers Honored By Cornell with Passes

Recently arranged by Clayt Cornell at Schine's State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y. is tieup with weekly paper to list 10 license plate numbers between the ads, winners receiving a courtesy ticket to the theatre. This is in cooperation with the police and paper to help encourage careful driving and to compliment folks on the fact that there hasn't been an auto fatality in the town in five years. Stunt nets the theatreman a weekly story plugging his show and also creates goodwill.

Another institutional slant featured by the Schiner in his football rally, Clayt having arranged with the highschool officials for the distribution of tags throughout the classes calling attention to the night. Parade was held from school to the theatre with cheer leaders and song leaders working from the stage, where the coach and team were introduced to the audience. Theatre lobby and front was decorated for the occasion with flag and school colors. Stunt was widely advertised throughout the school and covered by local dailies.

MOT'S "NAVY" REVIVAL BRINGS FINE RETURNS

Sensing the possibilities in the present situation between Japan and this country, Ed Harris recently played a return date on March of Time's "U. S. Navy, 1940" at the Glendale, Glendale, Calif., changing the title to "U. S. Navy In the Pacific" to make it more timely. The advance campaign duly stressed the importance of the Navy's position, with cooperation received from local aviation factories, service units, etc.

Business was well above average, in keeping with other revivals of topical nature which Harris finds of great audience interest.

Teaser Herald Sells "Bachelor" for Stoltz

Teaser heralds circulated by Arnold Stoltz at the Warner Avon, in Utica, ahead of "Married Bachelor" consisted of small "To whom it may concern" cards with copy: "This is to notify that my husband is a Married Bachelor, and he has all the following rights: He can stay out late, he can attend lodge meetings, he can play poker with the boys, he can spend part of his salary." Reverse side read: "I allow my husband such privileges because he is such a good husband on my birthday, anniversary and other occasions, he sends me flowers from" etc. Florist's ad followed here, cooperating merchant paying entire cost of printing and distribution of cards.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Effective Lobby Aids Berman on "Sun Valley"

To sell his date on "Sun Valley Serenade" at the State Theatre, in Deposit, N. Y., Herbert Berman erected a huge display using a 24-sheet as backdrop, platform eight inches high was covered with layers of cotton-batting and two barrels of white corn flakes to give the effect of snow. Borrowing a mannequin, ski suit, skating outfit, gloves, helmet, white shoe skates and skis, these were placed at base of display. Ski poles were placed in mannequin's hands with revolving wheel to give animation.

Saperstein Drops Parachutes In "Battalion" Campaign

Joe Saperstein of the Grand Theatre, Albany, N. Y., staged a parachute invasion as the major phase of his campaign on "Parachute Battalion." Chartered planes dropped some two hundred miniature chutes over playgrounds and other parts of the city. Saperstein further built up a big advance publicity campaign around the stunt and also tied in with merchants.

CHANGE OF POLICY ADS

To keep in line with the changes in working hours made necessary by defense manufacture in Canada, manager Ed Lamoureux of the Empire, in Windsor, Ontario, recently inaugurated a change of policy starting with a midnite preview aimed especially at workers on the afternoon shift. Featuring the campaign was a series of one-column newspaper teasers as above left, followed by the two-column layouts that noted the change. For street attraction, Ed put out a horse-drawn truck bannered with change of policy copy and tricked up with gag furnishings. Float carried boys and girls in comedy costumes for added attention, the horse also dressed to conform.

Bride Street Bally Aids Sears on "Tom, Dick and Harry"

Bill Sears of the Orpheum, Minneapolis, Minn., staged an effective street bally for "Tom, Dick and Harry." Promoting a Buick convertible coupe, a "bride" was bedecked, seated in the rear, and the car appropriately billed, "I am on my way to decide whether to marry Tom, Dick or Harry," and "Every Tom, Dick or Harry admires a Buick." This car paraded the city for two days—a day before and opening day of the picture.

Another phase of the campaign included a tie-in with department store to display the original Ginger Rogers' costumes from the film. Sears also stepped up his newspaper advertising by arranging for guest tickets to "Tom, Dick and Harry" for the best letters telling of a fantastic dream. The letters and announcement of the tickets were printed in paper.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Newspaper Contest Featured By Sablosky for "Bombay"

Directional arrows reading "You'll meet Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell in 'They Met in Bombay'" were used ahead of that picture by David H. Sablosky at the Norris, in Norristown, Pa. Newspaper contest promoted by Dave and sponsored by local department store featured a half page ad with photos of stars as border, guest tickets going to those correctly identifying the lot. Special screening was held to which heads of all service organizations and others were invited, this bringing special mention by guests to members of their clubs.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gordon's "Yank" Contest

With extensive newspaper and radio station WIBX spot announcements, G. G. Gordon, at the Olympic Theatre, in Utica, put over a Betty Grable doubles contest in his district to usher in "Yank in the R. A. F." Climaxing the search and coincident with the opening, the winner was met at the railroad station by Mayor Vincent Courrou, who led the parade from station to theatre.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Calling Dr. Jekyll"

For their campaign on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" R. K. Stonebrook of the Paramount and Howard Pettingill of the Beach carried out both dual and separate exploitation ideas. Stonebrook ran classified ads in two dailies, selling the horror angle, and spots on WQAM along the same lines, while Pettingill ran a classified contest in the Miami Beach Daily Tropics, scattering names through the ads for free tickets. Both men pulled a stunt at a well-attended high school game in the Orange Bowl whereby the announcer for the PA system was phoned and asked to call "Dr. Jekyll" over the system. Stunt got a good laugh.

"Dive Bomber" Given Victory Campaign

That team of T. J. Cary, theatre manager and Bud Kornblite, Jr., are at it again this time for "Dive Bomber" at the Capitol, in Waverly, N. Y., on behalf of which 4,000 "V for Victory" stickers were used on car and store windows with copy reading: "America's V is in Dive Bomber." Daily newspaper was contacted and came through with stories crediting the theatremen with starting the local victory campaign. Half the cost of the stickers was defrayed by promoting an ad form drug store on the reverse side of the stickers. In addition an air plane, fuel and pilot were promoted so that the stickers could be dropped from the air throughout a 20 mile area, Mayors of the various towns were contacted ahead for permission.

Local ice cream firm tied in with druggist and theatre to give 100 pints of cream free to those bringing in Victory stickers with a star photo on the back. Dealer ran a large ad two nights ahead of opening.

In connection with "Sun Valley Serenade," theatre organist played hit tunes from the picture, while slides were run on the screen to announce the fact that the music was from "Sun Valley," followed by playdates. Contacting local jukebox record distributor, arrangement was made to spot Glenn Miller records of picture tunes and other Miller hits on all boxes he serviced. It was also arranged for the distributor to place a small ad for the picture on all machines.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Usherette Proffers Kisses On "Kiss the Boys Goodbye"

Promoting candy kisses, Ken Prickett for opening of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" at the Long-Griffith El Rancho, in Victoria, Tex., had gal on street ahead carrying tray filled with the confection, card above reading "Step up and I'll Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Radio coverage included a 15-minute transcription and publicity was gained through Ken's offer of kiss-proof lipsticks to the first 50 women attending Sunday's show.

Excellent newspaper breaks were had on "Blossoms in the Dust" through Prickett's offer of a six weeks' pass to the parents of the first baby born during the engagement. Special screening was held for prominent localities, including heads of orphanages, comment cards later used for lobby display.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Expanded Parachute Sells "Battalion" for Kilgore

A parachute borrowed from the Southern Air Service Schools was used in the lobby by Bob Kilgore of Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, in his campaign on "Parachute Battalion." The 'chute was suspended from the ceiling and with the air of a 24-inch fan was kept expanded. A dummy 'chutist was suspended from it. Another 'chute was used for a sidewalk demonstration. This was provided by the Air Service Supply Depot with attendant to explain parachute folding and other details of the equipment.

Captain Rainey of the local police department loaned sub machine guns. Four girls wearing aviator's costumes "manned" the guns.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Music coverage was the highlight of Dave Bachner's campaign for "Sun Valley Serenade" at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland, stickers being planted on all juke boxes, and record counters, while cards planted at eye level on newsstands called attention to the portrait of Henie in the current issue of one of the movie magazines, and five and dime featured a "Sun Valley" sundae. Ahead of "Sergeant York," Bachner planted a special five-column feature story with art in daily.

For his double bill of "Caught in the Draft" and "Affectionately Yours," Nathan Allor of the Alger Theatre, in Detroit sent government postcards to his mailing list. Featuring a bit of word-play message read: "I have been wondering if you were Caught in the Draft" etc. and was signed Affectionately yours.

Measuring 22 feet in length and 10 in height was the lobby setpiece created for "Blossoms in the Dust" by F. W. Curtice and his hour artist Ken Purchase. Center of display carried shadowbox effect portrait of Greer Garson with sprays of apple blossoms, entire board being spotlighted from overhead.

To usher in his new movie season at Loew's Palace, in Meriden, Conn., Joe Samartano erected a homemade display with star heads, and done by his artist Herbert Shimansky. Illuminated with lights flashing on the cutouts display also featured forthcoming attraction titles.

Street bally ahead of "Moon Over Miami" at the Strand, in Waterloo, Ia., as arranged by Maurice Crew consisted of truck on which were placed three girls in bathing attire seated on beach furniture surrounded by palm trees, etc. Portable radio provided music to attract and truck was appropriately bannered.

As an extra attractor for his lobby, George Stroud at the Palace, in Hamilton, Ontario, promoted local rug concern for a display of orientals and objects of art worth some several thousand dollars. In addition, Stroud engaged the services of a "mind reader" who was on hand in the lobby to read patrons' fortunes.

FOUR-PAGE SPECIAL RUN AT $18.50 COST

To tell the folks about "Sun Valley Serenade" at the Tri-State Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., the Kempkes-Redmond duo stepped out with a four-page issue made up entirely of the second section of the local daily. The theatremen sold all the space, made up the layout and, plus 2,000 extra copies of the regular run, held the whole thing down to a cost of $18.50.

In addition to the boxoffice returns, added appreciation was had from A. H. Blank in a letter of congratulation to Redmond, the circuit head calling the promotion "a minor miracle". Additional bows were had from Myron Blank, Dale MacFarland and Joe Kinsky, district manager.

An old hand at putting over bands, Pat Notaro at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., this time reports on the personal appearance of Eddy Duchin and his orchestra for whom the theatreman arranged backstage interviews an hour before opening with plenty of plugs for the show. In addition the first 15 minutes of the first stage show was broadcast directly from the stage. Arrangements were made with local Wurlitzer man to have stickers placed on juke boxes in the surrounding area two weeks ahead and five and dime ran an ad announcing Duchin's appearance at the theatre and store to autograph records.

A great deal of interest in "Blossoms in the Dust" was aroused by the posting of a 6-sheet on the sidewalk in front of the Gilles, Wahpeton, N. Dakota, by Manager Leo Gilles. It marked the first time such a stunt was put over in town.

PROPAGANDA LETTER NETS LEAD EDITORIAL

Some time back, one of the locals in Elkhart, Ind., wrote to the daily complaining of having to "sit through so much propaganda" at the theatre. The paper ran the letter but not before giving Chick Tompkins, Manta city manager, an opportunity to answer it, which the theatreman did, and eloquently.

The daily picked up from there a short time later with a lead editorial, headed "The Movies"; and, proving to be a spirited defense of pictures, the editorial built around the splendid program at the Elco and finished with the observation that the program was propaganda "but of peace and fun and love".

Through cooperation of local market and on behalf of "The Big Store," Bill Johnson at Smalley's, in Dolgeville, N. Y., was able to distribute heralds in each package leaving store. Copy read: "One big value suggests another. Our big store offers, etc., while Smalley's offers" followed by cast and picture plug. Cost of herald is practically negligible since Johnson gets them up on theatre mimeograph.

Usher dressed in gorilla outfit covered the main streets of New Haven as part of Ted Teschner's advance on "Jungle Cavalcade" at Loew's Poli-Bijou distributing imprinted envelopes containing animal crackers. Copy read: "1001 thrills as these jungle beasts run wild in," etc.

Borrowing oversized telephone from the 'phone company, Bud Erickson at Warners' Rhodes, in Chicago, placed it on a table in lobby standing next to glass bowl containing gold coins. Copy overall read: "Pot o' Gold," calling to remind you to see," etc. As additional attractor, a set of batteries and a bell were rigged up, so that as a patron approached the telephone, the doorman would ring the bell by pressing concealed button.

Several thousand book marks were distributed by H. L. Stahl, Drake, Oil City, Pa., during his "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" campaign. Six men, dressed as skeletons and wearing red wigs, roamed the streets of Harrisburg, Pa., as highlight of the "Whistling in the Dark" campaign put over by Bob Sidman, Senate. Cards with gag copy were carried by the men.

A huge mirror in the lobby of the Regent, Grand Rapids, Mich., set up by Walter J. Norris, caught the eye of women patrons. The mirror looked like the real thing, but when the females went to look—and primp—a flasher worked a powerful spot and two heads of Tracy, as "Jekyll and Hyde," appeared before their startled eyes. This stunt was most effective and created a great deal of word-of-mouth comment in advance of the premiere.

Harold Rice of the Paramount, in Denver, turned his lobby into a veritable jungle 10 days ahead of "Jungle Cavalcade" with raffia grass and Madagascar palms covering both sides. To further highlight the display, rare furs were borrowed from local dealer and placed on exhibition. Also featured was a map depicting localities of Buck's dangerous treks.

Gaining some publicity for his house, Jack Campbell at the Capitol, in Brampton, Ontario, recently constructed a booth which was stationed in a strategic spot at the County Fair. In addition to displaying scene stills of current attractions, etc., Jack planted a three by three foot easel which was covered with the word "Capitol." Guest tickets were offered to those coming closest to guessing correct number of times theatre name appeared.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

has the all-around job of assistant manager and publicity and advertising man at the Tower Theatre, Bremerton, Washington, belonging to the B. F. Shearer Theatres circuit. Interesting to note is that Ralph leaned towards showbusiness at the tender age of eight, utilizing his garage to show plays, writing and acting in them. Ralph did radio work, singing over the air, then being used in dramatic roles. When he came to Bremerton he sang at the Tower Theatre, which led to helping with advertising and displays. Layout work was another of his pursuits and writing for newspapers followed. Finally, came an opening in the Tower staff and Ralph was in.

started as part-time usher at the Strand in Delaware, Ohio, advancing to relief operator and bill posting. He did doorman duty for a short time and then was promoted to assistant manager. A transfer brought Bert to the Holland Theatre in Bellefontaine, Ohio, and then he moved to Ashland, same state, where, at the Palace and Opera House, he acts as assistant manager.

began in 1926 in the movie industry by helping to reopen the Liberty Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn. Several years later Ernest went to Warner's Cameo in the same city and then moved to Loew's Majestic, there. The next spot for him was the Alcazar in Naugatuck, Connecticut, and after remaining for a short while Ernest moved again, this time to manage the Colonial, back in Bridgeport. Once more he moved to Connecticut and was employed at the Avon in Stamford and now is at the State in Torrington, where he holds down the managerial reins.

is the assistant manager at the New Rex Theatre in Madera, California. At the young age of 14 he made his debut in theatre business when he secured a job as advertising boy and so up through the ranks until he was promoted to his present spot.

started in the movie business as doorman, then assistant manager at the Grand Theatre in Fitzgerald, Alabama a couple of years back. "Mack" learned quickly and shortly thereafter was promoted to manage the Lafayette Theatre, Lafayette, Alabama, which house belongs to the Martin circuit.

has been around theatres and shows for quite a while. He was on the road doing publicity, then managed an orchestra. For three years he was at the Fox Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., as chief-of-service, assistant manager and manager. A transfer brought Ben to manage the Ambassador Theatre, in the same locale. Moving to Toledo, Ohio, he secured an assistant manager's job at the Rivoli Theatre and then was appointed manager of the Ritz Theatre in Mansfield, Ohio, for the Skirball circuit.

ETTA ISABEL SHORE to PHIL LAUFER, on Sunday, November 8. Groom is in charge of publicity for the New York Criterion Theatre.

IRENE JOHNSON to DONALD PALMQUIST, on Monday, October 13. Groom is assistant manager of the Century Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

came into showbusiness about six years ago as a helper to the projectionist. He then did doorman and janitor duty. John's interest and fast learning brought him into a managerial post and we now find him at the Princess Theatre in Rockville, Connecticut, where he is doing a fine job.

was in Tampa, Florida, in 1924 as a piano salesman, which gave him an "in" to showbusiness. In 1931 the Plaza Theatre in Tampa was opened and Dick obtained the managerial post there. He reports interesting activities at the house and we are glad to learn about them.

JEWEL B. CALLAHAN
started his career in the moving picture business helping his father, who was in the industry for 25 years, by distributing heralds. This when he was seven years old. He later sold popcorn and peanuts and performed many odd jobs around the theatre. Jewel gained much experience around the theatres, finally advancing to be manager of the Arrow and Tower houses at Broken Bow, Oklahoma, which houses belong to the K. Lee Williams Theatres circuit.

was initiated into the movie industry in 1918, his job being that of janitor. Shortly after he was made usher, then doorman. A promotion brought Herman to the Royal Theatre in Minonk, Illinois, as assistant manager, where he stayed for about three years. At that time Bailey Enterprises took over the Royal, but closed it to build the new Minonk Theatre, placing Herman in the skipper's position.

WILLIAM G. VAN WHY
manages the Palace Theatre in Netcong, N. J. About seven years ago Bill joined the Broadway Players, a stock company, that used the Palace for their shows and when they broke up he remained with the house as publicity man and then was appointed to manage the house.

broke into his career in showbusiness in 1939 as a porter, performing his duties in the daytime and at night he assiduously applied himself to learning about the business angles. The result was good, for shortly thereafter Earle was given the chance to become assistant manager and it wasn't long before he actually became top man in the house, which was the Milo Theatre in Rockville, Md., which belongs to the Sidney Lust circuit.

is the proprietor and manager of the Lido Theatre, a 300-seat house, in Manly, Iowa. "Doc" was a high school principal and an athletic coach years ago, knowing naught about theatre business. However, he left school and beginning at the bottom of the ladder, studied zealously about the ins and outs of theatre routine. He purchased his present house and is very enthusiastic about his new career.

is in the movie business but three years, having started as an usher at the Capitol Theatre, Davenport, Iowa. His efficiency resulted in his being appointed to chief of service and after a few months was made assistant manager in the district office house at the Capitol. Another promotion made Fred the manager of the Garden Theatre, also in Davenport, belonging to Tri-States Theatre Corp.

OBITUARIES

V. Schertzinger, Director and Composer, Dies

Victor Schertzinger, writer, composer and motion picture director, died in his sleep at his home in Hollywood of a heart ailment on Sunday, October 26th. He was 52 years old. A recognized composer of music, he placed a distinctive stamp on his productions and helped to establish screen musicals as a popular branch of screen entertainment.

His most recent pictures were the Bing Crosby-Bob Hope vehicles for Paramount, "Road to Singapore" and "Road to Zanzibar." At his death he was directing another Paramount production, "The Fleet's In," which was within a few days of completion. In addition to these pictures he also directed "Frivolous Sal," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "Forgotten Faces," "The Show's Down," George Bancroft's first starring vehicle; "The Fashions in Love," for Adolphe Menjou; "Laughing Lady," with Jeanne Eagels and Clive Brook; "The Mikado," which was made in England; "Let's Live Tonight" and "Ghost Music."

Mr. Schertzinger first saw Hollywood in the early days of such producers as Mack Sennett and Thomas Ince while conducting an orchestra at the old Belasco theatre there. Even at that time he saw the dramatic opportunities for music in silent films, and prepared the musical score for "Civilization," an Ince production. This experience eventually led him into motion picture work as a director.

In the era of the silent films, Mr. Schertzinger directed two of the leading stars of their day, Charles Ray and Rudolph Valentino, in their first screen ventures. He was also credited with being the first director to handle color film production in "Redskin," which starred Richard Dix.

Frequently writing several musical scores for one film, Mr. Schertzinger was composer of a long list of song hits. His most famous was the long-popular "Marcheta," written in the days before sound films, and which sold over 4,000,000 copies.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the Little Church of Flowers at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Hollywood. Surviving are his widow and two daughters.

George E. Wallen, Theatre Executive

George E. Wallen, confidential adviser and treasurer of the F. F. Proctor Theatre Interests for 50 years until his retirement in 1929, died in Larchmont, N. Y., Wednesday, October 22d, after a long illness. He observed his 80th birthday last week.

He was president last year of the Albany Society of New York and was one of the oldest living members of the Albany Elks Club. Mr. Wallen had long been active in the Masons and had served as an officer of various New York lodges.

Surviving are three brothers and three sisters.

Herbert G. Copley

Herbert G. Copley, 50, formerly musical director of Allen Theatre Company of Calgary, Canada, died in Vancouver, B. C., Sunday, October 26th. He left Calgary in 1922 for Vancouver and became an official of Famous Players Canadian Corp. Later he opened a theatre in Vancouver which he operated until his death.

Jacob Seltzer

Services were held in Hollywood for Jacob Seltzer, father of Frank, Jules and Walter Seltzer, film publicity men, who died Saturday, October 25th. He is also survived by his widow.

Minnie Crabtree

Minnie Crabtree, 46, former movie organist, professionally known as Adele London, died Wednesday, October 22d, at the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, of pneumonia. Before the advent of talking pictures, she was organist at the Palace and Great Northern theatres in Philadelphia.

Armando Vargas de la Maza

Armando Vargas de la Maza, 53, film producer and member of an old and prominent Mexican family, died in Mexico City, Wednesday, October 22d, of a heart ailment. He had been producing motion pictures for ten years.

Coward Case Postponed

A currency case against Noel Coward, playwright, was postponed in London this week until November 11th by the Lord Mayor at the request of the defense. Mr. Coward is charged with failing to hand over to the government a $5,000 United States two per cent treasury bond and with failing to report the ownership of $24,776 worth of securities held in the United States.

Vol. 145, No. 6 November 8, 1941

"ENTIRELY ENTHUSIASM"

ONE of the important satisfactions derived from the decidedly continuous labour of trying to produce and deliver the most competent business journal within our capacities, is the frequent evidence of the long working life of each issue of this publication. Today, in this November, there comes to hand a letter to the editor discussing a piece on this page in the issue of June 28th under the title of "Monotonously Colossal".

The theme of that outgiving was "merchandising always runs in grooves".

Now comes Mr. D. H. Alldritt, manager of the Strand theatre in Salina, out on the plains of Kansas, to remark upon the recent and current success of that house with a specialized line of displays which were based on how the picture was sold to him.

"My whole idea of this experiment," Mr. Alldritt observes, "is to sell the people as I have been sold. I believe it is not so much the problem of selling the public as it is in first selling the showman who sells the public. . . . "

This showman, like many another correspondent with this desk, bases his performance on point-of-sale promotion, rather than expecting that the national media and broadcast publicity will be giving the twenty thousand people of Salina the impulse to buy just at the time the product reaches the Strand screen.

"The show business," continues Mr. Alldritt, "is entirely enthusiasm. The showman must sell himself on pictures that have been turned down in New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver or San Francisco and he must sell them to his public. . . .

"A showman must get ideas and a little work must be done to help him. . . . "

This enthusiastic young showman considers that the motion picture tells a good story of, for and to America, and "tells of the equality of opportunity that all enjoy in American life".

He seems to find it helpful to read Motion Picture Herald, and to operate with the Product Digest at his elbow.

CONSIDERING

UTTERLY and forever, it would seem, the motion picture industry must operate in a goldfish bowl. Its business is exhibition, and everything about it, at one time or another, is put on display. Its business is public states of mind about and publicity for its wares. Unlike most other industries, the publicity does not stop there.

So, among other developments and events, we have the manifestations of Foley Square and the somewhat pungent story of the Browne-Bioff case—a matter of labour relations.

Because this pertains to "the movies", it is tremendously more the story for the press than any equivalent which might be revealed in industry matters of motors, steel, oil, real estate, or bricks and mortar. Assuredly, there are such stories to be had, unhappily, in many such regions of American business. A vastly more important, but ever so much less spectacular, story has been told ,and is yet to be told in, for instance, the electrical and building trades.

The story of Foley Square and its dollar total, which seems to run about a million for a space of a few years, can be multiplied by almost as many industries as you can think of, and by as many years as you can remember. It is the old, old story of compromise and the immediately easy way.

Labour has come to be a great political and economic entity in this land of ours. Its obligations to the lawful processes of the Republic, and its necessity for honourable representation of the rights and interests of the workers are identical with the standards which a society of conscience holds for employers and capital—not more, not less.

Organized labour cannot be competently served or progress as a social factor with representation which is below the norm of what America calls its standards of integrity.

THE EXHIBITOR SAYS

EXHIBITOR expression extraordinary is presented in this issue. The news section contains several pages presenting such an array of observation and comment on the current state and prospects of the motion picture business as has never before been assembled in a single document.

Here is revelation of what a lot of showmen out across the map are thinking about, and what they think about it.

There will be no summation here of their attitudes and opinions. The reader may get them in the same miscellany of impact as when they reached this desk.

It is meanwhile to be observed that there are evidences of a considerably more positive and aggressive concern about many elements of the business than is commonly made manifest in the conferences of Hollywood and New York, or at the cocktail parties and conventions either.

Over all there is a demonstration of a healthy interest, evidence that no actual equilibrium in the issues of trade practise has been reached, and a voicing of a general notion that something is yet to be done about a number of matters.

AS perhaps you have seen by the papers, Mr. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who sat listening to a rehearsal of the Philharmonic-Symphony of a Tuesday, was that day re-elected Mayor of the City of New York, which is probably the biggest state in the Union.

And, remembering, as doubtless you do, that Mayor LaGuardia is a person of many marked qualities, among them persistence, it would appear among the interesting possibilities, because of this and that, that he just might renew his earnest suggestion to the motion picture industry that many social, artistic and economic interests might be served by a bit of major production of motion pictures in the vicinity of this Manhattan-on-Hudson.

The Mayor would appear to be in an excellent position to continue his program in behalf of the arts and his city.

Arbitration Bill

IF the Big Five are not satisfied with the costs of the arbitration system imposed upon them by the consent decree they should reckon the probable total of the fees which arbitrators of the calibre selected to date would charge to settle the industry's squabbles independently. This is the conclusion of Wesley A. Sturges, noted Sterling Professor of Law at Yale University and one of the country's authorities on arbitration law.

"It is a very remarkable aspect of the American Arbitration Association's administration of the motion picture system that it has been able to attract to its panels men of the competency, calibre and professional position of those who have served, for a $10 a day honorarium, as arbitrators of motion picture complaints," Professor Sturges observed, at New York on Wednesday, after appearing on a television round-table on labor arbitration over the Columbia Broadcasting System's television station.

The first annual report of the AAA films arbitration budget committee appears on page 27.

Professor Sturges said he would discuss law enforcement by consent decree and arbitration in the motion picture industry at Northwestern University, Chicago, next week. He will deliver a Linthicum Foundation lecture at the University on November 14th. In it, he said, he will analyze the accomplishments, and costs, of the film arbitration system.

The film consent decree, he observed, consolidated the more than 200 allegations in the government complaints against distributors to some eight trade practice regulations.

Experience is proving that the consent decree and its arbitration formula is an effective way of mediating, at reasonable cost, the economic squabbles of buyer and seller, Mr. Sturgis will tell legal scholars at Northwestern. The number of complaints filed, 142 to date, is no yardstick of arbitration's success he added, pointing to numerous reports conciliation and the independent settlement of disputes between exhibitor's and distributors.

Schaefer, et al

GEORGE J. SCHAEFER will remain president of RKO, two of the company's largest stockholders, Floyd B. Odlum and Nelson Rockefeller, both in Government service, indicated to newsmen in Washington, Monday, depreciating extant reports of an RKO "shakeup." Mr. Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation and head of the Government's Office of Priorties Management, acknowledged "gossip," but said he "knew nothing of an impending change."

Mr. Schaefer has been among the rumored prospects for the vacant United Artists' presidency. Before joining RKO, he was United Artists' general sales manager.

That UA presidency remained unfilled at mid-week; and David O. Selznick, new producer-partner, who had previously asserted he would remain in New York until a president was named, planned to leave the city Thursday for the Coast. It was understood that a management board, to be chosen upon his return to the New York home office, would administer UA, if it does not find a president.

Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales, is on the Coast this week inventorying assets of Walter Wanger Productions, which the company will use for its own pictures, under its new production plans.

'Quiz-Kid' Promotions

THAT the goal of high "I. Q.ed" juvenile progenies is a personal appearance on the nationally-famed "Quiz Kids" radio program is indicated in the eagerness with which youngsters are entering into contests which are playing an important part in theatre campaigns for the "Quiz Kids" short-film showings. In Boston and in Syracuse, theatremen playing Paramount shorts tied in with leading department stores to handle the contest entries, to devote newspaper advertising and window displays for wider publicity, complete details of which are carried in this week's Round Table, starting on page 61.

Percentage Legalities

NORTHWEST ALLIED, in Minneapolis Wednesday, warned that film contracts in which 20 per cent cancellations are all in the lower priced brackets, at the time of negotiating a contract, are illegal, in organization counsel opinion.

Allied asserted the cancellations should be made proportionately among several price brackets. Allied also advised exhibitors to use cancellation after notice of availability, and after gaining knowledge about the film.

For an exhibitor to agree to accept cancellations in the lowest price brackets before he knows anything about the product was termed "obviously to defeat the legislative intent and purpose" of the Minnesota anti-consent decree law, which enforces buying and booking of majors' product en masse, with a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

Meanwhile, Paramount is going to observe the Minnesota law; it is not going to wait for determination of a criminal case against it, RKO and Fox, in St. Paul. On Friday, October 31st, Paramount obtained from New York Federal Court "relief" from observing the decree's provisions for selling in blocks-of-five films, in Minnesota. Other companies may follow suit. While these actions would nullify the decree in Minnesota, and possibly be followed by similar laws, and similar relief, for other states, Department of Justice officials are represented as believing the Minnesota law unconstitutional, and therefore, the consent decree relief temporary. Story on page 33.

New System too Costly

THE new system of selling motion pictures, resulting directly, and otherwise, from the Government's consent decree, is fast developing "a terrific problem" for the average small theatre operator and subsequent run. This is the conclusion of Colonel H. A. Cole, speaking for small and independent exhibitors, as president of both national and Texas Allied associations, at the annual Texas Allied convention, in Dallas, Wednesday.

The high percentages demanded in rentals have gone beyond all possibilities of such theatres, he added.

"Allied is interested in any plan that will bring about a box office increase, but, so far, nothing of specific or immediate relief has been presented to us," continued Col. Cole, who warned that, "unless and until such a scheme is effected, the only recourse of our theatres is to force film rental to within the possibilities of present income."

The problem of house overhead and its relation to what an exhibitor can afford to pay for product immediately became the subject of open-floor discussion at the Dallas convention, further details of which appear on pages 31 and 32, along with reports on other exhibitor problems and other exhibitor meetings of the day.

Customer Trouble

VERY rarely does a film distributor openly air squabbles with his customers over product terms, in formal statement to the press. The unusual happened last Thursday, when Paramount issued this statement from its home offices in New York:

"Neil Agnew, general sales manager for Paramount Pictures, today announced that his company has decided to sell away from Fox West Coast, Fox Mid-West, Fox Intermountain, Fox Wisconsin and Evergreen State Theatres" (about 500 theatres).

"Mr. Agnew said that the break was occasioned by what Paramount considered inadequate terms and playing time offered by the Skouras (Fox) enterprises for such top Paramount pictures as 'Hold Back the Dawn,' 'Nothing But the Truth,' 'Birth of the Blues' and 'Skylark.'

"Mr. Agnew added that Paramount, in a long series of negotiations with Skouras Brothers, had presented several alternate plans for their consideration, but had been unable to reach an agreement that the distributing company considered would yield an adequate film rental for their product based upon grosses."

Some peace-pipe smoke was seen, on Tuesday, as Mr. Agnew and Spyros Skouras arm-and-armed it to a train in New York bound for Milwaukee to open conversations at the headquarters there of Fox Wisconsin Theatres, for Paramount product for 1941-42. No other reports were forthcoming of resumption of negotiations for product for the other Fox-Skouras affiliates upon which Paramount had decreed a "sell-away" order.

In a reversal of positions, Paramount was reported this week on the other side of distributor customer trouble, with Warners and the Paramount circuit partners understood to be in an impasse over terms for playing Warner's "Sergeant York," one of the company's most successful films of the season.

Meanwhile, RKO bought the film for all of its Metropolitan New York houses, agreeing to a 40-cent matinee and 55-cent evening minimum admission and a single billing policy, as required by Warners, with RKO also extending the run to nine days or longer, instead of the usual four-to-seven days booking at those RKO houses.

London Scene Changes

RESIGNATION of Isidore Ostrer as chairman of Gaumont British Pictures Corp., Ltd., was formally announced in London last Friday, following completion of a deal whereby General Film Distributors took over control of GB, at a reputed figure of approximately $3,600,000.

Authoritative financial sources in London predicted this week that General Film's acquisition of GB eventually would result in a merger of the latter company with Odeon Circuit, bringing together two of the three largest theatre circuits in the United Kingdom. I. Arthur Rank and Leslie Farrow, directors of General Film, who have been appointed chairman and director of Gaumont and the Metropolis and Bradford Trust, a GB holding company, are also directors of Odeon. C. M. Woolf, General Film's managing director, also was named joint managing director of GB with Mark Ostrer who continues in that post.

General Film is described as being willing to acquire the 49 per cent interest of Twentieth Century-Fox in Gaumont British and it is said approaches to that end have already been made. Home office officials of 20th-Fox, in New York, however, have neither confirmed nor denied the report that they are willing to sell their GB interests "under proper conditions."

"Junior" Hays Office

TALK of forming a "junior Hays organization" among some independent Hollywood producers was heard again this week, after a lapse of a year. A group of independents, including some leading ones, had reportedly completed, "in discussion form," all plans for a new independent producers association.

David O. Selznick, Samuel Goldwyn, Frank Capra, Alexander Korda, and Walter Wanger were mentioned as prime movers. It was even reported that they had selected James Allen, former Department of Justice lawyer, sometimes active in motion picture affairs for the government, as leader of the new group.

None of those named would give identity to the new organization or confirm discussions on the topic. From Hollywood it was reported that the purpose of the project organization was to represent independent producers in studio union negotiations, possibly to seek differentials in wage scales and to form a pool of technical talent.

Labor Hits Inquisition

THE Nye-Wheeler-Clark investigation of propaganda on the screen continued this week to rest in prolonged recess of still undetermined length, disturbed currently only by statements of disapproval over its existence in the first place from two more labor groups:

Bert Lytell, president of Actors' Equity and chairman of the "Stop Film Censorship Committee," denounced the Senate subcommittee as a "continued threat to our national unity and free culture," in a letter sent Tuesday to all U. S. Senators. Mr. Lytell urged them to dissolve the subcommittee as a rebuke to its Senate sponsors, in view of the "overwhelming expression of public opinion against their activities."

Split 7 Millions

SEVEN out of eight million dollars remitted from London Monday at the first instalment on withdrawals permitted by the new British monetary agreement was divided among the eight major distributors in New York this week. Approximately $1,000,000 was set aside as a revolving fund and the balance split immediately among company treasuries under an agreement reached the week before.

The money was divided, subject to corrections from the revolving fund after an audit, approximately as follows: Loew's $2,000,000; 20th Century-Fox, $1,400,000; Paramount, $920,000; Universal, $800,000; United Artists, $750,000; RKO, $485,000; Columbia, $265,000, and Warners, $250,000.

The sum represented the first of two instalments on the 50 per cent of blocked funds which England will free this year.

'Friends of Democracy' Organize $10,000 Drive

A $10,000 fund drive was launched by the motion picture division of the Friends of Democracy last Wednesday at a luncheon held in New York at Toots Shor's restaurant. Gradwell L. Sears, former general sales manager of Warner Brothers and chairman of the motion picture division, presided. Dr. L. M. Birkhead, national director of the organization, was the principal speaker.

Dr. Birkhead described the activity of Friends of Democracy as "concentrating" directly on individuals in public life who the committee believes are "subversive" and whose pro-Nazi and un-American tenets the committee feels should be exposed. He explained how the Friends acted to halt operations of Gerald B. Winrod of Kansas, Father Coughlin and Joseph McWilliams. He urged those present to aid the organization's efforts pertaining to Charles A. Lindbergh and the America First Committee.

Other speakers at the luncheon were Clarence H. Low, chairman of the finance committee of Friends of Democracy, and John Garfield, Warner Brothers star, who is a member of the organization.

Among those who attended were Joseph H. Hazen, Joseph Bernhard, Jesse L. Lasky, Ned E. Depinet, Malcolm Kingsberg, Carl Leserman, Cresson Smith, Sam Morris, Charles Koerner, Charles Einfeld, Harry Buckley, Leon Goldberg, George Skouras, George Dembow, Mort Blumenstock, Mitchell Rawson, Herman Robbins, Martin Quigley, Jr., Pete Harrison, Samuel Rinzler, Chester Bahn, Maurice Kann.

INDEPENDENT and circuit exhibitor support for the Friends of Democracy is represented by Charles Koerner, RKO operating chief, Samuel Rinzler, co-head of the Randforce circuit, and Malcolm Kingsberg of KAO.

PICKETING the meeting was the Screen Publicists' Guild in sympathy with a waiters' union dispute at Toots Shor's.

"NO industry which has been investigated by a Congressional committee in the last 10 years has come through it with the same quality of spirit as the motion picture industry," Wendell L. Willkie told the Picture Pioneers at the organization's Hallowe'en dinner at Toots Shor's restaurant in New York.

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, initiated 20 new members into the organization. Jack Cohn was chairman. About 160 members attended.

The Exhibitor Has his Say About Everything

HERE are answers to what the showmen of the exhibition branch of the motion picture industry think about many and varied aspects and problems of this time and now — from where they sit, at the box offices.

These expressions are coming in response to invitation from MOTION PICTURE HERALD, addressed to the whole field of exhibition, in pursuit of the abiding and continuing policy of this publication to afford these showmen, few of whom are especially equipped with publicity mechanisms to give them voice, a tribune of expression.

It will be observed that many expressions are unsigned. It was a stipulation of the invitation that names would not be presented except by indication in the responses. Only in this manner could complete candor be had from persons of important opinion but so situated that they must consider possibilities of special influences, or pressures.

The hand of the copy reader has touched this copy but lightly. This is what they are saying, and how they said it. —THE EDITOR

¶ Producers should quit making "B" pictures and quickies. Also quit shoving weak series on exhibitors and public, as they are getting stale. Also this business could stand good serials with star names and not "has beens." A plot that doesn't insult the average intelligence. Why also remake some of the old "flops"? We have enough as it is. Don't run a cycle of pictures to death. Distributors should use more Technicolor.

P.S. The whole industry needs more questionnaires and inquiries like this one!—CHARLES PASSIE, Aida Theatre, Oglesby, Ill. (Independent)

¶ A higher scale of admission prices for outstanding attractions, that merit distinction and increased attendance over the every day run of pictures. (Independent)

¶ Protect the fellow who buys for one house against the open booking house, but who buys for 5 houses. Send enough prints to Buffalo exchange so they can handle the business. Better film inspection at exchanges. (Independent)

¶ Pictures that give entertainment. No sermons and less war propaganda. (Independent)

¶ I have been in theatre business ten years now, 6 of which have been spent in a theatre that with a little fixing could draw a crowd which my company would be proud of but it's no use. No money, no fixing. My ambition is to have a theatre to be proud of. Thank you, Mr. Hopeful. (Independent)

¶ Movies seem to move in a cycle. We find George Formby musical comedies very popular. We are in definite need of more stars, also better productions. The market seems to be flooded with quickies, and lack quality. We need more Will Rogers and Marie Dresslers.—HARLAND RANKIN, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. (Independent)

¶ Not so many super-length pictures. They don't have to be long to be good. How about six-episode serials with excellent casts and interesting but no thrilling endings for adults? For example a serialized detective story like "Thin Man" with the same cast. (Independent)

¶ Jimmy Fidler, although owing his very prominence to the Motion Picture Industry, has done it more actual harm than any other of its critical elements today. Not merely is he not impartial (the cardinal principle of every ethical journalist) . . . but actually displays a sense of personal frustration over fancied personal slights. . . . This columnist should be publicly refuted by our own writers, and our studios should cease their attitude of coddling by refusing him access to each and every phase of the business under their control. Perhaps if Mr. Fidler were to find his lucrative news sources closed to himself . . . he might find other fields of endeavor more interesting and deserving of his attention.

Why are the producers so short-sighted in their failure to bring more of our exhibitors into their collaborative staffs in Hollywood? Your "What the Picture Did for Me" column, no doubt, is the closest approach to this item but it's the exhibitor's view after the picture has been released. Why not some Review Boards made up of West Coast exhibitors to preview the stuff before release and lend their assistance from our experiences? It might help and at the same time would do much to take some of the heat away from their own offices. We exhibitors, knowing our brothers were "sitting in" on some of this "hash," would feel that many of the boners were at least noticed. (Circuit)

¶ Industry needs more money spent on production of pictures, settings, etc., and less on star names. Also needs good 2-reel comedies instead of program fillers and so many travel shorts made up of standard news, etc. Greatest need: less pictures, but much better ones than have been produced in past two years.—F. M. PITTMAN, Palace Theatre, Greenville, Ky. (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of dual features, thus partial stoppage of B films. Elimination of big company "stock company player" films. Fewer "agony" releases. More care in cartoons, whose general level is descending rapidly to an abyss. Banishment of so-called "comedies" of one or two reels; also of Brevities. Good travels, sports, science, oddities and generally intelligent reels. Let every producer create his own bandwagon instead of copying each other's success that invariably ends in the surfeiting of the public with similar types of film released at the same period. Return of Disney to his former level. Less war; less propaganda; more farce; less slapstick. Utopia!!!!!—G. H. HAAG (Independent)

¶ Single feature policy and high grade short subjects in every theatre. (Independent)

¶ I want to keep propaganda and taking sides in controversial issues out of our films, and to make the theatre strictly entertainment and interesting education. Keep it the "world of make-believe." My audiences are .999999999999 per cent American and anti-Hitler, but they object to the above on their entertainment diet! (Independent)

¶ At our particular house we play Westerns. What would be good for us is a drastic change from the same old story of "Good Guy" never misses and "Bad Guy" always misses and "Good Guy" misses girl in the end. More action, more popular music, and better stories. (Independent)

¶ My main objection to an otherwise wonderful industry is the tendency for the studios to make pictures with star names alone. That is, no story to speak of and not much background expense, depending only on marquee names to draw. These make an exhibitor want to hide because his patrons expect more than they get.—E. M. JENNINGS, Strand Theatre, Atmore, Ala.

¶ As this is a place for plain speaking, permit me to say that the writer has no quarrel with the producers; feeling that they are doing the best job they can with minor exceptions, and that the quality of product is greatly improved. As a manager, I would say that there could be more efforts put forth by the exhibitors in effectively selling pictures.

Initiative, lack of proper rest and recreation, home social life, are stifled; resulting in a reactionary let-down on the part of the manager by his employer. You can add underpaid to the list.

The solution, in this writer's opinion, does not lie in unionization, believing unionism to be un-American when the individual has to pay tribute to an outside agency for his birthright as set forth in our Constitution. The cure can be traced to the source, be it a chain or independent exhibitor employer. When managers have normal rest, are paid in proportion to the normal costs of living, then, can we expect to find an uplift in morale which in my humble opinion will be reflected in quality of individual effort for the good of all.

Thank you for the privilege of expressing my opinion, and with my deepest regret that, for obvious reasons, the writer must be nameless. (Circuit)

you christen a picture, do you ask yourselves: "Does this title sell tickets? Will this title fit an ordinary marquee on one line?" "Does this title tell something about the story—will it attract the amusement shoppers who do not read advance reviews? Does it depict action?" To those who select titles, please give more time and attention to this important factor in our business.—CHARLES H. RYAN, Warner Bros., Chicago (Circuit)

¶ Too many square pegs in round holes through the entire industry. Exhibitors are crooks to producers and distributors, and exhibitors say producers, etc., are plain robbers. It does have every appearance of squeezing the last cent out of exhibitor for Hollywood ideas. Taxation without representation stuff. Protests, etc., don't mean a thing to autocratic producers. Decree is just another way to get more 40 per cent pictures and over. Hollywood and banking money swung the revolution into a profit for themselves. A big money industry with production, distribution, exhibition too far separated for benefits of national organization under one ownership. Hollywood would do well to pick some exhibitors to stay in Hollywood for several pictures for complete ideas. Exhibitors would do well to bring in Hollywood to their theatre for the reverse. Make the industry tougher to buy into—all phases. Population of town, basis of consideration only. No chain favoritism or preferences.—C. A. SKELLY, Lamax Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio. (Circuit)

¶ Better product and less ballyhoo bunk in building them up before their release. You can't fool the public nowadays. This is 1941—not 1921. (Circuit)

¶ There is great need today for better cooperation and understanding within our own industry—let's all—production, distribution and exhibition—work with one thought in mind, to make our great industry an outstanding one in harmony, cooperation and a determination to serve. I think if we accomplish that during the coming year we will definitely take our place in the sun as the one industry in this great land of ours, that can be of the greatest help to all mankind. (Circuit)

¶ To better this industry for the small (as well as the bigger) exhibitor we need a central film buying market where the exhibitor can go and see his product and deal for his films without being put under pressure by highbinding film salesmen who are taught how to high-pressure the small-town showman into taking pictures he cannot use in his country town and into paying prices he knows will sink him lower than the Titanic, and just as quick. High-pressure salesmen who don't give a hoot for the exhibitor are the damnation of this business. Give us a good clean way to buy our merchandise and we'll keep Hollywood before the public with a white halo over its head—instead of a red light—ask the boys and girls, they'll tell you. (Independent)

¶ Less legislation but better industry control by the industry itself!—RUDOLPH COVI. (Independent)

¶ Before the enactment of the consent decree, if Fox released in a row these five pictures: "Blood and Sand," "For Beauty's Sake," "Bride Wore Crutches," "Great American Broadcast," and "Moon Over Miami," I eliminated the two weak ones and played the other three. Now, when they release in a block of five, "Charley's Aunt," "Sun Valley Serenade," "Private Nurse," "Dressed to Kill," and "Wild Geese Calling," can I eliminate the two weak ones in this group? I should say not! Where is the great advantage everyone said would be effected by the creating of this system? Every time an exhibitor played a rotten picture, he would howl through the exhibitor's column in your magazine, "Give us block of five buying so we won't have to play pictures like this!" How did they figure that way? Before, we could cancel out a weak picture, and still play the good ones. Now we have to take the poor ones to even get a smell at the big ones. Is this what everybody was fighting for?—R. D. FISHER, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. (Independent)

¶ For our section of the country, we need good high class (if possible) hill billy pictures. Triangle love situations, no matter how well done, are not well received. Semi-slapstick comedies are well received, and we can use more of them. And how the industry needs another star like Will Rogers or Shirley Temple. (Independent)

¶ I do sincerely hope and pray that some day the exchanges will start checking the change-over cues and replace this film when marked—or punched— or defaced in any way; and of course charge the theatres that are responsible for such defacement. (Independent)

¶ Why can't the unions let us small independents alone? (Independent)

¶ Better and less number in shorts. Better or no serials. Less propaganda. (Independent)

¶ More "down to earth" pictures about everyday people . . . homey comedy . . . family stories such as the "Hardy" series . . . less war, aviation, and Nazi terror pictures. . . . Comedy should prevail . . . but certainly not the "high brow" screwball comedies we have been getting about cafe society and the "station wagon" set. (Independent)

¶ I want—that is, my audience wants, big musicals, and action pictures. Less dialogue. Less drama. More dancing and singing. (Independent)

¶ The exhibitor needs better pictures at a more reasonable price. (Independent)

¶ Not too "highbrow" stories—not too high-class musicals. The better type down to earth stories with comedy. All stories must be clean. (Independent)

¶ Give us some good two-reel comedies, then we could lose some of these double features.—CAPITOL, St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada. (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of one out of each block of five pictures. Limit of two allocations only in prices. In small towns we only have one charge for preferred playing time. All the rest are program pictures of which over half have intermediate price allocations, which do not bring any more business at boxoffice than lowest classification.—R. LAMB. (Independent)

¶ Better pictures with star casts in down to earth stories with mass appeal. No more of these short features made for double featuring purposes such as we are now getting. (Independent)

¶ Lower film rentals! (Independent)

¶ Regarding percentage pictures, I believe there should be a graduating scale. Illustration: Theatre playing within 60 days after release, 40 per cent; between 60 and 90 days, 35 per cent; after 90 days, not over 30 per cent. This would give the small town and the houses who have to take the pictures late, somewhere near an even break with the houses who are now getting the cream of our trade.—GRANT ROSETH, Palace Theatre, Doland, South Dakota. (Independent)

¶ As someone once said, "There's nothing wrong with the industry that a good picture won't cure!" Producers are making too many pictures, the majority of which are obviously intended to be the second picture on a double bill. They should concentrate on making good pictures with intelligent plots and dialogue; should forget their sentiment and eliminate the hackneyed stuff they are turning out. Give the audience credit for having a little sense.—M. F. DIGGS. (Independent)

¶ Let's get rid of dual programs. Never make westerns over 65 minutes long.—OTTO INGWERSEN, Ritz Theatre, Montgomery City, Mo. (Independent)

¶ In my estimation, the industry is turning out too many B and C features. Features without sufficient stars and story values. On these substandard features business is seldom near standard. And they serve to discourage patronage on those features that are worthwhile. If small features are necessary the producers should pick stories with action. (Circuit)

¶ An educational program with the combined efforts of the industry behind it directed toward keeping the public well informed of all the favorable aspects of a great industry and its attempts to keep the public entertained. A combined front to fight energetically and openly any and all scurrilous attacks instead of the "Keep quiet and let it blow over" attitude of the past. An insistence that all individuals making a living from the industry prove their loyalty by openly and forcefully resenting unwarranted

"Keep the Government out of our Business"

slurs and attacks when made for publicity purposes and without first hand knowledge. (Circuit)

¶ People here, and elsewhere, seem to like slapstick pictures at the present time. This gives them a change from war pictures. (Circuit)

¶ P. A. appearances of stars (or supporting players). Screen needs more than shadowy images for appeal. (Circuit)

¶ War pictures are "murder" with my audiences. They stay away in droves on anything that smells of propaganda or war. They like comedies and believe there is a great field for good musicals. (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of all so-called "B" pictures. And the inauguration of policy by all companies of nothing but top flight "A" grade pictures (except westerns). This, I believe, is the "shot in the arm" that this business needs. (Circuit)

¶ My pet gripe! Buying film. For fourteen years I was engaged in exchange work and selling film. For the past seven years I have been operating three small town (rural) theatres. Buying is a problem because branch managers and salesmen are sent out each year to get ten per cent, and up, more for service than the previous year. Just a blind, and in some cases, inflexible policy.

Conservatively speaking, I would have been forced to close the fourth year had I agreed to every increase that was asked.

Home office executives, division and district managers put too little confidence in their branch managers and salesmen—the fellows most familiar with the situation. Very few branch managers will permit an account to "steal" film. If he is worthy of his position, his judgment and recommendations should be respected more.

As it now stands, some nincompoop in the home office, who couldn't sell dollar gold pieces for fifty cents, checks a deal that represents plenty effort and perspiration, and then sends it back to the branch with a lot of silly criticism. Maybe it's not the nincompoop's fault—he is probably taking orders from a fellow who rates 80 per cent appearance and personality, and 20 per cent brains.

In buying, the procedure that is forced on me is to keep the annual increase as low as possible. When the price tag becomes greater than the product will stand, I leave them out. The next year they will see my point. We start off again at somewhere near the bottom, and are merrily on our way for two or three years more. I lose playing some good product; they lose the revenue (infinitesimal from a national standpoint), ending with some mug looking cross-eyed at the salesman when they check his unsold possibilities.

It is silly to write all this. Would it help any to pass it on?—Not a bit! (Circuit)

¶ Much more emphasis on Technicolor pictures. Experiences of the past year have proven the boxoffice value of many otherwise mediocre films which, enhanced by the addition of color, were strong boxoffice attractions. Public eats them up, it seems, almost without regard to the story or star merit.

A definite stop put to the practice of "cramming" a new "find" down the throats of the public. Press notices of critics, word of mouth comments from general public are sufficient evidence of the potential value of newcomers. While success on the Broadway stage is often a good gauge as to the value of a prospective star, if after one picture the decisive "click" does not materialize, stop kidding the public and the exhibitor and relegate the newcomer to minor parts until the "click" develops from a "cluck." (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of "B" pictures in reality. Not just "say-so." Which would, of course, mean less pictures and more product represented on the screen. And that means more revenue for all concerned. (Independent)

¶ Keep the government out of our business. I used to buy with 20 per cent less elimination—now I take everything or none.—A. W. WILLETT, Ellston, Mich. (Independent)

¶ Think the producers should exchange their stars more than they have been doing. An exchange star usually goes into a better production than the home lot ordinarily casts them in. There should also be more of the "streamlined" features made instead of the ordinary program grade pictures. New stars could develop in a high type short feature faster than they have been in the programmers as a lot of the programmers never play the big spots and a picture like "Tanks a Million" should play them all. (Independents)

¶ Make less shorts. We are forced to buy more than we can use. Cut out "March of Time," too much of it is on top of "News." Why should a 2 or 3 column mat cost exhibitor two and three times the cost of a 1 column, if a 1 column mat would be turned sidewise it is the same as a 2 or 3 column mat. Producers are back of just another racket to squeeze more revenue from exhibitors, thinking they do not notice it. "Shorts and News" are still forced regardless of the decree. Attitude is "take it or leave it"! (Independents)

¶ Would like to see them do away with the selling in blocks of five. I never favored this method of selling, for you can hardly tell from one month to the next just what you can expect to get from the producers that are selling under the consent decree. One producer even refused to sell me the second block unless I agreed to take the first block. This method of selling is much worse than signing for the season's output, for at least you could reject 20 per cent of them. Let's try to get back to the old way of selling pictures. Under the present method it is nothing but a headache.—F. X. MERKLEY, Rialto Theatre, Columbia, Ky. (Independent)

¶ A better system for exhibitors to buy product. (Independent)

¶ I sincerely hope that the Consent Decree, after a one year trial, will be "dumped" in the ash can. It's just as hard getting together on five pictures as it was in buying an entire year's product, and it looks like the elimination privilege is a thing of the past. There is no longer a steady flow of product which means that important days of the week have to be taken up with poor pictures. (Circuit)

¶ Abolish all Labor Unions! (Circuit)

¶ Forget games and giveaways and go in for showing of good pictures. Eliminate all advertising from screen. (Circuit)

¶ Kill "B", "C" and "D" pictures. Better short subjects. (Circuit)

¶ Less drawing room dialogue of sophisticated pictures. Eighty-five per cent of movie goers are not of the drawing room intelligensia. They want light humorous entertainment, not a lot of heavy dramatic bosh. (Circuit)

¶ First of all, single features, fewer long drawn out stories that get nowhere, more comedies and musicals, in a time all that we read, see in newsreels, and in many a feature, is some war angle. More Kildare series, Hardy series, Abbott & Costello series, Bob Hope, etc. Why not cut features down to where and what they were ten years ago, because now the producers who are making long features to break up the double feature menace, don't realize some towns have to play doubles anyway and you wind up with a three-hours-and-a-half program, where ten years ago features averaged 75 minutes, 9 minutes of news, cartoon 7 minutes, and possibly but not always, a short. This way working in six performances and quicker turnover. Hal Roach's Streamliners are a help. (Circuit)

¶ I feel the elimination of all double features, giveaways and the concentrating on good single

PARAMOUNT—F.&M. HOLLYWOOD THEATRE

Paramount Pictures and Fanchon and Marco completed a deal last week which will give them joint operation of the El Capitan Theatre, on Hollywood Boulevard in the film capital, as a deluxe motion picture house. The theatre will be known as the Paramount Hollywood, and it is reported that $150,000 will be spent to modernize it completely and to install numerous equipment features intended to make it one of the nation's outstanding movie palaces.

The deal was negotiated by Leonard Goldenson, head of Paramount's theatre division, Fanchon and Marco, and C. E. Toberman. W. L. Pereira, Paramount's studio architect, in collaboration with his brother, Hal Pereira, of Chicago, are designing plans for the revamped theatre which, it is expected, will be ready for a public opening by Christmas.

"Consent Decree, like WPA, has been Abused"

features, good shorts and some situations vaudeville would bring about a better paying proposition for both the producer and theatre owner. The only thing is to make everyone realize this and have one united group all make the same move at the same time.—PEARCE PARKHURST, Colonial Theatre, Nashua, N. H. (Circuit)

¶ There should come a day when the distributors will stop breaking their backs to get around every bit of regulation, legally or illegally, that is established in the industry. The ink is hardly dry on the distributors' own consent decree when the home offices are figuring out new ways to make the exhibitors buy shorts and to increase film rentals. (Circuit)

¶ A great boon to us "last runs" is the projectionist in the "first run" who punches holes or otherwise mutilates the film for cue markings. By the time they get to us each theatre it has played has cut out the former cues, punched in their own, and that leaves us with very, very smooth continuity of sound on the changeover. If a standard cue marking system could be worked out by the distributor . . . or have each house just "red pencil" their cue marks (which can be rubbed off without cutting the film all up) the subsequent houses would show better film. (Circuit)

¶ My pet belief is that the industry is missing a great bet in not starting a cartoon serial, with characters that can gain popularity comparable to Charlie McCarthy—the kind of stuff people are conversing about in trains, homes, offices and in daily life. My idea is that a person could attend his favorite theatre every week and see a chapter of "Who Killed Cock Robin" or some such title, with his favorite cartoon character such as the Crazy Rabbit.

Cartoons are equally as popular with adults as with children and I believe that the skill in Hollywood could easily handle such a subject into a boxoffice success.—RAYMOND J. KENNEY, Manager, Cosmo Theatre, Chicago. (Circuit)

¶ Fewer and better produced pictures to enable exhibitors to eliminate the double feature and substitute a program of one good feature. Also a balanced series of short subjects, newsreels and serials. Not so many propaganda pictures and more musicals and comedies. (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of surplus production or program features of no boxoffice value. Excessive production of useless shorts of no entertainment value. Restriction of propaganda in all entertainment. (Independent)

¶ The worst thing that ever hit this industry, in my opinion, is the Consent Decree, which I do not think has helped anyone as an exhibitor and has caused the film companies to "go crazy" on prices. I think the purpose of the Decree was in good faith to settle a long argument but, like WPA, it has already been badly abused.

Before the consent decree we, like other exhibitors, were buying a year's supply from each company we did business with and our high brackets covered only a few pictures from each company, but now it is one or two 40 per cent pictures in each group, then possibly a 35 per cent picture under that bracket. With all our arguing and submitting figures on grosses accompanied by Federal Tax ticket numbers and in some cases I have sworn to the figures before a Notary Public, our rentals have jumped about 30 per cent. I say this is not the solution to the trouble in this industry and would like to see it modified or completely withdrawn. In one case our guarantee was increased exactly 2½ times what it had ever been. This is my only "pet annoyance" mentioned above.—C. W. SADLER, Palace, Princess Theatres, Weatherford, Texas. (Independent)

¶ Our pet annoyances are murder mysteries and gangster films, especially the series as Charlie Chan, Ellery Queen, Michael Shayne, etc., also English pictures made in England. We want to compliment Metro on their selling policy which is the fairest yet devised by any company.—Nottawa Theatre, Blackstone, Va. (Independent)

¶ Who consented to the Consent Decree? Under the decree the film companies are demanding too many percentage pictures for smaller towns. Rentals are up, and operating cost, although business has increased only where there is a defense project. Small circuit of theatre in Georgia. (Independent)

¶ What I want is long pictures, they should be between 90 and 120 minutes so as to do away with double features. (Independent)

¶ Shorter playing time between 1st and subsequent runs; in our case it is 90 to 120 days; that is the reason, I believe, this time should be cut down. This subsequent run must charge same admission as the 1st and 2nd runs, i.e., 1st run matinee price and same price as 2nd run; 3rd and 4th run must also charge same admission as 1st and 2nd runs. (Independent)

¶ Most needed is the discard of selling systems designed to keep the exhibitor and his business on the brink of extinction when he devotes 90 per cent of his time to the purchase of pictures and 10 per cent to house operation, exploitation and general worry. (Independent)

¶ Back to the old buying methods. More outdoor action dramas and comedies of the down-to-earth type for my patronage. (Independent)

¶ Pet hope: To be able to buy highly sophisticated pictures at lowest allocation, as we are compelled to run some of them, and they do not make money in small situations. (Independent)

¶ Let's keep to comedy and drama. The world is too full of war, etc., for propaganda and pictures of that type. Let the newspapers and radio handle that and we'll help give life a little sunshine to go with it. (Independent)

¶ It seems to me that this business needs a little of the good, old-fashioned spirit of the Golden Rule. The people in this industry who have the power, might well use it with a little mercy and liberality, instead of exacting the last possible dollar from the small, independent exhibitor.—CHARLES E. MOYER, Bethlehem, Penna. (Independent)

¶ Definite run on film contract—so many days after first run, instead of so many days after subsequent run. (Example) 28-35-42-49-56 days, or whatever the case may be. I won't have to wait six or eight months for program pictures because the sub. run holds back. (Independent)

¶ Better comedy features. Less Travelogues. More fast action 2-reel comedies also 1-reel comedies. Not so much about war. Folks come to be entertained not to be made worried and fret and to remind them of this terrible destruction which now refers to some member of their family. (Independent)

¶ What we want most: That producers should cease and desist from the the present vogue of 60-minute so-called "features." The "double-feature" evil will persist so long as these are ground out like sausage. Our patrons prefer one good feature with good short subjects—but in order to play up our commitments we are obliged to double-feature many that are too short and too weak to play along. The double-feature vogue has made a market for short, weak features—and every producing organization in the industry, with possibly one exception, is catering to that market. (Independent)

¶ In my opinion, the best thing that could happen to the industry would be for Hollywood to make about 60 per cent as many pictures as it does now, thereby making them all about the same class—and thereby making the double bill practically an impossibility. Shorts would then come back into their own, and everyone would be better off, including the public.—HOFHEIMER, Indianola Theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

BIOFF-BROWNE TRIAL ENDS, JURY DECIDES U.S. EXTORTION CHARGES

Defense Attorneys Breslin, Conboy Sum Up with Charges of "Inconsistency"; Say "Truth Has Not Been Told"

The trial of IATSE union leaders Willie Bioff and George Browne for alleged extortion of $550,000 specifically, and $828,000 as charged by witnesses from Warners, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, and Loew's—moved at mid-week to the judgment of a jury in New York's Federal Court, after sumations, Wednesday by George Breslin, and Thursday by Martin Conboy for the defendants, by Mathias F. Correa, Thursday, for the United States, and with Federal Judge John Knox's charge to follow.

For close to three weeks, numerous major film executives testified to threats of strikes, demands for money, and extortion of money personally and by involved bookkeeping arrangements, by the two International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes leaders.

Bioff, to whom the most payments allegedly were made, countered on defense direct testimony, that he had "taken more" than the sum alleged by the indictment, and the sums mentioned by the witnesses; that he had collected about $1,000,000, but that he had collected so that the industry could appease "sandbagging" legislators.

Lack of Complaint Cited

Mr. Breslin charged the major executives never went to the police; that Bioff acted openly; that he was friendly with them; that they submitted, although they were "tough" men in ordinary business; that film executives and lawyers could have used marked money, dictaphones and other means to trap Bioff.

Defense counsel Breslin turned to the jurors within a few minutes after the Government had rested its case with rebuttals, at 11:15 A.M., on Wednesday. His summation continued until luncheon recess, at one o'clock, and picked up again at 2:03 P.M., running until 4:45, when the six-foot Breslin, who had never left the counsel table during summation, turned, and in his usual well-calculated trial manner, loudly charged to the jurymen: "The truth has not been told—as to what really happened."

Judge Knox's gavel knocked for adjournment for the day, and ordered Thursday's opening at 10:00 A. M., instead of the usual 10:30.

At precisely 10:12 Thursday, Martin Conboy, in command with Mr. Breslin of the defendants' staff of six New York and Hollywood counsel, started on an amplification of defense summation.

The trial entered its last week when, maneuvered into admissions he had falsified to public groups on many occasions, and confronted with evidence that he had assumed false names several times, and made to lose credibility thereby, Bioff introduced yet another sensation in his defensive attack, at the Thursday, October 30th, sessions. The defendant turned to Judge Knox, and, voluntarily declared: "I am ready to prove that $200,000 was given to Congressional investigators of the motion picture industry.

That "investigation," questioning later elicited, was not the current Nye-Wheeler inquiry; it was the so-called Sabath Congressional Committee which, in 1935, questioned certain financial transactions in the film industry. The "investigator" was Murray Garson, investigator for the committee. Bioff said Joseph Schenck bought $200,000 worth of stock for Mr. Garsson.

Previously, Bioff, in three days of defense on the witness stand, had completely turned testimony by Government witnesses—the majors' executives who paid him approximately $800,000 according to their testimony—into a story of service for his "friends," Nicholas and Joseph Schenck.

The story was that he was merely a messenger for Nicholas Schenck, collecting by Bioff's own admission, approximately $1,000,000 from other industry executives, that he turned this money over to Joseph Schenck, for what Bioff said was the appeasement of legislators in many states; and, that he was a personal, not business, friend to industry leaders.

Payment of $828,977 Charged

In the two weeks previous, a score of executives asserted from the witness stand they had paid Bioff and Browne $828,977 to avoid strikes of projectionists and studio workers threatened by the two labor leaders.

Among these had been Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc.; Harry M. Warner, president of Warners; William C. Michel, executive vice-president of 20th Century-Fox; Nicholas Nayfack, MGM studio executive; Austin Keough, Paramount general counsel; David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer of Loew's, and others.

Bioff's Thursday charge that Joseph Schenck had given a Congressional investigator $200,000 simered down to a statement of what Bioff said Joseph Schenck had told him. Representative Sabath in Washington later called it all a lie. Mr. Correa reminded Bioff he had previously asserted he didn't know to whom the money he "collected" for Joseph Schenck, was paid.

Previously, also on Thursday, October 30th, Bioff had denied using Chicago's Nick Dean, alias Circella, as subsidiary collector. He also denied knowing Circella was an ex-convict, arrested with Al Capone.

Dean resigned as international representative of the IATSE. Under separate indictment as accomplice in the alleged film extortions, he has so far been unavailable to the Federal Government.

The IATSE books show $19,680 paid between 1937 and 1940 to an IATSE representative named Link, Mr. Correa reminded Bioff, then asked him if he was "Link."

Bioff said no—and he didn't know of any man named Link.

In previous testimony, however, Bioff had certified he used that name in telephone conversations with Nicholas Schenck.

On Thursday also, Joseph Schenck briefly appeared in court. Mr. Correa explained Mr. Schenck was available as a witness if necessary. Defense lawyers thereupon had Mr. Schenck excluded from the courtroom because he might be called.

Questioned on "Link"

Questioning, over the "Link" item on Alliance books, brought from Bioff the assertion that as an international representative, he received a salary of $110 per week, plus $84 for expenses; and that Browne received $20,000 per year.

When Mr. Correa, as he had before in the trial, asked whether Bioff had seen incongruity in being asked by Nicholas and Joseph Schenck to act as collector and deliverer of money, Bioff said: "The whole setup struck me as very funny."

He said he did not, however, see comedy in his own behavior which, he testified, included the leaving of $100,000 in a trunk at his Oak Park, Illinois home, without insurance, or information to the other resident, his mother-in-law.

Thursday also saw a brief attempted linkage of Bioff with Tommy Malloy, Chicago projectionists' chief, who died by shotgun in February, 1935. Mr. Correa made Bioff admit he started collecting from the city's exhibitors "a few months after Mr. Malloy's death," in Mr. Correa's words. Bioff, however, denied knowing Malloy collected exhibitor tribute.

Mr. Correa attempted to catch Bioff in another misstatement. Bioff had identified Samuel Brenner, Chicago attorney, as payer for the producers on some occasions, in that city. He also said he knew Mr. Brenner for about two years before these happenings.

Mr. Correa then displayed a Bioff passport application, in which Bioff swore he had known Mr. Brenner for 30 years.

Bioff admitted Mr. Brenner was a Chicago Alliance member; that he had been its attorney and that he was paid one fee of $3,217.

Secretary Testifies

Ruth Nolander, former secretary to Joseph Schenck, followed Bioff as defense witness. Mr. Schenck, she said, counted $100,000 in Bioff's presence, for her to put in the Schenck studio strong box.

"Before that occurence, Mr. Schenck had not kept more than $50,000 in that box, she claimed.

Mr. Correa later forced an admission from her that she had not seen Bioff give that money to Mr. Schenck.

Followed then, Charles T. Russell, Bioff tax consultant and a former deputy commissioner of the Department of Internal Revenue.

Sidney Kent and Joseph Schenck recommended Bioff to him, Mr. Russell said. Furthermore—and this was supplemented by cablegrams from Mr. Schenck—the latter evidenced interest in Bioff's tax difficulties, according to Mr. Russell's testimony.

One cablegram, introduced in evidence, read:

PARAMOUNT SUED FOR "EXPENSES"

The fourth stockholders' suit against major producers which paid Bioff and Browne to prevent labor strikes was filed in New York Federal Court Thursday, October 31st, against Paramount, officers, and directors, by Lillian S. Raber and G. Arthur Peck. They ask accounting of $100,000 allegedly paid the labor leaders by company officers; their complaint asserts the disbursements were wrongfully conceaed from stockholders by "surreptitious padded vouchers." Milton Eisenberg, 50 Court Street, Brooklyn, is plaintiffs' lawyer.

GARSSON STOCK DEAL CALLED LOAN

"B is to testify Sacramento. He intends withholding information. I suppose at the request of Mac. If he does at least he should get promise from Mac to intercede in Washington to stop persecution." B meant Bioff and Mac was Senator William Gibbs McAdoo of California, Mr. Russell testified. On his advice, Bioff did not see Senator McAdoo and nothing was done by him, Mr. Russell hastened to say. Sacramento, he added, was a reference to a grand jury investigation pending there at that time.

Continuing Monday, Mr. Russell told of conferences with Bioff and Mr. Schenck, in the latter's home and office, from June, 1938, to late 1940—all of them on the $100,000 "loan."

Mr. Russell also insisted on the stand that no film officials paid him for services to Browne, Bioff, and the IATSE; that the IATSE union paid him $31,180.

Stock Deal Cited

Testimony that a block of 20th Century-Fox and Consolidated Oil stock, valued at $202,837 was originally registered under the name of Joseph Schenck and later transferred to the joint account of Murray Garsson and Joseph M. Moskowitz was offered by Jack Rabin, an employee of Mervin Ash & Co., Mr. Schenck's stock brokers. The transfer was made on the ground the original registration had been a mistake, Mr. Rabin said. The evidence was offered by the defense to substantiate Bioff's claim that Mr. Schenck had paid money to a Congressional investigator. Mr. Rabin could not explain the ultimate disposition of the stock.

Hyman and Abe Bioff, brothers, and Sylvia, sister, of Willie Bioff, confirmed his statements that he is Morris, not William, Bioff—an admission previously brought out by Mr. Correa.

The defense rested Monday, with George Browne not having appeared in his own behalf. However, the first Government rebuttal witness linked him directly with payments of the alleged extortion money.

According to Government direct testimony, Browne had been present at certain meetings with film executives; but all their testimony, and Bioff's also, had identified the latter only, as actual collector of the monies. The first Government rebuttal witness, Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew circuit head, told of threats and demands by Browne, and said the union head had received $205,000 from 1935 to 1938.

Mr. Moskowitz said he had met Bioff in 1935, first, in contract negotiations with New York Projectionists Local 306. Later that summer, he was asked by telephone to visit Browne's New York hotel apartment. Bioff told him then he had sponsored Browne's IATSE election.

Says Dean Was Present

Mr. Moskowitz, continuing, said Bioff complained he had not gotten "a cent" from "the wealthy film industry."

When Mr. Moskowitz, saying he had come to see Browne, tried to leave, Bioff pushed him into a chair, and demanded money, he said.

Mr. Moskowitz added that Nick Dean was in the room at the time.

The meeting was abortive, but another occurred ten days later, at New York's Hotel Chatham, the witness said. Browne, this time, asked $50,000 to prevent a Local 306 strike.

There were more meetings and, he said, Major Leslie Thompson, RKO circuit executive, was an object of demands, also. It was he, the Moskowitz narrative ran, who suggested using Mort Singer, Chicago exhibitor, as transmitter of money to Browne. Loew's had delayed payment until a non-direct device was formulated, he testified.

The entire deal cost Loew's $165,000, including "expenses" of protecting Mr. Singer from income taxes, Mr. Moskowitz added. Its direct share was $105,000.

Browne demanded $100,000 more in 1937, he continued. Personally, to Browne, in Dinty Moore's Restaurant, New York, he handed $25,000 in late 1937, and $15,000 in April, 1938, he testified.

Mr. Moskowitz then contradicted Bioff's direct testimony, telling the court he never had delivered money to Bioff at hotels; did not introduce him to Nicholas Schenck; never instructed him to collect money from other film executives.

The second rebuttal witness for the Government also on Monday, James Coston, Warner circuit Chicago zone manager, recalled meeting Bioff in 1928 as "Willie Berger." Browne, he averred, introduced them.

Mr. Coston then said Bioff had said, in IATSE Chicago offices, in February, 1935, that he had "taken over" the city's projectionists' union.

Bioff, he testified, said his men asked restoration of operators previously eliminated from booths.

Whereupon, Mr. Coston related, Bioff suggested theatres could avoid this restoration; and, at a later meeting, asked $100,000, of which Warners was to pay $30,000, Balaban and Katz and others the remainder.

Then ensued a flight of Coston, Browne, and Bioff to New York conferences with Joseph Bernhard, Warner circuit general manager—and, a week later, Mr. Coston gave $30,000 cash to the two defendants, so the testimony ran.

Came another demand in May, 1936; a demand predicated upon appeasement of an asserted operators' desire for a 20 per cent pay increase; and, satisfaction of which was to be five per cent to Bioff instead of the 20 per cent to the rank-and-file, Mr. Coston testified.

That five per cent was declared to be $11,000. Mr. Coston paid $8,500 and pleaded no more was available. Whereupon, the theatre man testified, Bioff said, "We were getting away cheap."

Tells of Other Payments

There were more payments, he continued: $14,000 in Sept., 1936; $9,600 in late 1938, and in December, 1940. The latter payments were to Nick Dean, to whom, Mr. Coston said Bioff told him, the job of collecting had been given.

Bioff's own view of his position in the film world was anecdotally displayed in the Coston testimony.

Bioff told him, he said, that he wouldn't be "the first big man to go to jail—there have been others."

The "others," were "Hitler, and Stalin."

Reappearance of the theme dealing with Mr. Garsson, the former Congressional investigator, came Wednesday when Joseph Moskowitz, 20th Century-Fox financial executive, followed Mr. Coston, but as defense witness. He said he had kept the personal account of Joseph Schenck in 1937; and that the November 4th entry recorded a $202,837 loan to Mr. Garsson.

Mr. Moskowitz told Mr. Correa that Mr. Garsson was "a friend of Mr. Schenck."

He further elucidated: the stock for Mr. Garsson cost approximately $130,000; it was collateral on the loan; Mr. Garsson endorsed the stock in blank; it was given to Mr. Schenck; the stock was then sold for $110,000, and given to Mr. Schenck, who lost $20,000.

The Fox executive was the last defense witness.

Mr. Correa's last endeavor, before closing for the Government, was to show that Browne admitted Bioff and Dean into Chicago IATSE Local 2, whose minutes confirmed this.

The Government rested at 11:15 Wednesday morning.

Followed then a denial of a defense motion for elimination of Mr. Moskowitz's testimony naming Browne directly as a money recipient.

George Breslin's defense summation asked the jury not to be influenced by newspaper stories; asserted more than a reasonable doubt of Bioff's guilt; said the man was not being tried for assumption of other names, nor for other convictions.

He cited as "peculiar" the reported failure of Nicholas Schenck to tell colleagues of the asserted $2,000,000 demand alluded to in previous testimony.

"Willing Payment" Stressed

More defense summation points: Browne ordered the 1935 strike to bring back members; that was his job; the union paid him for it; although Nicholas Schenck met many persons shortly after the asserted demands upon him by the two labor leaders, according to the defense, he told only Sidney Kent.

Mr. Breslin attacked this point, thus: "What an invitation to a smart lawyer! He could have used marked money, a dictaphone, or a number of devices to trap Bioff."

On the same tack, Mr. Breslin noted also no complaint to the authorities, adding: "If anyone of them (the majors) had complained to the authorities, this would have been stopped."

Nothing happened then; nothing of that sort is happening now, he continued, then asserting: "The answer is that a deal has been made, which you have not been told about."

Joseph Schenck was a willing witness, according to Mr. Breslin, whereas the other Government witnesses were unwilling, he charged. "Who was the informer who came to Mr. Correa and told him about this case. Could it have been Joseph Schenck?" asked the defense lawyer.

He reproached Harry Warner for failing to complain to the police.

He reiterated the charge that Bioff was used in the Smith-Aller raw film commission deal, related in previous testimony, to obtain an illegal rebate.

Of testimony that Loew's paid $165,000 in September, 1935, to Browne, Mr. Breslin termed "unbelievable" the failure of Nicholas Schenck, faced by a demand for $2,000,000 the following spring, in Mr. Schenck's narrative, not to have remarked "Why, we just paid you $165,000."

"Truth Has Not Been Told"

Saying, "The truth has not been told," and admonishing the jury "I think you could not rest in mind if you can say there's no doubt about the Government's case," Mr. Breslin finished at 4:45 P. M., Wednesday.

Martin Conboy, second defense attorney, started summation Thursday morning, followed by Mr. Correa, and then by Judge Knox, with the charge to the jury.

Members of the jury were: Paul D. Thorne, cashier, Western Union; Francis L. Corcoran, real estate agent associated with Rockefeller properties; John McKeown Stebbins, production staff, New Yorker magazine; James D. Banks, life insurance broker; Murray J. Dunn, tester, New York Telephone Company; Ezra Koster Wickman, executive, Commonwealth Fund; Paul Fisher, mortgage broker; Arthur Otten, clerk, Texas Company; Frank James Hannon, margin clerk, Hayden, Stone and Company; Robert H. Celander, buyer, Consolidated Edison Company; Warner L. Overton, telephone engineer and Otto Detmer Sutter, sales manager.

GOVERNMENT SAYS NEW ORDER HAS REDUCED EXHIBITOR COMPLAINTS

Arbitration Polices Industry, Is Effective, U. S. Lawyers Say; Test Action in Minnesota; New Cases, Awards Filed

Like the policeman on the beat the motion picture arbitration system has deterred infractions of the "law and order" to which the industry was bound by the consent decree. The U. S. Government which imposed the decree upon the five consenting distributors admits that the arbitration system has been "quite effective" in settling industry controversies.

The number of trade practice complaints filed by exhibitors against distributors has shown a "substantial reduction," the Department of Justice reports. Although relatively few complaints, (138 on November 1st) have been filed with the 31 motion picture tribunals of the American Arbitration Association during the first nine months of arbitration the government is reported to be well pleased with the operation of the decree.

Robert L. Wright, chief of the motion picture unit of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice said this week that there were far fewer complaints coming to Washington. No definite figures have been kept for comparison with previous years, but the drop in the number of complaints is believed to be considerable.

Arbitration Effective

Prior to the signing of the consent decree the Department of Justice mailbags carried hundreds of letters a month from independent exhibitors asking for relief. This correspondence is said to have diminished to a trickle.

The Government is reported to feel that the decree has provided not only an effective "get together" method of settling disputes but to have made distributors more willing to hear and settle exhibitor complaints.

Maintaining the conservative attitude which Government officials have consistently held with respect to operation of the decree, Mr. Wright expressed the view that the arbitration system had not yet had a full opportunity to demonstrate its possibilities. He referred to the fact that block-of-five selling was adopted only a few weeks ago on September 1st and problems arising under that system have not yet been brought before the arbitration boards.

Nevertheless, the fact that fewer monopoly complaints have been filed with the Department of Justice and the relatively few actions before the AAA are interpreted by Government quarters as evidence of a "reform" imposed by the decree. Chief among the improvements in conditions attributed to the decree is the "sincere and successful effort" made by distributors to satisfy exhibitor complaints.

Not only has the number of complaints to the Department of Justice decreased, it is said, but they have changed considerably in character. Many of them involve clearance, some run, or other situations which can be handled through the arbitration tribunals. The Department has so advised the complainants.

Further evidence that arbitration is filling a long felt need in the industry for settling disputes is seen at Washington in the small percentage of decisions which have been carried to the Appeal Board. Frequent withdrawal or the consent settlement of arbitration complaints is also regarded as a good sign. The Government is also said to feel that distributors and exhibitors alike have made efforts to carry arbitration proceedings to a conclusion without stalling. This is considered to be an indication that both groups are anxious to give the system a complete trial.

Washington considers the only black spot in the situation to be the Minnesota law and the decree exemptions granted under it. However, Department of Justice officials remain confident that the statute will be successfully challenged in court. At this time they are not taking an active part in the case.

Voluntary Revisions

Officials are understood to feel that the mere existence of arbitration machinery and a consent decree specifying proper trade practices has been the instigus for much conciliation between exhibitors and distributors. They cite voluntary revisions in sales and distribution practices apart from those compelled by the decree.

"Like a policeman on the corner, arbitration deters malefaction just by being at hand," one source commented.

Although Judge Henry Goddard who signed the consent decree this week, granted Paramount relief from some of its provisions in Minnesota a new case, the first since March, has been filed at Minneapolis. The tribunal's fourth action, the some run complaint entered Monday by the Lyceum theatre, operated at Duluth, Minn., by the Duluth Theatre Corporation, charges Paramount with refusing to license pictures under Section VI of the decree.

Bennie Berger, a leader in the Northwest Allied Theatre Owners' Association councils and active advocate of the Minnesota anti-decree law owns the Lyceum theatre. His arbitration complaint is considered by Minneapolis exhibitors to be the forerunner of a test of the arbitration provisions of the decree.

A clearance complaint was filed October 29th at Chicago by William Pearl, operating the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park, Ill. It is the city's ninth case. It cites 20th Century-Fox RKO Radio and Paramount. The complainant claims the companies have granted the Lake Forest Theatre Co., Lake Forest, Ill., for the Deerpath theatre; Samuel Meyer's Teatro Del Lago, Wilmette, Ill.; and the A. J. B. Theatre, Inc., Libertyville, Ill., operating the Liberty Theatre, unreasonable clearance over the Alcyon.

Four New York theatres, operated by Julius Joelson on Friday filed the tribunal's 25th and 26th complaints. Both sought clearance adjustments.

Bill For Film Arbitration Shows AAA Saved $190,000

The five consenting distributors got their first official indication this week of what the bill for setting up the motion picture arbitration system and operating it for the first year will amount to.

Expenses will total slightly less than $300,000 on November 30th for the first ten months of film arbitration, the American Arbitration Association reported. In a report to the finance committee the Association, court appointed administrator of the consent decree arbitration system, estimated that operating costs would be approximately $190,000 less than the $490,000 maximum approved by Judge Henry Goddard when he signed the decree.

Savings in the operating expenses for the 31 regional tribunals, the New York headquarters of the AAA's film administration, and the disbursements to the Appeal Board were reported to the Budget Committee named by Judge Goddard. The committee, comprising Van Vechten Veeder, chairman of the Appeal Board, Paul F. Warburg, chairman of the AAA Administrative Committee, and Joseph Hazen, representing the consenting distributors, is preparing a budget for next year. The budget, however, will not be submitted to the U. S. District Court for approval for several weeks, it was said.

Their 1942 budget, it was indicated, will not call for the elimination or consolidation of any of the 31 field offices, in view of the savings exercised during the first year. The maximum expenditure provided by the decree for the second year of operation is set at $465,000. The Budget Committee, however, is expected to recommend a figure considerably below this sum when it submits its proposed budget for next year to the court.

About $50,000 of the $190,000 saving, the AAA pointed out to the committee, was due to the fact that the report covers only ten months of operation of the out-of-town tribunals. Although the decree was entered on November 30th, 1940, most of the arbitration expenses did not commence until January 1st, 1941. The tribunals opened to receive complaints on February 1st.

Included in the cost of the first year's administration were: the establishment of 31 regional offices in exchange cities, purchase of equipment, employment of clerks and secretaries, salaries and expenses of the executive director, his assistant, the field secretary and clerical help in the New York administrative office, and the salaries and expenses of the Appeal Board.

Arbitration Cuts Theatre Disputes

for the Avalon, Oxford and Jerome theatres in the Bronx named Warner Brothers, 20th Century-Fox, and RKO in a demand charging that the seven-day clearance held by the Skouras circuit's Valentine over the three houses is unreasonable, "as to time and area." The action requests that clearance be eliminated or reduced to the day following the Valentine run.

The 26th case was filed by Mr. Joelson for his Kingsbridge theatre against the same distributors, and asking the same reduction of the Valentine's clearance.

Chicago

By stipulation of parties the time limit for the selection of an arbitrator in the R & G Corporation, Cicero, Ill., clearance case against the consenting companies, has been extended until November 17th.

Portland

November 13th has been set for the hearing of Graeper's Egyptian Theatre at Portland, Oregon.

Among prominent independent exhibitors who will testify are Bob Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners from Los Angeles; W. E. Miller, secretary, Portland; James Hone, Seattle, Robert White of Portland, and Wes Johnson of Eugene, Ore.

Kansas City

Hearings on Kansas City's second complaint, clearance action of the Dickinson theatre in Mission, Kansas, began on October 29th before Wendell H. Cloud, arbitrator. Testimony was heard from William C. Boatright, representing the Dickinson and from attorneys and branch managers of 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Paramount, and Warners.

Intervenors represented included the Kansas City Operating Corporation for the Newman theatre; the Missouri Orpheum Theatre Corporation; Fox Kansas City Corporation for the Brookside, Plaza, Isis, Uptown and Esquire theatres; and A. Orear operating the Aztec at Shawnee, Kan.

Baltimore

Milton King will arbitrate the Linnen Theatre, Baltimore, clearance action on November 5th.

Detroit

Gale theatre, Galesburg, Mich., clearance case was dismissed without prejudice at Detroit, Wednesday, by Edmund Brady, arbitrator, following argument. Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and the Butterfield and P. C. Schram Theatres, Kalamazoo, were involved. It was case number four.

Case number one, the Booth theatre clearance complaint has been postponed to December 2nd.

St. Louis

Warner Brothers and 20th Century-Fox were dismissal by agreement from the some-run complaint of Floyd Lowe, operator of the Star Theatre, Lebanon, Mo. William H. Stead, arbitrator, approved the amended complaint at the first hearing on October 28th.

San Francisco

Donovan O. Peters, arbitrator of San Francisco's fourth case, the clearance action of Gerald Hardy, operating the Piedmont, Oakland, adjourned hearings until November 12th on Monday after three days of testimony. Mr. Hardy testified he paid 31 per cent of his gross for film rental and said his 887-seat house had lost $4,400 in 10 months. He attacked the entire Oakland clearance schedule as a relic of the arbitrary NRA margins. Representatives of Fox West Coast, Warner, Paramount, Blumenfeld,

Republic's Regional Sales Meetings

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, left New York by plane last Sunday to attend the company's regional sales meeting in New Orleans at the Jung Hotel on Wednesday and Thursday, and to preside at the open midwest regional meetings at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, on Friday and Saturday. H. J. Yates also attended.

The last of the current series of regional sessions will be held in New York, at the New York Athletic Club on November 12th and 13th, at which branch managers, salesmen, bookers of Republic's eastern branches and home office executives will be present. The West Coast regional meeting was held at the studio on October 15th and 16th.

Theatres Pooled to Form Corporation

The Pantheon theatre of Toledo, Ohio, operated by Smith, Beidler and Kumler, and the Palace theatre in Cleveland, operated by Skirball Brothers, have been pooled to form one corporation which Skirball Brothers will operate.

Both theatres will now show both first and second run picture, as has the Palace for some years. The Pantheon has been operating on a last run in the city policy and at a 15 and 20 cent admission scale. Both theatres will now charge 20 and 30 cents including State and Federal taxes.

S. P. Eagle With Fox

S. P. Eagle has been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox as co-producer, with Boris Morros, of "Tales of Manhattan." The film, which will co-star approximately a dozen leading Hollywood personalities, was to go into production this week.

Carmel Myers Signed

Carmel Myers, D. W. Griffith star who last appeared in motion pictures in 1934, has been signed for a role in Republic's new picture, "Lady for a Night."

Stanley Theatres Acquire Mortgage

A blanket mortgage of $4,660,000 on 16 theatres owned by the Stanley Company of America in Philadelphia and operated by the Warner theatre circuit was secured from the Equitable Life Assurance Society Thursday, October 30th. Bearing interest at 4¼ per cent, the mortgage, which expires in 1956, is applicable to the following theatres in Philadelphia: Earle, Stanley, Stanton, Victoria, Alhambra, Broadway, Colonial, Cross Keys, Harrowgate, Imperial, Logan, Place, Savoy, 333 Market, Riviera and New Palace.

The mortgage replaces an original one of $10,000,000 reduced to approximately $6,000,000, known as the C. Benton Cooper Stanley real estate bonds. The issue, dated 1925, had a maturity date in 1945. It is being called for payment December 1st.

Schreiber Heads Detroit Community Fund Drive

The committee to organize the motion picture division of the Detroit Community Fund is being organized and headed by Alex Schreiber, manager of Associated Theatres.

The committee for the campaign includes: John R. MacPherson, National Screen Service, manager; Irwin Pollard and Samuel Seplowin, Republic Pictures; Arthur C. Robinson, premium distributor; Charles Garner, roadshow distributor; Moe Dudelson and Sydney Bowman, United Artists; Max Blumenthal, Film Projection Service; Lieut. Charles W. Snyder, film censor; George Bremen, manager, Wyandotte theatre, and Daniel J. Lewis, chief booker, Wisper & Wetsman theatres.

RCA Signs Comerford Circuit for Service

In a service deal recently completed, RCA Photophone has closed with the Comerford-Publix Theatres Corp. and affiliated companies for service to 79 theatres of the Comerford groups. The pact includes furnishing parts and other items of both sound and projection equipment.

The negotiations were handled by Dan Halprin, Photophone divisional representative; W. L. Jones, RCA's National service manager, and John Bethell, RCA Philadelphia sales manager, with Charles A. Ryan, representative of the Comerford circuit and affiliates.

Thomson Resigns

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, resigned as executive secretary of the Motion Picture Society for the Americas, it was announced in Hollywood on Monday. His resignation becomes effective as soon as a successor is named. Mr. Thomson declared he was withdrawing in order to devote all of his time to his Screen Guild post.

MGM'S 'PERCENTAGE YARDSTICK' IS 'NO DEEP, DARK PLOT', SAYS RODGERS

MGM Sales Chief Analyzes Policy and Procedure Before Independents, While Other Owners Meet on Other Problems

"No deep, dark laid plot to make a ten-strike" is behind Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new sliding scale percentage sales plan, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of the company assured members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York on Thursday, October 30th.

"It is a sincere effort to make a fair merchandising plan" Mr. Rodgers told the exhibitors, members representing a large segment of New York's subsequent run theatres.

He declared that the new sales plan is to be handled by branch managers and said they had full power to negotiate with exhibitors and to make adjustments.

The Metro sales executive replied to a barrage of sharp criticisms of his company's new policy. It was to "clear up misunderstandings in regard to Loew's policy," however, that he sought the opportunity to speak to the ITOA group Mr. Rodgers explained.

Asked to Answer Objections

He spoke to 200 ITOA members at a special luncheon meeting called at the Hotel Astor by Harry Brandt, president, in answer to Mr. Rodgers' own request that he be permitted to answer at first hand objections to the new sales method raised by some independent exhibitors.

Questions tossed at Mr. Rodgers from the floor, and by Mr. Brandt, acting as chairman, included demands for an explanation of the percentage "yardstick," a forecast on the number of percentage pictures for this year, what assurance the distributors offer against losses on percentage dates, protection between circuits and independents, preferred dates, effect of flat rental precedents on new prices and other topics.

"We are not asking a percentage or sliding scale with the idea of becoming rich at the exhibitor's expense," he declared.

"Consider us on our performance," Mr. Rodgers asked. "The time that you find we are taking advantage I hope you will storm my doors and the doors of MGM's branch managers. Until then apprehension is undue," he said.

MGM's district and branch managers have complete authority to determine local designation of pictures and to deal with the problems of individual exhibitors, including percentage deals, Mr. Rodgers asserted.

Percentage Films Necessary

Percentage pictures must be included on the MGM sales schedule, Mr. Rodgers said. He cited rising production costs, the burden of lost foreign markets and the increasingly greater amounts which must be spent on each picture to keep it in a top production class.

The negative costs of MGM pictures have risen, he said, to an average of $750,000 from $350,000 per production. Most of the increase has been within the past few years, he said, asserting that it had followed the general increase in prices. As with other merchandise, the dollar today does not buy as much picture as it did formerly he declared.

All MGM customers are being sold the percentage pictures he declared in answer to a question from Mr. Brandt. No circuit or theatre, he reported, has received an MGM contract calling for all pictures on a flat rental.

"No circuit in the United States is buying pictures from MGM on a flat rental," he said, "no individual has bought this year's product on a flat rental." He flatly repudiated assertions of discrimination against independent or subsequent run theatres.

The consent decree, he declared, precludes any promise in advance as to the number of pictures which Metro will sell on a percentage basis during 1941-42. Its provision that all pictures must be tradeshown before they are sold, or prices quoted, he said, makes it impossible for the consenting distributors to promise that only four or six or any specified number of pictures will be sold on a percentage scale.

"There will be no picture sold on a percentage basis unless we believe it honestly justifies it," he promised.

In answer to expressions of fear from the independent exhibitors present that they would be forced to play eight or a dozen expensive percentage pictures, on preferred dates, Mr. Rodgers pointed to the company's record to date.

Only One on Sliding Scale

In its first two blocks MGM has asked for a percentage on only one out of the seven pictures he said. Only "Honky Tonk," he revealed, is being sold on the sliding scale at present. While refusing flatly to express any official estimate of the number of percentage pictures which will be sold this year by MGM Mr. Rodgers intimated that it was his personal opinion that the ratio would not exceed the intial blocks. He said that he, personally, did not foresee 10 or 12 pictures in the New York area. The sales manager emphasized that the expression was a purely personal guess and asked the exhibitors to have confidence of a fair deal in their trade with MGM.

"If and when we overstep, then is the time to complain," he said. No exhibitor, he added, referring to an objection voiced by an ITOA member, should feel that he must come "hat in hand" to the exchange to ask for a reduction on a percentage scale.

"It is good business. We are doing no favor to give an adjustment on an oversold contract," he said. Exhibitors were urged by Mr. Rodgers to discuss their grievances with local managers. He repeated that the latter had full authority over designations and contract adjustments.

Designation will not be influenced by first run, exclusively, Mr. Rodgers said. The criterion for the sliding scale he observed, in answer to another point raised by the exhibitors, is the lowest percentage price paid last year by a theatre for an MGM picture. This price he said includes all adjustments subsequent to the contract.

In answer to charges that on the percentage arrangement large circuits, with extended, preferential dates, "play out the market" Mr. Rodgers observed that pictures that are percentage for circuits are not necessarily percentage to subsequent theatres in the same area.

The designation of weekends, or other special playing times on the percentage pictures is open to negotiations with branch managers, he added in a reply to another query. If, in fact, the percentage pictures prove liabilities to any theatre operations, he said, it is a serious problem for distributors as well as exhibitor, and "something we must worry over and work out fairly."

"There is no evidence of our trying to take advantage," Mr. Rodgers declared, and asked the theatre men present to withhold criticism of the plan until it had been given a fair trial.

Among the ITOA members at the speakers' table, and asking questions from the floor were Harry and William Brandt, David Weinstock, Jack Hattem, Abe Leff, Leo Brecher and Max Cohen.

Attending the luncheon for MGM, with Mr. Rodgers, were T. J. Connors, eastern, southern and Canadian division manager; E. K. O'Shea, central division manager; Edwin W. Aaron, assistant to Mr. Rodgers; Ralph Pielow, New York branch manager Jack Bowen, New York York district head; and Ben Abner, Newark manager.

Both Mr. Rodgers and the ITOA officers joined in praising the luncheon discussion as an example of how exhibition and distribution can thrash out mutual problems in an amicable forum.

KENTUCKY WILL HALT TAX TICKET PRINTING

H. Clyde Reeves, Kentucky's revenue commissioner, has announced the discontinuance of state printing of tax tickets for small theatres and amusement places because of the new Federal regulations.

The new regulations, Mr. Reeves said, require the name of each theatre to be printed on the tickets. Since 1936, the State Revenue Department has supervised the printing of tickets for between 800 and 900 small amusement places and charged the cost to the operators in addition to the state tax levied on them.

Richey Cites 'Short Cuts' To Profits at Boxoffice

The only short cut to boxoffice profits is a combination of intensive merchandising by exhibition with ingenious production and efficient distribution Henderson M. Richey, exhibitor relations director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer told Texas showmen this week.

Mr. Richey spoke at the convention of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, held at the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Discussing various plans for unity and for an institutional selling effort by the whole industry Mr. Richey declared that the small exhibitor is the most important force in building community goodwill and interest for motion pictures. He urged all subsequent run exhibitors to take a part in the discussion of unity problems and to utilize all means of showmanship to boost motion picture entertainment as a whole.

The industry must do more to sell itself he warned. "It must do a better marketing job, for it has keener competition than ever before," he said.

"To me it is nothing short of amazing to realize that despite the fact that we deliver the greatest amusement value in the world, we have done and said little about it, and what we have done has too many times been badly done," Mr. Richey said.

"The time has passed when simply doing the ordinary things is sufficient to win to motion picture theatres those people who are not now regular attendants," Mr. Richey told the Texans. Routine use of trailer, one sheet and newspaper advertisement must be supplemented by ingenious showmanship.

The fact that subsequent run theatres in one town will frequently do five times the business of theatres in closely similar towns, with the same type of patronage offer an excellent proof of the efficacy of merchandising, he said. Effective selling, he told the theatremen, should not be expensive. Ingenuity and work, he declared, are the best builders of new attendance.

"Motion pictures account for 75 per cent of the amusement dollar," Mr. Richey reported, "but during the present emergency that percentage should go materially higher."

"I don't believe it is possible in today's market and with today's competition to depend alone on the old standard methods to sell our merchandise," he said.

Stresses Exploitation

Advertising and exploitation by distributors builds initial interest in pictures, he indicated, during and after the key runs. The advertising heads and exploiteers of the large circuits also do "pretty good" merchandising jobs, he observed. Theatre owners in small towns and subsequent runs however must fill all jobs in their theatres, including that of advertising and publicity man.

"He very naturally has neither the experience nor the money to develop expensive campaigns to market the product in his community. It is the duty of the industry to lend him every assistance to make his public more motion picture conscious," the MGM executive asserted.

He described plans for the selling and advertising clinics of small town showmen which Metro will sponsor with its "Show Builder" trailer. The first of the meetings will be held at Columbus, Ohio, on November 25th. He expressed the hope that the forums would fill the place of circuit promotion meetings for small town theatre men.

Such meetings he said, can provide an "interchange of ideas that have proven successful in marketing motion picture merchandise," he asserted.

Mr. Richey declared that all in the industry must have increasing confidence in it and endeavour to support it before members of their own community. He described the Metro plan which encouraged branch employes to join civic organizations, and fraternal groups in their communities.

Kirsch, Samuelson Meet Majors for Allied Plan

Groundwork for National Allied States Association's intra-industry committee for unity within and a solid front to those outside was laid this week and last by two members of the organization's "liaison committee," Sidney Samuelson, head of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit, and Jack Kirsch, chief of the Illinois.

They conferred Friday, October 31st, with United Artists's officials. It was the ninth company they had approached. Meetings of Mr. Samuelson with executives of RKO and Warners were to be held this week, in New York also. Mr. Kirsch returned to Chicago over the weekend. He was to prepare a report there, of the pair's meetings, for the whole Allied liaison committee.

Among majors' sales managers who have approved the unity plan are William F. Rodgers, Abe Montague, Columbia; Arthur Kelly, United Artists; William Scully, Universal. In other form, other majors have approved the idea.

U.S. Blacks-out Theatre Fronts in Southeast, as Emergency Measure

A "blackout" of theatre marquee and advertising lighting in seven southeastern states, and a curtailment of electric consumption by heavy users, effective Monday, November 10th, was ordered by the U. S. Office of Production Management, at Washington, in an effort to conserve what has been described as a badly depleted hydro-electric power reserve of the area.

The order provides that all sign lighting, show-window lighting, outline and ornamental lighting, and interior or exterior lighting for decorative or advertising purposes be discontinued immediately.

The curtailment of consumption, applying to every establishment not engaged in defense work or certain essential activities, which used more than 10,000 kilowatts of current during the meter-month following September 15th, will be 30 per cent in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, eastern Mississippi, northwestern Florida and southeastern South Carolina, including Charleston, and five per cent throughout the remainder of South Carolina and in North Carolina. The lighting restrictions will be effective in all the states named.

The curtailment will not apply to broadcasting stations.

The order provided that the curtailment would not be imposed if heavy rains prior to November 10th should end the shortage. It will be effective until February 28th, next, unless adequate rainfall makes possible the earlier lifting of the restrictions.

The ten Southern states again face the Federally-imposed power rationing orders due to a second prolonged drouth this year.

Under an agreement between private and publicly-owned utilities, and state officials, the pooling of power during the shortage emergency will be uniform "both as to the time and degree of curtailment." This will mean that, if necessary, private utilities can draw on TVA power and vice versa.

Governor Sam Jones of Louisiana dendied there was any shortage of power in Louisiana, where rainfall has been heavy enough this summer and fall to insure plenty of energy. He points out that the state's largest utility company has recently sold excess energy to firms out of state.

A ban on theatre signs, marquee lighting and other outdoor illumination is promised by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, at Toronto, for the winter months, as a war measure to conserve electric power for the munition industries. The cities and towns have also been asked to reduce street lighting because of the increased demand for power by war plants.

It is anticipated that the Commission will issue an order to limit the use of lights on theatre fronts to stated hours each day and that lights on many billboards will be shut off entirely.

The other three members of the Allied Committee are Roy Harrold, president of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana; Martin Smith, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio; and Colonel Henry Albert Cole, president of the national Allied.

The Texas Allied convened for the 22nd year, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Hotel Adolphus, Dallas, with film buying, the decree, unity and a joint industry committee, and other subjects discussed; with new officers elected; and with many special guests present, among whom some speakers were Arthur Kelly, UA, H. M. Richey, MGM, George Dembow, National Screen Service, and P. J. Wood, Ohio ITO.

Mr. Wood analyzed the effects of the consent decree on independent exhibitors in Ohio. Colonel Cole advocated the industry unity plan as protection against further government regulation.

Colonel Cole was reelected Wednesday for his nineteenth term as president.

The Connecticut Allied will poll theatre owners, to ascertain how the consent decree has affected independent theatre operation. Plans for the poll will be drawn at the bi-weekly luncheon meeting next Tuesday, in New Haven.

Dr. J. B. Fishman, president, said the survey is prompted by many complaints that exhibitors are not able to buy more selectivity under the decree, than before. He added the complaints stressed the residue of "real" industry evils, and the rise in rentals.

The unit will probably elect a new secretary, shortly. At the meeting, Lawrence Caplan's resignation of that position was considered.

The southern state unit of the New Jersey Allied held a "round table" at the Walt Whitman Hotel, Camden, that state, Tuesday. The conference is one of a series, designed to interchange information on deals, and equipment.

The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will meet at Charlotte, North Carolina, January 18th and 19th. Previous convention dates had been December 7th and 8th.

Tentative convention date for the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska is November 24th, at Des Moines. A feature will be the report of the committee investigating 16mm portable circuit competition.

Tuesday and Wednesday, the Independent Protective Theatre Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan met in annual session, at Milwaukee's Hotel Schroeder. Among the speakers invited were Charles Reagan, Paramount assistant sales manager; Abram F. Myers, national Allied general counsel; William Scully, Universal general sales manager.

The unity-plan, insurance declassification, priorities, the Federal ban on building new taxes and the consent decree occupied attention at the meeting.

BLOCKS-OF-5 AND TRADE SHOWING CLAUSES CANCELLED FOR MINNESOTA

Federal Courts Grant Relief to Majors from Minnesota Law Requiring All Features Be Offered For Sale in That State

Faced with the alternative of breaking the United States Government's consent decree stipulations if they were to do business in Minnesota, the distributors, last Friday, were granted a petition of relief from the decree to allow them to meet that state's new statue compelling the Big Five to ignore the decree's blocks-of-five selling requirements, and, instead, under compulsion of Minnesota law, to offer for sale all product for a season.

United States District Judge Henry W. Goddard, in New York specifically granted the petition of Paramount Pictures, Inc., to be relieved from complying with decree Sections III and IB, covering trade showings of pictures before they are offered to exhibitors and the licensing of pictures in blocks of five.

In granting the distributor's application, Judge Goddard asked the attorneys for both Paramount and the U. S. Government to agree upon the form of an order. Immediately following the formal signing of the court order, on Monday, Paramount was free to license its pictures to exhibitors in Minnesota.

The Department of Justice, which had opposed the granting of the order at the hearing before Judge Goddard last Friday, included in it a provision that the court's action does not prejudice the Government's right to challenge the validity of the Minnesota law on the grounds that it violates the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, if it sees fit to do so later.

Law Called Unconstitutional

Paramount was represented in court by former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher who pointed out to the court that Paramount could not license pictures to exhibitors in Minnesota and comply with the consent decree in respect to Sections III and IV in view of the Minnesota law which was enacted April 26, 1941. He emphasized to Judge Goddard that under the obligations imposed on Paramount by the Minnesota law, Paramount was required to offer its entire season's output at one time, whereas under the consent decree Paramount could not offer pictures to exhibitors until they had been trade shown and then only in blocks of five.

Judge Thacher told the court that Paramount had a suit pending in Minnesota and other proceedings also were pending to determine the constitutionality of the Minnesota law. He argued that the law was unconstitutional and that Paramount should be relieved of complying with these sections of the decree during the pendency of the Minnesota court proceedings.

The consent decree expressly authorized the making of such application when the duties imposed by a State law were in conflict with the provisions of the consent decree.

Robert L. Wright, representing the United States Government, informed the court that the position of the Government was that the Minnesota law was unconstitutional and that the consent decree should be construed as permitting relief from provisions of the decree only when a state enacts a constitutional law which is in conflict with the decree provisions.

SHOPPING HOURS HURT FILM GROSSES

First run theatres in the downtown and shopping district of Baltimore, Ohio, are complaining that a recent policy by department stores, which remain open until 9 P.M. on Thursday nights, is affecting business at theatres on that evening. The store managers claim the extended hours are to accommodate thousands of defense workers employed at the various plants in that city.

Exhibitors, however, claim people are to tired to go to the theatre after shopping all evening and that the store employes, likewise, hasten home.

Judge Goddard ruled that Section XXIII of the consent decree envisaged a situation where a state law imposed an obligation upon a distributor which was in conflict with the obligations imposed upon it by the consent decree and he was therefore compelled to grant Paramount's application.

Indicating that the six major companies affected by the Minnesota anti-decree law do $3,000,000 annual business in the State, Paramount disclosed to Judge Goddard that its 1940-'41 business there amounted to $522,934.

Meanwhile, in Washington, it was said that the Department of Justice believed the Minnesota law banning blocks of five was not only unconstitutional but in violation of the Sherman Act. However, it contemplates no intervention in the Minnesota court proceedings at this time.

Officials of the Department explained that the Government's view was that expressed before Judge Goddard in New York last week. With the situation as it is, the Department does not feel that the fate of the consent decree itself is in question. If other companies follow the example set by Paramount and ask the Federal court for relief, Washington officials will maintain their current position, pointing out that they do not believe the law valid, but making no effort to prevent the companies from securing the same temporary relief in order that they may do business there.

Thomas A. Murray, former owner of the Thalia Theatre, Chicago, filed suit in the Federal District court in Chicago, last Saturday, for $1,000,000 damages, naming most of the producing companies and distributors and several individuals. The suit charged that the defendants had conspired to prevent the booking of first run films in the Thalia Theatre, over a period of years, in violation of the anti-trust laws, with the eventual result that he was forced out of business.

The complaint dates back to 1925, when the Milo Theatre was built in the Thalia neighborhood. Until then Mr. Murray's theatre had established itself as the leading theatre in the community and had enjoyed the privileges of first run product. After the Milo was built, Mr. Murray said, preference was given to the Milo in film buying and each year another distributor withdrew their pictures until January of this year when the only first run product available to the Thalia was one-third of the Republic Pictures output. Business at his theatre dropped each year, Mr. Murray said, until he was finally forced out of the picture by being dispossessed and losing everything. The theatre and building were sold at a foreclosure sale early this year and were bought by the operators of the Milo Theatre, his competition.

Named in the suit are the Balaban & Katz Corporation; Mid City Theatres, Inc.; Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; Barney Balaban; Morris G. Leonard; Louis Reinheimer; Milo Theatre Corporation; John L. Manta; Frank L. Reif; Van A. Nomikos; Loew's, Inc.; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation; 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation; United Artists Corporation; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc.; First National Pictures, Inc.; Universal Pictures, Inc.; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; Columbia Pictures Corporation; Republic Pictures Corporation; Monogram Pictures, Inc.; Monogram Pictures, Inc. of Illinois; Henri Ellman; Capitol Film Exchange, Inc.; RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and Publix Great States Theatres, Inc.

Asks Jury Trial

Explaining the position of Balaban & Katz as defendants in the case the bill reads: "Through the combination and said conspiracy each of the distributor defendants refused to entertain bids from the plaintiff for first run films but from 1927 to 1938 compelled the plaintiff to buy his films through the same booking agencies acting as buying agents for the Milo Theatre, to wit, the defendants Balaban & Katz, its subsidiaries and the defendant Reinheimer."

The bill further claims that "Balaban & Katz compelled the plaintiff to release its contractual rights to 30 films of defendant Paramount, then known as Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, for first run exhibition in the Thalia zone in the season 1925-26 so that such films could be licensed for such exhibition in the Milo Theatre, under threats by Balaban & Katz to use its mass buying power and its position in the industry to deprive the plaintiff of all first run films for the season 1926-27 unless he consented to release said films."

Before losing it Mr. Murray had operated the Thalia Theatre for 34 years. He is asking for a jury trial and if the case is decided in his favor he may collect triple damages under the law. Lester T. Murray is attorney for the plaintiff with Harold W. Norman, of Zimmerman and Norman, co-counsel.

The anti-trust suit of Henry Sork and Harry Block, operators of the Rio Theatres in Reading, Pa., and Schuylkill Haven, Pa., has been listed for preliminary hearing on November 17th in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia. The action, originally filed on the day that the consent decree was handed down, names as defendants the major distributors and the Warner and Comerford theatre circuits. Pre-trial testimony on the case was taken last Spring.

Complete denial of all charges against it is made in the findings of fact of Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., filed in Nashville, last Friday, in the District Court, in the Government's anti-trust suit against Crescent Amusement and affiliates.

Considered as the "third unit" in the alleged "buying monopoly" of Crescent and Rockwood Amusement, Robert L. Wright, chief Government counsel, has fought to keep this defendant in the suit although it operates only a small group of theatres in Alabama.

The "findings of facts," signed by W. H. Mitchell of Florence, Ala., counsel for Louis Rosenbaum and Mrs. Tony Sudekum, owners of the circuit, denies any affiliation whatever with any other circuit or group of theatres and asserts that Mr. Rosenbaum is solely responsible for the circuit's product franchises with Warner, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount, none of which contain "clearance" provisions or permit any special privileges to the exhibitor.

In Newark, N. J., five distributing companies and the MPPDA were eliminated last Friday from an anti-trust suit filed in February, 1940, by Westor Theatres and Janbert Amusement of West Orange, N. J. Federal Judge Walker ruled that the companies did not actually transact business in New Jersey in the terms of the statutes.

Janbert operates the Windsor Theatre. Plaintiff charged the defendants with operating a monopoly "to the disadvantage of independent exhibitors." Named in the case were the eight major companies. All were eliminated except Loew's, RKO and United Artists.

Decree on Midwest—Co-Operative Suit

In the suit of Midwest vs. Co-Operative Theatres, in Federal Court, Detroit, Judge Frank A. Picard, in his final text of the decree this week, allowed the Roxy and Mayfair Theatres to continue with present policy of three changes weekly, provided that only reissues, repeats, foreign and western pictures are used on the third change. Original opinion in the case restricted the theatres to two changes a week of "major and independent" product, but this issue has been clarified by the text of the decree, which further exempts present season film contracts from its terms.

Other clauses of the decree, such as finding Co-Operative in violation of anti-trust acts in the past and declaring the exhibition field distinctly interstate commerce for purposes of this case, follow the original opinion which was handed down several weeks ago.

Waxman Appeals In Anti-Trust

Harry I. Waxman, Atlantic City exhibitor, filed an appeal on Tuesday in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appcals in his anti-trust suit against Columbia, Warner Theatres and Weilland Lewis Circuit. The appeal is on the motion for an injunction denied by Fedcral Judge Guy K. Bard last September in the U. S. District Court. The action, on behalf of Mr. Waxman's Hollywood and Astor theatres, involves clearance and run of Columbia product in Atlantic City.

Universal Shifts Bookings

Universal has shifted bookings of its product scheduled for the RKO Palace in Chicago to the Balaban and Katz houses, Chicago and Roosevelt, as a result of congestion of product and the large number of Universal films available. "Unfinished Business" goes into the Chicago on November 14th and "Dakota Badlands" is slated for the Roosevelt on the same date. The Palace opened last Saturday with "It Started With Eve."

Alliance Theatres Lease Ten Washington Houses

Following several weeks spent on the coast, during which time a deal was made for the acquisition of ten theatres in the State of Washington, formerly operated by the Frederick Mercy, Sr., interests, Packey J. Dee, president, and S. J. Gregory, vice-president and general manager of the Alliance Theatre Corporation, Chicago, returned to their offices last week.

The company acquired the theatres on a 40-year lease and not on a six months' operating option as had been previously reported. Theatres included in the deal are the Liberty, Roxy and Capitol, Walla Walla; Liberty, Pasco; Roxy, Kennewick; Liberty, Sunnyside; Pix and Liberty, Toppenish, and the Pix and Liberty, Ellensburg, all in Washington.

Frederick Mercy, Jr., will remain with the new owners as general manager and buyer for the circuit with headquarters in Seattle. Ferd Nessell, who has been resident manager of the State Theatre, Anderson, Ind., has been transferred to Walla Walla where he will act as supervisor of the Washington circuit.

RKO Philadelphia Exchange Opened

Acting Mayor Bernard Samuel officially opened the new Philadelphia exchange of RKO Wednesday, October 22nd, by cutting the ribbon across the doorway of the new and modern exchange building. The Mayor headed a group of more than 300 exhibitors in the territory who attended the open house ceremonies. A buffet luncheon was served. Nat Levy, district manager; Charles Zagrans, branch manager; and Al Selig, publicity field representative, were hosts for RKO.

Ned E. Depinet, RKO vice-president in charge of distribution, was the guest of honor, and from the New York home office came S. Barret McCormick, Robert Mochrie, Harry Michaelson, William Savage, William J. McShea, M. G. Poller, Harry Gittelson and A. A. Schubart. Other RKO executives present were Robert Folliard, Washington branch manager; Herbert Greenblatt, Pittsburgh branch manager; and James Brennan, Trenton, N. J., district manager. From the Walt Disney office in New York were James E. Finney and William B. Levey.

Hollywood "Dissected" By Fact Film Makers

Hollywood's "Approach to the Documentary" was discussed Thursday evening at the regular meeting of the Association of Documentary Film Producers, at the Preview Theatre, New York.

Leader of the discussion was Theodore Strauss, New York Times. Other speakers invited were Willard Van Dyke, Joseph Krumgold.

Noel Coward Fined

Noel Coward, playwright, was fined $800 in London and court costs of $80 for violation of Britain's wartime finance regulations. Mr. Coward was charged with failing to hand over to the government a $5,000 United States two per cent treasury bond and with failing to report the ownership of $24,776 worth of securities held in the United States.

Independent Studio Locals Federating

With the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in some public duress because of the court ordeals of its leaders, and acting merely as adviser for its Hollywood studio locals, in current contract negotiations—those locals appeared this week possibly embracing another sort of federation, which will assure their autonomy, but nevertheless act as a clearing house of information and as a protective unit.

The new federation is called the Conference of Studio Unions. It was formed Monday. Eligible are all American Federation of Labor locals in studios, with autonomy from their internationals. This provision applies to ten IATSE studio locals.

The Conference constitution states its purpose: "to unite motion picture unions for the protection of the autonomy and democracy of each" and "to advance through joint consultation and action the economic welfare of motion picture unions and their members."

Members of unions in the Conference must respect picket lines.

Each local will have three members on the organization's board.

First to approve the federation was the Moving Picture Painters' Local, 644.

Autonomy for Exchange Locals

Locals representing film exchange employees will negotiate their own contracts to replace the master contract, expiring November 30th. This was decided at a meeting of the locals' representatives, in Kansas City, last week, presided over by Richard Walsh, vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, to which the Film Exchange Employees unions belong.

In New York, the CIO's "invasion" of the film industry progresses, with filing of a petition by the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, newly chartered, for a bargaining agency election sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board, at Loew's, Inc., home office.

Columbia home office personnel officials have already consented to such an election, which may be held this week, the Guild's spokesmen said.

In the same city, the Tremont Theatre, the Bronx, capitulated to the Empire State Operators Union, after a week of picketing. It signed a contract giving two men in the booth a 35 hour week, two weeks' vacation with pay, and pay of $40 per week.

The Will Horwitz theatres in Houston, Texas, raised salaries of all employees.

Claude F. Lee. Paramount's director of public relations, addressed the Minneapolis Ad Club on Wednesday on the subject of "The Romance of the Motion Picture Industry." Following this talk, Mr. Lee appeared on Thursday before the Rotary Club in Duluth, discussing the same subject. He expected to remain in that city until the end of this week to take part in festivities concerning the opening of "Skylark," at the

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Floyd Stone, our staff photographer, brings back from his still picture-taking rounds, the story of the Hollywood movie director who spent a young fortune on camera and darkroom equipment because his friends always talked photography and he thought he should compete.

Once started, he found the process much to his liking, but far too complicated. And he could not give up without losing 'face.' If he could only take pictures the easy way. . . .

The directorial impressario sent his colored valet to a local school of amateur photography, to learn all there is to know. Each night, after school, the director would cross-examine the valet. Eventually they started on field trips. And the director, with an authoritative wave of the hand, would point to where the valet should set up the camera on tripod, take a meter reading, make necessary adjustment of lens, insert cable releases, etc. When the scene was set, the shutter set properly by the valet, the director moved dramatically to the cable release, pressed and, bingo, he had taken a picture.

Managers applying at one well known independent theatre circuit in New York are handed an application blank which, among other things, asks whether the applicant is married, single, divorced or just separated; and asks what is the lowest salary the applicant can live on, etc. The topper asked of managers is the question: "What Is Showmanship?"

Because it felt that its production of Edgar Allan Poe's "The Tell-Tale Hand" is "a significant development in short subjects," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in New York, last Thursday, put on an extra-special preview, with cocktails and canapes, inviting Edgar Allen Poe, Jr., and the press.

By purest coincidence, we assume, on that same day, the editors of New Yorker magazine chuckled over Harry Hansen's little reportorial sympathizing in the New York World-Telegram, about how "Poe (Senior) rarely had enough to pay for a square meal; while his trousers were mended he had to take them off." As if even wealthy fellows like the New Yorker editors didn't have to do that.

The War Department has a super-super, extra-special streamlined clipping service of its own, in Washington. Generals and Major Domos hear everything that is said about the U. S. Army, in the press of the country, on radio and screen (newsreels) almost before press ink is dry or spoken word recorded.

This flossy unit of the Army's public relations bureau is officially known as the Intelligence and Analysis Branch; many call it the 'House of Magic'—it pulls rabbits out of hats.

The IAB first started out to give everyone in the War Department an hourly count of the pulse of the world news and the nation's reaction to what the Army was doing. Before long, however, the wondrous imagination of some IAB-ites galloped off in all directions, collecting some 20,000 newspaper clippings every week and monitoring both radio and screen. They even made available a special 'curb service,' providing reproducing equipment with a recorded playback of what was said where, right on the desk of any gentlemen General at the mere requesting flick of the General's telephone.

One General out in Chicago wanted to hear what was said about him in a radio broadcast and the House of Magic piped the record to him all the way from Washington. Another War Lord at the Capital even heard a right-on-the-spot play-by-play of that recent World's Series baseball debacle.

P. S.: The House of Magic is currently undergoing de-magication.

Variety Clubs Set Plans, Banquets

With the Pittsburgh Variety Club's annual dinner and dance successfully ended other Variety branches throughout the country are laying plans for their local affairs.

With Carter T. Barron, Loew's zone manager, general chairman, details for the Washington Variety Club's eighth annual banquet at the Hotel Willard, November 15th, are nearly complete. Walter Pidgeon, Hollywood film star, will be master of ceremonies and Gracie Fields, English musical comedy star, will head the show.

Committee chairmen include: Frank LaFalce, publicity; Harry Anger and Gene Ford, entertainment; Harry Somerville, special talent, hotel reservations and dinner; Sam Wheeler, tickets; Sidney Lust, program; Arch Engel, printing; Herberrt Sauber and Max Rosenberg, decorations; Fred Rohrs, reception; Guy Wonders and Joseph Morgan, distinguished guests; Clarke Davis, night club entertainment; James A. Pratt, projection; John Allen, out-of-town contacts; Angie Ratto and Wade Pearson, uniform personnel; Rudolph Berger, raffle; A. Julian Brylawski, finance, and the Revs. John K. Cartwright and John C. Palmer and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, chaplains.

At the annual banquet of the Pittsburgh Variety Club (see pictures on page 13), last week the new officers of the organization were not introduced because the recent election of directors has been declared invalid because of insufficient notification about a change of place for the election. Another election will be held November 10th at the club's headquarters.

Charlotte Banquet Set

Senator Albert Chandler of Kentucky, Governor Len G. Broughton of North Carolina and General Hugh A. Drum of the First Army, now engaged in southern maneuvers, are scheduled to attend the annual charity banquet of the Charlotte Variety Club on Saturday, November 8th, at the Hotel Charlotte.

Robert J. O'Donnell, first assistant national barker, and Paul Short, chief barker of the Dallas club, will also attend. Pat O'Brien is scheduled to appear at the after-dinner entertainment, and General William McGraw of Dallas will make the chief dinner speech. Barney Rappe and his orchestra will head the floor show.

The St. Louis Variety Club is planning a party at its new quarters in the Coronado Hotel November 15th. Arrangements are being made for at least one affair a month at the club. New officers are scheduled to be elected Friday, November 7th.

Steve Fitzgerald, manager of the Stratford theatre in Chicago, is the new president of the Warner Club in that city. He succeeds Al Blasko, who resigned when he was transferred to Milwaukee.

Philadelphia Group Meets

More than 1,500 persons were to attend a meeting at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, on Thursday evening at which the Projectionists and Theatrical Square Club of New York, a Mason order, were to be guests of the Golden Slipper Square Club of Philadelphia. A special train brought the members of the theatrical profession from New York, who were to stage a parade from the railroad station to the hotel.

On Monday night, the Variety Club of New England, Tent No. 23, moved to its new quarters at the Hotel Statler in Boston.

In Indianapolis the local Variety Club met Monday night to discuss the possibility of supplying milk to underprivileged children in Indianapolis schools. The Board of School Commissioners is conducting a survey to determine the extent of the need.

National Decency Legion Classifies 18 Pictures

Of the 18 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were found unobjectionable for general patronage, eight were approved for adults and three were classified as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage—"Arizona Cyclone," "Gentleman from Dixie," "The Stork Pays Off," "Target for Tonight," "Three Cockeyed Sailors," "Tonto Basin Outlaws," "Top Sergeant Mulligan." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults—"Jungle Man," "The Miracle Kid," "Moon Over Her Shoulder," "Public Enemies," "Shadow of the Thin Man," "Sundown," "South of Tahiti," "You Belong to Me." Class B, Objectionable in Part—"Blues in the Night," "Three Girls About Town," "Unholy Partners."

Two Premieres For "Blues"

Paramount's "Birth of the Blues" received a dual world premiere Friday evening, October 31st, in Memphis' Malco Theatre, and in New Orleans' Saenger. With the crowds outside a theatre on world premiere night regarded as important, virtually, as those within—inasmuch as they are regarded as certain customers—it was estimated 40,000 milled outside the Saenger, and 22,000 outside the Malco.

Paramount stars made personal appearances at both openings. At New Orleans, were Patricia Morrison, Frances Gifford, Charles Ruggles, Phil Regan; at Memphis, Ellen Drew, Richard Arlen, Martha O'Driscoll, Phillip Terry and Jean Parker. In both cities, the premieres were "built up" with receptions for the Hollywood personalities, and Paramount executives, with radio broadcasts, banners, parades, banquets, and the like.

The Hollywood luminaries arrived at New Orleans by yacht, from the airport across Lake Ponchartrain. Governor Sam Jones greeted them; so did city politicos; they all paraded through the city's streets, a la Mardi Gras.

A feature of the Memphis ballyhoo was the dedication of a plaque to that city's "favorite son" William C. Handy, by Miss Parker.

PRC Sales Ahead 100%—Greenblatt

"Sales for the 1941-42 program are 100 per cent ahead of last year's," Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager of Producers Releasing Corporation, said before leaving last Friday, October 31st, on a tour of key city exchanges. "Judging by the volume of new accounts that PRC has already acquired, my estimate made in April that PCR would serve 6,000 accounts this season, against 4,000 last year, not only will be attained, but will be exceeded."

Mr. Greenblatt said the increase in volume of sales and new accounts was due to the record established by the company last season of having delivered all the pictures promised on schedule, and that continuation of this schedule of delivery had brought about greater confidence on the part of exhibitors, both circuit and unaffiliated, as to the stability and reliability of the company.

7,000 Accounts Seen

Mr. Greenblatt said that a contributing factor to the increase of sales this year had been the closing of contracts for the new program by a number of large circuits, in addition to the new individual accounts, and that negotiations were being concluded which should result in the servicing by PRC for the 1941-42 season of 7,000 active accounts.

While on tour Mr. Greenblatt will visit the following exchanges: Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Atlanta, Little Rock, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles. In Hollywood Mr. Greenblatt will confer with George Batcheller, in charge of feature production, and Sigmund Neufeld, in charge of western production.

Prior to his departure for the eight week tour Mr. Greenblatt held a sales conference at the executive offices in New York on Thursday and Friday, October 30th and 31st.

Franchise holders attending were: Herb Given, Philadelphia; George Gill, Washington; Miss A. V. O'Donnell and Bill Flemion, Detroit; Harry Asher, Boston; Milton Lefton, Pittsburgh; Lee Goldberg, Cleveland; G. B. Topper, Chicago, and Bert Kulick, New York.

Ross On Latin-American Tour

Harry A. Ross, president of Ross Federal Service, left New York last week for an extended survey of Latin-America. He will study theatre receipts and methods, and marketing in that territory, generally.

The survey has been discussed for two years, and suggested many times by Ross clients.

Mexico is Mr. Ross' first stop.

He is accompanied by Clifford Ross, the company's vice-president.

Plains Theatre Opens

After several postponements the new Plains theatre in Plains, Pa., had its formal opening on October 24th, with many industry men from Philadelphia, New York and the local region in attendance. The 550-seat house, costing $60,000, was built by Jerome and Joseph Engel. They operate the Lincoln theatre, only other house in that town, and the Family theatre in Glen Lyons. S. J. Moskowitz of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was the architect and Anthony Grosek of Plains, general contractor.

The Face on the Cutting Room Floor

When David Wark Griffith and Billy Bitzer at Biograph were teaching the camera to tell stories they used many close-ups.

They found that a twitching lip, distraught hands twisting a kerchief, the furtive finger in the discard, the like of that, sometimes could tell more than a stage full of actors.

Competitors, jealously unhappy, were sarcastic.

"Griffith chops his actors up into pieces," they said scornfully "He hires the whole actor and he ought to use him," they argued.

The ridiculousness of the notion serves, however, to stress a certain logic which it overstates. This comes to point here in that policy of Republic Pictures Corporation which insists that what it buys must be delivered on the screen.

Republic has the unique policy of buying a story only when it is to be used, employing players when they are to be cast, hiring directors when they are to direct.

A set is built after it is in the script, and the script is what the picture is about. Changes of mind and shifts in construction are made on paper, not on the stage. This makes it unnecessary for the editing department to leave costly sequences, and faces, on the cutting room floor. Republic production is not exploratory, not experimental. Shooting begins when it has been decided what is to be shot at.

A consequence of that shows up in the bookkeeping. There is no "dead horse" to be buried in the cost sheets, no inventory to be charged off there and passed on to the trade in sales quotas. The cost is the cost of the picture and the pictures are for the picture, on the screen, not on the cutting room floor.

This is becoming widely known. Ernest Heyn, editor of Photoplay-Movie Mirror, recently wrote concerning "the intriguing example of Herbert Yates, who . . . can make a picture for $100,000 that will cost a major $250,000 because of overhead so cleverly avoided by Yates."

No marquee ever sold overhead with success. The customers can't see it.

KALMINE, TAPLINGER, SILVER AND OTHERS IN WARNER PROMOTIONS

Boosting of Executive Personnel Follows Raising of Bernhard, Kalmenson and Blumenstock; Six New District Managers

Continuing realignments of personnel, bringing additional promotions in the production, distribution and exhibition branches of Warner Brothers, were effected by the company this week.

Harry M. Kalmine, Warner zone manager in Pittsburgh for the last nine years, was named assistant general manager of the Warner Circuit by Joseph M. Bernhard, new vice president in charge of Warner distribution and theatre operations.

Robert S. Taplinger, head of Warner's studio publicity since 1937, was appointed national manager of publicity, a newly created post.

Alex Evelove, Mr. Taplinger's assistant for the past year, was named to succeed him as chief of studio publicity.

Moe Silver, Albany zone manager for Warner Theatres succeeds Mr. Kalmine in Pittsburgh. C. J. Latta, who was assistant to Mr. Kalamine in Pittsburgh, was named to succeed Mr. Silver in the Albany post. Joseph Feldman, in charge of publicity in Pittsburgh, was named assistant to Mr. Silver in charge of theatre operation and publicity, and Harry Feinstein, his assistant, placed in charge of booking and buying.

Six new sales district managers were named.

These follow in sequence the executive appointments announced last week of Mr. Bernhard as vice president; Benjamin Kalmenson as general sales manager and Mort Blumenstock as national manager of advertising, which moves followed the resignation of Gradwell L. Sears from the general sales managership.

In Business 26 Years

Mr. Kalmine has been in the theatrical business since 1915 and was successively music boy, stage hand, treasurer, manager and road-show manager. At the close of World War I, he operated his own theatre and later was placed by Louis Rosenthal in charge of 16 houses in New Jersey. He was district manager for Fabian, then joined Warners and served in managerial posts as head booker for the circuit in New York. He was made zone manager for the company in New Jersey and later in Pittsburgh.

The Taplinger appointment is in line with the Warner realignment of its promotion organization and follows the advancement of Mr. Blumenstock to the post of national manager of advertising and coordinator of all sales promotion, merchandising and exploitation.

Before joining Warner Brothers as studio publicity manager, Mr. Taplinger was assistant publicity director at Columbia Broadcasting System. He arrived in New York last Saturday from Burbank to take over his new duties, one of which will be, it is said, the establishment of an information bureau embracing data of every description attendant to the production of over 10,000 Warner pictures since the beginning of the film company's organization.

The appointment of Mr. Kalmine was announced at the meeting in New York last Thursday of Warner home office executives and zone managers. Among the zone managers present were James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; John Payette, Washington, and home officials including Clayton Bond, Stewart McDonald, Sam Morris, Harry Goldberg, Leonard Schlesinger, Abel Vigard, Harry Rosenquest and Frank Phelps.

On Friday, Edward M. Schnitzer, Warner Eastern district manager, was named metropolitan district manager with supervision over New York, New Jersey and Brooklyn. Other appointments giving added duties and wider authority were announced by Mr. Kalmenson. They include:

Robert Smeltzer, central district manager with supervision over Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit; Fred Jack, Southwestern district manager, supervising Dallas, New Orleans and Oklahoma City; Ralph McCoy, Southeastern district manager, supervising Atlanta, Charlotte and Memphis; Rud Lohrenz, Midwestern district manager, supervising Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines, and Henry Herbel, West Coast district manager, supervising Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City.

Roberts in Dallas

Doak Roberts replaces Mr. Jack at Dallas as branch manager; Sid Rose replaces Mr. Lohrenz as Chicago district manager; Fred Beiersdorf replaces Mr. Smeltzer as Washington district manager, and W. E. Callaway replaces Mr. Herbel as Los Angeles district manager. Roy Haines, Eastern and Canadian division manager, has had direct supervision of the Boston, New Haven, Buffalo and Albany branches added to his duties.

No appointment was made to the post of Southern and Western division manager vacated by Mr. Kalmenson on his recent promotion to the sales managership. He said at the meeting, however, that the changes announced completed all moves that had been contemplated and that the field forces would function from now on under the realigned setup.

The meetings ended on Saturday and all field men returned to their posts over the week-end. Other Warner executives who attended the sessions were: Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production; Albert Warner, Joseph Bernhard, Charles Einfeld, Sam Schneider, Mort Blumenstock, Robert Taplinger, Roy Haines, Arthur Sachson, Al Schwalberg and Mike Dolid.

E. C. Pearlstein, with the Cleveland Warner organization for the past 12 years, and chief of the theatre publicity department for more than two, resigned last Friday. His post is being taken by J. Knox Strahan, Warner city manager in Portsmouth. Other staff changes in the theatre division effective as of November 1st are: Bill Dworski from manager of the Palace, Lorain, to manager of the LeRoy, Portsmouth; John LaDue from manager of the Strand, Akron, to succeed Dworski in Loraine. Millard Ochs, a newcomer, becomes manager of the Strand in Akron.

"MOVIE QUIZ" IDEA BROUGHT TO SCREEN

Designed to capitalize upon the vogue for radio quiz programs in behalf of exhibitors, "Movie Quiz," a series of shorts utilizing the essentials of question-and-answer programs is announced by R. U. McIntish, Hollywood transcription manufacturer, for early preview.

Produced, written and conducted by Grant Withers and Jack Harvey, the films depict a series of questions, principally observation tests, for patrons to answer by means of reply cards furnished on admission to the theatre. These are constructed in such manner that answers may be indicated without turning up the houselights.

Consolidated Film Nets $208,758

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and subsidiaries reported on Monday a net profit of $208,758 for the quarter ended September 30th, 1941, after depreciation and provision of $89,468 for federal income taxes. This net profit is equal to 52 cents a share on 400,000 shares of $2 preferred stock.

This figure compares with $163,497 or 41 cents a share on preferred reported for September quarter of 1940, and $204,738 or 51 cents a share on preferred for the quarter ended June 30th of this year. For nine months ended September 30th, 1940, indicated net profit, as compiled from the company's quarterly reports, was $587,876, equal to $1.47 a share on preferred, comparing with $538,265 or $1.34 a preferred share in the first nine months of 1940.

United Amusement Declares Dividend

United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., of Montreal, which owns or is affiliated with 25 theatres in Montreal and Quebec, declared a dividend on Monday of 40 cents per share, payable November 29th, to shareholders of record. The last pre-war dividend payment in May, 1939, was 30 cents per share, indicating a 10 cent increase per share for the current payment.

Sylvan Harris, manager of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in New York, sent a notice of warning to all local SMPE members on Tuesday that members of various committees and some officers of the organization in the metropolitan area "are being approached by a photographic concern which claims to have the permission of the Society to take their pictures. The subterfuge is apparently used as a means of gaining entre to a possible client." Mr. Harris warned members that the Society has not authorized such photos.

Gelber, Basson for Office

Herman Gelber, recording secretary of Local 306, New York projectionists union, has announced his candidacy for nomination as president of the union opposing Joseph D. Basson. Running for his present post in 1939, Mr. Gelber polled the largest single vote in the history of the Local. Elections are held the last Wednesday in December according to the Local's constitution.

Broadway Plays Get Bookings At Army Camps

Following organization of Camp Shows, Inc., the non-profit agency formed by the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy to provide entertainment for the nation's servicemen, 400 unemployed actors, mostly members of Actors' Equity Association, met last Friday at the Union Methodist Church in New York to organize theatrical groups which eventually will seek employment by Camp Shows.

A committee of ten was appointed by the actors to help cast the shows, register available talent and note the many productions in order to avoid duplication. Members of the committee are: Adele Jerome, Bryan Gilbert, Bobby Winslow, James Gelb, John Marlieb, Robert Porterfield, Joseph Olney, Jack Lynd and Lou Cooper.

The new organization is headed by Eddie Dowling, producer and actor, and is to be financed by the USO. This arrangement has been made at the request of the War and Navy Departments. Those named as incorporators are: Walter Hoving, chairman of the board of USO; Harper Sibley, president of USO; Mr. Dowling; Lawrence Phillips, executive vice president of Camp Shows, and Clarence Michalis, treasurer.

The shows presented by the group will be routed from New York on a circuit which will include 186 Army camps and Naval stations with a variety of theatrical performances every two weeks. Leading screen, stage and radio stars have agreed to cooperate to make the new show venture a success and two pools of talent will be formed, one in New York and one in Hollywood to expedite scheduling of artists.

Responding to Eddie Dowling's request, Broadway producers already have agreed to contribute their late hits and service gratis to Camp Shows. Max Gordon, producer of "My Sister Eileen," offered to produce this play in spite of the fact that he has three companies now touring the country. Brock Pemberton will produce "Cuckoos on the Hearth," currently on the Broadway boards. Wharton and Gable will stage "Charley's Aunt," comedy hit of last season, and Richard Aldrich has offered his services in the production of one or more shows.

NBC Organizes Defense Plan

Niles Trammel, president of the National Broadcasting Company, announced last Friday that NBC had adopted a four-point radio defense program calling for mobilization of the joint resources of the network and its 243 affiliated stations. This announcement followed a two-day conference of NBC officials and 14 regional representatives of the company's Red and Blue affiliates.

The first point in the program calls for development of a co-ordinated plan of operations by NBC and its affiliated stations "to insure maximum efficiency of service through effective cooperation with all national defense agencies." Other points call for study of plans for maintenance of public morale and physical well-being during any unexpected emergency; maintenance of normal broadcasting schedules as far as possible in an emergency, and establishment of a clearing house of information

Leo Mishkin Heads New York Film Critics

The New York Film Critics in session at the Artists and Writers Club on Monday, November 3rd, elected Leo Mishkin of the Morning Telegraph, president of the organization, succeeding Bosely Crowther of the New York Times. Herbert Cohn of the Brooklyn Eagle was reelected secretary, while two new members were admitted, Louis Levitas of PM and Milton Meltzer of the Daily Worker.

The meeting set January 4th for the critic's annual cocktail party at which a plaque and scroll will be presented to the producer and director of the film which they vote the year's best.

New Equity Pact In Lawyers' Hands

The two-year basic agreement between Actors' Equity Association and the League of New York Theatres which was approved by both boards last month had not been signed at midweek, for the reason that lawyers for Equity and the League were still working on the "verbiage" of the agreement.

There are no radical changes in the pact, Equity reports, but some revisions were made, principally extension of the one-year period to two years; a clause regarding run-of-the-play contracts; repayment of actors' salaries while playing in Canada, and stipulation concerning actors' commissions.

Regarding run-of-the-play contracts, a maximum of five weeks is set from the date of the first public performance "within which the manager makes his decision as to whether he would present the play the subsequent season and thereby retain his minimum employment obligation or so notify the actor if he would not present it and cancel his obligation, but in no event longer than at the end of the second week in New York City." This means that if a production should open cold in New York City, then the producer within the first two weeks of the play's run would have to exercise or cancel the option.

Salaries Adjusted

Because there is as much as 10 and 11 per cent difference in the exchange rate of Canadian money, due to the war-time crisis, repayment of actors' salaries while playing in Canada was set up as follows: on salaries up to $250 weekly, the manager is to pay the differential; that between $250 and $500 the differential is split between the actor and the manager; that on salaries of $500 and over the actor absorbs the differential. Both sides have agreed that this is an "equitable arrangement."

The difference in broadcasting rates between Equity and the American Federation of Radio Artists minimums will continue, meaning that in all cases where any play or any part of a play that an Equity member is appearing in, is broadcast over the radio, all actors shall receive not less than one-eighth of their respective contractual salaries, which in no event shall be less than the established AFRA minimum.

Concerning actors' commissions, which has been a controversial pique for a long time, the new agreement stipulates that if any Equity member negotiates directly with a producer with no agent participating, the actor shall not be obligated to pay commissions for such engagement, neither shall the producer compel the actor to sign any contract with the agent; but if the producer, because of any arrangement that may exist between himself and any agent, feels that the agent is entitled to and must receive a commission, then it is the producer that shall pay such commission and not the actor.

The basic agreement will extend for two years to August 30th, 1943, but all contracts entered into prior to the actual signing of the pact will not come within the new regulations, since the agreement will not be retroactive.

MacDougall Heads Film Unit

Lieutenant Jack MacDougall has been placed in charge of the Canadian Army Film Unit overseas. Previously a motion picture director with Associated Screen Studios of Montreal, he left for overseas last year. His new appointment will provide newsreel and propaganda film coverage of Canadian army units on active service.

Universal Net At $4,000,000

Universal's earnings for the year ended November 1st, according to Wall Street sources, Tuesday, were estimated at approximately $4,000,000, before Federal income and excess profits' taxes are deducted. This is one of the best years in the company's history, it is said. Net profit last year was $2,390,772, after Federal taxes, and profit for the fiscal year ended October 28th, 1939, was $1,153,321.

For the fiscal year ended October 29th, 1938, which was the first report following inauguration of the company's present management, headed by Nate J. Blumberg as president, Universal reported a loss of $591,178. The company's loss for the two preceding fiscal years was $3,000,000.

The $4,000,000 estimated earnings for the 12-month period just ended indicates earnings of $1,250,000 before Federal taxes for the final quarter.

Altec Service has been appointed to service the sound projection equipment of the Roxy Theatre in New York. Irving Lesser, managing director, and Jerry H. Littenberg, Altec supervisor, negotiated the deal.

BRITISH MANPOWER PANEL LEAVES 2,500 MEN TO STAFF ALL STUDIOS

400 Technicians of Military Age To Be Called Up Before April; Women To Be Trained for Key Jobs; Production Cut Seen

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

With the industry's manpower panel, as it has come to be called, having concluded its labors, and with the aid of the Government spokesmen and technical experts, compiled and agreed at long last upon a statement of its views, the production industry now has some idea of what its fate may be. That it is not necessarily going to be a rosy one, that the situation may progressively worsen as the men go forth to battle and the mechanics of picture making become more difficult, is the view taken in enlightened circles.

Net result of the findings of the manpower panel, which has been deliberating no less than five months, will be that between now and April next 400 key technicians of military age will be called to the Colors, some 450 in a like category having their callup deferred. To these must, of course, be added some 2,000 workers in all grades, men over military age and men unfit for military service—as one cynical trade spokesman on the inner circle has called them "the lame, the halt and the blind"—leaving a general total of about 2,500 technicians, craftsmen and general laborers, on whose shoulders will rest the burden of wartime motion picture production.

Women To Be Trained

It is expected that in most cases female labor will be trained to replace the men already called up. The exact extent of this regiment of women cannot be foreshadowed. Much will depend on the adaptability of women to technical tasks.

Though some seventy to seventy-five films are mentioned in the Panel's report as being planned for the forthcoming year, though pious lipservice is paid to the principle of continuity of production, with specific reference to these odd six dozen, the figures of technicians likely to be available, coupled with the inaccessibility of studio space, suggests that though there is no likelihood of extinction, and though it is a potential fact that the forthcoming months will see a share of world market films being made here, production is likely, from now till war's end, to be reduced to what the transport corporations call a skeleton service.

Whilst quantity may be lessened there is indication that quality and marketability may be intensified. The plans of the American companies here, plus their advantage in financial and technical resources, suggest that despite the limits on available labor, big pictures may, as intended, be made here. British companies, too, are likely to work on the principle of few good ones than many indifferent.

With particular concessions made to the documentary and newsreel sections, who are being allowed to retain directors, producers and cameramen—save those under 26—the immense stimulus in the shorts section may well be allowed to continue, with a consequent boost to MOI propaganda and a maturing of a field already rapidly expanding in the creative sense.

The Ministry of Labor Committee, for it was the MOL which summoned it to examine the labor situation in the studios, and to make its recommendations on military callups, has been sitting since April last. It has on it representatives of the production interests, of the labor unions and of the various Government departments, the Ministry of Labor, the Board of Trade and the Ministry of Information. Representatives of the Services have held a watching brief. Trade experts working in State departments have advised.

In a secrecy which nervously covered deliberations which need never have been hidden from the public eye, but which provoked constant and harmful inaccuracies in the local press, it has dragged on its discussions, probed the industry's reserves, and examined its future plans. Disagreements not only on the Committee itself, but within the industry sections, have helped delay agreement on what they should offer the Government as a holocaust of manpower, what they should ask to be allowed retain.

Late last month Mr. Sharpe of the Ministry of Labor and Secretary of the Committee, drew up a report for the members to sign. It called for a registration for service of all available men, save a core of 450. Its effect would have been swift and ruthless. With hardly time to recover breath, production denuded of its keymen might have undergone and suffered a virtual collapse.

Agree to Compromise

Eventually this week a compromise report was agreed upon, a report which to the moment of writing still remains nominally confidential, but the content of which is known to everybody concerned and a great many beyond

It suggests the immediate callup of all men under 26, a total of 40. In other age groups another 50 are to be released.

At the end of the year yet another 110 will leave.

In April the largest total, 200, will be called.

A deferment of at least six months is granted a core or residue of 450 key technicians, who may again be the subject of further deferment.

Meanwhile the Government will do what it can to assist the studios in finding alternative female labor, which will be trained in advance to replace the men to be called later. There is, however, no guarantee that if this female labor is not yet trained, the men will be further deferred.

There are understood to be over 3,000 men of all labor grades employed in British studios, of whom 1,100 are liable for military service. From these deductions are made of 70 medically exempt, and 220 deferred already and who, it is hoped, will, for certain reasons, remain deferred.

If the situation becomes difficult, or should complications arise, it is agreed that another committee be appointed at the end of the period —in April next—to go further into the situation and recommend accordingly.

With the Services and the Ministry of Labor almost adamant in their insistent call on men, the MOL doing its duty by the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, and the latter three obviously thinking in terms of their respective and highly active film units, industry men here in many cases consider that they have not done too badly, that whereas they might have lost all they have, in fact, retained much.

It is obvious, none the less, that it will be difficult, if not well nigh impossible, for all the ambitious programmes prepared by American and British companies to be carried out to the letter. There will have to be amendment. This despite the Committee's categoric statement that they do not wish anything to interfere with the present output of films.

In actual fact, of course, the report changes little or nothing. The same processes of callup and the same processes of production against difficulties will continue. The industry has been short staffed for some time and has been progressively losing its men. It will stay short staffed and will continue progressively to lose its men. If there is a deterioration it will not be immediate or catastrophic.

Films Act Remains

The Films Act remains on the Statute Book. Exhibitors and renters still have quota obligations, a fact which the Americans have not hesitated to remind the manpower panel and the Government men during the sittings.

It is not improbable that the President of the Board of Trade, with the manpower situation cleared of its cobwebs, may be moved to a reconsideration of the quota law, and possibly to some amendment or adjustment. Pressed for an elucidation of his intentions not so many weeks ago, he sidestepped a categoric statement, until he had had time to consult with the other Ministries, notably the Minister of Labor.

Meanwhile some collaboration is promised by the Minister of Information, Brendan Bracken, who recently asked the producers to give him an account of their complete plans, their resources and their difficulties, an account which to date, well over a fortnight afterwards, they have not been able to compile. Assistance in getting artists released from the Forces, and in securing studio space at present "frozen," is the sort of assistance he can render, and which he is very likely to do.

It would be no negligible contribution.

SUNDAY SHOW TAX NETS £12,000

Over £12,000 was received by the Cinematograph Fund during the year ended March 31st under the Sunday Entertainments Act compared with £9,564 in the previous year. The amount represents receipts of the tax levied on all Sunday shows.

Of this total, £9,750 was paid to the British Film Institute, including £400 to cover damage due to enemy action.

Three Reappointed To CBC Board

J. T. Thorson, minister of national War services, has announced the reappointment, for three-year terms, of three members of the board of governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Company. Those reappointed are J. Wilfred Godfrey and Rev. Cannon W. E. Fuller, both of Halifax, and Adrien Pouliet of Laval University, Quebec City.

Mr. Godfrey, CBC governor since 1936, is a member of the board of finance committee. Rev. Cannon Fuller was first appointed in 1937 while Mr. Pouliet was named to the board two years ago. One vacancy still remains on the board occasioned by the death of Alan Plaunt of Ottawa.

CANADA EXTENDS PRICE-PEGGING TO INCLUDE CEILING ON ADMISSIONS

Decree Establishing Maximum Theatre Admissions Comes Unexpectedly — Government Set Prices for Commodities

The Canadian Government, through its War Time Price and Trade Board, on Tuesday, set a "ceiling" admission to be charged by motion picture theatres. It is to be the maximum admission charged during the period between September 15th and October 11th, and will apply for the war's duration, it was disclosed in Ottawa. The decree, which goes into effect November 17th, does not prevent reduction of prices at any time, but no increase of any kind for similar regular performances will be permitted.

It is understood that no control has been established by the Board over rentals to be charged by exchanges for films, but the rates for advertising accessories are stabilized at highest charges during the four-weeks period.

Some theatres in Canada recently raised prices one or two cents to avoid the "old copper" change nuisance, and as this was done after the basic period, during which the ceiling was set, they will have to drop their prices back to the original admission charge. Federal and provincial authorities, it is said, will not increase or impose new gross taxes for the war's duration.

Theatres to Benefit from Pegging of Commodities

by W. M. GLADISH

in Toronto

The Government originally "pegged" prices on a wide range of foodstuffs, commodities and services and also practically all wages and salaries, the basis to be the prices and pay in effect during the four weeks ending October 11th. These limitations are to be the maximum retail prices until further notice, apparently to the end of the war, while wage and salary increases are taboo with the proviso that the cost-of-living bonus plan now in effect will be subject to review and revision every three months. The whole plan of "pegging" goes into effect Monday, November 17th with penalities attached for non-observance.

The announcement, on October 18th, was hailed with satisfaction by persons of limited income and those on moderate salary, for whom advancing prices loomed as a problem. Undoubtedly there will be strenuous objections from some quarters—organized labor, for one.

Regardless of the effect—if any—which the Tuesday Governmental decree fixing theatre admission maximums might have on gross income, it is generally believed in the Dominion that the recent order pegging consumer prices on commodities and other items will eventually benefit Canadian theatre business.

Within the scope of the broad decree is the fixing of rents for all kinds of properties and in all places, boom towns or not. This, too, is expected to have a steadying influence on income and overhead for householders and commercial enterprises, a factor that could help the theatre business, directly and otherwise.

With the fixing of maximum retail prices and wages comes the thought that family conditions are better in the matter of employment. Unemployment relief in many cities and towns has been reduced already to a 10-year minimum, and more members of the average family are now working, including many housewives, sisters and youngsters.

The new code will not prevent more members of the average family from getting and keeping jobs at a fixed wage, and, the more at work, the greater income for the family, and more money for family amusements.

In World War I, the cost of living advanced more quickly than increase in pay and those with fixed income really had in hand—there was little except for living necessities. With potatoes at $4.50 per bag in Toronto; eggs $1 per dozen and butter 70c per lb., there was not much left for comforts or amusements except among munition workers and other "preferred" classes, whose pay leaped to $15 per day—after the war their pay dropped to $2 per day, but the high living cost remained for months.

To Balance Living Cost

The new living code, if it works as the Government promises, will see reasonable prices and rents, moderate and steady wages and maximum employment.

If one does not have to pay more than $1.25 for a bag of potatoes; 45c for eggs and 36c for butter—and one has a steady wartime job, he will be able to take the family to the movies a couple of times a week.

This is definitely the prospect that is held out to theatres in Canada, particularly in industrial districts where employment is high. The farmers, always the last to gain a benefit, will finally enjoy the returns from maintained urban employment conditions and they, too, are to receive the special consideration of the Government, it is promised.

With the United States Government virtually putting a clamp on theatre construction because of priority for war needs, the position in Canada, where there has been a ban on new commercial projects, including extensive equipment installations, since last May is of special interest.

Whereas, with the creation of Odeon Theatres of Canada, Ltd., as a competitor of Famous Players Canadian, a tense theatre building "war" was in immediate prospect early last spring, the situation now is that not one new theatre will be in any stage of completion by the end of the year. Instead of a lively building race between those interests, or on the part of independent exhibitors, there will not be one new theatre under construction anywhere in Canada when New Year's rolls around.

The few straggling projects, long delayed since the embargo went into effect, will have been finished by that time and the theatre business will have assumed a condition of status quo until war drums are laid aside.

SURVEY REVEALS 1939 PROJECTION OUTPUT

The value of photographic apparatus and materials, including projection equipment, manufactured in a single year, was placed by the United States Census Bureau at $133,899,000. The number of establishments was 160. The figure was based on production during 1939 and was obtained as part of the Bureau's usual two-year survey of the industry.

The survey also showed the value of vending, amusement, and other coin-operated machines, manufactured during 1939, to be $25,695,000.

Priorities Also Hit New Brunswick

by VICTOR SERVICE

in St. Johns, N. B.

A priorities on theatre seats has developed and is stalling deliveries for four months, with the possibility of the ban being extended still further.

Indications are that the governmental curb on instalment buying will affect theatre business, according to local theatremen. They contend that establishing one third as the minimum down-payment, and the balance in 12 months, will reduce the spending money of those buying in instalments.

A move to open one of St. John's theatres on Sundays to men of the Canadian army, navy, air force and merchant marine, allowing one guest each, has been opposed by Franklin and Herschorn, operating the local Mayfair and Regent theatres. The circuit takes the same stand it took last winter in Halifax, N. S., where it operates the Family and Community, viz, (1) That it is unfair to expect theatre owners to turn over their houses for free shows to men of the war services and their friends, while the soldiers, sailors and airforcemen must pay for all other commodities. (2) That allowing free admissions to pictures cheapens the value of the shows on week-nights, and reduces patronage on pay days; and, (3) That the theatre owners and their staffs want the day of rest. However, if Sunday night shows are essential in the maintenance of morale among the servicemen, Franklin and Herschorn propose setting admission prices for Sunday nights the same as on week nights, and with the same length of program, and with all proceeds turned over to war welfare and charities.

Warner Bros. brought an extra thrill to wartime Halifax, N. S., when a location crew of about 40 descended on the Atlantic coastal city. They were working on some sequences in "Captains of the Clouds," a story of bushland pilots in the Canadian air force. Jimmy Cagney stars in the production, and, in the script, he crashes his Hurricane into a German Messershmitt, sacrificing his life and the aircraft to save others. The midair collision went through, but there was no Messershmitt in it. Both planes were Hurricanes, and with one of them altered to look like a German fighter, including all the markings. The Haligonians thought they were being attacked from the air when they saw the disguised Hurricane.

Universal Buys "Spoilers"

Frank Lloyd and Jack Skirball will produce the "The Spoilers," by Rex Beach for Universal release with Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott and John Feldman. Lee Marcus will be associate producer. Tom Reed will write the screenplay. Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Skirball are at present finishing "River Lady."

BROADCASTERS SUE U.S., CHARGING FCC WITH 'WRECKING' THE NETWORKS

Ask Injunction to Stay Enforcement of Commission Rules Ordering Abandonment of Network and Options on Time

Challenging its power, wisdom, and regulations, two major broadcasting chains last week began an "all-out" struggle against the Federal Communications Commission.

They went into New York's Federal Court Thursday, October 30th, for a temporary injunction against the Commission's May 2nd regulations. which are to take effect November 15th, and which, according to the companies, will wreck the broadcasting industry.

The companies are the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System. The first hearing on their suits will be November 7th.

Practices Condemned

The FCC May 2nd orders, issued to "break up" alleged monopoly, included an order that the NBC divest itself of one of its two networks, the Red or Blue. The Commission at that time also condemned chain broadcasting practices; for instance, the inability of an affiliate station to carry the programs of a competitive network and the option a chain has on the major time of its affiliate.

There was considerable verbal sniping following the FCC list of regulations. The broadcasters termed them beyond the authority of the Commission, as well as unfair and impractical. They also split among themselves and Mutual endorsed the FCC.

On October 11th, the FCC suspended its ruling indefinitely that the NBC rid itself of one network and it amended other regulations.

This palliative, if that was the intention, came too late, or meant nothing, apparently; for the machinery of court action had started; and, in a statement last week, the CBS asserted the amendments were merely part of the whole FCC framework of orders, incompatible with current radio operations.

Only last week, James L. Fly, FCC chairman, told newsmen the May 2nd orders would take effect November 15th, unless "formal application" for deferment came from the networks. He added the Commission by itself would not delay.

At that time, early in the week, with rumors of CBS and NBC court attacks rumbling, spokesmen at the latter company intimated they understood the FCC would not attempt enforcement of its rules, if the chains went to the courts.

In its complaint Thursday, Columbia asserted "Congress never has conferred upon the Commission the broad powers it now usurps" and that "the proposed changes are arbitrary and capricious, and would wreck the present structure of American broadcasting."

The companies seek the temporary injunction to the end that the FCC rules be suspended while a three judge statutory court makes an abiding ruling.

A statement from Niles R. Tramell, NBC president, read: "National Broadcasting Company has commenced this suit with great reluctance, especially in view of upset national and world affairs which require the diligent attention of governmental agencies to matters of pressing concern. But since the promulgation of the order of the Federal Communications Commission, of which we complain, we have exerted every effort to get relief from the Commission so as to avoid the death-knell of the present American system of network broadcasting. In this, we have been unsuccessful.

"With the approach of November 15, the effective date of the Commission's order, we are compelled therefore to turn to the courts for the protection of our rights. No other course was left open to us."

There are two other plaintiffs, associated with the chain plaintiffs. They are the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society, and the Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company. The first named operates WOW, Omaha; the latter operates WHAM, Rochester.

Mr. Trammel filed an affidavit with the NBC complaint, noting that its Red and Blue networks comprise 233 stations; that the FCC divorce and other orders would so abrogate the contracts between the company and its affiliates, that serious loss would accrue to both.

Like the CBS, NBC complained the FCC regulations were arbitrary and capricious and added they were "contrary to public policy." An NBC statement added:

"Plaintiffs allege further that the order under attack, due to go into effect November 15, will deprive them of their property without due process of law contrary to the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution, and that the order, if enforced, will cause them irreparable damage, including possible loss of their broadcasting licenses."

William S. Paley, CBS president, charged there was no "public demand" for FCC actions, and that they represented an attempt by an unnamed "competitive group" which, he said, is using the Government instead of meeting the chains in ordinary competition.

Columbia's complaint maintained that the reliance of an affiliate upon a network, and the reverse situation, are "necessary and vital to the American system of network broadcasting," adding in a later press statement:

"They are pre-requisites if Columbia is to do business in sufficient volume to maintain its

Ascap Music Takes to the Air, at a Cost to Networks of 2¾% of Income

At 12:01 midnight last Wednesday, the catalog of more than 1,000,000 songs written by America's outstanding composers, Victor Herbert, Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, et al., members of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, returned to the two radio networks, National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System, following signature to the contract between the Society and the radio chains earlier that day.

The music ban of ten months' duration began when ASCAP demanded that the five per cent which radio had been paying for its tunes under the contract which expired last December 31st, be increased to seven and one-half per cent. ASCAP also demanded payment at the source, whereby it would levy on full network income, instead of merely that part of network income allocated to radio stations themselves.

The new agreement provides for payment at the source of two and three-quarter per cent of annual net income for the right to use ASCAP music; with network managed and operated stations paying two and one-quarter per cent on local and national spot business. NBC and CBS will pay a blanket fee of $200 per station annually for sustaining programs. The contract extends for a period of nine years, with options for renewal of another nine years. Mutual Broadcasting negotiated a contract with ASCAP in May on a three per cent basis, with the provision that if the other networks obtain better terms, MBS would automatically receive such reduction.

Under the five per cent figure, ASCAP collected $5,100,000 in 1940. It is estimated that the new contract will return to the Society annually $3,000,000. The controversy is said to have cost the Society about $4,000,000, and the networks another $4,000,000, the cost of setting up Broadcast Music, Inc., the network music firm which will continue to operate on a competitive basis with ASCAP.

Despite the peace pact between ASCAP and NBC and CBS, it was announced on Monday by Robert Daru, attorney, that the damage suit filed last April by a group of songwriters, mostly ASCAP members, would be pressed. The suit, filed in Supreme Court, charged conspiracy and named NBC, CBS, the National Association of Broadcasters and Broadcast Music, Inc., as defendants. Amount of damages sought is $1,287,000. Twelve of the 14 plaintiffs are ASCAP members, and are among those who organized a union last week under the name of American Federation of Songsmiths. They charge damages because their tunes were banned from the air during the ASCAP ban. Al Lewis is temporary chairman of the Songsmiths union; Nelson Cogane, secretary of the organizing committee, and Mr. Daru, counsel. They expect to affiliate with either the A. F. of L. or C. I. O.

present organization and its standards of broadcasting and if Columbia or any other major network is to have any economic inducement to spend money and effort to build circulation for the network and its affiliated stations. Columbia further asserted that if the Commission prevails, business will gravitate to high-power stations of the country while smaller stations, which have been able to prosper in their communities only because networks were able to maintain them as exclusive outlets, would suffer severe shrinkage in their service and their revenues."

In summation, the actual words in Columbia's complaint, read: "The effect of the challenged rules will be to destroy efficient network broadcasting, reduce the number and quality of nation-wide programs, and make the country's largest and most powerful stations even more dominant at the economic expense of the smaller stations. Instead of carrying out the professed objective of the Commission, namely, the fullest and most effective use of the radio facilities of the nation, the Order will in fact impair and restrict their use, contrary to the public interest."

The System also noted that this country's Radio Law had been extant for 14 years. In that time, no FCC has claimed the powers claimed by that current, CBS asserted, adding that the broadcasters, and some of the law's authors believe such powers are not in the law.

Fears Free Speech Threatened

Columbia, it is further said, thinks the correct source of changes in broadcasting is Congress, not a Government bureau. In this connection, it also fears the assertion of vague powers by a bureau is a threat to freedom of speech.

The company stated: "While our action is intended to protect our own broadcasting interests, it is based no less on what Columbia feels to be its duty and obligation to the public."

Columbia, its statement concluded, will press for a new Radio Law, which will consider advances in the science and art.

In his affidavit defending chain broadcasting, Mr. Paley noted that few stations could produce the programs the chains produce, and added:

"No station could have the aggregate of creative skills represented in a great network organization such as Columbia, or the economic resources, or the talent supplies. In the first place there is a concentration of performing talent in the metropolitan centers such as New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, and the available supply of talent outside such cities is insufficient to provide a continuous flow of varied program material.

In the second place, individual stations are financially unable at their own expense, to plan, develop and offer to their listening audiences expensive entertainment programs, cultural programs such as concerts of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, educational programs such as The Columbia School of the Air, and world-wide on-the-spot news coverage of foreign and domestic events of national importance. In the third place, advertisers cannot and do not finance programs of such quality for broadcasting on single stations.

Mutual System Gives Stock to Six More

Owners of stations WFBR, Baltimore, WKRC, Cincinnati, WIP, Philadelphia, WHK and WCLE, Cleveland, WHKC, Columbus, Ohio, WCAE, Pittsburgh, and the Colonial Network of New England—six companies—have been given stock in the Mutual Broadcasting System, formerly exclusively owned by WGN, Inc., Chicago; WOR, New York; and the Don Lee Broadcasting System of California.

The chain now has 190 members and affiliates.

BOX OFFICES IN MANY PLACES DO A 'SEE-SAW' WITH ARMY DRAFT CALLS

Influx to Army Camps Has Deep Effect on Attendance, Survey Shows; Managers and Staffs Not Seriously Depleted

Many an exhibitor is worried about the draft. Even though they may not have had to shoulder a gun or fill out a questionnaire themselves, the selective service act nevertheless is a matter of concern to theatre operators in many sections of the country, MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S survey of the national defense program's effect on the boxoffice reveals.

Although the draft is only one of many aspects of the defense program to affect theatre business is has been, in many cities, an immediate and important influence at the boxoffice. New army cantonments have brought many potential customers to some sections of the country. But the same patronage has been lost to theatres elsewhere. Theatre and circuit personnel have been affected. The entertainment habits of many young men and women have also been changed. All add up to new factors which many managers say they must reckon with.

Has Nationwide Effect

New factories, labor migrations, the rearrangement of theatre schedules to accommmodate new community working hours and the increases in business due to defense spending reported in this and previous installments of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD defense survey have been largely local, and have varied widely. Rearmament appropriations have trickled to the boxoffice only in the heavy industry centers, such as Pittsburgh, to date.

The draft, however, has been felt in every community and in almost every theatre.

Huge new army posts, particularly in the South, have brought thousands of new customers to nearby theatres. The same soldier's patronage, and often that of his girl friend, has been lost, temporarily at least, by his hometown theatre.

Inroads by the draft into thetare operating personnel have not as yet been serious. Managers, generally, have been exempted from military service through age or family responsibility. Many student managers, young circuit employes, ushers and maintenance workers have been conscripted, however. Their replacement has often been a problem.

Many houses have already replaced, or are planning to replace their ushers with girls. Most young men employed as ushers are in an A-1 draft class. To replace them theatres have had to hire girls or young students, working on a part time schedule. Some projectionists and technical help have also been taken by the Army but no serious shortage is reported.

Army Training Centers Bring Texas Business

Defense industries and building for Army camps have put considerable money into the San Antonio area and returned many laborers to full-time work. This has increased both their incomes and inclination to spend on motion picture entertainment. In San Antonio, where there are no airplane or munitions factories, the influx of new technical workers is not great. But there is a sizeable increase in business from increased soldier personnel in the area.

Local exhibitors, including the Interstate circuit, have found no need for early-morning or late-night performances for defense workers. Saturday midnight shows have been a policy for years.

So far defense work and the draft have not caused general replacement of male ushers by usherettes. There has been a great turnover of ushers, however, in the larger houses, and a C house, the Prince, will shortly start using usherettes. Interstate hopes to delay the use of girls, but thinks it may have to use them in all houses eventually if current conditions prevail another year.

There are nine Army camps in the San Antonio area. Randolph, Kelly and Brooks fields are Air Corps Training centers. Fort Sam Houston is a large post for infantry and artillery units. Duncan Field and Camp Normoyle are Air Corps and equipment repair shops and depots. Dodd Field is reception center for Sam Houston. Camp Bullis is a maneuver field for infantry. Also in the area are the San Antonio Arsenal, the Third Army Headquarters, and headquarters for the Gulf Coast Air Corps Training Center, Troop concentrations in the area number roughly 45,000 men, with an approximate monthly payroll of $15,000,000.

Grosses Up 10 Per Cent

Conservative estimates of the effects of the increase in personnel and payroll of Army on San Antonio theatres' gross sets it up 10 per cent. Reason for this relatively low percentage is the fact that San Antonio is at all times an Army center. The 10 per cent increase in theatre business is estimated by E. E. Collins, San Antonio manager for Interstate.

No new theatres are being built as a result of defense projects. With six downtown houses, 10 suburbans and a drive-in, the city is equipped to handle extra Army business.

San Antonio Interstate Theatres are plugging defense stamps and bonds on their screens and selling them to all employees, but not to the public. Interstate makes special reduction in prices to service men in uniform—25 per cent reduction..

Dallas box-offices are up only slightly as a result of defense work, according to Frank Starz and Raymond Willie of Interstate. Only a few defense plants are located in the immediate area. The many Army camps throughout Texas have been the largest factor in aiding business.

No extra hours or unusual runs are reported. Ushers have not been replaced with girls, except in the Rio Grande valley where labor emigration has made it impossible to get boys or men for theatre work.

Soldiers and other service men are admitted throughout the area on special coupon tickets, purchased in advance at a special rate at their post. Part of the ticket price goes to the theatre, part to the post canteen.

DRAFT, DEFENSE MONEY BOXOFFICE FACTORS

How the draft has affected theatre business is another aspect covered in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S special countrywide study of national defense and the boxoffice. The effects of national defense spending on grosses, priorities, changed schedules, population shifts, cut rate tickets for service men and the sale of defense bonds and stamps by theatres are among the other boxoffice symptoms of the national emergency described in the series. This is the third article of the series. Previous installments were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on October 25th and November 1st.

Army, Navy Posts Extend Florida Seasonal Business

Expanding Army and Navy camps in northern Florida have provided a summer "shot in the arm" for theatres in Jacksonville, St. Augustine and nearby towns which has enabled many theatres otherwise closed to stay open during the summer, and has kept business close to the winter tourist season grosses.

The only defense industry of importance in the area is the shipyard of the Gibbs Gas Engine Company which has a $5,000,000 government contract. The increase in theatre patronage has come chiefly from new residents of the area. Theatres have not had to change schedules to meet new work times.

The draft has not led to the replacement of ushers, although some theatres report that a large portion of their staff are of high school age.

The Camp Blanding army training camp, located about 40 miles from Jacksonville has given theatres the most potent shot in the arm. Here some 50,000 soldiers from New England States and other sections are stationed. Jacksonville is their mecca on week-ends and when other leave is given. The Saturday and Sunday business has resulted in long lines waiting to enter the downtown theatres. $25,000,000 was expended on the camp construction.

This is augmented by the $35,000,000 Naval Air Station, located 12 miles from Jacksonville. Some 12,700 men are on duty there.

Business Improved

Wages from these two sources have poured into Jacksonville. $3,000,000 or more each month has aided every line of business and brought scores of new ones here. Retail sales for August were nearly double the combined gains in Miami and Tampa. There has been a population increase of 100 families a month for the past year. Theatres have made plenty of money for the past year and the summer business has been the greatest in years, managers say.

The percentage of increase in the Jacksonville area during the last year has been substantial although managers refused to reveal exact percentages. However, executives of the Florida States Circuit, and independent managers, admitted their gains were well over 25 per cent of last year.

Increases in Tampa, Palm Beach, Miami and other south Florida towns have been far behind, it is said. St. Petersburg, which formerly had a large tourist business from Canada, reports that it has been hard hit by the Dominion ban on currency removal.

Draft, Labor Shifts Hit Rocky Mountain Grosses

Salt Lake City exhibitors say that limited defense activities in the intermountain area have registered no appreciable effect at the boxoffice to date, but they expect a bonanza from the employment of 6,000 civilian workers at defense plants scheduled for completion in 1942.

While local exhibitors count future box-office returns, exhibitors throughout Utah, Idaho, and Montana are studying developments in the theatre industry resulting from defense efforts.

WAR INDUSTRIES AID WEST, SOUTH

Those developments, as revealed by the MOTION PICTURE HERALD survey, include:

A switch from ushers to usherettes, high draft inroads among young doormen and assistant managers, reduced rates for servicemen, and a shift from cash to defense stamps and bonds for contest prizes.

Theatres in isolated sections actually are suffering a decrease in revenue because of the drain on a large segment of the spending population by the draft, induction of the National Guard, and the lure of defense jobs on the Pacific Coast.

Exhibitors in Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah, where the largest defense projects are centered, did not agree upon box-office results. Most of the big exhibitors reported little increase directly attributable to defense. But some of the smaller independents claimed an increase of 30 per cent over last year.

Intermountain Theatres, Inc., largest chain in the area, has not substituted usherettes for ushers, but it prepared for such a move by employing during the last year usherettes at the Centre in Salt Lake City. Virtually all of Intermountain's assistant managers of a year ago have been drafted into the Army.

Report Labor Problem

Fox Intermountain, on the other hand, has replaced nearly all of its ushers with usherettes, and many of its doormen and assistant managers have been taken in the draft. One chain reported that it had been so hard hit by the draft that it was now employing women as janitors. Such labor problems have not affected the small independents.

Fox Intermountain has cut admission prices approximately 50 per cent (exclusive of taxes) for men in uniform, and one Utah chain has had a similar price policy since the first CCC camp was established here. Army camps in the area, however, are small and few and in most places the business from servicemen is negligible.

The lone theatre going up as a direct result of defense activities is being built at Boise, Ida., near the new Army airport.

Theatres in this area are not undertaking the organized sale of defense stamps and bonds, but one chain intimated that some of its theatres were contemplating such action. Most of the theatres offering prizes, however, are now giving defense stamps and bonds instead of cash.

All exhibitors are cooperating in the defense effort by showing defense shorts and enlistment trailers. One chain manager reported a negative public reaction to USO collections.

None of the theatres has resorted to a change in hours to accommodate defense workers and it was indicated that such changes were unlikely.

Canada Business Swells, Despite War, New Taxes

The increased purchasing power of Canadians in general and particularly in centers where war industries have swelled the pockets of individuals is having an appreciable influence on the attendance at motion picture houses throughout Canada.

The recent report of Famous Players Canadian Corporation supports this. As the largest Canadian operator in the motion picture industry, F.P.C. is benefiting fully from this circumstance. Profits of the organization so far this year are ahead of the same period in 1940. Summer attendance has held up in good fashion and the outlook for the fall and winter season is believed to be shaping up well. The rate of increase of profits, however, has been curbed, it is noted, by the 20 per cent Federal tax, which went into effect last June 1. This tax on exhibitors and buyers of entertainment is reported to have had a retarding influence on the rate of luxury spending, which, officially, embraces the "movie" house. In areas where no industries exist to offset increased admission prices, the motion picture scene has not been too brilliant.

While the amusement business is traditionally fraught with many uncertainties and predictions as to earnings over a period of even a few months are closely hedged, present indications are that Famous Players Canadian Corp. this year should do as well as it did in 1940. The company's showing last year was the best for any year since 1930. Operating earnings were $2,663,043 as compared with $2,208,369 in 1939, while provision for taxes jumped to $592,500 from $237,647 the previous year. Net profit on the year worked out to $2.32 a share as against $2.09 in 1939. At the same time working capital has increased to $1,821,659 from $1,720,118; earned surplus was increased to $4,081,462 from $3,846,486, and funded debt cut to $5,542,000 from $6,350,000.

Unlike some other Canadian cities, and communities in the United States, Montreal theatres have not advertised reduced admission prices, or reduced tax tickets to men in the armed forces. This does not mean, however, that servicemen in the Army, Navy and airforce are not receiving concessions from theatre owners and exhibitors.

Although not publicly known, the fact is that parties of servicemen in various departments of Canada's defense forces make frequent visits to first-run theatres here, as guests of exhibitors. There have been as many as 50 individuals in a party at times, the group being supervised by an officer.

Cotton, Mills, Army Make Banner Alabama Year

Alabama theatres as a whole are enjoying the best business in their history as a result of national defense spending, according to Birmingham reports. In numerous cases box-office records have been broken and business still grows. Alabama is dotted with Army and aviation camps as well as plants for making powder, shells and chemicals. Yet business would be good without this stimulus. Cotton is selling at 17 and 18 cents or nearly twice the price of two years ago. Hence, even houses in the small towns are cashing in on general prosperity.

Several new houses have opened. The Coosa is a new Martin theatre at Childersburg, Ala., where the government is building a $75,000,000 powder plant. It is giving a late night show to accommodate crowds. The Ritz at Sylacauga, which is getting some of the powder plant overflow, is also running a late night bill.

In Montgomery the Charles, a new 1,000-seat house, is helping to take care of the soldier over at Maxwell and Gunter Fields. In Mobile two or more new suburban houses have been opened and all houses enjoy peak business as the city shares actively in the defense picture.

Booming steel and iron industries spur box-office totals with theatres in Birmingham. The Homewood, a new 700-seat house, was opened early in the year by the Waters' interests and the Franklin in Ensley is being reconditioned at a cost of $10,000. Other houses have been improved.

Best estimates are that theatres are enjoying 15 per cent more business than last year which was in itself a banner year.

The biggest headache is in keeping employes. New ones are broken in almost constantly only to have them go to the Army or to other jobs with more pay. So far women have been used by only a few theatres.

No instances are reported of theatres offering cut rates to soldiers. Theatres have actively promoted USO drives and other such efforts, but so far as known none have actively sold defense stamps and bonds.

Kansas City Sees Boom When Plants Are Built

Kansas City is just perceiving "defense activity" conditions, with several large munitions and bomber plants about to get into operation. There has been only a small increase in local payrolls and business attributable to defense contracts to date. These were contracts to established manufacturers and relatively small firms who have not materially increased their percentage of production or payrolls. The flow of money so far has been chiefly to executives of plants under construction, and to construction employees.

Local theatres have not felt any substantial effect from "defense." Indirectly, theatres have shared in the general upturn of business. In the next few months, as men now being hired by the hundreds get to work in defense industries, both direct and indirect effects can be expected.

There has been a shortage of young men for ushers. Nearly every theatre, particularly first-runs, reports a high turnover in ushers. Replacements have been young men. None have turned to girls.

Bernard Joffee, manager of the Tower, has tackled the usher problem as an opportunity to do something constructive. He has turned to young men in school, giving them the usher positions, to help them continue their education.

Local theatres have not gone into the selling of defense stamps and bonds. But many run trailers, or still messages, promoting the stamps and bonds.

One local theatre, the first -run Loew's Midland, downtown, has inaugurated a special rate for service men. Men in uniform pay 20c plus tax (half the lower floor evening rate). There is a sprinkling of uniforms at every performance. During the first few weeks, many letters and personal contacts with the management expressed appreciation from the service men and others for the special rate.

Lag in Defense Patronage Puzzles Syracuse Exhibitors

Although Syracuse is in the center of upstate New York defense work and within 30 miles of the Army post at Oswego, Syracuse exhibitors have profited little so far at the box-office from defense spending.

That's the consensus of local managers, who are frankly puzzled at the lack of increase in business. They seem to think that those who are engaged in defense work have little or no time for movies, what with working overtime to make extra money and all the routine demands of family life.

Male ushers are still employed in all Syracuse theatres and there is seemingly no lack of them. Many are recruited from Syracuse University, especially those on part-time.

The only new theatre being built in the Syracuse section is a $70,000 drive-in located just outside the city on the West Genesee turnpike. The Kallet chain is backing the project, which is expected to open on May 15th.

Local theatres are not selling defense stamps and bonds to the public.

Mexican Union Advances Plans To Aid Industry

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Plans the picture industry has been formulating for some time to better its business at home and abroad are being advanced by the studio workers section here of the National Cinematographic Workers Union. What the studio workers intend to do toward contributing to this campaign was revealed by Enrique Solis, secretary general of their union, in his speech at the fiesta the union held to celebrate the seventh anniversary of the founding of their organization, at the Cine Teatro Alameda.

Establishment of exchanges for Mexican pictures in key Latin American cities is to feature the studio workers' contribution to the bigger and better picture works campaign, Sr. Solis announced. They are also to ask President Manuel Avila Camacho for aid in organizing here a film workers bank and the institution of an academy of cinematographic arts to encourage the best works and players. Sr. Solis said he was certain that the President would support all these propositions. The official indicated that these enterprises would start late this year or early in 1942.

Considerable discussion has been prompted in the local picture business about the remarkable success of a Mexican picture in Berlin, Germany. This film is "Ora, Ponciano" ("Get Going, Ponciano!"), drama of the Mexican matador, Ponciano Diaz, who died some years ago. This film was produced in 1936 by Gabriel Soria, the producer, who learned his business in Hollywood and it was one of the five films that each won Sr. Soria the annual gold medal awarded by a local newspaper for the best of the year Mexican picture.

"Ponciano," though pretty old, has long been exhibited at the Astor Theatre, Berlin. No German picture has been publicly shown anywhere in Mexico in nearly two years.

RKO Fetes Visiting Argentine Lawmaker

Jose Luis Cantilo, president of the Argentine Chamber of Deputies, and a group of those deputies, were guests of RKO's foreign department sales manager, Phil Reisman, at a cocktail party and reception Wednesday afternoon in the reception room of the Radio City Music Hall, New York City.

Among those at the reception were Dr. and Mrs. Juan I. Cooke, Carlos Federico, Dr. and Mrs. Americo Peretti, Dr. Armando Antille, Dr. and Mrs. Nicanor Costa Mendez, Dr. and Mrs. Raul Damonte Tobarda, Dr. and Mrs. Alejandro Gancedo, Dr. and Mrs. Americo Ghioldi, Dr. and Mrs. Adolfo Lanus, Dr. and Mrs. Fernando Prat Gay, Dr. and Mrs. Juan Simon Pardos; from the State Department, William Barnes, C. Bodine, Jr., E. F. Bastable, and R. L. Bannerman; from RKO, Mr. Reisman, Michael Hoffay, R. K. Hawkinson; from the Argentine Consulate, Conrado Traverso, Consul General; from the Music Hall, W. G. Van Schmus, managing director, and Gus Eyssell, assistant.

BOOK REVIEW

ARBITRATION IN ACTION, by Frances Kellor; 412 pp.; New York, Harper & Brothers; $3.50.

Exhibitors, attorneys, and many others in the motion picture industry have numerous questions still on the what, how, when and why of arbitration under the consent decree. This book by Miss Frances Kellor, executive vice president and a founder of the American Arbitration Association contains answers.

It outlines the history and technique of civil, commercial and industrial arbitration and contains a specific description of the motion picture arbitration system and its unique provisions. The exposition of the principles and standards of law and practice for arbitration in general should help lawyer and layman in understanding the motion picture system.

Miss Kellor has sought to write a handbook "to put arbitration into action in the shortest possible time in every war industry in the United States." As such it deals extensively with, commercial, industrial, labor and inter-American procedures. Nevertheless the chapters on the motion picture system and the general explanation of arbitration make it an excellent reference book for the trade.

The background of the decree is briefly but adequately covered by Miss Kellor and she explains why previous industry arbitration efforts failed. The motion picture chapter summarizes in convenient reference form the definitions of parties, subject matter, appointment of arbitrator, filing of claims, rules of procedure and the method of award and appeal under the decree.

Controversies Analyzed

Controversies other than those specified by the decree may be arbitrated. Miss Kellor describes the methods and advantages of doing so. Standard arbitration clauses in contracts and the decree are discussed. The material should interest exhibitors who have signed or are curious about the arbitration clauses appended to 1941-42 film contracts.

A summary of state and federal statutes governing arbitration leads a comprehensive series of appendices. The U. S. Arbitration Act, the model New York law, AAA rules of procedure and the arbitration sections of the motion picture consent decree are printed in full.

In addition to the special procedures of film arbitration Miss Kellor describes the Accident Claims Tribunal at New York and the Inter-American Commercial Tribunal.

The book can be recommended as a scholarly yet brief guide to general arbitration and to the motion picture system which Miss Kellor calls "one of the four events that have made arbitration history." It contains the answers to many commonly asked questions and is a handy guide to the functioning of local film tribunals, the Appeal Board, the AAA, and their legal and historical significance. The chapters on the motion picture system could well be expanded later, in the light of experience, to an analysis of the efficiency of the decree's arbitration system.—J. Mc H. S.

Seattle Theatre Closed

Hamrick-Evergreen's policy of operating their Musical Hall theatre in Seattle, Wash., every Friday, Saturday and Sunday as a first run return engagement house has failed to prove satisfactory, and the theatre is again closed except for special occasions. The trial of the new policy lasted only two week-ends.

Alice Lee to Boston

Alice Lee, contract clerk at Metro in New Haven, Conn., for many years, has been transferred to the Boston exchange. Natale Sternberg has been added to the New Haven staff.

French Industry Reorganized on "A Stable Basis"

The French film industry has been reorganized on a "stable basis" and business during the 1940-41 season "has been excellent," according to a report received this week from adjacent Switzerland.

Since November, 1940, when German-French authorities created the Comite d'Organisation de l'Industrie Cinematographique (Organizing Committee for the Film Industry), effort has been made to effect a recovery. Under the direction of M. Raoul Ploquin, producer, the Committee has worked to establish contact with German authorities, to make decisions and to promote the recovery of production.

In February picture-making began again in Paris and the film studios re-opened, giving opportunity to artists and technicians who were thrown out of work when France fell. From February to October, thirty feature films were produced in Paris and an additional twenty-five were made in unoccupied France, principally on the Riviera and in Marseilles.

Nearly all film theatres, it is reported, are in operation in occupied as well as unoccupied France. No new American product has been seen this year, but recently old films were showing in unoccupied zones. In Lyons has played "Stagecoach," "Holiday" and "On Borrowed Time."

One official film trade paper has been permitted to function in Paris, "Le Film," published fortnightly by M. Harle, owner and editor of the former La Cinematographie Francaise, an important trade magazine which operated before the Petain era.

Importation to Paris from unoccupied France of magazines and newspapers, including trade paper publications from America and other nations, is banned by German and French authorities. As a result, the majority of personnel in Parisian studios, directors, actors, cameramen, technicians, are unaware of the developments of the film industry in America. Many Parisians have not seen American trade papers or daily newspapers for more than a year.

Comerford Sets Plans For Freeman Drive

As a result of the meeting of Comerford Circuit managers and executives, held last week at Buck Hills Falls, Pa., four district managers and from six to eight theatre managers will journey to California late in January to attend the dinner which will climax the "Salute to Y. Frank Freeman" drive, according to Sam Dembow, Jr., who, with Neil Agnew, Leonard Goldenson and Charles M. Reagan, represented Paramount at the Comerford conferences.

The meeting, called by John Nolan to discuss the Comerford Circuit's participation in the drive, was addressed by Postmaster General Frank J. Walker, Mr. Nolan and John O'Leary of the Comerford Circuit, and Mr. Goldenson, Mr. Agnew and Mr. Dembow of the Paramount group.

The "Salute to Y. Frank Freeman" drive, in which all Paramount partnerships are participating, was officially launched Saturday, November 1st.

PARAMOUNT NET FOR 39 WEEKS $7,450,000

Third Quarter Earnings Are $3,071,000; Sale of Stock by Manufacturers Trust Shown

Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimates its earnings for the third quarter ended October 4, 1941 at $3,071,000, after interest and all charges including provision for Federal taxes, normal federal income taxes being computed at 31 per cent. This amount includes $419,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries.

Earnings for the nine months ended October 4, 1941, on the same basis, are estimated at $7,450,000, including a $1,300,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. No provision has been made for Federal excess profits taxes for Paramount Pictures, Inc., and its consolidated domestic subsidiaries since it is estimated that none have accrued.

Earnings for the quarter ended September 28, 1940 were $1,726,000, including $316,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and $22,000 profit on purchase of debentures, while earnings for the first nine months of 1940 were $4,810,000 including a $1,355,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and $88,000 profit on purchase of debentures.

There were outstanding as of October 4, 1941, 126,073 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value six per cent first preferred stock and 415,000 shares of cumulative convertible $10 par value of six per cent second preferred stock. After deducting $251,360 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these preferred shares, the remaining $2,819,640 of estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the quarter represent $1.10 per share on the 2,573,862 shares of common stock outstanding on October 4, 1941, which compares with 58 cents per share for the quarter ended September 28, 1940. Computed on the same basis, the estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the nine months ended October 4, 1941 represent $2.60 per share on such common stock outstanding, which compares with $1.60 per share for the nine months ended September 28, 1940.

New York Bank Makes Paramount Stock Sale

Sale by Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, of 10,000 Paramount Pictures 3¼ per cent convertible debentures, reducing its holdings to 3,192,800, was the largest of a number of film stock transactions reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday, in its first semi-monthly summary for September, issued at Washington.

The SEC report carried a belated return on Monogram Pictures, showing that in June, Pathe International Corporation, New York, disposed of its full interest of 65,867 shares of common and canceled options for 6,018 shares.

September transactions also included the disposition of 3,300 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by J. Robert Rubin, New York, Loew officer, leaving him with 14,415 shares. Loew's, Inc., itself, reported acquisitions of another 58 shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common, giving it a total of 118,567 shares.

Jack L. Warner, production chief, was reported to have acquired 4,400 shares of Warner Brothers common stock, brining his holdings to 102,960 shares.

Atlas Corporation increased its interest in Radio Keith Orpheum by 1,400 shares of common stock, giving it a total of 823,423 shares held direct and 268,230 shares held through the American Company.

In Keith-Albee-Orpheum, the acquisition of 10 shares of common stock by Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation was reported, giving it a total of 1,205,675 shares.

In radio, the SEC reported that Leon Levy, Philadelphia, dirctor in Columbia Broadcasting, disposed of 518 shares of Class B common stock by gift, reducing his holdings to 40,844 shares, and H. Bayard Swope, New York, director, sold 500 shares of Class A common, held through the Keewaydin Corporation.

Bond Exchange

For Paramount's four per cent bonds of 1956 recently offered in exchange for Paramount's convertible 3¼'s, approximately $8,000,000 or about three-quarters of the entire 3¼ per cent issue, have been sent in to the Manufacturers Trust Company for exchange, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the company's executive committee announced on Monday. The offer of exchange expires at the close of business on November 10th.

National Theatre Seeks to Unite Hoyts, Greater Union

According to a report received from Sydney, Australia, a great deal of attention has been focussed on William Powers and J. C. Graham, representatives of National Theatres Corp., who are surveying the local theatre setup in that city for a possible amalgamation in all inclusive General Theatres Corp., which would again combine the Hoyts and Greater Union circuits. These two groups split up some time ago and since then Norman Rydge of Greater Union has guided his group successfully to better profits.

This year Mr. Rydge signed with Paramount on a five-year deal, one clause of which gives Paramount the right to withdraw if a merger is effected. Paramount has also signed the independent situations in the Melbourne suburbs, making the Powers-Graham task more difficult. Shares in holding companies of Greater Union have had a remarkable rise on exchange recently.

Paramount's product has been particularly successful this year, the report said, with films playing the Prince Edward in Sydney six and seven weeks at a time for the past 12 months. Previously films were seldom held longer than four weeks.

"Village" Decision Nov. 12th

The long standing controversy concerning "The Forgotten Village," film adaptation of John Steinbeck's book of Mexican village life, will be decided on November 12th when the New York State Board of Regents will hear the appeal on the picture. It has been banned by the Board of Censors because certain sequences involving the birth of a child were deemed objectionable. Mayer-Burstyn hold the distribution rights.

Board of Review To Meet November 13th–15th

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures will hold its 18th annual conference November 13th to 15th at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, with "Movies in a Democracy" as the theme of the meeting. James Shelley Hamilton, executive director will preside.

A special session will be held at the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, with Lt. Col. Melvin E. Gillette of the Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J., as the speaker in a discussion of Army training films. Approximately 33 delegates are expected at the conference. The annual luncheon will be held Saturday, November 15th.

Scheftel to Trans-Lux

Herbert Scheftel, president of the Telenews Theatres, Inc., circuit of newsreel theatres operating in the midwest and on the Pacific coast, was elected a director of Trans-Lux Corporation, Percy N. Furber of the latter organization announced in New York on Monday.

Mr. Scheftel is a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

On Navy Duty

Eugene Zukor, son of Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures, who was recently commissioned a Lieutenant Commander in the U. S. Navy, has been detailed for active duty in the Los Angeles area.

Library, Schools Cooperate on New Child Film Week

Children's Motion Picture Week, "to foster discriminatory taste among young people for the motion picture," was launched last Thursday night by the New York Public Library, the School Motion Picture Committee and the National Board of Review at the Nathan Straus Branch for children of the Library in New York. Twofold features of the evening were speeches characterizing the film as a force in the education and recreation of children, and an exhibit, the first of its kind displayed in the Public Library, showing the objects and materials used in film production.

The purpose of the program was defined by the chairman, Margaret Scoggin, Librarian of the Straus Branch, Mabel Williams, Superintendent of Work with Schools of the New York Public Library, and Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, chairman of Schools Motion Picture Committee, as an attempt to create an audience for good motion pictures which would be both informed as to production and discriminating as to quality.

Critics Speak

That young people are already beginning to exercise this discrimination was made clear by two members of "Young Reviewers" of the National Board of Review. Their definite statements as to likes and dislikes were made the basis of a discussion by Bosley Crowther, film critic for the New York Times. Tom Prideaux of Life magazine, also reminded the audience of more than 200, comprising 100 students from junior and senior high schools of the city, that an interest in films could be fostered among people of all ages by an extension of such programs and exhibits throughout the country.

A statistical approach to the question of the tastes of films and the extent of their influence upon the lives of children was developed by Frederic M. Thrasher, Professor of Education, New York University, and technical director of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council. Basing his talk on the film study made by Paul G. Creesey for the Payne Foundation, Dr. Thrasher in youngsters; that those whose behavior patdeclared that films do not create crime tendencies terns already lean toward the delinquent would pick up "pointers" from other sources.

Julien Bryan, producer of documentary films, who recently completed a picture showing the daily life of South Americans, "Americans All," for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, spoke of the special value of the documentary film in the education of children and adults, and in the promotion of tolerance and fellowship among the peoples of the world.

Arthur DeBra of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, concluded the evening's addresses by expressing his sympathy for the Children's Motion Picture Week and promising the continued cooperation of his organization with the work of the New York Public Library, the Schools Motion Picture Committee and the National Board of Review.

Original sketches, working drawings and scale models of "Sergeant York," "One Foot in Heaven" and "Knute Rockne" were sent from Hollywood by Warner Bros. and set up to show progression from a picture in the author's mind to the picture on the screen. RKO sent 10 original drawings of settings from "All That Money Can Buy," combined with actual photos of these settings as they appear in the film. A series of photographs entitled "The Making of a Motion Picture," made by Walter Wanger Studios for Mrs. Thomas G. Winter of the MPPDA, also is on display.

Stabilized

Production, having caught up with and satisfied the need of product inventory commensurate with block-selling, has tapered off gradually from its otherwise unseasonable peak of 54 pictures shooting in July to a stabilized level of 39 at weekend.

Last studio to participate in the rush to pile up product, MGM is still leading, as for several weeks, with six pictures going.

Charity begins at home in Hollywood as elsewhere, despite the town's unflagging and far flung participation in the charities of just about every place, and this year the town is out to surpass its all time high mark in contributions to the Los Angeles Community Chest established last year when the studio division, under chairmanship of Louis B. Mayer, gave $467,062.18. That item, summing up the donations of 19,140 individuals, contrasted with the $311,955.29 contributed by 11,601 individuals the year before.

LOUIS B. MAYER, chairman of the motion picture division of the Los Angeles Community Chest, on Monday addressed mass meetings of personnel at all studios, launching the annual campaign. With Mr. Mayer at the microphone are (left to right) Irene Dunne, Susan Hayward, Carey Wilson, who produced the Community Chest film, "Dr. Kildare's Baby", Heddy Lamarr, Nurse Mildred Niese and Dr. Houston Price of the Orthopedic Hospital, one of the Chest beneficiaries.

Again under chairmanship of Mr. Mayer, the Community Chest Drive got under way officially this week Monday when mass meetings were held at the several studios.

Introduced at each mass meeting was the Chest song, "Share a Little," written for the occasion by E. Y. Harburg, which was sung by Judy Garland over an inter-studio radio hookup.

Screened at each studio was the Chest film, "Dr. Kildare's Baby," produced in Technicolor by MGM and made available to theatres in the community for exhibition during the Chest campaign.

Foregathering last week Thursday as guests of Chairman Mayer at the Assistance League Tea Room, 200 representatives of all studios, guilds and unions heard Mr. Mayer stress the urgency of carrying on the Chest charities in an era when the world is ridden by wars and the by-products of wars. Following luncheon, the party was taken on a tour of ten agencies supported by the Community Chest for a first-hand inspection of the work being accomplished.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ACROSS THE SIERRAS: Bill Elliott—Fair picture. Not in class with "Hopalong Cassidy" or Autry for draw.—Harland Rankin, Park Thetare, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—A very fine picture that failed to draw. Not the type for a small town—not enough of the intellegentsia.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BEFORE I HANG: Boris Karloff—People don't go for Karloff here. Business very poor. Reports bad on this picture.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLAZING SIX SHOOTER: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A nice western that did nice week-end business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLONDIE IN SOCIETY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, "Daisy"—As good as usual run of the "Blondie" films, lots of good laughs, plus some excellent music by the Robert Mitchell's Boys Choir, their featured number being "Trees," with Penny Singleton singing. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE, THE: Loretta Young, Ray Milland—Average business for this one. Good comedy. Nothing outstanding, but nice entertainment for a week-day. Running time, 88 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Thetare, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can: Small town and rural patronage.

ELLERY QUEEN, MASTER DETECTIVE: Ralph Bellamy, Margaret Lindsay, Charley Grapewin—A good detective story. Good for second, but not for first.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AT HOME: Edith Fellows, Dorothy Peterson—See review on "Lone Wolf Keeps a Date," Columbia.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN: Robert Montgomery, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton—Gave general satisfaction and was a most unusual picture. As a rule, pictures with a theme like this one had would be quite morbid. On the contrary, this was most enlightening and entertaining. Running time, 93 minutes. Played October 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HERE COMES MR. JORDAN: Robert Montgomery, Claude Rains, Edward Everett Horton—A most unusual picture that did not do as well as might be expected. Personally, I enjoyed it, but it did not pay rental. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

LONE WOLF KEEPS A DATE: Warren William, Frances Robinson—Double billed with "Five Little Peppers at Home." Neither of these series has any draw here. The few patrons made no secret that it was very poor. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 25-27.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

NAVAL ACADEMY: Freddie Bartholomew, Jimmy Lydon—Nice program picture with family appeal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PRAIRIE STRANGER: Charles Starrett—Average Starrett western. Did business on this. Should do all right. Running time, 58 minutes. Played October 16-18.—James Hoffman, Star Theatre, Hoisington, Kan. General patronage.

TILLIE, THE TOILER: Kay Harris, William Tracy—Good picture. Weather knocked it out. Kay Harris was a perfect "Tillie." Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 19-22.—James Hoffman, Star Theatre, Hoisington, Kan. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Valarie Hobson—Very good. Played second run. Business not there.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

VOICE IN THE NIGHT THE: Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard—Don't pass this one up. It's good entertainment and very timely.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Leo Carrillo, Virginia Weidler—Right up our alley. Pleased 100%. Marjorie Main and Donald Meek deserve credit for their work. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 11-13.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—Business was very good and it all sums up to Beery's popularity with our patrons. They like anything he does. Marjorie Main didn't hurt this picture one bit either. But Leo Carrillo had a very sappy part. Played October 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Tony Martin—Funny and silly, but no business-getter. If they quit making pictures, it won't hurt anything. Played October 4-6.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—$5,000 reward for "William Bonney," alias "Billy The Kid." No finer picture other than this has graced the American screens since "Jesse James." This is the Robert Taylor you have never seen before. A new Taylor, a new star. In our opinion, this is the best work he has ever done and we do not bar any of his pictures in the past. Color was beautiful covering the scenery in the great Southwest. The sound was perfect. You can't go wrong on this. Worth best days and extra advertising. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 26-28.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy—Good action entertainment. Received favorable comment from patrons. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 13-15.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

BITTER SWEET: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—This combination is finished as far as this situation goes. This picture certainly didn't help to revive their popularity. The music is strange to small town ears and the story far from interesting. Pay for this one and don't play it; you'll be money ahead. I wish I had. Running time, 94 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Swell acting by Greer Garson, beautiful color and story was nice. Many tears were shed by the ladies and some by the men. Liked 100% by the women. Business good. Played October 18-20.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Hedy sure suits me, but the farmers did not crowd me out. Those who came figured they got their money's worth and so did I. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 21-22.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Very smart comedy that failed to do average business. Extra special plugging failed to attract our customers. Hedy Lamarr fails to attract small town fans, although the women admired her clothes. James Stewart gives his usual charming performance. Running time, 96 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner—Here is a picture that will do business in a small town because it is a well-known story, and because everyone will be curious to see Spencer Tracy in such a role. You may have a few walk-outs and complaints, we did, but due to the nature of the picture it can be expected, but it only helps to strengthen your business the second day, and sharpens people's curiosity all the more. Ten to one, it may lessen Spencer Tracy's popularity, as Metro never spared the horses to make it real and believable, but personally I'll worry about that tomorrow, it I can get them in today. Spencer Tracy's performance is flawless. His change to "Mr. Hyde" is gradual and done with reserve. There is even an element of comedy. The high-lights of the picture are in the last ten minutes, his hopelessly sinking into the hideous "Mr. Hyde" at his worst. The death scene at the end is almost too natural. Any exhibitor might wonder what effect it might have on his future patronage to Tracy's pictures. Metro has done a fine job. It surpasses both "Dr. Jekyll" pictures made previously, and seems almost unbelievable. Ingrid Bergman's dramatic portrayal of "Ivy" is excellent. Lana Turner is capable and beautiful. Ian Hunter and Donald Crisp do fine work. We did above average business, thanks to proper allocation and a good date. Running time, 127 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DOWN IN SAN DIEGO: Bonita Granville, Ray McDonald, Dan Daily, Jr.—Just a bunch of kids rollicking and fighting for seventy-three minutes, through a weak story held up by a good title, with the result that business was better than you expect on most program pictures with no cast names. Everyone expected to see more of the Marines in this, and so did I. The title will get them in and they won't be too disappointed with the picture. Not for your best playing time by any means, but good for bargain night, or double bill. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 15-16.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY BE GOOD: Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore—I played this three days mid-week to a nice business and everyone enjoyed it. Eleanor Powell has improved her acting, and her dancing is better than ever. Ann Sothern was never better and surprised all with her pleasant singing voice. The songs in this picture are grand. It has everything, and will start an epidemic in your town of singing and humming "Lady Be Good." Running time, 112 minutes. Played October 7-9.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good comedy from beginning to end. Will please most any time. Played September 27-29.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—This is excellent family entertainment and sell it as such. Very good audience reaction. In my opinion, Bobs Watson stole the show. Should do better than average business in any situation. Running time, 106 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE, THE Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—This series does very well here and this particular one was different enough to arouse fresh interest. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 22-24.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart—This is positively poisonous entertainment to dish out to a small town. You can't get them in to start with and those that come can barely wait to get out. It's nainful to listen to audience reaction on this type of picture. The ace company has a few deuces, too, so beware.. Running time, 112 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RINGSIDE MAISIE: Ann Sothern, George Murphy—The best "Maisie" picture made to date, but drew the least business. I played it the next week following "Lady Be Good" thinking that the latter picture would help build Ann Sothern for this one, but my disappointment was plainly visible. Just why the picture failed to click is beyond me. But my gross for the three best days of the week put me on a hamburber diet. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 12-14.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—Good picture, business fair, acting by both stars good, but not quite up to Gable standard. Played October 11-13—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—After a rather slow start, this gets really exciting as it moves along. Nice amount of humor and clever lines make this a really entertaining picture. Most of my crowd had seen it elsewhere which made it give rather a poor showing at the box-office. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 23.—W.Variek Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WOMEN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Good picture, good acting. Did average business. Played September 20-22.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

LET'S GO COLLEGIATE: Frankie Darro, Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran—All this picture lacks is big names for the marquee. Sure to please if you can get them in. The weather played havoc with this. Running time, 62 minutes. Played October 19-22.—James Hoffman, Star Theatre, Hoisington Kan. General patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, Dennis O'Keefe—Played it second run. This house being an action house, didn't go much for it.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Seemed to please everyone, especially the younger group. Thought it very much on the impossible side, but guess that doesn's make any difference if you can get a laugh out of it a little more than average. Cast excellent. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—This pleases. Both good business at the box office and the patrons well-satisfied. Lynne Overman has a draw all his own in this spot, even if he is just in supporting cast. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 2-4.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronice Lake—What a picture they could have made out of this if they had reduced the footage about 30 minutes. As it was, Our patrons were right on the edges of their seats ready to run the instant it looked like the fadeout was coming. Very entertaining story, well played by a competent cast, including two gals, both of whom were easy to look at. Running time, 130 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—Usually musicals go over big here, but this one missed the boat. Came to the conclusion Mary Martin and Don Ameche haven't many fans. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 13-14.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—Our patrons expected to see something different in this picture due to the misleading title, and as a consequence, few liked it, and business was below par for a Wednesday and Thursday date. Mary Martin's affected Southern accent was carried to extremes to the point of being tiresome, and Don Ameche was badly miscast. There is certainly nothing about the picture to merit praise, in spite of the cast, story and songs. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 1-2.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

PARSON OF PANAMINT, THE: Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew—Nothing special. Our patrons seemed to feel we'd brought the church to the screen. Running time, 84 minutes. Played October 17-18.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

POWER DIVE: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker—This did extra business on Friday and Saturday. Played September 26-27.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Business away above average. Author well known here. Received many favorable comments. Running time, 109 minutes. Played September 29-October 1.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

> To the Editor:
> I want to compliment you on the way the Herald is now handling the Release Chart. To my notion it is the best you have ever had and would be hard to improve upon.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Coloring very good. Picture draggy in spots, but otherwise entertaining and pleasing. Played October 20-22.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

SHOWDOWN, THE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—A fairly good "Cassidy." Seemed to please. Running time, 63 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—A week-end natural for us. Played on a single bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Carolyn Lee—We can stand more like this one. Madeleine Carroll was beautiful and I think she should make more pictures. Many nice comments from the patrons, good acting from the entire cast. Business above average. Played October 7-9.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

PUDDIN' HEAD: Judy Canova, Francis Lederer—A roar from start to finish. Something an exhibitor likes to hear. Played October 18-19.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Town and country patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Another top Autry. Old, but am glad to have played it. Mary Lee is one of the main attractions here and is going to go places in the films. Smiley Burnette is exceptionally good in this picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 24-25—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

RKO Radio

GIRL, A GUY AND A GOB, A: George Murphy, Lucille Ball, Edmond O'Brien—Did nice week-end business. Only complaint was why didn't Murphy do more dancing? Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 24-25.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

MY LIFE WITH CAROLINE: Ronald Colman, Anna Lee—Ran this with "The Bride Came C. O. D." to one of the best crowds in months. I do not believe that "My Life with Caroline" was the drawing card, but a good share of my patrons enjoyed this unique film quite a lot, judging from the good amount of laughter. There were some very original directorial touches and some good subtle humor. There were a few walk-outs by people who did not know what it was all about; however, I received some very good comments from many other patrons. I suppose it is what you might call a class comedy. As far as I personally am concerned, I was agreeably surprised with it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 24.—W. Variek Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

NO, NO, NANETTE: Anna Neagle, Richard Carlson, Victor Mature—Big disappointment. Business poor. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 6-7.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

PLAY GIRL: Kay Francis, James Ellison, Mildred Coles—Kay Francis no draw. Picture very mediocre. Business poor.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON: Disney Feature Cartoon—If Disney wants to keep his reputation, he better skip these. Did not do any business for me. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON: Disney Feature Cartoon—Well, we were warned and naturally expected a washout, but it wasn't as bad as we were looking for. The early part was most interesting, but when the Dragon episode came on, it spoiled the whole of the picture. It wasn't even good enough for a regular length cartoon. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 9-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SAINT'S DOUBLE TROUBLE, THE: George Sanders, Bela Lugosi—A good "Saint's" feature. Running time, 69 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

SAINT'S VACATION: Hugh Sinclair, Sally Gray—With George Sanders out of this series, pictures lack fire. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

SCATTERGOOD PULLS THE STRINGS: Guy Kibbee—This is a growing series from popularity standpoint. Patrons seem to like the homespun philosophy of Scattergood. Of course, the ease with which he cares for all the tribulations of those who come to him for help is rather impossible. But they like it, so why worry? Played October 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

STAGE TO CHINO: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—A good western. Story good. Running time, 59 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, John Carroll, Edward Everett Horton—Here is a real surprise package. Our patrons enjoyed it very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THEY MEET AGAIN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett, Robert Baldwin—See review on "Model Wife," Universal.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHAD HANNA: Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Linda Darnell—A big let-down. The story was weak, but the color was beautiful. The only thing that took it out of the programmer class was the color and that is not enough to satisfy our patrons. Attendance very poor, although well advertised. You can't fool the people nowadays; they know their shows. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 20-22.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

CHARTER PILOT: Lloyd Nolan, Lynn Bari, Arleen Whelan—This series is becoming popular here. Lloyd and Lynn make a good team, and these are nice, snappy shows for a week-end. Played October 8-9.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE BLONDE: George Montgomery, Mary Beth Hughes—Played to Friday and Saturday business and picture did O. K. Montgomery was good and Mary Beth Hughes was swell. Would like to see her in more pictures. Played October 17-18.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

DRESSED TO KILL: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Beth Hughes—Fair picture and fair business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOR BEAUTY'S SAKE: Ted North, Marjorie Weaver—Just another picture to run and get rid of. Fair picture, but no draw. Played October 1-2.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

GAY CABALLERO, THE: Cesar Romero, Sheila Ryan—This series is quite popular here and the adults go for it just as much as the children. Running time, 59 minutes. Played October 16-18.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

RIDE, KELLY, RIDE: Eugene Pallette, Mary Healy—We much enjoyed this. Good program action picture for week-end.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Milton Berle—Good picture and fair business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—An excellent air feature. Different and exciting. Wish there were more like this feature. Running time, 84 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED: Jane Withers, Jane Darwell—A terrible show that we ran at a loss. The children wouldn't even come to see it and that is bad. I won't be sorry if we never get another Withers picture. Jane is good, but what trash they put this poor kid in. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BLACKOUT: Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson—Business only fair, but so many favorable comments. Pictures like these may not be big grossers, but have the effect of bringing people back because they were worth-while. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October

8-9.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—Here's a picture that any exhibitor should be proud to show in his theatre. Although this is not a moneymaker, you will be compensated by the many flattering remarks your customers will make. Both men and women left the theatre with tears in their eyes by the moving performance of Martha Scott. Running time, 95 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY, THE: George Raft, Joan Bennett, Lloyd Nolan—A pick-up picture and it's O. K. I will take substitution like this any time. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 22-23.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari, Dana Andrews—Played late. A good action picture with plenty of Indian fighting. Customers like this type of western. Played October 17-18.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

LONG VOYAGE HOME, THE: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter—For a situation where class pictures are the big grossers, can't understand. The few who saw it found it depressing. Know two people who enjoyed it, a local doctor and myself. Be sure and put in a good short. Running time, 105 minutes. Played October 20-21.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—Fighting from beginning to end. Only thing wrong with this feature was they made details of the killings too "original," which kept the ladies away. But, in all, it was a good show. Running time, 95 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee, Glenn Ford—A top rater that went over the top. Liker by all classes and, therefore, a huge success at the box office. It is too bad we can't get more of these good shows, then everybody would be happy. Running time, 120 minutes. Played October 13-15.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

Universal

BAD LANDS OF DAKOTA: Ann Rutherford, Robert Stack—This picture is too short, otherwise it just missed being one of those super-westerns, that deserves a Sunday date in any small town. It moves along at a rapid pace, and there is plenty of comedy to keep the audience interested. For a program picture this boasts a swell cast and good story. Our business was good, so I have no complaints. It's a natural for small towns. So play it on Sunday and get that extra business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 5-7.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Abbott and Costello—Not as good as "Buck Privates," but pleased generally. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Cliff Noble, Simcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN WHO LOST HIMSELF, THE: Brian Aherne, Kay Francis—SANDY GETS HER MAN: Baby Sandy, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—Double billed "The Man Who Lost Himself" with "Sandy Gets Her Man." A fair double bill which did just fair business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 22-23.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

MODEL WIFE: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Charlie Ruggles—Double billed with RKO's "They Meet Again," which proved to be a good double bill. A surprise because the last Joan Blondell and Dick Powell, "I Want a Divorce," a terrific flop. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 15-16.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

NICE GIRL?: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone, Robert Stack—My first Durbin and was I disappointed. Did not mean a thing to me. Running time, 96 minutes. Played September 8-10.—Cliff Noble, Samcoe Theatre, Sutton West, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—Entertaining programer that was well liked. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Mischa Auer—Never a dull moment, folks! There's plenty of action in this well directed production. Supported by a capable cast, Marlene makes a decided hit as the incorrigible Bijou whose weakness is the U. S. Navy. Songs in the torrid Dietrich manner; action and romance by John Wayne; Oscar Homolka as a realistic villain; and comedy by Billy Gilbert, Mischa Auer and Broderick Crawford combine to make the picture most lively. Sasha (Mischa Auer) with his taking ways, made some of our boys green with envy. Anna Lee provides contrast for the sultry Bijou. The cafe fight is probably one of the best ever filmed and is certainly spectacular and well worth seeing. A sure-fire, fast-moving action picture designed to perk up even the most jaded movie-goer. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 25.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery—Here is a picture that is all the producer say it is. Good story, swell comedy and great acting. I have never seen Irene Dunne better, and Robert Montgomery does a neat bit of acting. This picture is far better than "Penny Serenade" and is suitable for small towns. We did above average business and had favorable comments. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 28-30.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

AFFECTIONATELY YOURS: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth—Sophisticated comedy that was enjoyed, but did not do top business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

AFFECTIONATELY YOURS: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth—Really enjoyed it. Did fairly good business on Foto Nite.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

AFFECTIONATELY YOURS: Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan, Rita Hayworth—Just a fair picture which got by. Morgan has possibilities. Rita Hayworth not near as good as in some other pictures. Which goes to show that the story, direction and production has a lot to do with the success of a star. Played October 14-16.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: Bette Davis, James Cagney—Ran this with "My Life With Caroline" to one of the best crowds in recent months. Naturally, "The Bride Came C. O. D." drew them in and all thought it to be one of the funniest comedies of the year. It is fast-moving with lots of surprises and will please any audience. Business in general has been so bad here this Fall that I would not be surprised if we had film come C. O. D. in a few weeks. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 24.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CASE OF THE BLACK PARROT, THE: William Lundigen, Maris Wrixon—A fair programmer that didn't help our first picture.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart—If Warner has to make "gangster features," why don't they make them like they did this feature? The first time I ever liked Humphrey Bogart in a picture was this. This feature was excellent. Don't pass this one up. Worth booking. Running time, 97 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—A powerful picture of a really great character, a man who was a football coach, a father and an honest-to-goodness friend of every boy who came under his influence. Pat O'Brien's enactment of the life story of the man the country loved, and whose sudden death they mourned is worthy of praise. There were times when he looked and acted so much like the great "Rock" that it was hard to believe that the coach himself was not doing the acting. (As a collegiate football player a few years prior to Rockne's death, I had the honor and pleasure of making his acquaintance, in practice and in competition.) The picture is very well done, interweaving the exciting sport of football with the biography of Knute Rockne, and it should appeal to all, especially at this time of the year. Included is the story of one of football's immortals, George Gipp, played by Ronald Reagan, while Gale Page, as Bonnie Rockne, supplies the love-interest which rounds out the picture nicely. A truly great film for all red-blooded Americans who will be thrilled by this picturization of one of the men, whose ideals make collegiate football the clean, vibrant force that it is. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 18.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LETTER, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—We packed them in the first night, but it died after that. I don't know why. Outstanding performance by Bette Davis, the best since "Of Human Bondage." The story is very gripping and intense, not a dull moment. Possibly the sad ending disappointed the customers. Running time, 97 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—An excellent picture with the exception of running time. It really is too long for this type of picture. Running time, 101 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—Good picture and good entertainment but didn't get the business. Played September 23-25.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY LOVE CAME BACK: Olivia de Havilland, Jeffrey Lynn, Charles Winninger—A good comedy. Worth booking. Running time, 85 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye—Good musical show which pleased average business. Running time, 108 minutes. Played October 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, John Garfield—This did not do the business we hoped for, but thought it well produced.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SEA WOLF, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino, John Garfield—For a top classification picture, this is a great disappointment. This is definitely inferior to the original version and disappointed many of our patrons who read the book. Outstanding performance by Gene Lockhart. Running time, 99 minutes.—Mrs. S. Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SMILING GHOST, THE: Wayne Morris, Brenda Marshall—Good comedy ghost picture and good business. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VITAMIN HAY: Color Classic Cartoon—Hunky and Spunky bring laughs from all. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders patronage.

WAITING FOR BABY: Robert Benchley Comedies—A good picture. Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kan. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME, NO 2: "Norway in Revolt"—This one deals with Norway under Hitler and has been well made with a slight story and one good surprise. The use of a Norwegian accent by the second narrator helps the mood. Running time, 19 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ORPHANSS BENEFIT: Walt Disney Cartoons—The adagio dance in this color cartoon is quite funny but, all in all, this is below the Disney standard as entertainment. Of course, technically, it is perfect. Running time, 9 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PANIC IN THE PARLOR, A: Leon Errol—Silly comedy, but gets the laughs if they like Errol. They do here. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GLACIER TRAILS: Magic Carpet—Just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: I've always felt partial to this news.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SOLDIERS OF THE SKY: Adventures of Newscameramen—Timely. Excellent filming of the hazardous training and maneuvers of the U. S. Army paratroops. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Universal

HAWAIIAN RHYTHM: Two-Reel Musicals—Real good. Play it by all means. Our audience enoyed it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCRUB ME MAMA WITH A BOOGIE BEAT: Color Cartoon—Lively short, well received by all. Good support for heavy-going feature. Running time, 8 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroaders' patronage.

Vitaphone

ELMER'S PET RABBIT: Merrie Melodies Cartoon—The rabbit cartoons are always good.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD STEPS OUT: Merrie Melodies—A very good take-off on the stars in cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LIONS FOR SALE: The Sports Parade—A superb color short on the training of lions. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MARIE GREENE AND HER GANG: Melody Masters Bands—An okay musical short. Marie Greene really has a good voice and the dance sequences are well executed. Will please most any audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

..OF FOX AND HOUNDS: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Very funny.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

SNOW TIME FOR COMEDY: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

IRON CLAW, THE CHAPTER 6: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—Fair chapter. Running time, 18 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 7: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—This chapter is stupid. As in the past chapter, our hero fights from three to seven men in one setting and gets no scratches. The children even ignore it. I still maintain serials can be made, but that a little showmanship must be used. Running time, 18 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE KICK OF IT

Does a theatreman have fun on the job? Does he get a genuine kick out of his occupation? Does he learn? Most successful showmen do. Else they would not be successful, as from time to time these pages have set out. Dave Bachner explored the subject in a recent address. The Cleveland Warner adman called it "My Thrills Off the Screen". The talk packs a lot of meat. It is revealing, rates study. Here is some of it:

"I have the most exciting job in the world!

"Men may fly through the stratosphere, burrow under rivers, navigate the stormy seas, be football heroes, erect Boulder Dams, direct military campaigns, bust rackets, or fight diseases.

"No, the other side of the fence doesn't look greener to me, for my work offers more than an ordinary share of fascination and thrills. And that task is motion picture advertising and publicity.

"For, during the performance of my duties, I've dined with Hollywood's brightest stars, hobnobbed with newspapermen, been royally treated by clubs, met state and city officials, and on so many occasions been entertained in a manner befitting the glamour I sell.

"Yes, I'm a salesman similar to the glorified Fuller Brush man, but each week I peddle something totally different, whereas he keeps selling those bristles on a stick. Or the vacuum sweeper salesman. How can anyone stir up enthusiasm over anything as cold and lifeless as a vacuum cleaner? Certainly it's a household necessity, but I would prefer to let someone else place it there.

"To elucidate: Although my job is primarily selling film, it is actually far more than presenting mere celluloid. No, a weary public wants to be entertained, and will respond when the lure of a good time is held out to them.

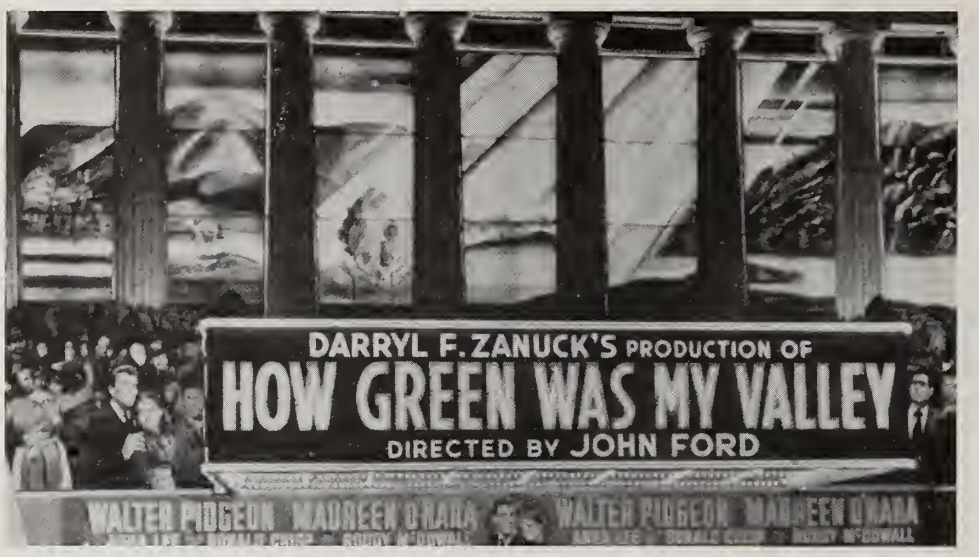
"Just as every trade has its tricks, I have mine. But, unlike other lines of endeavour, I do not have to resort to trickery to entice the customers. I honestly feel there is more truthfulness in theatre advertising than in any other field. Drugs, household commodities, automobiles, clothing, etc., have all at one time or another been exposed as having been falsely sold. The popularity of consumers' unions testify to the public being aroused to the untrue presentation of a product's merits. In lieu of this, I feel I can proudly hold my head up, for we of the motion picture industry have a code of professional ethics that other industries would do well to follow.

"But, aside from the satisfaction of bringing the leading form of recreation to a good-time seeking country, I have encountered many unusual experiences in doing theatre promotions. I've learned about clothing from department store contacts; become acquainted with problems of store buyers; know of the latest coiffures from hairdressers; received a sixth sense in what papers consider human interest stories; become an amateur typographer; know of the problems that beset hotel operators; knowledge of radio showmanship; and have helped laundries, newsdealers, Western Union, libraries, book shops, music stores, dance studios, sell their services by arranging tieups of mutual benefit. By the simple trick of helping merchants dispose of their stocks of hats, shoes, hosiery, and clothes of all descriptions, I've been able to garner valuable advertising for my product, pictures, at a trifling cost.

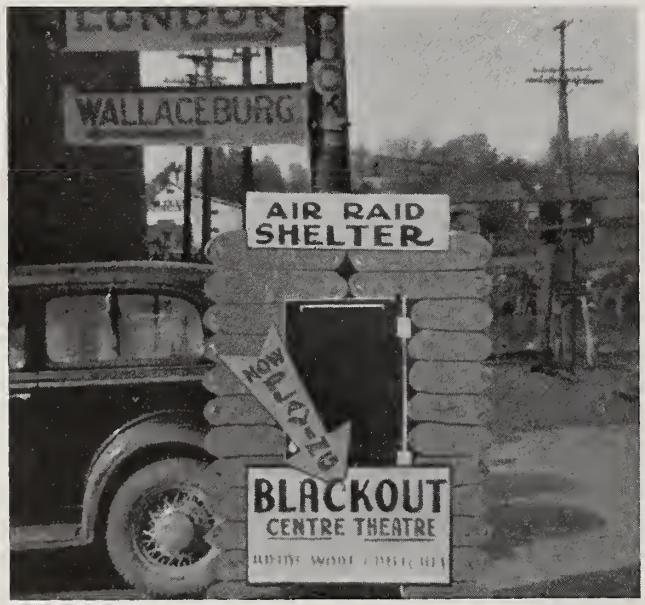
"But it doesn't stop right there. Other contacts net fully as much publicity, and are really more fun than wondering what keeps Dorothy Lamour's sarong from peeling off.

"For example—the movie, 'Robin Hood', led to the sponsoring of an archery tournament with a club interested in that sport. They persuaded me to attempt shooting an arrow, and I've been attached to the sport ever since. I've become a fairly accomplished skater by the association with skating clubs during the exploitation of Sonja Henie films.

"I've met the leading medical men while calling upon them for aid in selling pictures like 'Magic Bullet' and 'Louis Pasteur'—men whose company can be far more enjoyed, and educational, when not met in a professional capacity.



"And, on for many pages, the examples could continue to illustrate the many varied experiences that crop up in the day of a press agent. What he can accomplish, the people in all walks of life that he can encounter, the 'fun' he can have, is only limited by his imagination. No idea or stunt can be discarded, for it will prey on his mind until he has attempted to determine its true value.



"I defy anyone to say I don't have the most exciting job in the world!"

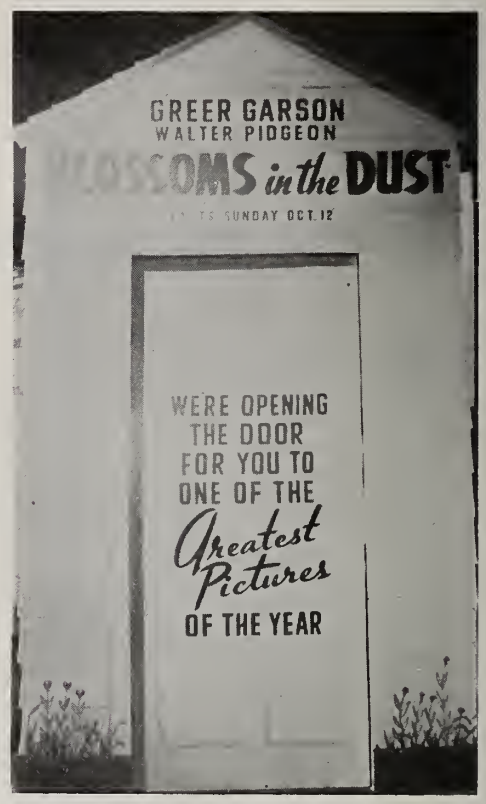
Round Table In Pictures



Reported by Manager Don Busch was effective lobby display created by his assistant, Ervin Sedlack, ahead of "Blossoms" at the Jeffery, Chicago. Door propelled by motor when open revealed appropriate picture selling copy.

A portable air raid shelter was arranged by Harland Rankin ahead of his date on "Blackout" at the Centre, in Chatham, Ont., Canada. Planted on strategic corners, after crowds had viewed the ballyhoo, Rankin had it moved to another section of town.

To attract the ladies further to his date on "Little Foxes" at the Schine Paramount, in Glens Falls, Herman Addison promoted loan of two live foxes from nearby farm. These, planted in lobby cage, together with display of furs, brought dne explanations from the ladies.

What proved to be a crowd stopper was Julius Lamm's "Hold That Ghost" front at the Warner Uptown, in Cleveland. Ghost hanging from center of display was animated by placing an electric fan behind the jnke box to make the figure dance to the tunes of Ted Lewis and records of the Andrews Sisters.

M&P-men Sell "Quiz Kids" Short

Those nationally-known, radio-famed "Quiz Kids" came to Boston recently, via their first Paramount short, shown at the M&P Paramount and Fenway, so Martin Glazer, with Manager Ben Rosenberg and Abner Pinanski, went to work to let the world know about it. Importantly the campaign was sprung with the cooperation of the leading Jordan-Marsh department store, tied in to seek a local quiz-kid to appear on the national program.

For this purpose, the store gave most everything to let the fact be known, setting up a lettered school-house registration booth in the children's department with a girl in cap-and-gown, in attendance. The store also gave one of its best windows made up with figures of the "kids" and posted with theatre cards, followed this with two other ace locations for the two-week run and took some 15 large display ads to keep the pot a-boiling. All of this mentioned theatres and date prominently.

Glazer reports publicity as the greatest on any short subject campaign, locally, over 2,000 lines, also gaining the underline in the "Beat the Quiz Kids" feature run by one of the dailies which plugged the date for nearly three weeks. Hundreds of dollars in air-time was secured from station WZB, the local outlet for the kids' program.

At the theatre, advance trailers told all about it as did imposing lobby displays including the recent layout in Life magazine on the amazing youngsters. More than the usual newspaper advertising was taken to proclaim the engagement and, regarded as an unusual promotion, too, was the posting of one-sheets in the subway stations, securing attention through the colorful makeup of the lithographs.

Syracuse Youngsters Compete

The "Quiz Kids" of Syracuse, to appear on the national program in Chicago with all expenses paid for winner and parent, is being sought on a six-week contest staged by Harry Unterfort, at the Keith, in conjunction with the "Quiz" shorts. Finals are to be held on the stage with strong advertising support from Dey Brothers, the cooperating department store, which also will use full window displays during the life of the contest. Harry has also tied in with WSYR for 40 spot announcements weekly plugging both short and features for the six weeks.

GIFTS FOR BABIES ON "FOOT IN HEAVEN"

To mark opening of "One Foot In Heaven," gifts by local merchants for first baby born after midnight is suggested in "PAR," Fox West Coast house organ. Stores could also go along on a full-page co-op, each taking space to plug contributions, with streamer at top carrying details and theatre credits and presents displayed in foyer. Stunt was successfully worked by the circuit on "Blossoms In the Dust."

Benford Educates Public On "What Is a Sleeper?"

BASING his campaign on "Whistling in the Dark" on the "sleeper" angle, Stan Benford went after it extensively to sell the date at Warners Colonial, Philadelphia, starting with a series of cartoon teaser posters all over the house, as illustrated above, grouped by Benford to show the different approaches. By the time patrons were seated, they were wondering what the posters meant, the explanation coming in a special trailer, copy as follows:

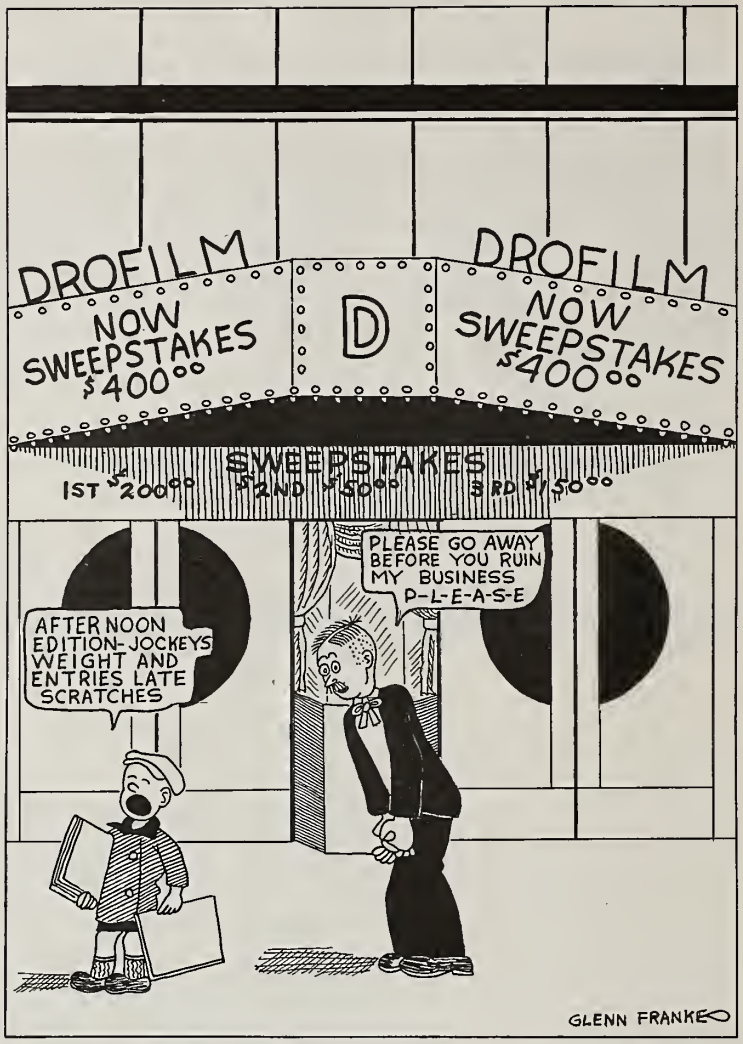
"What is a 'sleeper?' . . . A 'sleeper' is a motion picture with no big star names, no lavish production background, no sensational advance publicity. . . . However, as a result of its sheer entertainment qualities is accorded tremendous acclaim by the public. . . . Such a picture was 'Night Train' . . . Such a picture was 'Buck Privates'. . . . And now, taking its place with other 'Sleepers' of recent months, we offer a new mystery laugh riot," etc., etc. Away from the theatre, Stan distributed in stores and house-to-house, small envelopes decorated with the "sleeper" line and cartoon. These were stuffed with illustrated cartoon copy following the trailer.

The neighborhood paper was tied in with a contest inviting readers to forward their most horrifying experiences that made them want to whistle in the dark to build up courage. Best letters were awarded guest tickets. Outstanding lobby decoration was an overhead animation, seven feet high by 15 long, the animation furnished with a skeleton figure moving up and down behind the art work in the display.

Williams Acts as Host On "Smilin' Through"

In advance of his date on "Smilin' Through" at Loew's, St. Louis, Manager Rex Williams received a letter from a local couple saying that the last production of the picture marked their wedding day nine years ago, it being the first performance the couple had seen as man and wife. The letter pointed out the coincidence of the new release playing the week of their anniversary, so Williams immediately arranged to have the couple as his guests at the theatre and at a dinner party after the show. All of which of course was duly noted in the dailies.

For his double date on "Feminine Touch" and "Unholy Partners," Rex tied the two together with a miniature tabloid—the theme of "Partners"—with figures of two women locked in combat, this bearing on the other attraction. Postal Telegraph did the distributing.



Toy balloons, a number carrying guest tickets, were turned loose from the roof of a cooperating department store on a tiein by Leo Trainor for his date on "Smilin' Through" at the Rialto, Allentown, Pa. The manager also landed displays on the date at the Allentown Food Show.

Lou Stein's "Swap Club" Circulates Comic Books

Successfully solving a Saturday kid matinee problem of getting the youngsters in week after week, is the "Swap Club," now going strong for Manager Lou Stein, at the Stanford, Irvington, N. J., the swapping being restricted to comic magazines. Re-issues of the magazines and membership cards were given to the kids the first Saturday, so that everyone could have something to swap the following week. In addition, at specially designated "bonus matinees"—about once monthly—the juveniles receive extra inexpensive gifts such as punch-o-bags and other novelties.

The membership cards carry children's names and card must be presented in order to swap. Number of magazines to be swapped are not restricted, Stein reporting some kids bringing as many as 20 or more. Long table alongside ticket-taker is used for the swapping with two attendants on hand during the rush, finishing with one on duty the rest of the afternoon. Comics without covers are exchanged for the same to impress neatness upon the youngsters. It is not necessary to start with a comic giveaway but where they are available it is desirable to do so, says Lou.

Unterfort Ties "Dawn" To Local Kiwanis Club

Since one of the opening scenes in "Hold Back the Dawn" shows a group of Kiwanians being shown around the studio. Harry Unterfort at Schine's Keith, in Syracuse, invited the officers of the local club to the opening. Local daily came through with stories and copy was planted on bulletin boards of the Kiwanis headquarters in addition to the picture receiving plug at the regular meeting.

Contest angle was covered with picture of Charles Boyer run in the Syracuse Press, entrants required to give list of the star's sweethearts in his past pictures; guest tickets were awarded here. Department stores ran cooperative ads on Paulette Goddard and Olivia De Haviland, plugging the picture, stars, theatre and playdates. Electrical transcription was landed over WOLF, picture plugs also secured over WFBL and WAGE.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

British War Relief Helps Stearn on "Lisbon"

Contacting the British War Relief office in connection with his date on "One Night in Lisbon," Harry D. Stearn promoted loan of woman's uniform similar to those worn by the English women at the present time and had young girl don it with a gas mask thrown over her shoulder and carrying gun. With appropriate chest banner, girl covered downtown area. For store coverage, cards with stills of Madeleine Carroll in fashion poses were planted and window displays featured.

Ahead of "In the Navy" Harry distributed imprinted sailor hats week in advance around the schools and in the classrooms in junior grades. Stickers were made up and used on juke boxes calling attention to the Andrews Sisters numbers and for street bally two lads in sailor outfits promoted from local Sea Scouts represented Abbott and Costello.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Music Store Cooperates On "Aloma of South Seas"

For his publicity ahead of "Aloma of the South Seas," Frank Bickerstaff at the L&J Palace, in Athens, Ga., contacted local music shop and placed a cutout of a six-sheet in window five days in advance of opening and during run.

Inasmuch as the University of Georgia was just opening and students busy purchasing new record selections, window proved beneficial. In addition owner of shop played Dorothy Lamour recordings and the public address system was set up so that the music could be heard on the streets, plugs on the picture were also made over the loud speaker.

"Parachute" Date Builds Bond Week

Since the State of Maine "Buy Defense Bonds and Stamps Week" coincided with date on "Parachute Battalion" at the Empire, Portland, it was in keeping that a campaign for the picture be lined up by Leo Young, Snider Enterprises district manager, working with Managers McGonagle and George C. Cronin.

The theatremen in advance purchased 25 soldier dolls, equipped with knapsacks and uniforms, to each attaching small parachutes to be dropped from a plane flying over the city. Parachutes were imprinted with picture and date. In the knapsacks were placed guest tickets and three contained baby defense bonds of twenty-five dollar denomination. On opening day, the plane flew over the area releasing the dolls plus thousands of leaflets tying in the Bond Week with copy reading: "To the people of Portland. The 'Parachute Battalion,' arriving today at the Empire, urges the public to cooperate with the United States government by purchasing U. S. Defense Bonds Now."

'Post' Cover Plugs Date

Sixty-inch ads the day ahead and morning of the stunt called attention to the stunt, the layout showing plane, doll, etc. Radio flashes were used during the day before and newspaper publicity also plugged the promotion. Those who found the parachutes with the receipts brought them to Young, who had photos planted of the winners. Publicity and comment were so vast that the state head of the bond drive requested a complete report so that the stunt could be given national mention from Washington to stimulate bonds and stamp sales. The follow-up was a radio interview over WGAN with Young, who described the arrangements and also plugged the picture.

The leaflet dropped from the skies was also planted on the covers of the Saturday Evening Post, issue of Sept. 20, showing parachute troops in action. Tiein was promoted in exchange for theatre party for the magazine's boy carriers.

At the Paramount, Seattle, Manager Dan Redden borrowed a 40-foot 'chute from Boeing Field, spotted it in the lobby tied to a 200-pound dummy with a card reading, "Just dropped in to see," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Outdoor Hallowe'en Affair Put On at Buffalo Drive-In

Something new in drive-in theatre entertainment was the Hallowe'en Party reported by Milt Harris, at the Drive-In, Buffalo, patrons invited to take part in a contest to decorate their cars for prizes and to participate in the dancing on a specially constructed dance floor. Cooperation was obtained from one of the town's leading furniture stores, local dailies and Station WGR, and interest in the car contest was stimulated by the offer of $500 in defense bonds.

The holiday was further enlivened with refreshments of apple cider and doughnuts served by a committee of well known local girls. Since the feature shown was a revival of "Rose of Washington Square," starring Al Jolson, Milt got a break by promoting Al Jolson, in town with his new stage show, to act as judge.

"Fishermen Party" Put On By Schlax

One of his most successful tieins, judging publicity and increased receipts, was the "Sports Show and Fishermen's Party" conducted by Manager Francis B. Schlax, at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wisc., in cooperation with the county conservation club, the event put on at the theatre as a benefit date. The conservation club members agreed to dispose of thousands of specially printed tickets, die cut in form of a fish and perforated at the head to be torn off and exchanged at the theatre. Space on the ticket was left for names and addresses of purchasers to be employed in a contest for some $500 in free prizes promoted for the occasion.

Run for two days, the show was spotlighted with a transformation of the outer lobby to a sports setting with cages of live birds and animals. Exhibited were cub bears, fawns, pheasants, other game birds and fur-bearing animals—all furnished by the state game farm. Inner lobby was decorated with mounted animals, fish and birds, plus trophies of local hunters and anglers. Demonstrations of fly-casting and other events of outdoors interest were included in the program.

Newspaper coverage was wide in the news, sports, hunting and fishing columns. Schlax used his mailing list for further attentions and secured well located downtown windows for added dressing up. The screen program chosen to be in keeping was "Men of the Timberland," the surrounding short subjects all having to do with various aspects of sports, hunting and fishing.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"All-Western Week" Staged by Aldritt

Determined that a week of solid western attractions would prove a good boxoffice draw, Manager Don H. Aldritt, Fox Strand, Salina, Kan., recently secured permission of City Manager H. E. Ulrich to stage what was termed an "All-Western Week," the theatremen combining to put over one of the theatre's best weeks for the two-change period.

The campaign was started five days ahead with one-column five-inch teaser ads, illustrated with cuts of bucking horse and rider, copy changed daily. This led up to a two-column smash the day ahead, with a special trailer running with the ad series giving the event a further lift. The front decoration contributed to the interest, decidedly unique being a collection of Western magazine story covers pasted on the front panels, the staff amassing these at no cost. Atmosphere in the lobby was supplied with guns, saddles, hitching post, etc., the personnel dressed in cowhand apparel in advance and during the run in the theatre and around the town. Old-time buggy, bannered, was also driven around, and the drawing area covered with handbills.

What makes the promotion especially commendable was that the first four days of the big week, there was a serious flood all over the section which evidently did not dim interest in the unusual program. Pictures were Badlands of Dakota and Death Valley Outlaws; Under Fiesta Stars and King of Dodge City.

FORTNIGHT LISTINGS

That the Quigley Awards pace is speeding up is seen in the increased number of "Fortnighters" given in the third preliminary period of the Fourth, and last, Quarter of the year, 73 entrants taking down the 69 Fortnight Appointments, as here noted.

The Awards are now in the Fourth Fortnight of the Fourth Quarter, thus giving theatremen four grand opportunities to send in material for Quartermaster — and Grand Awards — consideration before the closing of the 1941 Competitions. Eight big weeks remain to the finish, folks. Keep 'em flying.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Novel quiz contest has been arranged by Joe Goldstein at Schine's Webster, in Rochester, with the theatreman planting various objects on table set in center of stage. For example, master of ceremonies will say the word "Stuka," children are invited up to stage and if the contestant picks up a toy aeroplane from the table, he wins a prize. Then, as a further inducement, additional points may be earned if the child can elucidate on the question. Goldstein has secured the cooperation of principal of the grade school for assistance in arranging questions, all of which bear on current events.

Opening gun of H. T. Rastetter's second annual kiddie club birthday party at the Warner Theatre, in Erie, Pa., was a three column eight ad announcing the special show two days ahead. Day before opening a double truck of promoted ads was run in local daily devoted entirely to the anniversary. A special screen program was selected and for the stage, amateur talent was featured and promoted ice cream cups secured for all.

Ahead of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" at the Warner Uptown, in Cleveland, Julius Lamm distributed two colored lucky numbered heralds bearing lip imprint and picture copy. Placed on windshields of cars parked in theatre parking lot and all cars in the neighborhood, folks were invited to search for person corresponding number herald, on presentation of both at boxoffice guest tickets were awarded. For street bally girl distributed candy kisses and lobby stunt featured machine which played hit tunes week ahead.

"The people of Shelbyville are unfair to themselves if they fail to see 'Blossoms in the Dust'" was the copy on a sign carried through the Indiana situation's streets as a highlight of Russell Branson's campaign for the Strand run of the picture. Branson also utilized "B. I. T. D." sidewalk stencils.

Ahead of "Blossoms in the Dust" at the Capitol Theatre, in Sudbury, Canada, Sid Scott addressed personal postcards to prominent women in the surrounding mining towns calling attention to the opening. Girl was set to work at phone calling as many women as possible two days ahead, giving picture spiel.

Ahead of "Submarine Zone" at the Midtown, in Toronto, Canada, V. Burns constructed compo sub and planted it on trailer which, appropriately bannered, was toured about streets in advance. During run, the submarine was placed atop marquee and lit from behind.

Novelty slant used by Leon Ehrlich at the State in Brooklyn for "Woman's Face" was the distribution of imprinted blotters carrying copy on the picture. In addition, partially pasted to lower left-hand corner of the blotter was a cut of Joan Crawford as she appeared in the film. Copy above read: "Look behind this woman's face. If you're lucky, you'll find a free pass."

Above is reproduced a five-day teaser campaign used by S. P. Dean and Frederick Gamble for "Mr. Jordan" at the Rialto, in Tacoma, the campaign climaxing in a two-column smash ad on the day ahead of opening. Each of the teasers measured 28 lines on two columns, occupying the same position on the amusement page each day to emphasize the daily changes and build-up in the copy.

For his campaign on the two Polish pictures "Three Hearts" and "Fighting Poland," M. H. Parker, at the Strand, in Erie, Pa., secured gratis announcements on the Polish Radio Hour two weeks ahead. Ministers were approached by the theatremen and agreed to plug the picture from pulpits Sunday ahead of opening, while art work and readers were landed in the local dailies.

Stills were spotted in department stores, sports goods shops, etc., with appropriate tiein copy and local distributor of juke boxes placed strips on machines calling attention to the Glenn Miller music. Through tieup with Western Union, a "Sun Valley" herald was inserted in each message week ahead, while for street stunt, girl dressed in red corduroy skating outfit paraded with back banner.

Contest angle ahead of "Pot o' Gold" at the Park, in Nicholasville, Ky., as arranged by George Pugh consisted of glass jar with a gallon of water and small wine glass floating on top. Folks were invited to toss coins in the jar, those landing in the smaller wine glass received guest tickets. For further publicity, money received was turned over to the local Boy Scouts, the boys handling the stunt while in work out front.

For gag street display on "The Return of Frank James," Barney DeVietti at the Huish Theatre, in Price, Utah, planted a mound of dirt out front with simulated tombstone overall with copy reading "Here lies the guy who thought he was faster on the draw than Frank James."

The big name stage shows at the Olympia Theatre now have the benefit of a special thirty-minute backstage interview broadcast promoted by Manager Al Weiss. Every Thursday at 2:30 P.M. WQAM, Columbia outlet, carries the new "Backstage at the Olympia" program, with Weiss himself introducing the acts. Station gave numerous plugs on new show in exchange for single frame trailer in theatre announcing that station carries program and up-to-the-minute news broadcasts.

A great deal of interest in "Blossoms in the Dust" was aroused by the posting of a six-sheet on the sidewalk in front of the Gilles, Wahpeton, N. Dakota, by Manager Leo Gilles. It marked a reported first time such a stunt was put over in town.

First ten red-heads appearing at the Devon, Attica, Ind., box-office during the "Blossoms in the Dust" engagement were guests of Manager Harold Hayes as part of his campaign for the film. He also planted a "Name the Baby" contest in the local newspaper.

Campbell Ties Fox News To Ad on "Yank in the R.A.F."

Playing the recent Fox News carrying shots of the "A Yank in the R.A.F." world premiere, Les Campbell used the clip to publicize his date at the Strand, Trail, British Columbia, by running a slide at bottom of screen when the shot was run, the slide reading "See it here next week." Air stuff was also employed by Campbell on "International Squadron," with a giant airman cutout, borrowed from the local Victor dealer and relettered accordingly.

The strong local interest in the big league World's Series was also tapped by the Round Tabler with an invitation to the public to enjoy the radio accounts from his spacious lounge. Station in exchange made spot announcements of this service, bringing a lot of extra folks to the ticket-window as a result. Art work by Les for other dates featured a 16-foot figure of Orson Welles for "Citizen Kane" and a stained-window effect for "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day," in front of which was set a Cupid figure carrying card with picture title.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Indoor Ski Meet Held For "Sun Valley Serenade"

Promotion of an indoor ski meet at a large downtown warehouse, rented for the occasion, highlighted promotion for "Sun Valley Serenade" when it played the Fox Theatre in San Francisco. Scores of athletes, sports enthusiasts, and socialites took part in the meet, which was covered by the sports and society pages of all four local papers, and given five free broadcasts over KYA. Department store model was chosen "Miss Sun Valley" for the occasion, and represented the theatre at the opening of the city's new Hospitality House for service men, and also visited the Presidio, where she invited officers and men to see the picture as guests of the theatres.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Girls in Safari Costumes Direct "Cavalcade" Traffic

Harold Rice of the Paramount Theatre, Denver, Colorado, went in for street ballyhoos in his campaign on "Frank Buck's Jungle Cavalcade." Four pretty girls dressed in jungle hats and safari costumes directed crowds at the theatre two days prior to and during the run. Two negro boys beat jungle drums.

A truck ballyhoo, an "ape" walking the streets and jungle noises blaring from records were other ballyhoo factors. Coloring contest, department store displays and 15,000 special cards distributed through the public libraries were included in Rice's comprehensive campaign.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Star Fan Clubs Combine

For the premiere of "Chocolate Solder" at the New York Astor, M-G-M arranged for attendance from the combined Nelson Eddy fan organization and newly organized Rise Stevens Music Club, made up of new star's admirers. Space was set aside for the "cheering sections."

INSTITUTIONAL DISPLAYS

10/14/41

Getting Personal

By BARNEY DeVIETTI

Pull up a chair, movie fans, and we'll tell you about . . . .

- We've been knocking out this column for some time now, and have often wondered just how many people pay any attention to it. My boss reads it to find out what in the heck he is paying for. I read it to make sure that the newspaper doesn't make any mistakes, BUT who else reads it?
- Well, we're going to find out just how many thousands of people look forward to this column each week by offering a guest ticket to everyone who can turn in the correct answer to the following poser:

WHO AM I? .

- I wanted to marry my best girl. She refused. So I got even with her by marrying her mother. Now my best girl is my daughter. My father married the girl. This makes him my son and my daughter my mother. Since she is my mother, she is also my wife's mother, making her mother her daughter. My mother's mother, who is my wife, must be my grandmother and I being my grandmother's husband, I am.....
- There you are . . . . nothing to it. I'll bet even Katherine Jones down at Penney's can get the correct answer.
- Write your answer on a slip of paper along with your name and address, and just hand it to one of the cashiers at the theatres. Out of town people can use a penny post card and just send it to the Price theatre. This stupendous contest closes next Wednesday; correct answer will be given in next week's column. Winners will receive a guest ticket to any show they desire to see.
- DON'T LET ME DOWN . . . .
- Oh yes, this is a movie column so we'll include the movies for this week . . . .

Reproduced above are two representative layouts of ingenious institutional "column" copy under a set heading of "Getting Personal" and by-lined by Barney DeVietti, manager of the Huish Theatres, in Price, Utah. The displays are two-column, run in the weekly paper, copy pointed to tie in with the theatre attractions at bottom. That ads are read, notes Barney, is proven by the answers to the question in above, replies coming from as far as 50 miles. In the layout to right, DeVietti gained considerable attention by devoting the copy and decoration to National Dog Week, as noted, the ad running two columns full.

Getting Personal

By BARNEY DeVIETTI

Pull up a chair, movie fans, and we'll tell you about . . . .

Dogs . . .

- September 21st to the 27th is set aside as National Dog Week. We have always been just "a little bit that way" about dogs, and as my boss is a regular guy, I'm sure he won't mind if we go "doggy" on him in this week's column.
- Here is a true story that tells more about dogs in just a few words than I probably could in a dozen columns.

- Late in the year 1924 a man was taken to Saint Anthony's Hospital at Rock Island, Illinois. He was followed through the door by his large tan Collie "Shep." At the elevator door the man reached down from his stretcher, patted Shep's head and said, "Good-by Shep, wait here.

Shep waited and wondered why his master did not return. He didn't know that the body of the man he loved most had been taken away through a rear exit. For days the handsome dog stayed by the elevator and refused all food placed before him. Every time the elevator door opened Shep would sit up to see if his master was returning.

Soon he realized that he was among friends and began to eat choice bits that the nurses and hospital attendants gave him. The days grew into months and the months into years and still Shep waited.

He became the pet of the hospital and was extremely friendly with those who stopped to pat him, but he never would leave his favorite corner by the elevator for any great length of time. Thirteen years passed, and then one day while crossing the street in front of the hospital he was run over by a car. An orderly carried him back into the building but the best of medical care could not relieve his suffering and he died.

Today a large oil painting of Shep hangs on the wall beside the elevator where he waited so long for the only master he ever claimed.

- By the way, we have a dog-gone good line-up of shows this week . . . . . .

OBITUARIES

Hamilton Smith, Producer, Dies

Hamilton Smith, film producer, director and scenarist, died Wednesday, October 29th, at the Wildwood Sanatorium in Newhall, Cal., after a long illness. He was 54 years old.

Born in Michigan, Mr. Smith began his career as a newspaperman and his first connection with motion pictures was when he joined the old Kalem Company. He wrote, directed and produced films, and on one occasion produced independently.

In 1916 he went to Hollywood as a writer for Goldwyn Productions and later worked with Universal, Paramount and other companies as a free-lance writer. Two earlier companies with which he worked were World Pictures and the Syracuse Motion Picture Company.

Credited with authorship of more than 1,000 stories, many of them produced as two reel subjects and serials, Mr. Smith also wrote the stories for "Ham and Bud" comedies which were famous in the early days of the industry.

In 1931 Mr. Smith went to England to write for Gaumont-British and remained about a year. On his return to the United States he worked in Chicago before going to California on account of poor health. His mother, Mrs. Lorna Weeks, is the sole survivor.

Sam Kennedy, Former Vaudeville Actor

Sam Morton Kennedy, famed vaudeville and musical comedy headliner of a generation ago, died in Detroit, Tuesday, October 28th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James D. Shanahan. He was 79 years old.

Mr. Kennedy played his first vaudeville engagement in Smith's Opera House in Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1883. With his wife he won his first theatrical recognition as a fancy step and jig dancer. His last engagement was with Eddie Dowling in "The Sidewalks of New York" at the Knickerbocker theatre in 1931.

Albert Hartmann, 'Billboard' Editor

Albert C. Hartmann, outdoor editor of Billboard, national theatrical magazine, died in Cincinnati, Wednesday night, October 29th in Christ Hospital after an illness of ten weeks, He was 49 years old.

Mr. Hartmann, an authority on outdoor show business. has been outdoor editor of Billboard for the last ten years. His field included circuses, fairs, carnivals, expositions, celebrations, amusement parks, swimming pools and beaches. He spoke frequently at conventions of outdoor showmen and in his writing and speeches campaigned for clean and honest midways and carnivals.

He leaves a widow and three daughters.

Alex Lieberman

Alex Lieberman, 55, who was at one time associated with the late Jules Mastbaum in the operation of the Stanley Company of America, Philadelphia circuit subsequently taken over by the Warner theatre circuit, died Tuesday, October 28th, at the Jewish Hospital, Philadelphia, after a lingering illness. His widow, three daughters, a son and a brother survive.

Raoul Torres Menier

Raoul Torres Menier, 58, brother of Oscar Torres Menier, film distributor in Havana, Cuba, was killed in an automobile accident in that city, Friday, October 31st.

Mrs. Minnie Golder

Mrs. Minnie Golder, 80, mother of John Golder, head of the independent Hollywood exchange in Philadelphia, died Monday, October 27th, at her home in Philadelphia after a long illness. Another son, Benjamin M. Golder, is attorney for the Warner Brothers exchange in Philadelphia. Two sons and three daughters also survive.

Solomon Dan

Solomon Dan, 59, motion picture theatre operator for many years in Memphis, Tenn., died in that city Tuesday, October 28th. After leaving the motion picture business, he handled publicity for other amusement enterprises in several southwestern states.

IN COURTS

General Electric Named In $1,500,000 Trust Suit

An anti-trust suit for $1,500,000 triple damages was filed in the United States district court in New York last week against the General Electric Company, by the Sonolux Company, formerly engaged in the manufacture of incandescent lamps used in film studios and theatres.

The plaintiff contends that in 1933 it had such accounts as Paramount, Warners and Skouras Theatres, but that it lost these customers because of alleged threats of litigation by the defendant. General Electric has a large number of patents relating to products similar to those manufactured by the plaintiff, the complaint alleges.

Theatre Company Loses Suit

A long legal fight to restrain the Circle Amusement Co. from erecting a new movie house in the residential Ventnor section of Atlantic City, was won last Friday, October 31st, by Mrs. Lydia Palmer, a resident. The New Jersey court of errors and appeals ruled that the particular Harrisburg Avenue section was a neighborhood unit within which the restrictions were universal. Some months ago, Mrs. Palmer pressed an injunctive suit in the local Chancery Court, which decided against her. An appeal from the lower court resulted in the favorable decision.

Hazeltine Files Appeal

The Hazeltine Corporation, Jersey City, N. J., has filed an appeal in the Sixth United States district court of appeals, in Cincinnati, appealing from the decree of United States District Judge John H. Druffel, who on last August 8th held that the Crosley Corporation had not infringed either of two patents of the plaintiff company covering wave signaling systems for radio receivers, which the Crosley Corporation manufacture in addition to operating radio stations WIW, WSAI and international short wave station WLWO, in Cincinnati.

Davis Indictment Dismissal Refused

A request by Federal Attorney General Francis Biddle that the court dismiss the indictments against former Judge J. Warren Davis, of the Federal circuit court, and Morgan S. Kaufman, former bankruptcy referee, was refused last Friday, October 31st, by Judge Guy K. Bard in the United States District court in Philadelphia. United States Attorney Gleeson move to nolle-pros the indictments in which the men were accused of conspiring with William Fox, former film executive, to obstruct justice and defraud the Government.

Judge Bard said he would neither grant nor deny the motion until the circuit court ruled on an appeal taken by Mr. Fox, who was sentenced to a year and a day in prison and a $3,000 fine by Judge Bard. Mr. Fox, who pleaded guilty, was the principal witness against Judge Davis and Mr. Kaufman at two trials in which the juries were unable to reach a verdict. Mr. Fox later asked permission to change his plea to not guilty, but Judge Bard refused the request.

Mr. Gleeson, who explained he was acting under the Attorney General's orders, seemed surprised at the Judge's action. Judge Bard, however, explained that his action was not to be construed as being in disagreement with any decisions of the Attorney General, but that he was only withholding decision until the appeal in the Fox case is disposed of.

"I have been wondering," said Judge Bard, "what the situation would be if the circuit court reversed this court's ruling regarding the guilty plea. If that happened, the Government would be in the position of having to try William Fox on charges of conspiracy with the indictment against the two other defendants nolle-prossed."

Owen Cleary

Owen Cleary, press agent and assistant manager of Shea's Fulton theatre in Pittsburgh, died Tuesday, October 28th, at Mercy Hospital following a long illness. Mr. Cleary had been a publicity man in that city for more than 30 years. Funeral services were held in Washington, D. C.

Obliging Young Lady

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

In response to the world's crying need for laughter, RKO Radio offers "Obliging Young Lady," the keynote of which is comedy, and it is on this that producer Howard Benedict and director Richard Wallace have concentrated their efforts.

Ruth Warrick is instructed by her employer, an attorney, to take Joan Carroll, whose wealthy parents are in the throes of divorce, to an isolated country resort to avoid reporters and newspaper publicity. To this resort come Edmond O'Brien, an ex-newspaperman intent on writing a novel and furthering a former brief acquaintance with Miss Warrick, Robert Smith, Miss Warrick's fiance, Charles Lane, a detective, and Eve Arden, a reporter, who wants to write the story about little Joan and her divorce-seeking parents. There are all sorts of situations, complications and misunderstandings until matters are cleared up, with little Joan returning to her parents, finally reconciled, Edmond O'Brien winning Miss Warrick, Robert Smith losing Miss Warrick, and Eve Arden losing the story.

One of the more amusing incidents occur in the beginning of the picture when Edmond O'Brien, on a train, begins to utter the nonsensical words, "Hy Minish," which blend in perfectly with the movement of the rails. Soon every passenger on the train is repeating the words, to the utter distraction of all. The picture closes on these same nonsensical words, with the conductor telling the honeymooning hero and heroine that if they can't sleep, to say "Hy Minish."

Another source of amusement is a meeting of bird-lovers at the same so-called isolated resort, headed by the expressive Franklin Pangborn. Their various bird-callings and resultant grimaces will be satire to the more sophisticated, and just plain funny to the average.

Ruth Warrick of "Citizen Kane" fame is an attractive heroine and little Joan Carroll will endear herself as a mischievous youngster who loves to put tacks on chairs. Eve Arden and Franklin Pangborn are excellent.

The audience will find some of the comedy definitely amusing, and some of it perhaps a little silly—but laugh they will, for one reason or another.

Previewed at the company projection room before an audience of trade-press reviewers and home office executives, some of whom laughed consistently throughout the picture. — IRENE SMOLEN.

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

49th Parallel

(Ortus Films—Columbia)

Propaganda Melodrama

Made greatly in the Canada it uses as its canvas, this film is in essence no more than the story of a band of U-boat survivors and their adventures in seeking escape across the Dominion. It is however much more than that, for into the adventure and the thrills, the spectacular background and the personal incidents, has been cunningly woven an eloquent, moving and convincing exposé of the conflict between the traditions and thought of free democracies and the inhuman zealotry of a Nazism which has set a world in flames.

The picture has star value on which the exhibitor may find a sales asset, Leslie Howard, Laurence Olivier, Raymond Massey, Anton Walbrook are marketable names. They do no more and no less creditable work than a comparative newcomer, Eric Portman, whose ruthless and myopic U-boat commander is a cleverly chiselled portrait.

Carping critics may raise a superior nose at the continuity of "49th Parallel," which episodically travels from the Eskimo north, through the Rockies and the wheatfields, across the Dominion, to come to rest at last on the U. S. border. Its locations, a trading station on the Arctic sea, a Hutterite settlement, the clangour of Winnipeg, an Indian celebration, and the Great Lakes, the film develops its narrative episodically, but every passage has dramatic and philosophic point, and the traditional qualities of excitement—suspense and human interest, and with one or two exceptions actuality and fairness color the whole. The film is lengthy, and at times the continuity takes a sudden leap, but the editing by David Lean is, in general, excellent, and Freddie Young's photography, notably of the Canadian settings, exemplifies that the technician can also be an artist.

Michael Powell had not an easy job, but he obviously put his heart as well as his intellect into directing the film which consolidates his place as one of the minute band of directors in England whose work is equal to the best in Hollywood.

Laurence Olivier in a pluperfect cameo as a French Canadian trapper slain by the Nazis, Anton Walbrook gentle and sincere as a Hutterite seeking religious freedom in a democratic country, Leslie Howard as casual English writer who also carries a punch, and Raymond Massey as a Canuck soldier who does not ask for his pants back, but just takes them, all contribute grand performances. Rodney Ackland and Emeric Pressburger wrote the script and wrote it brilliantly and Dr. Ralph Vaughan Williams composed the music.

The partial financial interest of the British Minister of Information in the picture might be noted by the cautious showman.

Slipped into the Odeon programme for the benefit of the press and thus seen by a paying audience as well, the film alternately drew applause, tears and hushes of tensity, provoked a vociferous burst of appreciation at the close.— AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Playmates

(RKO Radio)

Musical

Audiences that have liked the brand of comedy offered by Kay Kyser and John Barrymore in the past will find much to entertain them in this picture which is chiefly concerned with the efforts of Barrymore, much against his will, to teach Kyser how to act in Shakespeare's plays. Also the band gets a number of chances to play during the more than an hour of running time and this should please most everyone, especially the young people.

The basic idea of Barrymore, the once-great Shakespearean actor, instructing a modern dance leader in the person of Kyser, is amusing. But is spreads pretty thin in this film which might have been improved considerably by cutting the length.

The story opens with the press agent for Barrymore, played by Patsy Kelly, attempting to get a sponsor for a radio program. In order to get some publicity she and the press agent for Kay Kyser give out the story that Barrymore will teach the band leader how to play Shakespeare. Kyser begins reading Shakespeare and Barrymore has ample opportunity to rant and make faces. The climax is reached at a benefit performance during which Kyser makes his debut in a modernized version of Romeo and Juliet, after Barrymore loses his voice.

The musical numbers are good, with Ginny Simms doing some pleasing singing. The songs include "Humpty Dumpty Heart," "How Long Did I Dream," "Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes," "Romeo Smith and Juliet Jones" and "Que Chica." Lupe Velez dances one rhumba. In a particularly amusing sequence Kyser dreams that he is a bull fighter and before a cheering throng fights a bull that has the head of Barrymore. The producer and director was David L. Butler.

Miss Polly

(UA—Roach)

Streamlined Feature

This is the fourth in Hal Roach's series of Streamlined Features designed for combining with a longer attraction—this runs 45 minutes—by exhibitors who sell two pictures for the price of one. It rates alongside of "Niagara Falls" in the series, which is to say below "Tanks a Million" and above "All-American Co-Ed," in point of laughs clocked on the occasion of its previewing at the same theatre in which the others were submitted to public test.

Leading off with the humor of gag and gadget, Slim Summerville parading a sequence of household inventions which don't work, the film collects a consistent crackle of amusement for better than half its running time. Toward the end, when it switches to the humor of dialogue, the comedy tapers off and the picture ends as if out of breath.

Fred Guiol directed, getting best results from the seasoned talents of Mr. Summerville, ZaSu Pitts and Kathleen Howard, not much from the others. The script, pertaining to the lifting of the lid on a small town dominated by bluenoses, is by Eugene Conrad and Edward E. Seabrook, who could have used a good ending to advantage.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, where it kept the townfolk laughing most of the way but left them cold at the finish.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Four Jacks and a Jill

(RKO Radio)

Musical

"Four Jacks and a Jill" is a musical, and as such, is short on plot development and long on song and dance embellishment.

The cast includes Ray Bolger as "Nifty," which very appropriately describes his dancing; Anne Shirley, who sings well and even does a little dance with Mr. Bolger; June Havoc, new-comer, famous as the sister of Gypsy Rose Lee and as one of the stars in the stage hit, "Pal Joey," who is decidedly interesting; Desi Arnaz, who is decidedly good-looking, and Jack Durant, another new-comer from "Pal Joey," who makes his film debut as a gangster.

The songs by Mort Greene and Harry Revel are lilting and some of them should become popular. They include "Karanina," "I Haven't a Thing to Wear," "Wherever You Are," "You Go Your Way," and "I'm in Good Shape." Another is "Boogie Woogie Conga."

Anne Shirley is befriended by Ray Bolger, leader of a four-piece orchestra, and in return, secures an engagement for them at the Little Aregal Cafe, with herself as vocalist, by pretending that she knew the King of Aregal. Desi Arnaz pretends to be the King and complicates the flowering love affair between Bolger and Shirley. When Arnaz finally runs off with June Havoc, the real King of Aregal (also portrayed by Arnaz) appears on the scene and complicates matters again by being attracted by Miss Shirley. And on this uncertain note, the picture ends.

Jack Hively directed and John Twist was the producer.

Previewed at the company projection room before a small audience of trade-press reviewers and members of the home office. There wasn't much reaction.—I. S.

The King—(Le Roi)

(French—Trio Films)

Royal Comedy

Kings are gay fellows with democratic camaraderie in their hearts and a great way with the ladies, some believe. This sly comedy, produced in pre-Vichy France by Les Films Modernes, endeavors to illustrate the point. Generally it succeeds, although its cinematic accomplishments are not particularly notable.

Victor Francen, as the "King of Cerdania" portrays visiting royalty in Paris with neatly underlined democratic travesty. The King knows monarchs are a disappearing race. But he plays his "role" in state council and boudoir to the hilt, with affected accent and keen sense of regal frivolity. His visit to France to sign a treaty is enmeshed with amatory intrigue with an actress. Elvire Popesco, and a tale of cuckoldry involving the pert wife of a self made French senator. Raimu, as the democratic politician, is amusing and glad to spend his wealth, wife and collectivist ideals for social position. Gaby Morlay is engaging as his wife, an ex-seamstress unawed by money or King's kisses.

The picture is not general screen entertainment. In plot, exploitation of double meaning, both in French and the English sub-titles, and theme, it is better suited to the stage than to the motion picture theatre.

The screen play by Louis Vermeuil from an old stage play gives sparkle to the plot and moves without lag. Direction by Piere Colombier is not equal to other pictures from Les Films Modernes.

Reviewed at the 5th Avenue Playhouse, New York, among a Saturday night audience which appeared to understand sufficient French to laugh heartily at certain dialogue and gave evidence of finding entertainment in the film.—JOHN STUART, JR.

A Date with the Falcon

(RKO Radio)

Crime vs. Honeymoon

This is routine mystery-romance fare, from the supreme nonchalance of the adventuring hero to the hysterical impatience of the bride-to-be.

"The Falcon" is again forced to postpone his wedding trip because of crime and the inability of the law to cope with it. This time it's diamonds, synthetic diamonds of incomparable excellence, falling into the hands of a ring of criminals, the formula stolen and the inventor ostensibly murdered. The lack of suspense, for the audience is never in doubt as to the identity of the culprits or the ability of "The Falcon" as played by George Sanders to extricate himself from tight places, is partly compensated for by comedy. But the humor is often as routine as the mystery in spite of the efforts of James Gleason as the hard-as-nails police inspector and Allan Jenkins as the hero's man Friday.

Director Irving Reis never lets the story drag but a lack of proper emphasis keeps it seesawing between comedy-romance and detection, to the detriment of both. Howard Benedict produced the film.

Previewed at the RKO projection room before a small audience who were not noticeably amused.—E. A. CUNNINGHAM.

Double Cross

(Producers Rel. Corp., 1940-41)

Cops and Racketeers

Produced by John G. Bachmann and directed by Albert Kelley, "Double Cross" is another little melodrama about racketeers versus the law, with the law achieving victory, thus furnishing additional proof that crime does not pay.

The plot, discussed in detail on page 160 of the Product Digest Section, is concerned with a young policeman who pretends to become one of a group of racketeers in order to clear a fellow policeman's name, protect his own father, a police captain and round up the racketeers generally.

Kane Richmond is the hero policeman. Pauline Moore is his heart interest, Wynne Gibson and John Miljan are the partners in crime who run a gambling establishment, double cross each other and eventually lose their lives, and Richard Beach is the policeman who is unjustly accused of murder, but whose name is finally cleared by the hero.

The picture will appeal largely to those who just want some action—regardless.

George R. Batcheller was in charge of production.

Football Comedy

PRODUCER: Mark Hellinger. Directed by Allan Dwan. Based on the book, "My Life and Hard Times", by James Thurber.

PLAYERS: Jack Oakie, George Murphy, Linda Darnell, Walter Brennan, Milton Berle, Sheldon Leonard, Donald Meek.

SYNOPSIS:

A small mid-western college is blessed with the services of a great halfback (Jack Oakie). The dim-witted football star is handled with extreme care. In New York, a sinister mob, realizing the possibilities, sends representatives to the little college for reports on the star's condition every Saturday. Clayton begins bowling over its opposition, Saturday after Saturday, and back in New York the mob is coining money. Finally, the big game nears. Believing he can make more money by betting against Clayton, the head of the mob has the star kidnapped. The star gets into the game in the last minute and scores the winning touchdown. There are several offshoots to the main theme of this comedy.

Harry Pulham (Robert Young), born and brought up in the stuffy atmosphere of a wealthy Boston family, returns from the World War with a restless spirit that rebels against his humdrum Boston routine. He gets a job with an advertising firm in New York and meets Marvin Myles (Hedy Lamarr), copywriter. They fall in love. Then Pulham's father dies and he is forced to return to settle the estate, and carry on his father's business. He marries Kay Motford (Ruth Hussey), family friend since childhood. Marvin marries. Pulham and Marvin meet a quarter of a century later. Their old love flares up but each realizes they can't go back—they must follow their destiny.

CONFIRM OR DENY
(20th Century-Fox)

Drama

PRODUCER: Len Hammond. Directed by Archie Mayo.

PLAYERS: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett, Roddy McDowall, John Loder, Raymond Walburn, Arthur Shields, Eric Blore.

SYNOPSIS:

This is a story of a ruthless, driving head of the British offices of a great American newspaper chain in one eventful day; the day in which the newspaperman (Don Ameche), sure that an invasion was coming in a matter of hours, wrested a cable, at an absurd price, from a staid English company and set up shop in the cellar of his hotel with a censor (John Loder) and a teletypist (Joan Bennett) to ride herd on him. He gets the story he wanted—but he doesn't send it to New York. This decision follows an eventful period in which a time bomb lodges itself in the cellar and the reaction to the impending invasion of various people in the cellar, including the teletypist and the young office boy (Roddy McDowall).

DESIGN FOR SCANDAL
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy-Drama

PRODUCER: John W. Considine, Jr. Directed by Norman Taurog.

PLAYERS: Rosalind Russell, Walter Pidgeon, Edward Arnold, Lee Bowman, Jean Rogers, Mary Beth Hughes, Guy Kibbee.

SYNOPSIS:

In a moment when he believes the end has come, Jeff Sherman (Walter Pidgeon), ace photographer, tells off his publisher-boss, Judson Blair (Edward Arnold). For which Jeff is promptly fired. To return to the good graces of Blair, Jeff decides to rectify a situation the publisher has gotten into with his gold digging wife. She has obtained a divorce and has been awarded $5,000 monthly alimony. The divorce judge, a stubborn young woman named Cornelia Porter (Rosalind Russell), has stated she'll not consider an appeal. Jeff's plan is to get Cornelia's name mixed up in a scandal. But Jeff falls in love with Cornelia and then has to repair the damage he has caused.

THE PERFECT SNOB
(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Romance

PRODUCER: Walter Morosco. Directed by Ray McCarey.

PLAYERS: Lynn Bari, Cornel Wilde, Charlie Ruggles, Charlotte Greenwood, Anthony Quinn, Alan Mowbray.

SYNOPSIS:

When word of the engagement of his daughter gets to him, Dr. Mason (Charlie Ruggles), a veterinarian, decides to take a trip to Honolulu—where she is—and take a look at his future son-in-law. Finding that the man is old enough to be her father, Mason "hires" a young man to break up the romance. The young man (Cornel Wilde) falls in love with the daughter (Lynn Bari), but to make sure that the girl is not the golddigger she appears to be, he has his friend (Anthony Quinn) pose as a man of wealth. The upshot of the matter is that Quinn falls for the girl too, and it takes a deal of straightening out before true love finds its course.

DONALD'S CAMERA (RKO)
Disney Color Cartoon (14,112)

A sign reading "Shoot nature with a camera instead of a gun" so impresses Donald that he buys a camera. After failure to get a chipmunk and a rabbit to pose, Donald spots a woodpecker. Don takes a tube of toothpaste and squeezes out the paste so that it looks like a worm. The woodpecker eats the paste and begins to bubble. While thus engaged, Don puts salt on his tail, a cork in his mouth and slicks Mr. Woodpecker up for a picture. The woodpecker escapes, pecks a tree until it falls, flattening Donald's camera. Purple with rage Don dashes back to the sporting goods store, grabs a gun and returns to the forest for revenge.

AT THE STROKE OF TWELVE (WB)
Broadway Brevity (7103)

A Damon Runyon story, this tells of Lance McGowan (Craig Stevens), racketeer, who on the night he decides to go straight, finds himself trapped in a fusillade of gunfire between two rival mobsters. Winged by a bullet, he escapes into the house occupied by a wealthy recluse (Elizabeth Risdon). One of his would-be assassins is found riddled with bullets from the gun Lance dropped. Lance is arrested and tried on circumstantial evidence. The jury finds him guilty of murder in the first degree. But the recluse enters the courtroom to swear that Lance was a guest in her house that night, especially at the stroke of twelve, when the killing was done. Lance is released. The story ends with the old lady telling Lance the curious facts which gave her a reason for saving his life.

GLIMPSES OF FLORIDA (MGM)
FitzPatrick Traveltalk (Color) (T-311)

In 1878 a Spanish brig was washed ashore in a storm, spilling its cargo of twenty thousand cocoanuts along the Florida beach. The few inhabitants residing in the region at that time salvaged the cargo and planted the cocoanuts. Picturing the palm-fringed shores of Miami and other popular resorts of the state, Mr. FitzPatrick goes on to show the natural beauty of the Florida Everglades, the little Suwanee River, long immortalized in song, and the cypress gardens, noted for their effulgent blooms of colorful flowers. Also shown are Seminole Indians at Silver Springs and Ross Allen, who has captured some thirty-six thousand alligators, wrestling with the reptiles.

"TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE" IS EXCITING ENTERTAINMENT FOR YOUNG AND OLD! LET'S HAVE EXCITING CAMPAIGNS !

No. 3091 November 6th, 1941

LIFE BEGINS FOR JOHNNY TARZAN !

"Tarzan's Secret Treasure" is the best Tarzan picture so far ! That's what everybody said in the projection room today. More excitement! More conflict! More action! More comedy! More Tarzans! If your customers would like to grab a jungle vine and swing themselves right out of this world and go soaring thru a jolly, care-free, make-believe adventure, tell 'em to see this new Tarzan. Here is perfect escapist entertainment! ::: Tarzan discovers gold. So will you! ::: There is more comedy in this one than ever before. Barry Fitzgerald supplies it! ::: Tarzan, who met debutante in his last picture, still has her; Maureen, flower of the jungle, has her hands full with big Tarzan and little junior, plus a pickaninny who's come to live with 'em. ::: Cheeta, the chimpanzee, is terrific; should be billed! ::: This may be your Christmas holiday picture! ::: P.S.--Weissmuller talks!

An important announcement of Warners' policy on
"They Died With Their Boots On
.....next page, please

We could release THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON for Thanksgiving and we'd make money. So would you. But we're not going to release it.

Instead, BOOTS will be launched in a definitely limited number of Thanksgiving engagements—much in the manner of SERGEANT YORK—but at regular prices.

And when we do turn the print over to you for Christmas playdates, we'll both make a lot more money.

Because with that print you'll get, without charge, invaluable experience that can't be bought. You'll know exactly what went into successful campaigns. You'll know in advance the kind of business the picture will do—just as you knew that SERGEANT YORK was tops. Yes, this time you'll even know how many holdover weeks to allow —before your engagement starts.

Sure, it's an unprecedented plan! And it will probably confound a lot of smart guys! But it's great merchandising—it's that extra merchandising—that has the whole trade humming about

Vol. 145, No. 7 November 15, 1941

SO HE WENT HOME

PROBABLY you have seen those pages of last week's Herald devoted to presenting exhibitors' responses to an invitation to have their say about what goes on, and what does not, in this industry. There's more of it from more exhibitors this week. By the hundreds, from theatres large and small, they welcome occasion to speak out.

From the several hundred expressions in hand it is possible to discern a certain pattern of exhibitor reaction.

Most important, over all, is the general evidence of the divergence of perspective between the retailers of entertainment and the manufacturers.

This brings to mind a passage in an interview that Mr. Owen D. Young gave Mr. Russell Owen for the New York Times magazine the other day. The scene was the Young home in Van Hornsville, New York state village, where Mr. Young has returned from a career of big time industrialism to be a farmer, again.

"When the first radio station opened up, I came back here to listen to it—from Pittsburgh," remarked Mr. Young. I had a lot to do with the beginning of it, you know, but I wanted to hear it here. I didn't care whether only a few grunts and squeals came out of it, it was communication with the outside world, and I wanted to realize what it might have been like when I was a boy if we had had a radio. . . ."

THERE might be a great adventure for our friend Lady Hollywood, and her boy friends, if she were to drop into some of the Van Hornvilles between the coasts, without fanfare and local make-up, to really touch and taste America-at-home.

The arts live in tight worlds of tired palates. The trend in those restricted communities of intensified self-experience is toward higher flavours of the exotic and erotic—cocktails and columns, critics writing for each other and in hope of quotation, racetracks, night clubs, and smart-chart magazines, "Glamour" with a capital "G", and with the camera at ringside and bedside.

Really—that is not what it is all about. Even the radio knows better.

STATES' RIGHTS

AMID the clangor of arms and dins of conflicts external and internal in this land of ours, there has been little heed to the larger significances of certain basic issues pertaining to the republic involved in the legal issues raised by the divergence of the federal Consent Decree on motion picture selling and the enactments of the State of Minnesota.

Paramount Pictures Corporation, you will recall, has asked and won in the federal court, subject to government appeal, in higher courts, the right to do business in Minnesota in Minnesota's way. Also Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest have asked the other concerns under the decree dictation to join the movement, and Warner Brothers have announced such a proceeding. The Department of Justice, seeming yet to deem the Minnesota measure without authority, appears to be biding its time.

The problem of the motion picture interests concerned is important enough in fact, but more important in principle.

As has been observed here before, the larger issue is over that ancient question of the rights of a State as a component of the United States.

There is also an issue of more recent origin which pertains to devices by which courts and suits are used in lieu of legislation and the processes of law-making previously held a function of a people engaged in self-government.

A chicken case decided the fate of a Blue Eagle. Maybe the much berated motion picture will one day be filling a niche in the history of state's rights.

IN THE MIDDLE

EVERY ten years the Bureau of the Census calculates the center of population of the United States, and now discovers that for 1940 it was in Sullivan County, Indiana, thirty-six miles south of Terre Haute. This puts it right smack in the homeland of our Mr. Will Hays, of the law firm of Hays & Hays, and resident in the little city of Sullivan, along with Hollywood and New York.

The center of population is calculated as the point where the United States would balance on a pivot in terms of the weight of population as it is distributed east and west, north and south, and assuming that everyone were of equal weight.

A calculation of the center of influence in the motion picture, which has to consider a lot of intangibles, brings one estimate that it might be in the region of Flagstaff, Arizona.

ONE can conjecture little about what history will have to say of today and our doings of now, but it is certain indeed that in recording the flux of the tides it will be necessary to record that in the City of New York in the year of 1941 for a shop, a department store and general caravanserai of the people, there were some very special sales advertised with such phrases as "Cellini to Hearst to Klotz" and "Gainsborough to Gimbels to Gallagher". An era ends, or an era begins?

Along the highways of the East there is a veritable rash of new amusement centers built around bowling alleys, complete with grills and cocktail lounges. It seems only yesterday that we were beset with miniature golf courses.

Spreading Arbitration

REGIONAL tribunals of the motion picture arbitration system will be used for the arbitration of disputes involving all forms of industrial national defense projects beginning December 1st.

The five consenting distributors have offered the full facilities of the film arbitration offices in 31 cities to the American Arbitration Association for the settlement of any and all disputes affecting the national defense program.

The commercial and industrial arbitration activities of the AAA, appointed administrator of the motion picture system in the consent decree, have hitherto been entirely separate from film disputes. This is the first time that the non-profit association has had a nationwide administrative organization at its disposal.

Film arbitration hearing rooms, the services of clerks, and other facilities will be at the disposal of the AAA in hearing outside controveries. Motion picture hearings will retain precedence however.

It was reported that the budget committee had approved a budget of $320,000 for administration of the film arbitration system and the Appeals Board during the coming year, an operating budget of $295,000, and a contingent fund of $25,000. The new budget, drawn by Joseph Hazen, Van Vechten Veeder chairman of the Appeal Board and Paul F. Warburg, of the AAA becomes effective on November 20th, the first anniversary of the decree's submission to Judge Goddard. It does not have to be reapproved by the court.

Oh, Say, Can You 'G'

THE G-string has the approval of the Hays Organization—in a motion picture title, at least.

And, so, David O. Selznick moves closer to the production, and United Artists closer to the distribution of a motion picture based upon strip-teaser Gypsy Rose Lee's first contribution to literature, a little Simon and Schuster number now circulating under the caption of "G-String Murders." It might be explained right here and now that a G-String is that portion of scanty feminine attire popularized by ladies of burlesque which is considered to make all the difference between a police raid and giving customers of that kind of theatricals their money's worth.

Katherine Brown, eastern story editor for Mr. Selznick, newly inducted partner of United Artists, had achieved an option on "G-String Murders" for the screen, contingent on its approval by the MPPDA. The title was approved this week, but judgment on the material still pends.

That Inquiry

"AN avalanche of correspondence which has overwhelmed" Senator D. Worth Clark of Idaho and his fellow isolationists following their fight against revision of the Neutrality Act was reported in Washington this week as cause for delaying any further activity with respect to the Clark subcommittee investigation of alleged motion picture propaganda.

At Senator Clark's office, it was said on Wednesday that no effort would be made to get his subcommittee together this week, and that possibly, the group would meet next week to map their future course. With the Thanksgiving holidays intervening, it is quite likely that the Wheeler-Nye-Clark investigation will not resume activity until the last week in the month, or possibly the first week in December.

NBC Red's Birthday

IN the midst of the "most serious times in its history," and hard ridden by governmental orders and regulations the National Broadcasting Company paused briefly this week to observe the 15th birthday of its Red Network, oldest of the air chains.

A week long series of cake-cuttings for press, clients, advertising agents and other friends of broadcasting preceded a birthday banquet and a 105-minute broadcast by hundreds of performers on Saturday evening, to be carried by 243 stations of the combined Red and Blue circuits and short waved to Europe and almost 100 stations of NBC's new network for the Pan-Americas.

The soon effective FCC order divorcing Red and Blue networks, NBC's court fight to halt it, the increasing pressure of governmental regulation and the constantly hotter competition from Mutual and Columbia for fat sponsored accounts were not mentioned once during the birthday festivities.

No Nazi Film Release

U. S. CUSTOMS' officials in New York this week are not releasing any of those 16 German-made films, held since early summer and shipped here for American distribution through Ufa Films, New York. As reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 30th, customs' officers seized the pictures on a technicality applying to all importers who "did not comply with certain U. S. customs' regulations." At that time it also was suggested that strict interpretation of present customs' laws would have to be studied in order to determine whether the Nazi films "tend to incite to riot." There have been no further public expressions by the Government agents.

Nine of the 16 pictures, titles translated from the German, are: "Bismarck," "Between Hamburg and Haiti," "Queen's Heart," "Virtue's Beloved," "Summer, Sun and Erika," "Our Miss Doctor," "Village of Sin," "Sky-blue Evening Gown" and "A Life Long."

George Nitze, president of Ufa, at midweek declared in New York that "for the present," no legal action was being planned against the U. S. to effect release of the films.

Whitney Mum

THERE is still no word from John Hay Whitney, head of the motion picture division of Nelson A. Rockefeller's Office of Inter-American Affairs, on accomplishments of his two-month study of motion pictures, Hollywood, goodwill and Latin America, in South American countries.

Far into Wednesday night, Mr. Whitney and Mr. Rockefeller, behind closed doors of New York's exclusive Links Club, on East 62nd Street, were telling the heads of the major film companies, "in strictest confidence," what was found in Latin America and what Hollywood should do to woo goodwill in the other republics. They reported, Mr. Whitney's agents intimated, much "important information," filmwise and politically, on sentiments, preferences, prejudices and the motion picture needs and facilities of South America.

Similar reports, behind closed doors, have been delivered to official Washington, Hollywood producers, and other industry figures by Mr. Whitney.

What the industry will be asked to do for hemisphere goodwill remained unstated at press time. There was talk, however, of casting Hollywood stars and other talent in special 35 mm shorts and features for South America, of expanding free, non-theatrical film programs, and of forming new "semi-official" distribution channels to augment State Department and commercial circulation of American pictures.

Echoes of Dr. Short

THE Motion Picture Research Council has not given up its drive to have Congress outlaw all motion picture block and blind selling, a campaign started in 1928 by Dr. William H. Short who turned the original purpose of a grant from the Payne Foundation from a study of social values of motion pictures, to lobbying for a law against block and blind selling.

Dr. Short died on January 10, 1935, on a train en route to New York from some place in Pennsylvania. His efforts against the prevailing industry selling practice had gained wide attention in Congress, aided by Allied States Association. It was these efforts that led to growing support in Congress for anti-block legislation (Pettingill Bill, Neely Bill, et al.) and the eventual inclusion in the Government's consent decree of two key clauses: prohibiting the offering for sale of pictures in blocks of more than five, and compulsory advance screenings.

Following the death of Dr. Short, the Research Council moved to San Francisco, under a new president, Ray Lyman Wilbur, who continues to formulate research plans and engage in community affairs, screenwise. Also, a bulletin from headquarters now announces that the Council is "pledged to continuing support of the Neely" anti-block-and-blind selling bill in Congress.

"Raisin' Hell with the Movies" . . . . Bingay

Malcolm W. Bingay, editorial director of the Detroit Free Press and contributor to the Saturday Evening Post, in his daily column entitled "Good Morning" in Wednesday's Free Press, said in part:

"Once upon a time when I was young, I was on the program committee for the American Society of Newspaper Editors. I had a bright idea. Nothing much ever came of it, of course, but, like the phosphorescent glow from any piece of dried wood, it looked bright in the darkness of that committee meeting. I suggested that the editors, who spend 52 weeks of the year telling everybody else their faults, set aside one of those weeks to have other folks come to the meeting and tell us to our faces what they thought about us.

"I would like to have a fellow like Will Hays, f'rinstance, tell us what the motion picture industry thinks of American movie critics and the attitude of the press in general toward the flicker trade.

"Right now there is a rash of newspaper and magazine comment about the decline of the movies. Gilbert Seldes comes right out and says he is really scared about their future—going to the demnition bow-wows—and, as usual, he blames the producers.

"Certainly there is something wrong with the movies. It would be a remarkable thing if there was nothing wrong with the movies. There is something radically wrong with everything else in the world.

"Every boy fresh out of college thinks it is not only his inalienable right but his ordained duty to raise hell with the movies. Well, I've watched the thing grow from its nickelodeon days down to the present, and it is my belief that the movie has improved as steadily as any institution in our civilization. And in many respects it has far surpassed the publishing business itself—books, magazines and newspapers—in its social and cultural responsibilities.

"The order of the day is for newspapers and magazines to run layouts of young girls wearing sweaters to emphasize and exaggerate their breasts and to explain with gleeful captions that 'such poses are barred by Will Hays in Hollywood'.

"The movies are far more respectable than a good many newspapers, and far more decent than most of our best selling books, and as for culture and art they rank in intelligence above most of the popular Broadway shows.

"They have done an heroic job in creating a new art form and providing entertainment for countless millions of people in every crossroad of the world. Give them credit and quit picking on them.

"Call Will Hays to the stand."

Tempest in Nebraska

NEBRASKA'S attorney general brought an anti-trust suit this week in Omaha court against the R. D. Goldberg Theatres and major distributors in the territory as the result of a controversy involving the A. H. Blank and Sam Epstein Omaha theatres. Distributors are in the middle in the fight.

Litigation began some weeks ago when the Blank Omaha company brought action against Mr. Goldberg, who operates six theatres in the same city, for infractions of a lease. Mr. Goldberg responded with an anti-trust suit charging the Blank company and the major distributors with conspiring to put him out of business. On Monday, the attorney general's action was filed against Mr. Goldberg and the distributors.

WALSH TAKES OVER IATSE, BIOFF GETS 10 YEARS AND BROWNE, 8

New President Asks Chance to Redeem Union 'By Action'; Convicted Men Fined $20,000 in Addition to Jail Terms

The IATSE, the motion picture's dominant labor organization, drew a new regime this week, as the old one drew a penitentiary sentence.

From the Ritz-Carlton on the boardwalk in Atlantic City, the board of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes announced Richard F. Walsh of Brooklyn as president, Sunday, successor to George Browne, who resigned Saturday.

Wednesday that same George Browne, and William Bioff, his personal representative, stood before Judge John Knox in Federal Court in New York to receive sentence.

George Browne: 8 years and fine of $20,000.

William Bioff: 10 years and $20,000 fine.

Pegler 'Attentions' Cited

Martin Conboy of counsel for the defense addressed the court before sentence with a plea for a degree of clemency which included reference to what he considered the "bitter" attentions of Westbrook Pegler, columnist for the World-Telegram and syndicated papers. He urged the court to "disregard public comment and clamour."

It is to be remembered that Mr. Pegler, incident to his attentions to labor racketeering over several years has made Browne and Bioff the subject of many of his most pointed and positive attacks, and that it was, in fact, Mr. Pegler whose pursuit of police and jail records in Chicago caused Bioff to be returned to that city to finish an uncompleted term on a vice charge, last year.

So it came that Henry A. Utterhart, also for the defense, following Mr. Conboy, took up the matter of the columnist, naming him first in a flood of confusion as "Pegbrook" and then correcting it to "Holbook."

Mr. Utterhart made much of the assertion that the returning of Bioff to Chicago to serve out his jail sentence was "the first time in the history of the United States that extradition was granted for a misdemeanor."

Mathias F. Correa, for the government, dismissed considerations of Mr. Pegler and the press, proceeding to discuss the defendants. He reiterated that description of Bioff as a "Chicago hoodlum" was correct on the evidence. The attorney also went into matters concerning Jack Zuto of Chicago viceland and remarked that Zuto had been shot twenty minutes after asking Bioff for a bodyguard. There was mention too of the Al Capone organization in Chicago, and reference too to the matter of the sudden taking off of Tommy Malloy, which created a vacancy in the Chicago organization—which Mr. Pegler once recorded so poetically.

Mr. Correa told Judge Knox a Federal Grand Jury still was investigating labor in the industry, in a separate indictment, charging extortion of more than $1,000,000, and naming Louis Kaufman, Newark IATSE local business agent, and Nick Dean, Chicago IATSE man, now hiding, as accomplices of Browne and Bioff. He added the two per cent special IATSE assessment, mentioned in the trial, controlled by Browne only, and purpose of which was vague, was also under inspection. He also suspected the smaller companies of paying Browne and Bioff.

When the defendants stood up for sentence Browne's eyes were on the ceiling, Bioff's on the floor.

They had had a foretaste of prison because since Thursday before they had been held in the New York Federal House of Detention. They came and went in reluctant steps with one U. S. marshal ahead, and two behind. They returned to the same place after the Judge had sentenced them and refused to admit them to bail.

In handing down sentence, Judge Knox said: "In this case these defendants have indeed been heinous. Not only have they violated the laws of the United States but they have signally betrayed the trusts that were committed to their care. Their concern, instead of being that of the members of the union, was their personal gain and advantage.

"Through their acts they disregarded the welfare of the union and brought their organization into disrepute before the public."

He called the defendants "dishonored in heart, mind and action." The men and women who trusted them are now "dismayed and disheartened," he said, and he ended by saying that by their conviction "I am hopeful that the cause of labor may in part be redeemed.

"If this redemption should not now be brought about not only in the defendants' union but in any others, then heaven help the cause of union labor."

Appeal Filed

After the sentencing Mr. Conboy filed the formal notice of appeal and a hearing on the preliminary application for release of the prisoners on bail was set for the next afternoon. The principal contention of the application for appeal was that the sentence was excessive.

The trial had consumed approximately four weeks, during which Harry Warner, Major Albert Warner, Charles Moscowitz, Nicholas Schenck, C. C. Moskowitz, and other majors' officials, testified they gave about $828,000 to the two labor leaders, under threats of strikes and fear of bodily harm.

Specifically, Judge Knox sentenced Bioff to ten years on the first and second indictment counts, and ten on the third, with suspended sentence on that; and he gave Browne eight years on the first two counts, and ten on the third, also suspending the latter. Each was fined $20,000.

For good behavior they may receive three to five days off their sentences per month, and are eligible for parole after service of one-third of the period.

Mr. Correa later observed that Browne might have his sentence cut, not Bioff. He also predicted Bioff might be sent to Alcatraz, Browne to Lewisburg.

The prisoners must remain in jail until their fines are paid.

Walsh Takes Over As Head of IATSE

Meanwhile, Richard F. Walsh, 41, a Brooklyn resident, president of that borough's stagehands' Local 4, and a "man-from-the-ranks," this week assumed Browne's post in the New York headquarters of the Alliance. In his first interview in his new position he pledged maintenance of studio locals' autonomy, and said the Browne-Bioff affair was "the first reflection" on the IA's 52-year record.

The organization's international board, meeting specially at Atlantic City over the weekend, elected him Sunday—unanimously, it was reported. The day before, they had accepted

RICHARD F. WALSH New International President of the IATSE

Browne's resignation, following his conviction in New York Federal Court, with Bioff, for extortion.

Mr. Walsh, a board member, and until his election, a vice-president of the Alliance, joined the Brooklyn local in 1917, as apprentice electrician. He became its president in 1924. He was its business agent from 1926 to 1937. In 1939, he again became president. He was elected an IA vice-president in 1934.

Noting his organization's long unblemished record, Mr. Walsh, Tuesday, at New York Alliance headquarters asked for a chance to clear "with our actions" whatever suspicion may have grown about the organization because of the Browne-Bioff disclosures.

Most immediate and most important IA job is to help the Coast locals obtain new contracts with the producers, he said, hastening with the qualification that they would retain their independence, and saying: "We'll give them all the help they need, if they ask for it."

No "Personal Representative"

He said he would not appoint any "personal representative;" that the organization was inspecting the two per cent special assessment fund mentioned in the trial of Browne and Bioff; but that it was discontinued more than a year ago; that, because Browne controlled it, he, Mr. Walsh, knew little about it; that the Alliance was in its best financial position.

Reentrance into the studio basic labor pact was a possibility, he admitted, pointing out, however, that the desire to maintain locals' autonomy militated against reentrance. Reentrance, he asserted, would mean negotiation by the Alliance of contracts for all locals.

Local situations are in control of local organizations until they ask for aid, Mr. Walsh reiterated, when asked about the Local 702, Laboratory Technicians', drive to organize laboratories in the East, and about the Local 306 and Empire State Operators union rivalry in New York for control of projectionists.

Of the former, he merely predicted all laboratories would shortly have contracts with IA unions. Of the latter, he said the union rivalry would continue unless the national organization was asked for aid.

More of what the Exhibitor has to say About most Everything

THE motion picture exhibitor, independent or affiliated, has decided notions about what he'd like to buy and how, and what he wants to sell and how. He appears to be at some difference of opinion with the branches of production and distribution, as reflected in the hundreds of responses that are coming to Motion Picture Herald in response to an invitation to say what's on his mind.

As was indicated last week, in behalf of real candour there has been no demand, in the invitation, that the exhibitor should sign his comment; so it will be found that some bear names and many are anonymous—but all are exhibitors engaged in showing motion pictures for a living.

In sum, there is here such an excursion among the showmen of the land, and a listening to them thinking out loud, as has not been had before. Here are their notions, opinions. —THE EDITOR.

¶ More comedy features. More adventure features. Less drab stuff like contained in "Stars Look Down." More plain pictures like "The Shepherd of the Hills." Simple tales well told. Avoid all high brow stuff, it's not for the masses. (Independents)

¶ The elimination of the following as mediums (a) to amuse or (b) to treat as commonplace or accepted in good society:
1—intoxicating liquor drinking
2—divorce
3—prostitution of sex
In their place such pictures as the Judge Hardy series, the Dr. Kildare series and others of a similar nature prove the American people will support clean, wholesome, humorous pictures.—R. V. Seaman, Gilbertsville, N. Y. (Independent)

¶ Repeal the consent decree! (Independent)

¶ No consent decree. We want a trial of the Minnesota 20 per cent elimination anti-consent decree law. (Independent)

¶ Avoid propaganda and war pictures!—A. EDWARDS, Orpheum Theatre, Orwigsburg, Penna. (Independent)

¶ Stop series of pictures. Make less and better pictures. Stop short pictures, not double features. No English pictures. More prints. No sliding scale over 40 per cent. (Independents)

¶ My idea of what is wrong with this business is the notion the few "majors" have that each new selling year must bring increased film rental. They have no idea that a saturation point must be reached sometime, and that prices cannot go skyrocketing forever. Eventually this system will put all of the small independents out of business. (Independent)

¶ Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newly adopted 'sliding-scale' and State Release Dates will aid the exhibitor to a greater extent than any other innovation in the theatre industry for the past few years. Abolish 'double-bills' and all features that are made expressly for that purpose. I believe that if the industry as a whole would cut their release schedules to a proportion that would warrent presentable program material—both the distributor and exhibitor would profit to a greater degree. Take measures to prohibit alien minds from dictating to the production offices! (Independent)

¶ Less propaganda and more comedy. Will producers never find out that aviation pictures are poison to women?—CHET BENT, Strand Theatre, Malden, Mass. (Independent)

¶ The following stars are great boxoffice bets for us, but we have had too few pictures from them to rate them the top in our receipts: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Barbara Stanwyck, Irene Dunne, William Powell. (Tyrone Power too many costume pictures.)—Savoy Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. (Independent)

¶ Yes! Make a law causing all exchanges to send out all prints with 12 ft. numbered leaders —or at least 12 ft. of leader, and fine all operators scoring up changeover cues. This would save many operators daily headaches. (Independent)

¶ The thing I want most, and I know it will better this industry and my business.
(1) Elimination of double bills.
(2) Right "price" for Metro product.
(3) Eliminate "columnist gossip" and "brainy" movie critics. (Circuit)

¶ Give the new youngsters a chance, especially those who click. (Independent)

¶ Less pictures and better ones. (North Dakota independent)

¶ Why should I pay 30-40% for so-called "Big" pictures which have no star value whatsoever? (Canadian independent)

¶ Not too many sophisticated comedies. More big pictures around 80 to 90 minutes instead of over 100 minutes. Better editing. Too many pictures have long-drawn-out sequences which ultimately spoil the pictures. This should be done in Hollywood. There is also plenty of room for improvement in short features.—D. E. DINTENTON, Capitol Theatre, Saskatoona, Sask. (Circuit)

¶ As an exhibitor of 30 years in business, my pet hopes are that we once again return to "exhibiting," and eliminate the throat-cutting competition of the "crockery business," and the poolroom tactics of petty "gambling" in our theatres. May the Lord help us if we all don't act quickly. I still love this business.—(N. Y. independent)

¶ Eliminate all class productions in small towns. Confine the producing end to entertainment angle for the masses. When a mistake is made cancel release and add to balance of product cost of each flop. This would assure heavy attendance and relieve us from trying to sort them out as we go along. We now take too many chances and most of the time are wrong. (Pennsylvania independent)

¶ Percentage pictures are unfair to small theatres. Block of five will cost exhibitors more money for film. Producers make too many "b" pictures, and not enough "a's". (Pennsylvania independent)

¶ Keep the X!!*? fool producers and writers from writing about "what's wrong with the show business" in magazines. Such articles plant ideas in patrons' minds. Talk up our business, not talk down! (Texas independent)

¶ More "down to earth" features and less sophistication. (Washington independent)

¶ Fewer and better pictures. Producers should cut out pictures that nobody wants to see, of which there are plenty, and put all of their efforts on the good ones. The bad ones only tend to kill the theatre business as they get tired of looking at bad ones, and get so they also stay away from the good ones.—C. W. BUERMELE, General Manager, Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., Detroit. (Independent)

¶ Hollywood companies trying to impress how expensive everything is, and not turning out more good pictures. (West Virginia independent)

¶ Cut out murder mysteries; salacious stories; morbid so-called intelligentsia tripe. Make more modern comedy. Stories must be modern and fast paced. War stories are out at the B. O. with few exceptions. Need more western stars with better production value.—SILVER & GIBSON THEATRES, Greenville, Mich. (Independent)

¶ My pet annoyances? Jimmy Fidler and Louella Parsons. (Georgia independent)

¶ Paying patrons in my houses demand comedy productions. They all yelp when we present the tear-jerk stuff. Distributors are making too many pictures too long. No release should exceed 100 minutes. Distributors should devote some attention to the small houses when they make up their press books and include more thumb-nail layouts that include cast and title, not just the title. The small theatre cannot afford to run the big ads. Paramount, Columbia and Warners should watch their prints. Too many have very poor lighting and are blurred. Paramount has the worst condition. Indianapolis Paramount exchange is always short prints and is causing many exhibitors to pass up their product because of this condition. CARL NIESSE, Vogue Theatre Co., Indiana. (Independent)

¶ For the small spots: Make the consent decree optional. By this we mean suppose we buy as a selective deal. The consent decree is a nuisance for us. In turn if it's beneficial to others, that's fine. However, in turn give us the advantage of buying economically as we see it. My play dates are 3 months later this year from release than last year. We lose the advantage of playing after the first runs while the benefits from advertising by radio, newspaper, etc., are hot. R. B. STIERT, Star Theatre, Bridger, Mont. (Independent)

¶ Pet Peeve—The bad press sheet ad mats. Who in the world uses those large three-, four-, five- and six-column ad mats? If these mats were available in two columns it would be a God-send. Short in depth, three-column ad mats, likewise would be useful. With display space from 50c to 90 per inch, and three and four changes of program per week, it costs almost as much to run advertising space in the newspapers as it does for cost of film. Cut down the size of the display ads, inject copy in small spaces and watch the results. (Minnesota independent)

¶ I would like to be able to choose my pictures and date them where I want to play them. Each exhibitor knows about what kind of pictures their patrons like. Many times I have had to play a percentage picture on Sunday when that type should have been shown on Friday and Saturday.—MRS. G. P. QUALEY, Manager, New State Theatre, Sanesboro, Minn. (Independent)

¶ Personally, I believe that there's nothing wrong with this business. It's about time every one in it quit griping over what should be done and do it!. . . . It's about time that we forgot about our competitor and devoted some attention to what we are to do to make a success of our own assignment. It's about time we started to finagle on how to get that huge untapped source of B. O. cash that is around (and we know it's around, just look at G. W. T. W.) It's about time we quit being masterminds and at least two-thirds of us get down to work. I can't see why exhibitors in territories troubled with double features can't get together. At least get together enough to pick out three pictures released a week that they pledge to each other they will not double feature until after a specified clearance period. You're wasting product when you double two good pictures. Annoying patrons when you double a good with the bad, and getting rid of junk when doubling two stinkers.—DOUG GEORGE. (Ohio independent)

¶ A square deal from the producers. We are ready and willing to pay a fair share of our gross for films but we do demand a legitimate profit. We are the equivalent of the retail merchant and are entitled to that part of the profit, whereas we believe the producers are striving to claim both the wholesalers' and retailers' share of the theatre goers' dollars. L. H. WESKIL, Rose Theatre, Colfax, Wash. (Independent)

¶ The outstanding success of Abbott and Costello leads me to believe that this industry lacks some good comedy teams. In years past, theatres were packed with great comedians like "Laurel and Hardy," Charles Chaplin, Fatty Arbuckle, Harold Lloyd. Abbott and Costello brought in the crowds because the public has always wanted this type comedy. It is too bad Abbott and Costello have a set routine. They cannot last because they are the same in every picture. When you think of the great comedians of the past, and then look at our time, you know what the matter is with our business today. We have no great comedians.—WILLIAM G. CLARK. (Arkansas independent)

¶ Knock out the consent decree and go back to straight contract selling with an elimination clause. The decree is the worst thing ever wished on an exhibitor. (Independent)

¶ Better short subjects to take the place of the poor second features on a program.—GRANVILLE MACPHERSON, Portola Theatres, Portola, Cal. (Independent)

¶ We talk and talk of the abolition of double bills, but instead of doing anything about it we see such double features as "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" and "Belle Starr," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "This Woman Is Mine." Here on the West Coast, Fox West Coast Theatres seem to be running hog-wild on it. Why isn't something done??? (California independent)

¶ We are a non-theatrical account (school). On the whole, we are well pleased with the pictures we receive. Our chief objection is to receive a picture which we have not seen, but which comes well recommended with an innocuous title (such as Philadelphia Story) which is entirely unsuited to a school audience.—C. A. SWINGLE, Supt. of Schools, Philadelphia, Pa.

¶ That the film companies take less of the revenue and that they allow theatres more for advertising, remodeling and other things, that help the industry in general. Big pictures now carry such high percentage that there is not much incentive for the exhibitor to get the public in to see them. For instance, we do not book best pictures for weekends, due to percentage terms, but rather book a cheap picture on which it is not necessary to divide receipts. Therefore, the large portion of our people do not see the best pictures. (Kentucky independent)

¶ I believe they should produce more pictures that have a comedy value instead of so many war pictures. People enter the theatre to enjoy themselves, not to make them worry.—GEORGE KELLOFF. (Oregon independent)

¶ The discontinuing of credits on shorts and features. Abolishing consent decree and old selling plan with a 20 or 25 per cent cancellation. Concerted effort by every exhibitor and their organization to stop the film companies making 16 mm. This is one of the major reasons why boxoffice receipts have dropped. Also state and federal institutions, CCC and Army camps showing boxoffice stars free, and every one of them mixed up in politics with their doors wide open to the public, your boxoffice is bound to drop.—LOUISE MASK, Luez Theatre, Bolivar, Tenn. (Independent)

"Let Theatres Sell Their Own Pictures"

¶ Stop monopoly! (Arkansas independent)

¶ Eliminate all costume and historical pictures for a year and then throw in a few during the coming year to break the monotony of the regular run of features. (New York independent)

¶ Why can't the producers make pictures of good quality without using all of Eastman and DuPont combined output of film? I think that pictures could be better without so much extra length. I'm for making fewer, better and shorter pictures in the future. (Georgia independent)

¶ No more British pictures; we might as well run them for the house employes. Better Technicolor pictures; put a good plot behind them and some real money-making stars. No kick on "Dive Bomber," though. Fewer but finer pictures. Believe the public would go for single bills if they're excellent. We do just as much business on a good single bill as we do on an ordinary double bill. More pictures with a comical background. Lots of people go to the show for cheerful entertainment. Don't believe we supply enough of it. More horror pictures for thrillers; this neighborhood goes for the unusual ones. Greater variety of defense trailers. (Ohio independent)

¶ Better clearance arrangement to be governed by non-partisan board in each exchange city. (Indiana independent)

¶ To buy good pictures without being forced to buy an overabundance of sorry ones at the same time. Can it be done?—E. B. BOWMAN, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C. (Independent)

¶ I would like to see the day that an exhibitor is not forced to buy or rent block one in order to get decent rent on block two, and that he can rent 10 or 12 pictures at a time, or just three or five just as he sees fit. The decree block system has raised the rent so high that a small town exhibitor will have a hard time to stay in business and I would like to see the day when one can rent films without the percentage split. They always check the best pictures and then try and raise the rent on pictures that do not go over.—J. F. SPANGLER, Manager, Beaver Theatre, Oklahoma (independent)

¶ Would welcome return of single billing. Less instead of more film rental each year. More A pictures, not so many B. & C. Not so many war and propaganda pictures. More comedy and light action pictures seem to be what the people enjoy most. (Washington independent)

¶ More musical comedies. Less propaganda. Less war pictures. War and propaganda pictures very interesting. But to my estimation the show-going audiences are better entertained by music and comedy. P. A. DUPLISSEY, manager, Royal Theatre, Iota, La.. (Independent)

¶ To get away from double features, and have better stories and cast. Do less national advertising and give the theatre manager a chance to sell his own pictures. (Circuit)

¶ A return to the old type of showmanship, where, when business was slow, the manager got down to serious business and didn't sit around and cry about it. Get away from double features and premiums and sell entertainment at a decent price. A cooperative spirit among the industry that will make them stop fighting each other and sell the public on good, clean, wholesome entertainment. (Circuit)

¶ Pictures that are timely, not too long and not too serious—Our patrons of today have many worries therefore they are seeking themes of a lighter trend. They seem to not want to think but to just be entertained. (Circuit)

¶ What we need in the motion picture entertainment is a little more spice such as we had in the old silent days. Mack Sennett Bathing Beauty Comedies; "A Fool There Was," with Theda Bara; "Queen of Sheba;" less gangster stories, less stage plays where all the action you get is talk, less features that are so long that it is impossible to run anything else. The pictures in my impression have to some extent become so "arty" that they have lost sight of that which the public really wants. (Circuit)

¶ Fox should get out of its rut of dull and stereotyped biographies and musicals. Warner Brothers is in a similar rut with gangsters. All companies should produce at least two ambitious pictures per year. A "Boom Town," "Northwest Mounted Police," "Sergeant York" is the salvation of the industry. (Circuit)

¶ Do something to stop letting the public in on our business, which today is an open book and has no secrets. Sell them our entertainment, but not tell them costs and how things are done. (Circuit)

¶ Less personal appearances of movie stars on radio programs. Producers would do better if they placed more advertising in newspapers bolstering local campaigns than so much space in national mediums. Not only in key cities, but cities of 15,000 up. More two-reel dramas, musicals and comedies which will help bring back single-feature programs, with star values in cast. (Circuit)

¶ Stop taking a star like Spencer Tracy and putting him in a picture like "Jekyll and Hyde." As far as the Middle West is concerned, this grand drawing card has lost enough prestige to place him down with the "second raters," whereas he was "tops." (Circuit)

¶ If better salaries were paid to employees, there would be an optimum in cooperation and service.

My pet annoyance, as well as that of many patrons of our theatre, is the re-issuing of old short subjects. These shorts are not only annoying, but they detract from the popularity of the star himself and should be shelved. (Circuit)

¶ Elimination of double features.

Every major company should attempt to turn out eight or 10 outstanding features each year . . . the so-called super-super type, wherein there is greater coordination of brains in first, the selection of the story; . . . second, the selection of the director, and third, the proper casting of the characters . . . stars if they fit the part; if not, then actors who do fit the part.

Bad titles have ruined many a good picture at the boxoffice, whereas a good title has saved many a mediocre film at the box office. . . . The word "love" is poison on almost any theatre's canopy if used in connection with a heavy drama. Exception might be in a title with Abbott and Costello. . . . Here the people would know what to expect. The mere spending of money will never produce a boxoffice picture of the so-called super-special type, but plenty of producers try to do it over and over again on a trite story, hoping that the addition of Technicolor and lavish settings plus a couple of high-priced stars will turn the trick. It's like taking a piece of trash literature, covering it with the expensive vellum binding, hand-tooled, gilt and deckled edged and then expecting the world to call it a piece of great literature. The producers just can't fool the people all of the time. Palace Theatre, 791 Broadway, Gary, Ind. (Circuit)

¶ I play doubles—so I want the big pictures to be big in quality, not in length. One hour and 45 minutes should be longest. Chiefly, we need more unusual pictures—out of the rut—like "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "Citizen Kane," "A Woman's Face"—less of Abbott and Costello and more of Bob Hope and the great newcomer, Red Skelton. (Circuit)

¶ Presently, as world conditions get worse, our audience prefers something light and amusing, without being two hours long.

Cycles of pictures are all right, but in some instances a bit overdone.

We find our difficulties in features that are two or more hours long; we cannot get a two-hour audience to "turn over."

What the industry could use right now is some new faces, although recently there are some newcomers that are definitely "star stock," i. e., Robert Sterling of MGM and Donna Reed of the same studio. (Circuit)

¶ The same average run of pictures but at less cost. . . . Hollywood can do it economically, without hurting the quality of their product. . . . To heck with the exhibitors standing all the extra expense of lavish salaries and foolish spending. (Circuit)

¶ I hope that film salesmen will stop coming around with tales of how these companies are continuously losing money and that is their excuse for continued increase in price of film. They must think exhibitors are awful fools, but year in and year out we have heard the same tale of woe. (Circuit)

¶ First of all, single features, fewer long-drawn-out stories that get nowhere, more comedies and musicals—in a time that all we read, see in newsreels, and in many a feature is some war angle. More Kildare series, Hardy series, Abbott and Costello series, Bob Hope, etc. Why not cut features down to where and what they were 10 years ago, because now the producers who are making long features to break up the double feature menace, don't realize some towns have to play doubles, anyway, and you wind up with a three-hour-and-a-half program, where 10 years ago features averaged 75 minutes, 9 minutes of news, cartoon 7 minutes, and possibly, but not always, a short; this way working is six performances and quicker turnover. Hal Roach's Streamliners are a help. (Indiana circuit)

(To Be Continued Next Week)

RKO Stockholders Meeting Jan. 15th

RKO stockholders will have their first meeting since the company's reorganization two years ago, on January 15th, in New York. Election of a new board of directors will take place at the meeting. Terms of all 13 directors will expire January 26th. The present board was designated for a two-year term by the Federal court at the conclusion of the RKO reorganization. The new board will meet late in January to elect officers and probably act on certain executive employment contracts.

Holders of RKO preferred stock will be entitled to elect one-third of the members of the new board or either four or five of the new total, as stipulated in the company's by-laws, which also provide that whenever accumulated unpaid dividends on the preferred amount to $7.50 or more a share, that class of stock shall be entitled to elect one-third of the board. Accumulated unpaid dividends on the preferred amounted to $10.50 per share on November 1st.

Transfer of that voting privilege to the preferred stock is not expected to result in any change which would not have occurred in an election of directors entirely by common shareholders, since the Atlas Corp.-RCA interests, which together hold a majority of the preferred stock, likewise hold a majority of the common.

Equity Asks Fees From Talent Agents

Personal representatives and employment agents for actors must pay a $100 initiation fee, and $25 per year to Actors Equity, the executive council of that organization ruled in New York Tuesday.

Not required to pay the initiation fee are 32 agents now licensed.

The ruling is effective December 1st.

Twenty three applications for agents' permits are now pending.

More Suits on Those "Expenses"

Charging mis-management, illegal expenditures, and asking accountings, stockholders' suits continue to result from disclosures during the extortion trial of Browne and Bioff, that majors paid them approximately $828,000. Latest suit, at mid-week, was that of Lester Rankin, Los Angeles, a reported holder of 100 shares of Warner common. He asked return of $181,000 to the company, the sum said to have been paid Bioff.

Bergman Represents Pierre van Paassen

Maurice Bergman, former advertising and publicity manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, was named sole representatives on films and books for Pierre van Paaseen, journalist, author and lecturer, it was announced in New York this week. Mr. van Paaseen is now working on a biography, for publication, on the life of Clemenceau, France's premiere during World War 1. He is the author of "That Day Alone" and "Days of Our Years."

AMPA Luncheon Salutes Short Subject Leaders

The short subjects industry, producers, distributors and many of the stars of one-reel features, were collectively saluted by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their fortnightly luncheon at the Hotel Edison on Thursday. Mrs. Besa Short, organizer and head of the Interstate Circuit short subjects department in Dallas, came to New York to address the meeting on the growing importance of short product. She paid tribute to the improved entertainment value of one and two-reel pictures.

Robert Benchley was master of ceremonies. He introduced a group of short subject stars headed by John Kieran, Juanita Juarez, Don Terry, Grantland Rice, Sterling Holloway, Fannie Hurst, Craig Wood, Billy Vine, Ed East and Polly, and Paul Douglas. The Quiz Kids spoofed the industry in a special recording. Each of the major distributors presented door prizes for the meeting.

15 Towns Veto Sunday Shows

Partial returns from election districts throughout Pennsylvania showed that proposals to legalize Sunday film showings were defeated in 15 communities, townships, counties and were approved in six.

The Sunday show proposal was rejected by the following: Uniontown, Lansdale, York, East McKeesport, Aspinwall, Perkasie, Montrose, Avonmore, Scottdale, Sutterville, Dunbar, Mill Creek Township, Shade Township and Lebanon and Somerset Counties.

Among those that voted to lift existing bans on Sunday shows were: Ramsey, Clearfield, Green, Milford and Pike counties and Morgan Township.

The comparatively small number of communities voting on the issue of this election was attributed by Rev. William D. Forney, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Pennsylvania, to the fact that the number of petitions required to place the question on the ballot in any community was increased by the last legislature from five to 20 per cent of the highest number of votes cast for any candidate in the preceding election.

At a recent meeting of the Episcopal Women's Auxiliary at Jackson, Miss., recently, that body went on record as favoring return of Sunday shows to the largest city of Mississippi. "Boys in uniform walk aimlessly up and down streets of Jackson on Sundays in search of something to do and it seems wise that the community interest itself in affording them entertainment," the petition said. The resolution added that shows should operate on Sundays between 1 and 6 P.M., and again after 8:30 P.M., following end of most church services.

Sunday films in Rochelle, Ga., have been approved by a unanimous vote of the Town Council. The proceeds from showings will go to charity.

Jack Austin Transferred

Jack E. Austin, city manager at Burlington, N. C., for North Carolina Theatres, Inc., has been transferred to Charlotte, N.C., where he will also be city manager. Norris Hadaway of the National theatre in Greensboro succeeds him in Burlington, and Clyde Wooten succeeds Mr. Hadaway.

IATSE Studio Talks Continue

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees studio locals continued negotiating with producers, this week, for new individual contracts, unimpeded by selection of a new international president over the weekend.

The election of Richard Walsh to the presidency of the IATSE, succeeding George Browne, is reported on page 12.

In the same sector, the Screen Cartoonists Guild joined the Motion Picture Painters Local 644 and Film Technicians Local 683 in the newly formed Conference of Studio Unions, attempting to combine American Federation of Labor studio locals for unity and protection.

In New York, the majors' home offices continue to be unionized. Latest manifestation of this tendency was the counting of National Labor Relations Board election ballots last week at Warners. Its Associated Office Employees union won, 451 to 112. Board certification is to follow. The union is pressing for a "contract by Christmas." The union is independent. Chapters in Loew's, RKO, Columbia, belong to the Screen Office and Employees Guild, CIO, Local 109.

In the same city, results of the Screen Publicists Guild mail poll of members on affiliation were to be disclosed this week.

In Hollywood, the Screen Actors Guild was to show cause in Federal Court Wednesday why it should not be restrained from disciplining Leo Morrison, talent agent; and the Screen Readers Guild is trying to reopen its contract with the producers, seeking a full union shop, and salary increases.

The Chicago Film Employees Union, Local B45, reelected Sam Lamasky president; Roy Roadman, vice-president; Kenneth Siem, secretary treasurer; George Busch, business manager.

Projectionists Sign Pacts

New Haven stagehands' and projectionists' locals have signed new pacts with circuits there.

An "all-time high" of $2.20 per hour has been obtained for sound equipment workers in Hollywood, officers of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers told the 21th annual convention in St. Louis last week.

The strike by Local 702, Laboratory Technicians, continued in New York early this week, against the Movielab Laboratories. Saul Jeffee, company head, said last week the strike was unjustified because he was willing to arbitrate, and unfair because the union was asking scales prevailing in larger concerns.

The Milwaukee Projectionists Local 164 Monday revived the Motion Picture Ball, an annual affair until discontinuance some years ago.

The Screen Writers Guild, Hollywood, elected new officers Wednesday. Its membership increased by 38 for the eight week period ended October 21st, it boasted last week.

State Has Press Room

Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State on Broadway, New York, is preparing a press room off the mezzanine of the theatre for use of critics and other newspapermen covering the Times Square district. Pages will be available to take copy to newspaper offices, if necessary, Mr. Rosen said.

Crystal Has "Escort Girl"

Crystal Pictures, Inc., of New York City, has acquired the exclusive rights to "Escort Girl" for distribution throughout Northern New Jersey and the state of New York, it has been announced by Melvin Hirsh, president of the company.

MAJORS FOLLOW PARAMOUNT TO COURT FOR DECREE RELIEF

Warners "Deplores Statute" in Petition to New York Federal Court for Suspension of Decree in Minnesota

Applications filed this week by Warners, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox were to be heard Friday, in New York Federal court, for relief from the film consent decree, so that it can comply, like Paramount, already relieved, with the Minnesota law, which enjoins film companies from selling films in blocks of five, and instead compels them to sell films en masse, with a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

The Warner statement indicating its course in court Friday, read:

"After further consideration of the effect of the recent ruling of the Minnesota Court denying to Vitagraph, Inc., and other distributors a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of the Minnesota Anti-block of Five statute, it has been decided to apply to the Federal Court in New York for relief against the provisions of the Consent Decree which are in conflict with the Minnesota statute so as to enable Vitagraph to license its pictures in Minnesota.

"Harsh Effects"

"This decision was reached after giving due consideration to the hardship on the public who are prevented by the present conflict between the State Statute and the Federal court order from seeing Vitagraph's pictures, the harsh effect upon the exhibitors in Minnesota who are in need of product and most of whom are not responsible for the passage of the Minnesota statute, and to the strong feeling that Vitagraph's present releases have such high entertainment value and carry such a timely message that they should be shown without delay throughout the United States, including Minnesota.

"Vitagraph still deplores this statute which compels it to set up a selling system in Minnesota different from that in the other forty-seven States of the Union, and intends to continue contesting its constitutionality with the utmost vigor and with the hope that the Minnesoa legislature when it convenes again will remove it from the statute books, if the Courts have not already struck it down."

At Minneapolis the trial of criminal actions against Paramount, RKO, and 20th Century-Fox for alleged violations of the sales law was placed on court calendars for December 15th, following an agreement between film counsel and prosecuting state and county authorities.

It was considered likely that bills similar to the Minnesota legislation might be initiated or reintroduced into the legislatures of Georgia, Michigan, Nebraska and other states where there has been anti-decree agitation. The narrow defeat of a bill closely paralleling the Northwest Allied law and introduced into the Georgia legislature last March by a Paramount affiliate was recalled.

However, MGM, through J. Robert Rubin, general counsel, wired Northwest Allied, proponent of the Minnesota law, on Friday, November 7th, that his company would await the determination of the criminal charges pending against it, RKO, and Twentieth Century-Fox, in Ramsey County Court, St. Paul, for violation of the state law.

That violation was described in the state complaint of several weeks ago, as the making of small block deals with several theatres in the St. Paul territory.

The situation, meanwhile, in that state, is reported becoming more precarious for exhibitors who cannot obtain sufficient product from Paramount, and the "little three" not in the decree. The latter are reported piling record business.

Columbia usually has four to eight prints for the area; it now has 16 to 20 prints per picture, and these are constantly in work. Universal's exchange complained it cannot keep an adequate supply of contract forms.

Business Reports Vary

In general, the report from Minneapolis this week was, that Universal and Columbia have tripled their business; that Paramount, opening new product deals late, is having slow business, and that United Artists, complying with the state law, and starting only recently, is doing well.

One closing definitely scheduled—for November 21st—is that of the Paradise, Faribault, an "A" theatre. Other houses are operating on part-time.

Governor Harold E. Stassen denied, to Northwest Allied, that he considered calling a special legislative session for repeal of the law.

Next regular session is January, 1943.

Of the Warner application, Friday, for relief from the decree, granting of it was regarded in New York a certainty. Observers pointed out the Federal Court raised no objection to the Paramount application; that, in fact, Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard noted that the decree's Section 23 clearly entitled the company to release.

The Section provides for relief when the decree conflicts with state laws.

Aid from Wisconsin and upper Michigan exhibitors was offered Northwest Allied, in the annual convention, at the Hotel Schroder, Milwaukee, last week, of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of those two territories. The resolution offering aid also expressed "concern for the independent exhibitors of Minnesota." The unit's new board was directed to contact officers of the Minnesota unit.

Meanwhile, United Artists, mentioned previously as selling now in Minnesota after a hiatus because of its individual picture selling policy—which it feared conflicted with the Minnesota law—solved the difficulty by selling the entire output of each producer.

SELL THE INDUSTRY TO PUBLIC—LEE

The motion picture industry, having sold glamour for years, must now sell itself as a business employing thousands of community business men and employees, Claude Lee, Paramount public relations counsel, told the Advertising Club of Minneapolis last week. Public relations men face the job of showing that the industry has become a more important factor than is represented by the glamour buildup of today, Mr. Lee said.

Further, the public has begun to take the industry for granted, and must be told that the motion picture is as much a miracle as radio and aviation. In short, Mr. Lee said, the industry must now sell itself on its merits and not only those of its glamourous personalities.

Schine Files Answers To Government Suit

Marked by procedure unusual in film anti-trust annals, answers to Government interrogatories were filed Monday in Buffalo Federal Court by the Schine circuit, chief defendant in the Department of Justice "field" suit against a large independent circuit and the three "little" majors, Columbia, United Artists, and Universal.

The answers were sealed. They were given to Federal Judge John Knight personally.

Willard McKay, Schine counsel, explained his client did not wish the information made public; competing companies might well use it, he asserted.

Meanwhile, asking permission to examine Schine correspondence, Seymour Simon, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, told Judge Knight that "if we can obtain this data, I believe it will indicate how Schine licensed its films in closed and open towns"—a request upon which the judge reserved decision.

Mr. McKay answered Mr. Simon's request for information about Schine admissions since August, 1937, with the assertion full compliance would require "someone spending a lot of time on a big job"; however, he promised information on specific dates.

Mr. McKay concluded that a corporation cannot be compelled to supply the wide information sought by the Department.

January Trial Expected

Arguments Monday ended with court enjoinment of brief filing, a ten-day period for the Government to reply, and the opening of Schine's sealed answers by the Government, in the interim.

The case is not expected to reach trial before January. It is the second of the Government's "field" suits. The others are against the Crescent circuit, in Nashville Federal Court, still continuing; and against the Griffith circuit, in Oklahoma City Federal Court.

The Deparament last week began investigating majors' home office records, in preparation for the Schine case. Though only Columbia, United Artists, and Universal are defendants, the examination included files of other companies.

The anti-trust suit of the Harrison Brothers, exhibitors in suburban Philadelphia, re-opened against Warner Theatres and the major distributors on November 10th, was continued until November 12th. The action, considered to have been settled out of court carlier this year when the Harrison Brothes leased their Lansdowne Theatre, involved in the litigation, to the Warner circuit, was brought up in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia before Federal Judge J. Cullen Ganey.

On Wednesday it was announced that the suit was settled out of court, Morris Wolf, attorncy for the defense advised the court, adding, all parties had agreed to a settlement and formal motions to dismiss the suit will be filed in a few days when the mechanics of the settlement are completed.

Tarzan's Secret Treasure

(MGM)

More of the Same But More So

Again he swings through the air with the greatest of ease does Tarzan, and this time his son does likewise, but with even more ease and abandon do the writers of this stanza swing through the stratosphere of imagination accompanied by a technical crew which makes a multitude of impossibilities seem plausible enough for the juvenile trade of all ages.

The tale, compounded by Myles Connolly and Paul Gangelin, brings explorers to Tarzan's idyllic mountain retreat and they repay his hospitality by attempting to gain possession of gold deposits on the premises. On this storyline is strung an array of conflicts, captures, escapes, rescues and so forth in the Tarzan tradition highlighted by plentiful helpings of comedy provided by an elephant and a monkey. Just about all the other jungle animals, including the elephant herd to the rescue and the crocodiles to devour the villains, figure also in the proceedings.

Produced by B. P. Fineman with no sparing of the budget and directed by Richard Thorpe, the film stacks up as about the best of the Tarzans from the point of view of the Tarzan audience, the only one aimed at.

Marry the Boss's Daughter

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Business Plus Romance

Here is a light and amiable little drama about a young man from Kansas who comes to the big city—New York—to revolutionize things in the business world. A handy man to have around when it comes to figuring income tax, he fancies himself an efficiency expert. In the course of being efficient he causes a social problem by putting several people out of work, loses the respect of his employers and the love of the boss's daughter. But then, as said before, this is an amiable little drama, and so, he blunders right back in to the good graces of all concerned.

Suggested by the story "A Girl, a Boy and a Dog," the theme naturally revolves around those three but there are other touches that contribute a good deal to any enjoyment of the picture. Of these, George Barbier, as the business tycoon, is properly bombastic and convincing, and Hardie Albright, as the Harvard grad and vice-president of Barbier's far-flung enterprises, is true to most people's conception of the same. He loses the girl. The principals are Brenda Joyce and Bruce Edwards. Miss Joyce is a vision of blonde loveliness and Edwards is capable, if not dynamic.

What the picture amounts to in sum total is a minor but passably entertaining effort.

Direction was by Thornton Freeland.

Cadet Girl

(20th Century-Fox)

Love and Music vs. West Point

Plenty of entertainment has been packed into the 69 minutes of this well acted and well staged production of Sol M. Wurtzel, executive producer, and Ray McCarey, director.

First of all, there are five songs by Leo Robins and Ralph Rainger, several of which give indications of being hit tunes. The numbers are "Uncle Sam Gets Around," "She's a Good Neighbor," "I'll Settle for You," "It Happened, It's Over, Let's Forget" and "My Old Man Was An Army Man." Carole Landis sings pleasantly two of the songs and also does well with the acting requirements, looking very attractive all the while.

Next there is a good performance by John Shepperd, the older brother, who also sings and recites "Uncle Sam Gets Around" in an effective fashion. Then George Montgomery is the romantic hero, with William Tracy and Jane Hazzard and Edna Mae Jones supplying what little humor there is in the film. Janis Carter sings one song. The cast also includes Robert Lowery, Basil Walker, Charles Tannen and Chick Chandler.

The story is not new, but has been dusted off and brought up to date. It concerns a West Point cadet who falls in love during a vacation and wants to marry and give up his career, but in the end goes back to the Point. That plot has been used for straight dramatic pictures. Here in this musical film it serves very well.

In the beginning of the picture Montgomery, playing the cadet brother of a New York orchestra leader, leaves on vacation with four of his classmates. He falls in love with the singer in his brother's ochestra, Carole Landis. Despite the brother's objections, they wish to marry. The cadet starts his own orchestra with his intended wife as singer. They are very successful, but the girl is not sure and will not marry until the vacation is up. At a special camp show she realizes that he is meant for the army and arranges with the brother to inspire the boy through a song to return to West Point and follow out the wishes of their father. The song has its desired effect and Montgomery returns with his classmates.

Previewed at the New York home office before an audience of about 50, most of whom were women reviewers. They all seemed to be entertained. Two of the women were heard to protest against the selling spirit of one chorus of the finale song, "Uncle Sam Gets Around," which runs "it won't be fun, but it's got to be done."—M. Q., JR.

The Perfect Snob

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy-Romance

Here is another film about a girl whose social-climbing mother has persuaded her to marry for money, but whose father, a well-meaning veterinarian, manages with the help of a personable young man, to have her settle for love. Producer Walter Morosco has made few deviations from the basic story—set this time on the shores and amid the sugar plantations of Hawaii—and even Charlotte Greenwood and Charlie Ruggles as the opposing parents fail to make it sufficiently fresh.

Lynn Bari, a rather bewildered gold-digger, tries out two unlikely prospects before resigning herself to a marriage of budget-planning over hot stoves. But the young man who gets her, played by Cornel Wilde in his first leading role, has more than his self-conscious good looks, as she is about to discover as the picture ends. Anthony Quinn and Alan Mowbray are also in the cast.

Director Ray McCarey did fairly well with an unpromising script.

San Francisco Play Season Looms Large

With 23 weeks already booked for presentation of stage productions, and the first two weeks turning in big volume, Homer Curran, manager of the Curran and Geary theatres in San Francisco, predicts one of the biggest legitimate stage seasons since the days of the first World War.

John Barton's final tour of "Tobacco Road" did a large two-weeks gross, with Ethel Waters in "Mamba's Daughters" grossing even more. On schedule between now and the end of February for the two theatres, operated side by side, are "Dante," the magic show; Katharine Cornell in "The Doctor's Dilemma," "Blossom Time," with a New York cast; Ed Wynn's "Boys and Girls Together," "Claudia," "My Sister Eileen" and "Life With Father."

The Alcazar theatre, reopened for the presentation of legitimate plays by Dick Marshall, scored a big success with Otto Kruger in "The Male Animal," and Edward Everett Horton in "Theme and Variations." Plays scheduled for the remainder of the season include "Quiet Please," "Show-off," with Joe E. Brown; "No Time for Comedy," with Francis Lederer, and "Phantom Women."

GIVE PROOF, NOT COMMENT, AAA'S 'SUPREME COURT' ADVISES LAWYERS

Arbitrator's Award in Albany Case Amended as Statements Of Council Are Called "Too Lengthy"; New Cases Filed

Wordy lawyers are not wanted at film arbitration hearings the Appeal Board, "supreme court" of the American Arbitration Association served notice Monday—its seventh decision made known in New York.

"Proof of the facts, not statements of counsel, is the substance of the hearing" the three board members commented in their opinion amending in two parts the arbitrator's award in the Albany cases Nos. 1 and 2, consolidated.

The Appeal Board's ruling, on the clearance complaints of Alex Papayanakos, operator of the American theatre, Canton, N. Y., was its second opinion in the demand against RKO and Warners. On October 4th the board dismissed the case on a technicality and directed that it be refiled by St. Lawrence Investors, Inc., legal owner of the theatre.

Decision Reversed

The supplementary decision reversed the ruling of Morton J. Hall, arbitrator, on two points and directed that RKO and Warner Brothers, defendant distributors, reduce clearance between the American and the Strand theatres, Ogdensburg, N. Y., to a maximum of 3 days in subsequent contracts.

The blast at lawyers occurred in that part of the opinion assessing costs. The three judges observed that the records of appealed clearance cases were increasing in size, with consequent mounting costs for transcripts on appeal.

"In many cases the comments of counsel fill more space in the transcript than the testimony of the witnesses" the Appeal Board wrote:

"It is fitting and necessary, of course, that counsel for the complainant should open a hearing with a brief statement of the relief sought and the essential facts upon which the claim is based; and opposing counsel for the defense will generally wish to do likewise in defense. But proof of the facts, not statements of counsel, is the substance of the hearing. When the evidence is concluded, but not until then, arguments by counsel are in order.

"The purpose of an opening statement is to give the Arbitrator an outline of the facts upon which counsel rely in support or defense of the claim. If, as often happens in arbitration proceedings under the Decree, counsel attempt in opening to argue on the effect of facts before they have been proved, the arbitrator is more likely to be confused than aided. This case affords a conspicuous example.

"Counsel on both sides opened the hearing with elaborate arguments on all conceivable aspects of the case. In the result, much of this argument was irrelevant, some of it was misleading, and the bulk of it was out of place in an opening statement."

Citing instances of legal verbosity the Board questioned the propriety of attorneys asking the arbitrator to seek an opinion on his jurisdiction from the Department of Justice. They also censured "instructions" to arbitrators on the operation of the decree.

"An arbitrator endeavoring to do justice in an unfamiliar field, particularly, as in this case, a layman, is entitled to far more light and less confusion from the efforts of counsel than this record discloses," they declared.

Mr. Hall's original ruling which eliminated clearance between the American and Strand theatres was partially overruled by the Appeal Board on the grounds that he had failed to determine reasonable clearance on factors of both "time and area" as required by the consent decree.

"If the areas served by the theatres are such that there is no competition between them, no clearance is justified. If it appears that there is real competition, although perhaps small in amount, the only award which the arbitrator is authorized to make under the Decree is one 'fixing the maximum clearance between the theatres involved which may be granted in licenses thereafter entered into by the distributor defendant which is a party to the arbitration,'" they declared.

"This language means that where the theatres are in the same competitive area the arbitrator may not eliminate all clearance. Some period of waiting time in such cases must be allowed to intervene between the termination of a run and the commencement of playing time under a subsequent run."

The record in the American case does not support the contention that competition is negligible between the Canton and Ogdensburg theatres, the board held. They also cited a ruling by the NRA Code Authority in 1934 that the theatres were in the same competitive area.

The arbitrator also erred in applying his award to contracts now in force "in disregard of the provisions of Section VIII limiting awards to licenses thereafter entered into," the Appeal Board asserted.

Costs of the initial hearing and appeal, including the stenographic record and transcripts were taxed one-third against the complainant and one-third against RKO and Warners.

Add to Local Panels

Arbitrators were added to the motion picture panels in three cities this week by the AAA. John D. O'Reilly and Cornelius J. Moynihan, Boston College law professors have been added to the Boston panel. R. Vernon Clark, realtor, and Harry A. Langenberg, grain dealer, join the St. Louis panel and Robert R. Fauntleroy, of St. Charles, Ill., has been named to the Chicago list.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA on Wednesday addressed the Erie County Bar Association at Buffalo. He described operations of the motion picture tribunals, citing settlements and hearings in the New York area.

The Indianapolis tribunal received its first arbitration complaint on Monday, ten months after it opened, when Charles G. Bowles, who is building the Grand theatre in Elizabethtown, Ky., named the Big Five in a some run demand.

The case is unique in that both the complaining theatre and the Ritz theatre, named as an interested party, are still under construction. Mr. Bowles asserts that the distributors have refused to license any product for his theatre, which is due to open on December first. He declares that they have discriminated against him in favor of the Crescent Amusement Company which is constructing the Ritz in Elizabethtown.

St. Louis

The some run complaint of Floyd Lowe, operator of the Star theatre, Lebanon, Mo., was dismissed at St. Louis on Tuesday by William H. Stead, arbitrator. The action, St. Louis 5th, had originally named the Big Five but Mr. Lowe reached agreements with Warners and 20th Century-Fox before the hearings started.

Mr. Stead, dean of the Washington University School of Business Administration, said that Mr. Lowe's contention that he had not been able to buy product was not borne out by the evidence. He said that Mr. Lowe had not filed application for pictures until the arbitration started. Costs were assessed against the complainant.

Chicago

A tenth Chicago complaint, on clearance, was filed November 8th by Ben Cooney and Harold McFarland, operators of the Ogden theatre, 2578 West Ogden Avenue, Chicago. The theatre, not to be confused with the Warner Ogden in South Chicago, names all consenting distributors and declares that it is subjected to unreasonable clearance.

Theatres cited in the complaint include the Marshall Square, White Palace, Lindy, West, Douglas and Circle.

Two intervenors have entered Chicago's ninth case, the clearance action of the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park, Ill. The Glencoe Theatre Corporation, Glencoe, Ill., operated by Sam Myers and the AJB Theatre Corporation, Libertyville, Ill., filed notices of intervention this week.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia's 14th arbitration complaint, a clearance demand by Lewen Pizor and Herman Coane, operators of the Colonial theatre in Phoenixville, Pa. The Big Five are named and the demand asks that the Phoenixville clearance of 28 days after Philadelphia first run be reduced to 21 days. It is the second time that Mr. Pizor, Philadelphia UMPTO executive, has filed an arbitration case. An earlier action in behalf of the Tioga theatre, Philadelphia, was withdrawn.

After an all-day hearing last Friday the clearance complaint of A. M. Ellis, in behalf of his Parkside Theatre, Camden, N. J., was continued until this November 14th. Testimony will be taken by the defense for a third day.

Kansas City

Hearings at Kansas City on the clearance complaint of the Dickinson theatre in Mission, Kansas, concluded on November 7th. Briefs are to be submitted to Wendell H. Cloud, arbitrator, by December 9th. Testimony from complainant, intervenors and distributors reviewed the history of Kansas clearances and the terms of current contracts.

Several tabulated comparisons of rentals, play dates, admission prices and other statistics were submitted to the arbitrator. Mr. Dickinson de-

THEATRES "MUST" USE ORCHESTRAS

After many years of trying to make theatres reemploy the orchestras that vanished with the arrival of sound in pictures, musicians have obtained governmental support in one place. According to a special cable to the New York Times from Bogota, Colombia, that city's Municipal Council has approved an ordinance requiring film theatres to employ orchestras "for all shows".

fended the use of premiums and other attendance stimulants as necessary because of delayed availability.

Four of the defendants, who have affiliated first-run theatres in Kansas City, moved to dismiss on the ground of "no jurisdiction." These were 20th Century-Fox, with the Esquire and Uptown theatres; Paramount, with the Newman; Loew's, Inc., with the Midland, and RKO with the Orpheum.

The arbitrator took the motions under advisement.

Washington

Hearings on November 6th of the clearance complaint of the Linden theatre, Baltimore, centered on disputes over the extent of competition between the Linden and the Metropolitan theatre, intervenor. James V. Hayes and Robert V. Sher, former Department of Justice motion picture law attorneys represented the complainant.

Francis W. Hill, Jr., former president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, will arbitrate Washington's 9th case, clearance demand of John H. Taylor for the Charles theatre, La Plata, Md. Hearings will start November 25th.

Dallas

The only pending Dallas arbitration case, the clearance demand of B. R. McLendon, operating the State and Texan theatres in Atlanta, Texas, was to be heard November 14th by J. B. Adoue, Jr., at Dallas. The case, filed on August 20th names Loew's, RKO, Warners and 20th Century-Fox and the Paramount-Richards Corporation's Strand and Paramount theatres in Texarkana, Tex. C. S. Potts, dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School, originally selected as arbitrator withdrew.

The Dallas docket was again cleared of active cases last week when S. J. Hay, arbitrator, granted a 46 day cut in clearance to the Overton theatre, in Overton, Texas. He declared the 60 day margins of the Gem and Strand theatres unreasonable and set a 14 day maximum. Warner, RKO, and MGM were the distributors cited. Costs were assessed against the defendants. The case, Dallas' fourth, was filed in mid-August and heard on October 3rd.

Buffalo

The Marlowe theatre, neighborhood house operated by N. M. Konczakowski has intervened in Irving Cohen's clearance complaint for the Allendale. It is the city's sixth case.

A tenth and final hearing is expected to conclude the sessions in the Dipson Theatres Company complaint for its Bailey theatre, Buffalo, before Michael Catalano on November 18th. Meanwhile the arbitrator will inspect the Bailey and the intervening Kensington theatre. Max Roth of Vitagraph and Elwin Speyer, a theatre architect testified for the newer Kensington theatre and Nikitas Dipson, complainant, repeated his charge that the Shea circuit enjoyed an unreasonable clearance during the ninth hearing last week.

The Strand Theatre Operating Company of Plainfield, N. J. filed New York's 27th case Monday when it named the Big Five in a clearance demand. The action was filed by Richard M. Huber, vice president of the Strand company. He asked for elimination or reduction to one day of the 14 day clearances held by the Paramount, Loew's Branford, and Proctor's Palace at Newark. The Strand, an intervenor in New York's seventh case, had its own clearance over the Liberty theatre, Plainfield, cut from 30 to 21 days in a decision by James A. O'Gorman published on September 27th. The case is now before the Appeal Board.

Boston

Boston's sixth case clearance action of William Deitch and Pauline Goldberg for the Weymouth theatre was settled last week when Arthur L. Brown, arbitrator, ordered Paramount, RKO, MGM and 20th Century-Fox to reduce the clearances granted the Strand theatre, Quincy, from 30 to 21 days maximum.

Atlanta

Atlanta's first case, the clearance complaint of Aaron H. Courshon, for the Parkway theatre in Miami, Fla., was dismissed last week by Harold T. Patterson, arbitrator. The action was directed against 16 theatres of the Paramount Enterprises Company and Paramount, Warner Brothers, MGM, and 16 theatres of the Paramount Enterprises Company. Hearings began on September 4th. Costs were assessed against the complainant.

Mr. Patterson criticized the Parkway's double features and premiums policy. He also declared a theatre "not particularly concerned with whether the pictures are played or not when they are available should not be allowed to play pictures immediately after the runs of Paramount theatres."

Detroit

Three intervenors entered the Parkside theatre's specific run demand at Detroit last week. It is the city's sixth case and was filed by Irving A. Moss. Fred J. DeLodder intervened through Michigan Cooperative for his Aloma theatre; William A. London for the Admiral; and J. C. Ritter for the Rivola theatre. Hearings were postponed to November 17th.

New Haven

Parties in the fifth New Haven arbitration matter, clearance complaint of the Plaza, Windsor against the consenting distributors, have been unable to agree on an arbitrator from the list of ten submitted by the local clerk, Oliver F. Bishop.

The AAA at New York has named George P. Murdock, professor of anthropology at Yale University, as arbitrator. Hearings will start on November 24th.

J. L. Loell, clerk of the Milwaukee motion picture arbitration tribunal, has resigned. Samuel Perry, field supervisor from the New York headquarters, has gone to Milwaukee to appoint a successor.

SHORTS THEATRE MARKS 10TH YEAR

The South Station theatre in Boston celebrated its tenth anniversary on Friday, November 6th, and lays claim to being the oldest all short subject theatre still running. The theatre was opened in 1931.

More than 7,500 individual films have been shown in the ten-year existence of the theatre. There are many regular customers among the audience, and there are patrons who have not missed a change of bill since the theatre opened, the management reports.

Kenneth Russell is still manager and Helen Manuel, cashier; Oliver Olson, doorman, and Forest Parker and Burton Pinkham, operators, have been on the staff since the theatre first opened.

Music Publishers Win $57,277 in Erpi Suit

Judgments totaling $57,277 against Electrical Research Products, Inc. have been signed in Federal Court at New York by Judge John C. Knox in favor of John G. Paine, agent and trustee for more than 40 music publishers. The award was granted on a stipulation between the parties in a copyright suit filed against Erpi in 1936.

The music publishers charged that Erpi used a large number of their musical compositions for recording abroad without their consent. In 1939 Judge Knox ruled in favor of the publishers and appointed a referee to determine the amount of damages to be paid by Erpi. The plaintiff's originally asked $149,948.

Judge Knox held that U. S. copyrights protected compositions from being recorded in other countries where the music is in the public domain.

Atlanta PRC Meeting Ends; Dallas Begins

A four day southern regional sales convention of the Producers Releasing Corporation at the Henry Grady Hotel, Atlanta, ended on Monday. Presiding was Arthur Greenblatt, the company's general sales manager.

Present were Ike Katz, Atlanta and Charlotte franchise holder; David Katz, Atlanta branch manager; Ed S. Heller, Charlotte branch manager; W. H. Rudisell, B. S. Bryan, Randolph Elliott, Harry Rogers.

A second regional meeting, in Dallas, began Wednesday, again with Mr. Greenblatt presiding. Another meeting is to be held at Oklahoma City, Monday; others at Kansas City, Tuesday through next Thursday, Omaha, November 21st through 24th, Denver, November 25th and 26th, Hollywood, November 28th through December 7th.

Skouras Brothers Give Showmanship Awards

Spyros, and Charles Skouras, heads of National Theatres and Fox West Coast circuits respectively, have been distributing awards in Denver, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, this week, to manager-winners of awards in the Spyros Skouras showmanship campaign.

The Denver awards were made last week; the Los Angeles awards, Wednesday; the San Francisco awards were to be made later this week.

Lincoln Decision Sustained

The United States circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati sustained the decision of the Federal district court in Detroit in the Lincoln theatre case. Under the decision, present owners of the house, London Amusement Co., will retain possession until February 28th, 1943, when the lease to Wisper and Westman Theatres will presumably become effective. London was suing the landlord in the case to retain occupancy.

Henderson With Ross Federal

Harold Henderson was named the new branch head for Ross Federal in Philadelphia under district head Jack Kraker. He succeeds Ralph Unks, who joined the local exchange of Producers Releasing Corp. as salesmen.

ALLIED'S PROGRAM FOR 'UNITY' MOVES TO INDUSTRY ROUNDTABLE

Progress Seen on All Sides, the While a Dozen Exhibitor Groups Meet in the Field on Trade Problems of the Day

National Allied's plan for all-industry unity, based on a specific seven-point program affecting all branches of the film industry, is to come before the top executives of distribution and exhibition, in December, in Chicago, at a special meeting of Allied, distributors and representatives of other exhibitor groups.

Joining with the other distributors, who, officially or otherwise, already have signified willingness to cooperate, RKO and Warner Bros. executives met with Allied's Sidney E. Samuelson in New York last Friday and pledged cooperation. Mr. Samuelson and Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, are members of the national Allied unity plan committee. They have been conferring for the past two weeks with leaders of major and independent distributor companies, as previously reported, and have sent reports to the Allied unity committee detailing results of their distributor conversations.

Favorable Reception Reported

Last Wednesday, at the convention in Milwaukee of the ITOA of Wisconsin, Mr. Kirsch reported on these talks. "I might say that we received a very favorable reception" from distributors, he said. "You will learn more about the results of these talks later." He traced the origin of Allieds unity plan and stressed the need for it in all branches of the film industry. "There can be no question," he declared, "as to the pressing need for such a committee, and with the proper spirit placed behind it by the exhibitors and distributors of this country, its success is inevitable. There is nothing more serious and of graver concern to all of us than taxation and there is an absolute need for closer cooperation by every branch of the business to combat unreasonable and discriminating levies. There is nothing more important to our industry than the building of good will and placing our business in a more favorable light with the public—and the time is now ripe for the achievement of these principles," he said.

J. E. Flynn, Chicago district manager of MGM, in addressing the delegates to the same convention, reiterated his company's expression of cooperation for the Allied plan and said, "Certainly the attacks from the outside, as witness the smear campaign recently in Washington, have had a tendency to drive all elements of the industry closer together. Strong personalities are striving toward a common objective. They want harmony. They seek to mobilize the latent strength of the whole motion picture business in its own behalf—to guard it from attack and to make it a better business for all."

Results of the New York conferences will be reported to the next meeting of the Allied national executive board. No date has been set yet for this meeting but Mr. Kirsch said it might be held in Indianapolis on November 17th and 18th during the convention there of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. Meanwhile the report, with recommendations by Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Samuelson, is being studied by the National Allied unity committee.

Participants in the New York conferences indicated that plans for the December all industry meeting were approaching the "definite stage" and that it would be held in Chicago, perhaps as early as the first week in December.

During the week, at various regional conventions and meetings of Allied and other exhibitor groups, further expressions of approval of the unity program were indicated.

PCCITO CANCELS PLEA ON SENATE INQUIRY

Clarifying the stand made by the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, Robert H. Poole, executive secretary of the independent exhibitors' group declared this week that a recent request made to the Senate to investigate alleged unfair producer-distributor practices had been rescinded. The PCCITO, he said, did not want to confuse the issue and make it appear that the group was endorsing the Wheeler-Nye-Clark subcommittee inquiry into alleged war propaganda of the motion picture industry.

This confusion arose several weeks ago when PCCITO announced its decision to appeal to the Senate as a result of a resolution passed by the group's board of trustees in Seattle. Immediately, exhibitors up and down the West Coast assumed that PCCITO was endorsing the Clark investigation, although the resolution in its wording definitely repudiated the Clark subcommittee inquiry. Several independent exhibitors blamed the confusion on their habit of "headline" reading.

MPTO Approves Unity Proposal

In a bulletin, Wednesday, to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Ed L. Kuykendall, president, subscribed to the all-industry unity plan recommended by National Allied States Association, but took issue with the phases that relate to trade practices. "Reams of publicity and oratory by new-found advocates of industry unity may confuse rather than clarify what is meant to active exhibitors," it said.

Pointing out that "two quite different and somewhat unrelated projects are involved" in the plan, Mr. Kuykendall said that "first, is the question of presenting a united front in defense of our business against attacks from without the industry." The second question, he said, "involves the negotiation between exhibitors and distributors on sales policies, unfair trade practices and trade problems. This is a quite different matter from a united front in the industry against outside attack, and it is a mistake to confuse the two in dealing with them."

Mr. Kuykendall cited long and expense litigation between distributors and exhibitors, resulting in the consent decree. He said it had done little for industry good will.

He recommended "a reasonable minimum cancellation uniformly incorporated in exhibition contracts, a voluntary local mediation and arbitration system within the industry, and a voluntary code of ethics on less important but very irritating abuses which would accomplish far more and cost far less than the consent decree."

MGM's Exhibitor Forum in Ohio

The first of MGM's exhibitor forums will be held on November 25th, at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel in Columbus, Ohio, prior to the annual convention of the ITO of that state, which opens at the same hotel on November 26th. Purpose of the forum is to discuss ways of increasing theatre patronage, and Metro has sent invitations to all exhibitors in the Indianapolis, Cleveland and Cincinnati territories.

H. M. Richey, in charge of exhibitor relations for MGM, will conduct the meeting which will feature talks by William A. Greene, Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who will speak on "Good Newspaper Advertising," and William R. Ferguson, Metro exploitation manager, whose subject will be "Exploitation Ideas That Work." Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio is expected to welcome ITO delegates at the forum.

Wisconsin ITPA Convention

Industry unity keynoted the third annual convention of the ITPA of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, last Wednesday and Thursday at the Schroeder Hotel in Milwaukee. An important feature of the meeting was the authorization of ITPA's board of directors to ascertain from officers and directors of Northwest Allied at Minneapolis what action the latter would like the Wisconsin group to take in aiding them in their anti-consent decree activities. This recommendation is believed to have been the result of widespread reports in Wisconsin that some Minnesota theatres may be forced to close for lack of product if relief is not forthcoming soon. Only four major companies are selling in Minnesota because of that state's anti-block-of-five law, sponsored by Northwest Allied. The ITPA board was authorized to act in accordance with the response from NA.

Speakers at the convention who urged all-industry unity were J. E. Flynn, Chicago district manager of MGM; Claude F. Lee, director of public relations, Paramount; S. S. Broidy, general sales manager, Monogram; Jack Kirsch, president, Allied Theatres of Illinois, and Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager, Allied Theatres of Eastern Pennsylvania, the latter two members of national Allied's unity committee.

The convention renamed W. L. Ainsworth, president; A. C. Gutenberg, vice-president; A. C. Berkholtz, treasurer, and Harry Perlewitz, business manager. Mark Morgan was elected secretary, succeeding Max Krofta. The following directors were elected: Charles W. Trampe, George Fischer and Lucille Forbes. Holdovers on the board are: Gutenberg, F. J. McWilliams, Ben Marcus, Morgan, Berkholtz, Ainsworth, John Adler and William Smith.

Texas Allied Approves Harmony Committee

As Texas Allied convened on the last day of its 22d annual convention, at the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas, Col. H. A. Cole, president, told members of the organization last Wednesday that the high film rentals demanded on a percentage basis have made profitable operation of the small town and subsequent run theatre virtually impossible. Col. Cole declared that the new system of selling in blocks-of-five as required under terms of the consent decree has brought the average small exhibitor a very serious problem in the operation of his theatre. Allied is interested in any plan, he said, that will bring about an increase of business at the box office, "but so far nothing of specific and immediate relief has been presented to us. Unless and until such a scheme is in sight, the only recourse for our theatres is to bring film rentals within the possibility of our present income."

The problem of theatre operating overhead and its relation to what an exhibitor can afford to pay for product was the subject of a round-table discussion at the convention. Texas Allied members adopted a resolution approving national Allied's industry unity plan, citing the last paragraph of the seven-point program as most important and asserting that the subject of Government or other legislative tendencies to supervise the industry should receive immediate attention.

Col. Cole was re-elected for his nineteenth term as president of Texas Allied. Other officers are: A. W. Lilly, secretary-treasurer; Rubin Frels, P. V. Williams, Mrs. Marthe McSpadden and R. N. Smith, vice-presidents. Directors elected were: C. M. Cooper, Will Dorbandt, L. C. Tidball, H. R. Bisby, M. D. Stewart, Lonnie Legg, B. R. McLendon, H. Ford Taylor, W. J. Chesher and James Golding.

Griffin Heads New Alabama Group

William R. Griffin, manager of the Cullman Theatre in Cullman, Ala., was elected president of the newly-organized Alabama Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association last week, at a meeting of 75 Alabama theatre owners and managers in Montgomery, at the Whitley Hotel.

Other officers elected were: Mack Jackson, manager of the Strand Theatre, Alexander City, vice-president; Col. Thomas E. Orr, independent theatre chain owner of Albertville, secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Griffin called the meeting following decision of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, of which he is president, to organize state units in all states represented in Southeastern. Meetings of the new group will be held semi-annually, alternating between Birmingham and Montgomery.

O. C. Lam, of Rome, Ga., national representative from Southeastern MPTO to the MPTOA, will serve as chairman of the constitution and by-laws committee of AMPTOA, with H. H. Waters of Birmingham and H. L. Humphries of Sylacauga as committee members.

Other committees serving are: Membership—Louis Rosenbaum, Florence; Mrs. E. C. Fain, Wetumpka; Milt Kress, Opelika; E. F. Ingram, Ashland. Resolutions—Richard M. Kennedy, Birmingham; Rufus Davis, Dothan; M. G. Lee, Opelika; Legislative—William N. Wolfson, Montgomery; Col. T. E. Orr, Albertville; W. D. Pate, Samson.

Fifteen directors were appointed as follows: R. M. Kennedy, Birmingham; Roy E. Martin, Sr., Phoenix City; Louis Rosenbaum, Florence; Charles T. Rook, Montgomery; Mrs. E. C. Fain, Wetumpka; Mrs. L. C. Moore, Enterprise; Fred McLendon, Union Springs; T. E. Watson, Montevallo; H. H. Waters, Birmingham; W. D. Pate, Samson; Rufus A. Davis, Dothan; L. J. Duncan, Lanett; and Paul Engler, Birmingham.

In addition to those already mentioned, the following other theatre owners and managers attended the meeting: Haywood Hanna, Evergreen; W. J. Ray, Greenville; Frank J. Delk, Opelika; T. A. McDougal, Roanoke; T. B. S. Thomason, Enterprise; Eddie B. Tomberlin, Brundidge; Aubrey Gay, Lanett; R. P. Higginbotham, Pell City; John E. Gaither, Heflin; T. K. Jones, Dadeville; J. M. Miller, Cordova; E. D. Martin, Opelika; Hugh G. Martin, Sr., Opelika; Hugh G. Martin, Jr., Talladega; Cecil Hudson, Childersburg, and J. B. Harris, Birmingham.

DETROIT THEATRES PUSH DEFENSE STAMPS, BONDS

Theatres in industrial Detroit report a flourishing trade in the sale of U. S. Defense bonds and stamps at the box-office. Michigan Cooperative Theatres, United Detroit and other circuit and independent groups have pushed sales of the stamps with great success the U. S. Treasury reports. Both first run and neighborhood theatres are offering the stamps in change and are selling some of the more expensive bonds.

With an estimated increase in Detroit's population of 60,000 workers during the past few months theatre men look forward to boom business as soon as the automobile factories are retooled for defense production. The work is still underway however and there has been some drop in employment during the interim.

Only a few theatres have changed schedules to date. Downtown theatres are running capacity midnight shows on Saturday and in some cases Friday. At Dearborn the Midway theatre has started a noon opening to attract Ford workers and the Saturday night show has been moved back until 10 P. M.

Carolinas Group To Meet in January

A record attendance is expected at the 30th annual convention of Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina to be held at the Hotel Charlotte in Charlotte, N. C., January 18th-19th. The meeting originally was scheduled for December 7th-8th. Exchange managers, salesmen and others connected with the industry will be invited to the initial session, but subsequent sessions will be opened only to members. More than 300 persons are members of the group.

AITO of Iowa and Nebraska Meeting

The annual convention of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska will be held in Des Moines, Ia., on November 24th-25th. Topics of discussion and action will be film rental terms, 16 mm. and portable circuits, free shows, possible increase of membership, adoption of a legislative program and election of officers. President of the organization is Leo F. Wolcott of Eldora, Iowa.

The 15th annual convention of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana will be held in Indianapolis at the Hotel Antler, November 17th-18th. Industry leaders are expected to discuss current exhibition problems. The Variety Club of Indianapolis has arranged a cabaret and supper party for November 17th, and the convention will close the following night with the annual ATOI banquet in the ballroom of the Antler.

The Carpenter Hotel in Sioux Falls, S. D., was the scene of the annual convention of the South Dakota Theatre Owners Association on Monday. Subjects discussed were traveling circuits, Federal defense tax, legislation pertaining to ASCAP and the New York consent decree. Dean Nash of Canton, president of the organization, presided.

Connecticut Allied Meeting

The scheduled election day meeting of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut was held at the Hofbrau Haus Restaurant in New Haven on Monday. Plans were organized for a state-wide poll of exhibitors on their reactions to the consent decree. Lawrence Coplan, resigning secretary, was given a vote of thanks.

Connecticut's MPTO will sponsor its first annual formal dinner-dance on December 9th, at the Hotel Taft in New Haven. George H. Wilkinson, Jr., of the Wilkinson, Wallingford, is general chairman; Samuel Seletsky, Republic manager, treasurer; Herman M. Levy, executive secretary MPTO, secretary; Lou Brown, Loew-Poli publicity chief, in charge of publicity; Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, in charge of decorations, music and lighting; Maxwell Hoffman, of Warner Theatre Department, in charge of tickets and seating; Lou Schaefer, Paramount Theatre manager, entertainment.

Assisting Maxwell Hoffman on the seating and tickets committee are Edwin S. Raffile, Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., Peter Berakos, Samuel Rosen, Adolph G. Johnson, Lawrence C. Caplan and Joseph F. Reed.

PCC Approves Industry Harmony Committee

The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners adopted a resolution in Hollywood on Monday approving formation of a film industry's clearance committee, or harmony committee, to adjust differences in local situations.

It is recommended that the four units of PCCITO submit any problems arising in which a theatre owner is being hurt because of particular clearance that an Army post may have; that that unit send information to R. H. Poole, executive secretary of the organization, who then will forward such complaint to Francis Harmon of the MPPDA and chairman of the motion picture national defense committee. The resolution further recommended to the committee that Army posts receive prints of all productions prior to national release date, to build up morale, providing that Army theatres admit only servicemen.

Form Hollywood Firm

Articles of incorporation were filed in Sacramento, Cal., for Floyer Films with Benjamin Glazer, Joseph Levine and Noel Singer as incorporators. The plans of the new company are now being formed and no production or distribution plans have been made.

Washington First

First place in Universal's current contract drive, has been won by its Washington, D. C., exchange. Honor salesmen there were Joseph Young and Samuel Tabor.

BILLION DOLLAR SPENDING AIDS BOX OFFICES IN DEFENSE AREAS

War Industry Boom Brings New Spending for Entertainment, but Effects Are Confined to Small Areas

The multi-billion dollar payrolls which the United States is pouring into the national defense effort are helping theatre business. But this upbeat in the boxoffice pulse has been restricted up to now largely to the immediate vicinity of new munitions plants, army camps, shipyards or other direct defense projects, a countrywide survey by the MOTION PICTURE HERALD indicates. This is the fourth city-wide report in a series.

In the Pacific northwest, in Pittsburgh's steel and heavy industrial areas, around the South's vast new army training camps and expanding naval stations, and in the vicinity of airplane, tank, gun and powder factories boxoffice grosses have climbed the highest. Elsewhere increases have been slow, and in some cities business has fallen off slightly, according to some exhibitors. Factors in the decrease have been the drafting of younger men, labor migration and the curb on non-priority industry.

Despite extensive government efforts to spread defense expenditures over a wide area through subcontracting and by converting existing industries the distribution of defense money has been slower, and less widespread than many exhibitors had hoped. Likewise exchange men and operators in the field report that the prosperity of defense workers has not penetrated to other business as rapidly as was predicted. They report an increasing tendency to save wage increases or invest them in homes, property improvements or other than consumer goods.

Other Booms Awaited

In many cities new defense industries are still under construction, or in the planning stage. Building workers have spent a relatively small portion of their earnings for entertainment, theatre men say, and managers are waiting until new defense workers are at their jobs in the expanded plants before they try to tally the boxoffice benefit of the defense program.

Among the largest gains are those reported from the Pacific Northwest. With airplane factories, Puget Sound naval bases, and new army camps humming with activity, circuits and independent theatremen there report that patronage is near an all time record. One Seattle theatre reports an increase of 120 per cent in the past year. Other claims are more modest, but most Washington state operators estimate that the boxoffice average there will be from one-third to one-half better than the 1940 figures.

From other cities at the hub of military, air or naval activity substantial gains are also reported. In Virginia activity around the naval bases at Newport and Norfolk have given the area a substantial lead in state theatre business. Through the midwest states of Iowa, Arkansas, in Southern and California and in Boston, capital of industrial New England, business is also booming.

MUNITIONS PAYROLLS BOOST GROSSES

The money which Uncle Sam is spending for national defense has been an important stimulus to the boxoffice in many sections of the country. How it has aided grosses, where, and to what extent is one of the topics covered in this special MOTION PICTURE HERALD survey of war and defense and the motion picture theatre. The draft, theatre participation in defense bond and stamp sales, changing performance times, population shifts, special rates for service men, and numerous other symptoms of interest to the theatre manager have been reported in the series of articles which began in the issue of October 25th. This is the final article.

Theatremen generally express optimism over the winter's prospects and are said to be carefully studying ways and means of attracting new patronage from defense workers. Many theatres are changing operating schedules, offering noon matinees, or otherwise catering directly to airplane makers, shipfitters and other defense factory laborers and their families.

Foresee New High Mark In Pacific Northwest

The boom in defense activities in the Seattle and Pacific Northwest area has had a very beneficial effect on motion picture business according to a survey of theatre managers.

The Boeing airplane plant with more than 21,000 employees, leads the many industries which are now running at full capacity in the Northwest, creating immense payrolls. These are being spent freely by the employees. Hundreds of new residents are pouring into the territory to establish homes every month. The increased spending of these people creates a benefit in itself, merchants report.

Motion picture theatres, both first run and suburban, are showing decidedly better grosses than they have for any time during the past several years. Increases of from 25 per cent to as much as 120 per cent have been reported by the downtown theatres during the months of September and October, as compared to the same months in 1940. Suburban increases, while not at this high rate, are also substantial.

So far, Seattle theatres have made no concessions to the defense workers in the matter of exhibition hours. Theatres still open at noon, and have even scheduled earlier closing hours than last year. This is partially due to union employee demands that theatre working hours be kept down to the required minimum. Only on Saturday nights do the local theatres run shows after midnight. As yet, no discussion of changing hours has been brought up by local managers' associations.

Seattle theatres have always employed usherettes in preference to male ushers, and thus there is no draft problem in this respect. Usherettes, however, are more difficult to secure than before, due to the many office positions now available to girls as a result of defense work.

Seattle has one small army post, Fort Lawlor, within the city limits, but the Navy Yard at Bremerton and Fort Lewis, near Tacoma, provide a big quota of week-end military business. Men in uniform are granted special service rates, averaging about one-half the regular admission charge at most theatres, whether first or second run.

Local theatres are not selling defense stamps and bonds to the public. They do, however, devote trailer space to local drives and permit employees to cooperate in selling and publicizing government savings plans.

With defense activity increasing as rapidly as possible in all sectors of this territory, exhibitors of Seattle and the Pacific Northwest are looking forward to the coming winter season as the most prosperous period in their history.

Iowa Munitions Works Promise New Business

Defense industries have definitely increased boxoffice receipts at Burlington, Iowa, where a government ordnance plant has been operating since last fall. Exhibitors estimate an increased attendance of from 35 to 40 per cent since the government workers entered the life of the city.

There are four theatres operated in Burlington, three of these by the Central States Theatre circuit. The population of the town before the advent of the munitions workers was some 26,000. So far theatres have been able to care for all at regular shows without holding any special shows for defense workers.

A $30,000,000 ordnance plant under construction near Des Moines, is considered a contributing factor in an upsurge in box office recepits there in the past few weeks, although approximately 95 per cent of the ordnance plant workers are Des Moines citizens. The high wages received by construction workers and laboring men at the plant is reflected in an upward trend in all business.

No new theatre building has started yet in anticipation of increased business. Harold G. Moore, theatre operator, who took an option on land at Ankeny, adjoining the ordnance plant, has decided that business conditions there do not warrant the building of a theatre at the present time. He will wait until the plan is completed. If the workers then continue to live in Des Moines, nine miles from the plant, he will not build.

Film industry people and exhibitors over the state are also anticipating a prosperous fall and winter season because crops in Iowa have been the best in seveal yeas.

Film exchanges report a decided boxoffice increase in theatres in the larger cities of the state in the past three weeks. It has averaged as much as 10 to 12 per cent. Smaller community theatre business is improving with the exception of some parts of southwestern Iowa, where, it is said, theatre business still is bad. This is attributed by many to the draft which has taken many of the young men away. Rural girls cannot go alone to theatres as easily as their sisters in the cities.

Drafted Patronage Offsets Virginia Rise

Defense industries in and near Richmond, Va., have helped first run theatres but there has been a general dropping off in attendance at some of the subsequent runs, according to A. Frank O'Brien, city manager for the Wilmer and Vincent circuit. Increased salaries and employment have no doubt encouraged patrons to spend their 44 cents where they formerly spent 28, it is said.

It is reported from the Norfolk area that there has been a considerable increase in business there because of the great number of defense projects, Naval stations and army camps within the district. Elmore Heins, Roanoke exhibitor, reports that the defense program has not helped business in that section. Theatres in Petersburg are doing very well owing to the proximity of Camp Lee. An average of 18,000 soldiers are stationed there.

DEFENSE PAYROLLS AID THEATRES

The only theatres in the section running extra shows are several in Newport News, who are running late shows for night shifts at the shipyards.

Usherettes have replaced male ushers in two neighborhood theatres in Richmond, with a possibility that more theatres will follow suit. The scarcity of male help is felt more acutely each week. Most houses in the territory are relying on college students and high school boys to fill vacancies.

Soldiers from camps help business on Saturday and Sunday, exhibitors say, but they do not offset the boys who have been inducted into the service, who ordinarily brought their girl friend to the theatre.

The only new theatre under construction in Richmond is the Regent, in Colonial Heights, scheduled to open this month.

Lunch-Hour Matinees Popular at Ilion, N. Y.

At Ilion, New York, the normal population of about 10,000 has increased by as much as 3,000, while its working population has doubled. Ilion is the site of a big Remington Arms Company plant engaged in turning out armaments for both the United States and Great Britain.

Across the street from the main gates of the Remington plant is the Capitol theatre, a Schine circuit house. Its manager, Ronald Failes, evolved a noon-hour recreation show. It is made up of shorts and lasts about 50 minutes. Men take their lunches into the theatre and eat while they watch the pictures.

From Remington officials he met enthusiastic response. Their chief interest was to get the men off the streets and at the same time give them wholesome recreation. The Schine home office in Gloversville approved trial shows starting Monday, September 22d.

The first show was a great success. The men filled the 1,000 seat house.

Mr. Failes kept dim house lights on so that the workers could see their lunch boxes. He secured special permission from the fire department to let the workers smoke. As an opening day innovation, the manager promoted coffee from a national coffee concern and served free hot coffee. This, plus the show which runs 55 minutes, has made the "recreation hour" a popular bargain at 10 cents admission.

City officials and the Recreation committee of Remington Arms call Mr. Failes' plan "a progressive step in showmanship, and a contribution to the defense program of Ilion."

Boston, Hub of Boom, Brings Back Stage Acts

The national defense program has resulted in a theatre boom in New England, with almost every city reporting increased film grosses as a result of the increased spending ability of a great majority of the populace.

Grosses have boomed in many places which heretofore merely existed. One of the results of this is an attempt on the part of exhibitors to strengthen their attractions with stage shows. The 1941-42 season looks like the greatest live talent year New England houses have had since 1929.

The RKO Boston in Boston began their stage season four weeks ago and business is reported better than last year. Name attractions are the order of the day and full week bookings for each stage show is planned. Last year the season lasted about 25 weeks, the majority of which were split weeks at the Boston.

The Metropolitan, 4,200 seat key house of the M & P chain, will resume vaudeville on November 14th. The Met will continue with full week bookings for the remainder of the season. In addition to these two houses, at least two others in Boston are considering the resumption of stage shows. The Scollay, also a member of the M & P chain, is reported to be interested in vaudeville and if it goes into stage attractions, the Orpheum of the Loew circuit, will follow suit.

In the outlying cities and towns, split week vaudeville books already have been announced and more and more houses are dickering for stage attractions to begin before Thanksgiving. The Park in Woonsocket, R. I., resumed last week and the Victory in Greenfield and the Gates in Lowell, Mass., also have stage shows. Booking offices in Boston report they are expecting at least 25 more theatres will be using stage attractions before Christmas.

As yet, no theatres in Northern New England have made any change in time policy. It is reported that theatres in Connecticut have tried an "early bird" policy with favorable results. Nothing of this sort has been started near Boston. It is reliably stated that after the first of the year more suburban houses near big defense plants will inaugurate such a policy.

The first move on the part of New England exhibitors in connection with the national defense policy was a reduction of prices for men in uniform. For the most part, these reductions follow the pattern instituted by the Loew chain which provide for a 25 cent, plus tax, admission at all times to men in uniform. Although this practice has not spread to the small communities, except those near army camps, it is now in wide use around Boston and in other large cities in New England.

It is generally believed that the increase in thaetre grosses as a result of the increased spending opportunities has reached approximately 35 per cent. This figure does not include theatres which have undergone a change of policy within the past few months.

Increase in Los Angeles Business Is Localized

A suruvey of the southern California exchange territory has revealed that the defense industry has a three-fold result.

In areas such as San Diego, where a majority of defense workers live, the business generally has boomed skyward. One proof has been the steadily increased grosses of the Aztec theatre, a 650-seat Fox West Coast house. This has kept the Aztec open to accommodate the night shift not only at the Navy Yard, but on other defense projects such as the Consolidated Aircraft workers. The success of the Aztec is causing Fox West Coast to contemplate keeping open other theatres in defense areas. George Bowser inaugurated the plan at the Aztec.

In another defense area, Santa Monica, home of Douglas Aircraft, only 25 per cent of the workers live in that city, the remainder living in adjacent Los Angeles. A tremendous uplift in business has been felt in Santa Monica's retail stores, which specialize in credit sales. But the uplift has been only partial in the independent theatres, according to Ed Thompson, manager of the Acro theatre in that town, which, incidentally, was built with Douglas financing.

Mr. Thompson said he felt a slight improvement at his box-office because of the defense program, but not enough to warrant any undue optimism. He felt, like many other independents, that the defense worker with his increased salaries was attending the first-run theatres rather than the subsequent-runs.

In Whittier, which is not situated near any defense industry, Hugh Bruen, operator of the Bruen-Whittier theatres, declared:

"The defense industry has not affected my box-office at all because of the fact we are not situated near any defense plant. Only my doorman left me for a defense job. I replaced him with an older man."

Bill Martin of the Ramona theatre, Hemet, felt that the defense projects had not only hurt his business, but the entire township of Hemet. The young men of Hemet, Mr. Martin pointed out, have all trekked southward to Santa Monica, El Segundo, and San Diego to get better jobs in the defense industries, leaving Hemet virtually abandoned by men of their age. This put a large dent not only in the town's population, but also in the box-office of the Ramona theatre which depended upon the young people for a good deal of its revenue.

Slight Upward Trend

"Hawthorne, adjacent to Inglewood, a defense project center, has shown a slight upward trend," said Nel Calvi, operator of the Plaza theatre. "I do not know if I can exist under the present conditions of the consent decree and blocks-of-five buying. There is no doubt that I am getting a proportionate share of the defense workers at my theatre. That is the only reason I am even contemplating paying the prices asked by the distributors. The effect at my box-office of the defense workers has not yet been appreciable."

Ben Mohi of the Picfair theatre, situated on Fairfax and Pico Boulevards, Los Angeles, said: "Yes, the defense industry is improving my business, and I have a special half price for men in uniform. I do not advertise it; but when men in uniform do approach they get the 50 per cent discount."

Most theatre circuits and independents have a 50 per cent reduction for men in uniform. Fox West Coast, however, has a consistent policy of a 50 per cent reduction for servicemen in uniform and a sign is kept near the box-offices of most FWC theatres with information of the reduction. The circuit uses this plan as a goodwill builder, while independents play it down.

Jack Chazen of the Rosebud theatre on Central Avenue, heart of Los Angeles' Negro section, said that the defense industry has not touched his theatre at all.

In the heart of Los Angeles, which is distant from any defense project, theatres are little affected by the defense program. Joe Sloate of the Maynard theatre, Washington Boulevard, declared that the defense project is aiding only the top-priced houses. His theatre is situated diagonally across the street from the Arlington theatre, operated by Mike Rappaport. The latter house raised its price to 30 cents.

Business Improved

Business in other sections near camps, such as Riverside, San Luis Obispo, and San Pedro has picked up. The pickup has affected all box-offices in these sectors favorably. There are no independent theatre being contemplated in these defense areas, but Fox West Coast is planning several.

Fox West Coast has a policy of reduced prices of admission for Uncle Sam's armed forces. The prices went into effect on June 22nd.

Savings of up to 50 per cent are given privates and non-commissioned officers in uniform. It is felt that the lowering of prices is not only a patriotic gesture, but also a move to increase business.

PRODUCERS RETURN TO AIRLANES TO PROMOTE SONGS OF THEIR MUSICALS

Songs from New Musicals To Be Exploited on Radio Shows; Broadcast Stars Return to Old Theme Songs

Promotion of musical films via radio broadcasts, cut off during the 10-month music-war between the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers and the two major networks, is assured again, now that the Society's tune catalog is playing on NBC and CBS.

Pictures like "Babes on Broadway," "Panama Hattie," "Louisiana Purchase," "Road to Morocco," "I Married an Angel," and other new feature musicals, should get a better radio promotional break than "Sun Valley Serenade," "Lady Be Good," "Navy Blues," et al, which were released during the ASCAP-broadcaster feud.

Also, that ASCAP tunes are due for a revival is evidenced in daily tallies of radio music on the "big four" New York stations, WEAF, WOR, WJZ and WABC, which show that for the first-week period following signing of the ASCAP contract with NBC and CBS, the Society's tunes were already running 50-50 with BMI songs on both networks and that ASCAP probably would begin to gain the edge over BMI during the second week.

Hollywood's musical films, already released and others about to be released, songs of which will be heard over the airlanes from coast to coast now that America's longest and costliest music-war is ended, are listed below:

Columbia

"You'll Never Get Rich": Dream Dancing, Boogie Barcarolle, Wedding Cake Walk, So Near and Yet So Far, Shootin' the Works for Uncle Sam, Since I Kissed My Baby Goodbye.

"Two Latins from Manhattan": Daddy, How Do You Say It, Kid With the Drum.

"Sweetheart of the Campus": Here We Go Again, Beat It Out, Tap Happy, When the Glee Club Swings, Tom Tom, Where.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

"The Chocolate Soldier": My Hero, The Chocolate Soldier, Evening Star, Sympathy, Seek the Spy, While My Lady Sleeps, Gypsy Cafe.

"Babes on Broadway": How About You, Chin Up, Cheerio, Carry On, Anything Can Happen in New York, Hoe Down, Bombshell from Brazil.

"Panama Hattie": Salome, Good Neighbors, Free As a Daisy, Make It Another Old-Fashioned, Hattie from Panama, Let's Be Buddies.

"Lady Be Good": Last Time I Saw Paris, You'll Never Know, Your Words and My Music, Fascinating Rhythm, Lady Be Good.

"Smilin' Through": Smilin' Through, Just a Little Love, a Little Kiss, Recessional, Hope and Glory, Smiles, It's a Long, Long Trail, Kerry Dance, Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes.

"The Big Store": If It's You, Sing While You Sell, Tenement Symphony.

Paramount

"Birth of the Blues": Melancholy Baby, The Waiter and the Porter and the Upstairs Maid, Cuddle Up a Little Closer, Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie, Memphis Blues, St. James Infirmary Blues, St. Louis Blues, By the Light of the Silvery Moon, At a Georgia Camp Meeting.

"Louisiana Purchase": Louisiana Purchase, You're Lonely and I'm Lonely.

"Glamour Boy": Magic and Magnolias, Love Is Such an Old-fashioned Thing.

"Sweater Girl": I Don't Want to Walk Without You, I Said No, What Gives Out Now, Sweater Girl.

"Fleet's In": Fleet's In, Tangerine, When You Hear the Time Signal, If You Build a Better Mouse Trap, Somebody Else's Moon, I Remember You, Tomorrow You Belong to Uncle Sammy.

RKO Radio

"Dumbo": When I See an Elephant Fly, Baby Mine, Look Out for Mr. Stork, Casey, Jr., Song of the Roustabouts.

"Playmates": Humpty Dumpty Heart, How Long Did I Dream, Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes, Romeo Smith and Juliet Jones, Que Chica.

"Four Jacks and a Jill": I Haven't a Thing to Wear, You Go Your Way, Karanina, I'm in Good Shape, Wherever You Are.

Twentieth Century-Fox

"Weekend in Havana": Tropical Magic, Weekend in Havana, Man With the Lollypop Song, Romance and Rhumba, When I Love I Love, The Nango.

Warner Brothers

"Blues in the Night": Blues in the Night, This Time the Dream's on Me, Says Who, Says You, Says I, Hang on to Your Lids, Kids.

"Navy Blues": Navy Blues, You're a Natural, In Waikiki, When Are We Going to Land Abroad.

In addition, songs of these musical films will be heard: MGM's "I Married an Angel"; Universal's "Hellzapoppin'," "It Started With Eve," "Sing Another Chorus," "Moonlight in Hawaii," "Melody Lane," "Jailhouse Blues"; Fox's "Rise and Shine," "Cadet Girl," "My Gal Sal," "Hot Spot," "Song of the Islands"; Paramount's "Road to Morocco"; Columbia's "Go West Young Lady, Sing for Your Supper" and United Artists' "New Wine."

The music of some of America's famous composers, Victor Herbert, Rudolph Friml, George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin, Cole Porters, among others, are returning to the airlanes. It is still too early, however, to determine how much of the new, popular ASCAP songs will compete for place and repetition with BMI hits.

At the top of the list, for the first-week period, in number of times played over the "big four," "Concerto for Two," written by lyricist Jack Lawrence, an ASCAP member, arranged by Bob Haring from Tschaikowsky's B Flat Minor Piano Concerto, and published by ASCAP-publisher-member, Shapiro-Bernstein Music Corp., led all the rest.

Theme songs of radio stars, not heard since December 31st, are back on the networks, including Bob Crosby's "When the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," Rudy Vallee's "Heigh-ho," Kate Smith's "Moon Over the Mountain," Glenn Miller's Moonlight Serenade," Fred Waring's "Sleep," and Amos 'n' Andy's "Perfect Song," among others.

Music publishing companies such as Berlin's, Chappell, Richmond, Robbins, Mills, Feist, Shapiro-Bernstein and others, all are keeping their ears tuned to determine just how much their ASCAP songs are being played on NBC and CBS. Most of them agree, however, that not for at least another month or two, will there be any indication of how the Society's "popular" tunes will stack up against the BMI hits. One publisher said he expected to see "lots of pressure" used, both ways. He thought ASCAP would have a slight edge over BMI in influencing orchestra leaders and principal radio vocalists, but declared that "only time would tell."

A complete count of the number of ASCAP songs played during the first-week period over the two networks as compared with BMI tunes, could have been ascertained through the music clearance departments of NBC and CBS, but neither radio company would submit their figures for publication.

WARNERS PLAN SHORTS ON FEATURE SERIES

Warner Brothers have announced the company will take two of its literary properties, each of which were made formerly into a series of feature pictures, and convert them into series of two-reel short subjects. The properties are the "Penrod" stories by Booth Tarkington and the "Torchy Blane" stories by Frederick Nebel. Richard Hall and Joel Malone have been assigned to write the new scripts, which B. Reeves Eason will direct.

The move is in line with the Warner policy to combat double bills by pushing short subjects as support for top features.

Majors Paying for Some Air Promotions

The biggest radio purchase within recent years now comes with Paramount's buy for the new "Birth of the Blues," Bing Crosby-Mary Matin musical which opened simultaneously two weeks ago in New Orleans and Memphis. It is understood the company paid for radio time on the Mutual network because of the song exploitation possibilities. But now that the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers has settled its music war with the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System, Paramount, as well as other producers and distributors will depend upon the usual non-cost plugging of musical films via the airlines, which the ASCAP ban prevented for a period of ten months.

Buchanan and Company, advertising agency, handled Paramount's buy of time for the air show which originated in Hollywood over Mutual's KHJ on November 1st and featured Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Betty Jane Rhodes, Ruby Elzy, producer Buddy de Sylva, composer Johnny Mercer and John Scott Trotter and his orchestra. The program was broadcast over 69 Mutual stations. Other radio tie-ups for "Birth of the Blues" were arranged on a non-sponsorship basis.

RKO planned the "heaviest local exploitation ever set for a picture" in connection with Samuel Goldwyn's "Little Foxes," for which local radio is being used "on a scale never before approached," with theatres and the producing company combining to boost the total of spot announcements used for most picture premieres by an added 300. Guest appearances of "Little Foxes'" stars have been set.

KAO, RCA, CBS REPORT PROFITS ON OPERATIONS

Additional RKO Stock Authorized by Stock Exchange; Para. Extends Date on Debentures

Profits from operations by Keith-Albee-Orpheum, RCA and Columbia Broadcasting, hilighted the week's financial news in motion picture, broadcasting and related fields and which also included the New York Stock Exchange's authorization to RKO to list 120,000 additional common shares and Paramount's decision to extend the date limitation for exchanging its debentures.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries in a report for 39 weeks ended October 4, 1941, subject to audit and year-end adjustments, showed net profit of $368,418 after depreciation and provision of $161,865 for federal income taxes based at rate of 31 per cent. Company said that no provision for excess profits taxes is anticipated.

This compares with $489,260 for the 39 weeks ended September 28, 1940, when taxes based on 24 per cent rate amounted to $148,910.

Consolidated income account for 39 weeks ended September 27, 1941, compares as follows:

	39 Weeks ended Oct. 4, 1941	39 Weeks ended Sept. 28, 1940
Profit before provisions for Depreciation and Income Taxes	$1,021,245.41	$1,148,766.80
Depreciation	490,962.26	510,597.03
	$530,283.15	$638,169.77
Provision for Income Taxes.	161,865.00	148,910.00
Net Profit after all charges.	$368,418.15	$489,259.77

Approves RKO Stock Listing

The Stock Exchange, in New York, last Thursday, authorized the listing of 120,000 additional shares of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation common stock upon official notice of issuance to the Atlas Corporation "as fair and reasonable compensation" for Atlas' services to the predecessor company in the reorganization proceedings.

Issuance of the shares to Atlas was ordered by a Federal court on September 11, 1940, and the board of directors acted on the distribution on February 27, 1941.

Issuance of the 120,000 shares will increase the number listed on the Exchange to 6,458,133 shares and will modify the foregoing common stock percentages slightly.

The listing statement shows the holdings of Atlas, including the 120,000 shares to be issued, the Radio Corporation of America, and Rockefeller Center, Inc. Atlas, part indirectly, owns 46,070 or 35 per cent of the 6 per cent preferred, 1,216,453, or 42 per cent of the common, and 327,811, or 12 per cent of the option warrants. Holdings of the Radio Corporation of America are: 44,757, or 34 per cent of the preferred, 316,328, or 11 per cent of the preferred, and 555,629, or 19 per cent of the option warrants. Rockefeller Center, Inc., owns 563,629, or 19 per cent of the common stock.

Paramount Extends Exchange

Paramount Pictures again extended its debenture exchange offer, from last Monday to December 5th, as a result of the action taken at a special meeting of the executive committee of the board in New York.

It was also decided to call for redemption on December 12th all 3¼ per cent convertible debentures then outstanding.

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, announced that over $10,200,000 of the 3¼ per cent debentures had been surrendered to the Manufacturers Trust Company for exchange. This figure represents more than 80 per cent of the total 3¼ per cent debentures outstanding, it was said.

The consolidated statement of income of Radio Corporation of America and subsidiaries, issued by General James G. Harbord, chairman, in New York, shows, for the first nine months of the year, consolidated net profit of $7,370,165, after taxes and all other charges. This compares with $5,209,043 net in the nine months to September 30th last year, or an increase of $2,161,121.

Profit for the first nine months of 1941 is after providing $9,469,900 for Federal income and excess profits taxes, compared with $2,523,900 for the corresponding period in 1940.

Total gross income from all sources amounted to $115,891,712 in the first nine months, compared with $89,204,219 in the same period in 1940, an increase of $26,687,492.

After payment of preferred dividends, earnings applicable to the common stock were equivalent to 35.7 cents per share, compared with 20.1 cents per share in the first nine months of 1940.

Net profit for the third quarter of 1941, ended September 30th, was $2,063,671, compare with $2,023,821 in the same quarter of 1940.

CBS Nets $3,815,435

Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., and subsidiaries in a report for the 40 weeks ended October 4, 1941, subject to audit and year-end adjustments, showed a net profit of $3,815,435 after interest, depreciation, amortization and provision of $3,000,000 for federal income and excess profits taxes. Above net is equal to $2.22 a share on 1,716,277 combined shares (par $2.50) of Class A and Class B stocks.

This compares with adjusted net profit for the 39 weeks ended September 28, 1940, of $3,477,586 after provision of $1,600,172 for federal income and excess profits taxes, equal to $2.03 a share on combined shares of Class A and Class B stocks.

$943,684.47 Raised by Theatres for USO

A check for $943,684.47 was presented last week by Joseph Bernhard, vice president of Warner Bros., and chairman of the motion picture theatre drive of the USO, to Thomas E. Dewey, national chairman of the USO campaign. The funds represented net collections to date from 7,841 theatres, including 17 individual contributions totalling $1,114.85. A total of 10,605 theatres were enrolled in the drive. $2,712.16, representing collections from 35 theatres, is in transit. An additional $60,000 is anticipated from the balance of 2,729 houses which still have to send in their final figures.

Presentation of the check took place at the Pathe News Studios, at a ceremony for newsreels and press, so that theatre patrons will be advised through the medium of the screen of the disposition of their contributions. The theatre drive was the most successful in the history of the motion picture industry, in enrollment of theatres, in the net amount of money raised.

Mr. Bernhard credited the success of the campaign to the support of the trade papers and to the 31 teams of co-chairmen. Each team consisted of an outstanding exhibitor and branch manager in each of the 31 key cities who directed the USO committees in the field.

Ben Kalmenson New President Of Vitagraph

Ben Kalmenson has been elected president and director of Vitagraph, Inc., according to an announcement by Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers. Mr. Warner further announced that Mr. Kalmenson, as president and general sales manager, will be in full charge of the distribution of the company's pictures in the United States and Canada.

Joseph Bernhard, Warners' vice-president, will advise in setting up matters of distribution policy, and Mr. Kalmenson will consult with him whenever it is deemed necessary, it was said.

James Totman has been named advertising and publicity manager for the Warner Pittsburgh zone theatres, succeeding Joseph Feldman, appointed assistant to M. A. Silver, zone manager. Mr. Totman was formerly assistant to Mr. Feldman.

Testimonial for Kalmine

It has been announced by the Pittsburgh Variety Club that it is planning a testimonial dinner for Harry Kalmine, former zone manager, who has been made assistant general manager of the Warner circuit.

On Monday, November 10th, Mr. Kalmine called a meeting of all Warner theatre managers and theatre department executives in the Pittsburgh zone and discussed new company plans. Moe Silver, Pittsburgh zone manager, presided at the one day meeting. Warners' "One Foot in Heaven" was screened for the managers and executives who attended the meeting. Mr. Kalmine and Harry Goldberg, theatre department advertising and publicity manager, who also attended the meeting with Mr. Kalmine, returned to the home office in New York Tuesday.

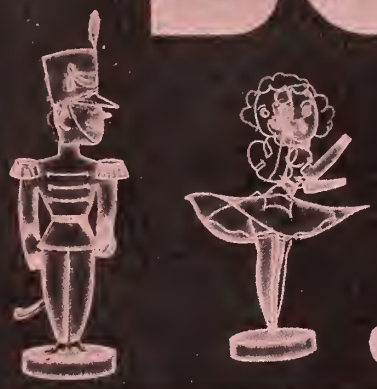
At the annual meeting of delegates of the Warner Club, Inc., of the Warner home office in New York, the following were elected as officers for the coming year:

Martin F. Bennett, president; Bernard Goodman, vice-president; R. A. McGuire, vice-president in charge of membership; Harry Mayer, vice-president in charge of social activities; Ruth Weisberg, vice-president in charge of welfare; F. L. Gates, vice-president in charge of claims; Robert Salomans, treasurer; Sam Wolowitz, assistant treasurer; Stuart H. Aarons, secretary.

The following were appointed to the finance committee: S. Schneider, chairman; Samuel Carlisle, T. J. Martin and W. S. McDonald. A board of governors and an executive committee were also elected.

Michigan House Books Shows

The Michigan theatre in Detroit has booked stage shows for the weeks of November 28th and December 5th, in conjunction with its winter festival programs. The 1941 version of the "Folies Bergere," produced by Clifford C. Fisher, will open the week of November 28th. The "Four Ink Spots" will head a show of feature acts to appear on the Michigan stage during the week of December 5th.



Buffalo Manager Hurt

George H. MacKenna, manager of the Lafayette theatre in Buffalo, N. Y., was severely hurt early this week when he was struck by an automobile in Niagara Falls.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Buddy, a pretty, but mighty jealous little bluebird which had the run of the Mayfair Theatre, in St. John, N. B., for close to four years, is dead. He was the pet of J. M. Franklin, owner of the theatre, and head of the Franklin and Herschorn circuit.

The Franklin apartment is in the Mayfair Theatre building, and from there Buddy liked to stretch his wings and fly through the theatre auditorium, giving expressive gratitude to his little liberty, in song. He never attempted to escape. But his happiness went bluey some time ago when he saw the bluebirds in Disney's "Snow White." Buddy the bird tried giving the screen intruder the bird but failed to drown out this feathered menace who looked so more beautiful and sang so more sweetly and loudly than himself.

Buddy kept in seclusion after his futile try to drive his rival off the theatre screen. He finally had to be coaxed out of hiding long after "Snow White" had closed. And he was recovering his spirits, when "Snow White" was brought back to the Mayfair for a repeat run. Again Buddy tried the same tactics on the pictured songster, and failed. Whereupon he went into pinitis again. His condition showed a steady decline, and culminated in his death. Before his passing, he kept mostly to his cage—the door of which was always open—seemingly obsessed by the fear the screen bluebird had sent him again into the background as mascot of the theatre.

Press wires from Berlin this week carried to our shores the sad news that Film Kurier, the German film industry's trade paper in Berlin, had expressed great astonishment because photos of Shirley Temple, John Barrymore and other Hollywood lights, were still shown on walls of German cinema house lobbies despite the ban in Germany on U. S. movies. Film Kurier urged with all its might that the pictures be 'relegated' at once, pronto, to the darkest corner in Germany. Which could be almost anyplace.

'Loot' from home office new product ballyhooists this week included one alligator (live), from Exhibitor Lamar Swift, of the Ritz Theatre, at Waycross, Ga., to promote 20th Century-Fox's "Swampwater"; a recording by the operatic Rise Stevens, in behalf of MGM's "Chocolate Soldier"; a large box of nice sticky lollypops and a rhumba recording, for "A Weekend in Havana"; some firecrackers for Universal's "Hellzapoppin", etc., etc.

The lollypops are well on the road to oblivion, or wherever lollypops go, at the hands of a bunch of plundering youngsters. But the alligator poses a problem which at this writing seems a long way from solving, remembering a certain warning not to take him home.

The voice of the stork in Walt Disney's new "Dumbo" is that of that tousle-haired, scary-looking Hollywood actor, Sterling Holloway. In Disney's next feature cartoon, called "Bambi," Holloway's voice will be used for a skunk.

Our reportorial correspondents in the field are a versatile lot. Now comes Dick Conners in Albany with word that he has been elected Democratic Alderman for the Ninth Ward.

National Broadcasting Company served a special lunch, the other day, in the private dining room used only for guests and executives at NBC's home office in New York.

This occasion was the visit in town of George Mardikian, noted Armenian chef and official food-taster of NBC's offices in San Francisco, who cooked the meal himself, a tasty bit of concocting if there ever was one, running something like this:

ARKAYAGAN ABOUR
(Royal Soup of Armenia)

DEREVAPOTAT, SEMPOOG, LOBIA
(Stuffed Grape Leaves, Marrinated Eggplant)

TCHAKHOKHBELLI
(Chicken Baked in Sherry)

SHISH KEBAB
(Barbecued Lamb)

BOULGHOUR PILAFF
(Armenian Wild Rice)

FRUIT FRITTERS WITH CREAM BUBBLES

PRESERVES, ROSE PETALS

"Arkayagan Abour, the Royal Soup, has been eaten in Armenia for the last 3,900 years," Mr. Mardikian announced with the flourish of a cleaver. I got this recipe from a 1,300-year-old manuscript in a Venetian monastery Unfortunately, in the absence of gazelle meat I am substituting venison.

"In the old days," he rattled on, "when an Armenian king came home from a victorious war, his first duty was to go to the forest, kill many gazelles, return to the palace and make this soup with his own hands. Then members of the court would serve it to the cheering populace."

As for the second course, stuffed grape leaves, the chef insisted solemnly that it was first concocted by Noah when the Ark landed on Mount Ararat and found only gravevines growing there.

Tchakhokhbelli, the favorite chicken dish in the Caucasus Mountains, was made popular in the United States by the Mdivani princes.

And Shish Kabab is to Armenia what corn beef and cabbage is to America. Only it's lamb.

Mr. Mardikian is also president of the San Francisco Chapter of the Sidewalk Superintendents' Club—those inquisitive souls who gape hour after hour at the blasting of foundations and hoisting of steel for new buildings.

Scientists do know now that the radiations belong to the same family as light, heat and radio waves, and that X-Rays are produced whenever a solid target is struck by a hi-speed stream of electrons.

Republic Holds Last of Meetings

With concluding sessions in New Orleans, Chicago and New York, Republic pictures this week held the last of a series of regional conferences on product and policy for 1941-42.

James R. Grainger, Republic president, returned to New York over last weekend from regional sales meetings in Chicago and New Orleans. The last of the series of meetings were held at the New York Athletic Club Wednesday and Thursday.

While in New Orleans, Mr. Grainger and A. C. Bromberg, Southeastern franchise holder, closed a deal for Republic's new season product with Joy Houck and Film Service circuits.

Analyze Product

Eight midwest branch managers were in attendance at the one day regional meeting held by Republic Pictures at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, November 7th. James R. Grainger presided over the session which was also attended by Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, and M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions, Inc. An analysis of recent releases was made and sales problems discussed.

Branch managers at the meeting were: William Baker, Chicago; Nat Steinberg, St. Louis; Bud Moran, Des Moines; Gil Nathanson, Minneapolis; Jack Frackman, Milwaukee; William Marriott, Indianapolis; Robert Withers, Kansas City, and Carl Reese, Omaha.

At the New Orleans regional sales meeting on November 5th and 6th those in attendance included Mr. Grainger, Mr. Yates, Mr. Siegel, Arthur Bromberg, and seven branch managers, Merritt Davis, Atlanta; Harold Laird, Tampa; J. H. Dillon, Charlotte; Lee V. Seichsnaydre, New Orleans; Winfield Snelson, Memphis; Lloyd Rust, Dallas, and Sol Davis, Oklahoma City.

The group heard in detail an analysis of the second quarter release of Republic and discussed tentative plans for productions during the third quarter of the release year.

At each of these regionals, prior to the New York meeting, suggestions for product and distribution have been presented, and plans in crystallized form are expected to be made known at the final regionals.

Paramount District Heads To Convene November 21st

Barney Balaban, Paramount president, will head the contingent of home office executives who will attend the meeting of the company's district managers at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, November 21st and 22nd. Neil Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager, will preside.

The company will hold the first trade screening of "Louisiana Purchase" at the Esquire theatre, Chicago, November 21st, in conjunction with the meeting. It will be trade shown in all other cities a week later.

Rogers-Schaff Films Formed

John Rogers, son of Charles R. Rogers, and Monty Shaff have formed Rogers-Schaff Productions, with plans to make three musical films in color. "Powers Girl" is the first film scheduled.

Beimer Brothers Open Sunrise

Beimer Brothers, operating theatres at Carthage and Hemp, N. C., have opened the Sunrise theatre at Southern Pines, N. C.

Authors' Guild Elects Carl Carmer President

Carl Carmer has been elected president of the Authors' Guild for a two-year term in New York. Manuel Komroff was elected vice-president, and Helen Hull, secretary.

Named to the Guild council are: Bernard DeVoto, Walter D. Edmonds, Henry F. Pringle, Carl Sandburg, Oscar Schisgall, Emma G. Sterne, Arthur Train, Jr., Mark Van Doren, Margaret Widdemer, Thyra S. Winslow, Arthur L. Zagat. Guild representatives elected to the Authors' League Council are: Louis Adamic, Stephen Vincent Benet, Elmer Davis, Inez Haynes Irwin, Will Irwin, Dennis T. Lynch, Albert Maltz, William Brown Meloney, Nathaniel Peffer, Oscar Schisgall, Lyman Beecher Stowe, John Vandercook.

Marcus Succeeds Goltz As UA China Manager

Morey Marcus has succeeded Joseph Goltz as United Artists' manager in China. He had been Far Eastern manager for MGM. Mr. Goltz, in New York on furlough, will be appointed to another UA foreign post shortly, by Walter Gould, its foreign sales manager, it was understood this week.

Mr. Marcus was to leave for his new position shortly, via Clipper.

Canadian Film Set

"Tale of Two Cities" will be the next release of the National Film Board in the "Canada Carries On" series. It deals with the activity of Canada's capital and seat of government in time of war, and with war work undertaken by women in a typical Canadian city. Recording was completed in both English and French by Associated Screen Studios in Montreal.

Milk Subject Released

"Penny A Day," a documentary film on the milk program of the New York City schools, has been released for showing in theatres in the five boroughs of the city. The one-reel subject is presented by the Market Administrator of the metropolitan milk marketing area. It was produced by Frank Donovan and narrated by Loewell Thomas.

Vallejo Stage Shows

Because of the tremendous national defense boom in Vallejo, Cal., and the influx of thousands of workers for the Mare Island Navy Yard, the 700-seat Marvel theatre, a Fox West Coast house, has added five acts of vaudeville to its regular showing of films, at 50 cents top.

Bausch & Lomb Net

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. has reported a net profit for the nine months ended September 30th of $1,302,643, equal after dividends paid on five per cent preferred stock to $2.67 a share. This compares with a net profit of $1,369,575 or $2.84 a share in the corresponding period of 1940.

NBC To Open Studio

Marking its 15th anniversary the National Broadcasting Company will open its new Cooper and Silver studios November 15th, on the sixth and seventh floors of the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, New York.

Universal Sets Season's Plans

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures, headed a group of fifty home office executives and western division branch and district managers at a special convention held at the Blackstone Hotel, November 8th and 9th, to acquaint the sales personnel of stars and story properties which are to be added to the studio's 1941-42 program.

"Exhibitor good will comes from exhibitor profits, and exhibitor profits comes from box office pictures," he explained. Original increases in the production budget for 1941-42 pictures have now been increased an additional $3,000,000, he said, to provide for such pictures as "Saboteur," to be directed by Alfred Hitchcock, and "The Spoilers" with Randolph Scott, Marlene Dietrich and John Wayne, and "River Lady," to be produced as Frank Lloyd productions.

Season's Product Report

Matthew Fox, vice-persident stationed at the studio, reported that the 1941-42 program was nearly 70 per cent completed and would be completely fulfilled by the time the above three pictures were finished.

William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager, who presided at the meeting, announced that a greater latitude was to be granted branch managers in settling local sales questions without home office consultation. Bernard Glasier, producer of "Paris Calling," talked about the picture.

Others at the speakers' table were John J. O'Connor, assistant to the president; E. T. Gomersall, western division manager; F. J. A. McCarthy, southern and Canadian division manager; Bernard B. Kreisler, short subjects sales manager; F. T. Murray, branch operations manager; J. J. Jordan, manager contracts and playdates department, and Louis Pollock, eastern advertising and publicity manager.

District managers attending were J. E. Garrison, A. J. O'Keefe, P. J. Rosian, and M. M. Gottlieb.

Branch managers at the meeting were: Barney Rose, Chicago; Harry Young, Cincinnati; Edward S. Oldsmith, Dallas; Sam Milner, Denver; Lou Levy, Des Moines; Ed Heiber, Detroit; E. J. McGinley, Indianapolis; Jack Langan, Kansas City; C. J. Feldman, Los Angeles; Frank Mantske, Milwaukee; Leroy J. Miller, Minneapolis; J. E. Hobbs, Oklahoma City; W. H. Sherman, Omaha; R. O. Wilson, Portland; Harry Hynes, St. Louis; C. R. Wade, Salt Lake City; Foster Blake, Seattle, and Lon Hoss, San Francisco.

Mr. Scully will convene an eastern sales meeting in New York on November 14th to 16th.

Boyer-Sullavan Film Gross

Universal's "Appointment for Love," starring Charles Boyer and Margaret Sullavan, is understood to have grossed $93,000 during the week it played at Radio City Music Hall in New York, said to be the biggest take at that theatre since the Labor Day week. The film had to move Wednesday night because of a jam of product backlogged at that theatre.

Prickett with MGM

Ken Prickett has been named special representative in charge of Metro Goldwyn Mayers' Show Builder unit No. 1 by William R. Ferguson, exploitation manager. Mr. Prickett for the past two years has been manager of the El Rancho theatre, Victoria, Texas.

"You're nuts! We ought to grab 'The Maltese Falcon' now! Look at that 2nd week at the Fox in Philly! Look at the business in Albany and Washington! Why, its topping 'High Sierra'! Let's book it before Sourpuss down the street gets it!"

"And let him have 'One Foot In Heaven'? Then I'd really be nuts! Say, 'Heaven's better than 'The Great Lie' in Springfield, in Nashville and in Philly, too! And with that publicity behind it—it's like dough in the bank! Man, that's my kind of show!"

THERE'S NO ARGUMENT ABOUT IT! It's Warners!

ICE SHOWS AGAIN A MULTI-MILLION DOLLAR COMPETITOR TO FILM HOUSES

Three Large-Scale Spectacles, Including Henie Show and "Icecapades", Set for Winter; Record Season Anticipated

Competition on ice from those musical ice-skating revues whose operators have skated away with hundreds of thousands of local entertainment dollars in recent years, is again in the offing for thousands of film exhibitors. This winter at least three "big-time" ice shows, and dozens of smaller ones, are preparing to play cities with arenas or large indoor skating rinks. Many of the smaller shows will also take the road, often playing in the wake of the larger shows, and aiming also for a sizable portion of local box office income.

Last year, MOTION PICTURE HERALD estimated, three of the skating extravaganzas garnered at least $2,500,000 in some two dozen cities throughout the east and mid-west. Sonja Henie, with her "Hollywood Ice Revue" was top grosser with a record of $1,200,000 in nine cities. "Icecapades," sponsored by the Arena Managers Association, headed by John Harris of Pittsburgh, and the Shipstad and Johnson "Ice Follies" were the principal competition to the Henie revue.

Bookings Set

Miss Henie's show this year is booked for seven large cities from November through January. The "Icecapades," which recently completed a film for Republic at Hollywood has already started its tour on the coast. It is set to play 23 cities, with a number of repeat engagements. The Shipstad-Johnson show, and a new "Ice Circus" will follow much the same circuit. Few towns with skating rinks or arenas capable of seating 3,000 persons or more will be omitted.

Arthur Wirtz, Miss Henie's manager and executive chairman of a stadium syndicate which backs the Hollywood Ice Revue is currently organizing the tour and rehearsing skaters in Chicago. The show opens at the Omaha Coliseum on November 18th and plays there until the 23rd.

Other Henie dates include: St. Louis Arena, November 28th to December 2nd; Indianapolis Coliseum, December 5th to December 11th; Buffalo Auditorium, December 15th to 20th; Chicago Stadium, December 25th to January 4th; Detroit Olympia, January 8th to 14th; New York, Madison Square Garden, January 19th to 27th. It is reported that the schedule will be extended if Miss Henie's film commitments permit.

"Icecapades," produced by a syndicate of Arena operators, headed by John H. Harris, owner of the Pittsburgh Arena, and many motion picture theatres, again leads its tour with the 14 auditoriums that are members of the sponsoring association. Additionally, the show will play 8 to 10 other dates. The show opened in Atlantic City in late September and has already played to record business at the Dallas Fair and in Kansas City.

The balance of the itinerary includes: Buffalo, November 3-9; Pittsburgh, November 10-18; New Haven, November 19-20; Springfield, Mass., November 27th to December 4th; Montreal, December 5-9; Ottawa, December 10-11; Quebec, December 12-13; Windsor, December 14 (tentative); Boston Garden, December 25th to January 4th; Providence, January 5-13; Washington, January 14-25; Chicago (or Pittsburgh), January 26-31; Hershey, Pa., February 3-14; Cleveland, February 15-22; Philadelphia, February 23rd to March 4th; Champaign, Ill., March 5-7; Kansas City, March 9-17; Wichita, March 18-25; Dallas, March 28th to April 11th; Los Angeles, April 24th to May 4th.

The Shipstad-Johnson "Ice Follies" opened recently on the west coast and is playing an eastward tour through approximately the same circuit. In a six-day engagement at the Tulsa, Okla., Coliseum, starting October 8th, the show was reported to have played to 26,400 admissions, with a net, after deducting taxes of $32,000. Prices ranged from $1.12 to $2.24.

In 11 performances in Chicago the "Ice Follies," which opened there on October 15th, gathered an estimated $92,000, playing to standing room at most performances. Four days in St. Louis followed the Chicago date and the troupe currently is playing a 13-day date at the Riverside stadium in Washington, D. C.

Admissions Higher

Admission prices for the ice shows are high, in comparison to first run motion picture tickets, and, according to reports have cut deeply into entertainment expenditures. This has been particularly true in the smaller towns such as Hershey, New Haven, Buffalo, or Providence. Top admission for the Henie show is $4.40 scaling to a minimum of $1.10 in the larger arenas. The other shows charge from one-third to half as much.

Managers of both Miss Henie's show and the "Icecapades" say that they anticipate a record season on the road. They point to rising business in almost all of the country's principal cities, to growing interest in skating, and, to publicity received from skating motion pictures released since their last tour of the country.

Motion pictures featuring skating stars and many of the supporting members of the revues are regarded as particularly important sources of audience interest by both Mr. Wirtz, and George Tyson, manager for the Arena Association show. "Icecapades" was the title of a picture released by Republic on August 23rd which featured the entire cast of the skating show. Miss Henie's latest picture, "Sun Valley Serenade," was released by 20th Century-Fox on August 29th. Managers of the ice shows indicate that the films will be tied in with exploitation for their attractions whenever possible.

Exhibitors, reports indicate, are endeavoring to meet the ice competition by booking strong pictures for the dates in which the outside show plays their towns. In the past it has been the practice, in many cases, to play a cheap picture and write off the visits of ice shows as a bad week.

According to Mr. Harris, who is also the operator of a large circuit of film theatres, and to members of Mr. Wirtz' staff, exhibitors who have played strong pictures in opposition to the ice shows have been able to meet the competition. The ice managers argue that while they take large sums from a town, they also attract many thousands from surrounding areas. These patrons, they assert, also bring money to film theatres and other business. They assert that mail orders amount to 50 per cent in Chicago, New York, Boston, Cleveland, Indianapolis and other metropolitan centres where the ice shows play a week or longer. Most of these orders, they say, are from nearby towns.

Autry Again in Rodeo

The Arena Managers Association, and Mr. Harris, will again sponsor a personal appearance rodeo tour by Gene Autry, Republic's idol of western film fans and for four years top western star in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of boxoffice moneymakers. With his own "Streamlined Rodeo," Mr. Autry will play at least eight dates, and probably more, on the Arena circuit, starting in April. Currently he is appearing independently in rodeos at New York, Boston and Chicago. Last year Gene Autry, and his horse "Champion" played to record attendances at all of the Arena Managers Association's auditoriums. Dates for this year's tour have not yet been set, Mr. Tyson said.

To fill vacant spots in the Arena circuit bookings Mr. Harris is planning a series of name band spot bookings, Mr. Tyson also reported. The Pittsburgh showman, he said, is confident that one night stands by leading film, radio, and dance orchestras will fill the arenas on one night spot bookings between hockey games, ice shows, rodeos and other events of the winter season. A trial appearance of Kay Kyser at the New Haven Arena resulted in capacity crowds, it was said. The Arena Managers, Mr. Tyson indicated, will ask prices near the legitimate theatre scale for the "concert" performances of the popular bands. In all instances, he said, the scale will be above prevailing first-run motion picture prices.

SCHOOL GROUP HITS DUAL FILM SHOWINGS

The Schools Motion Picture Committee of New York City complains that on March 26th, 1940, in the New York Times, the committee protested the showing of "Pinocchio" with the "Saint's Double Trouble" in neighborhood theatres in the city. The committee was unable to recommend showings of "Pinocchio" for school children because it was coupled with "a Class B melodrama featuring a sinister gem smuggler, a waterfront den, and hail of bullets and three murders".

Less than a year later, after RKO had said that such opposite films would not be shown together, the complaint continues, the "Reluctant Dragon" is being shown with "Navy Blues", the latter picture rejected for children by the committee.

Warner Theatre Changes

Warner Theatres in Philadelphia has announced three promotions in the territory. Max Schwartz, assistant manager at the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, was promoted to a similar position at the 333 Theatre in that city. He fills the post of Jack Thiers, who joined the armed forces. Ed Hutchins was advanced from district manager's secretary to assistant manager at the Washington theatre, Chester, Pa., and Nevin Blasser, formerly on the service staff at the Capitol theatre, York, Pa., was promoted to assistant manager at the Ritz theatre in that city.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Trend & Record

Luck to Boris Morros, captaining a trend with a record to discourage all but the brave.

Mr. Morros is much in the columns and conversations of the Town just now by reason of having engaged for his "Tales of Manhattan" a battery of talent, on screen and off, calculated to batter down all the box office sales resistance which defense spending may not have abolished by the time 20th Century-Fox decides to send the picture into exhibition.

As you have been told many times, "Tales of Manhattan" is to be a magazine-type feature in which six tales, each independent of the others in everything save that all involve a dress suit, will be hitched together, nose to tail, like elephants in a circus parade.

The scheme has always succeeded when applied to elephants.

It has produced a variety of results when applied to films.

Variety is, to be sure, one of its virtues. It has others, particularly in point of payroll and availability of talent, and it may be Mr. Morros' good fortune to discover that the public-at-large, in this decade, is in the market for entertainment of this character. It will be the first time. And the news will be of moment to other producers committed to emulations of Mr. Morros' example, as also to the showmen who'll be invited to exhibit them.

Twenty Years Ago

Two decades back, when Marshall Neilan pioneered the idea, the public-at-large, in contrast to the critics and the intelligentsia, was found to be "five-reeler minded" and absolutely disinterested in, not to say confused and disappointed by, his "Bits of Life," which presented four tales enacted by a cast as brilliant in its era as is Mr. Morros' cast today. The total running-time of Mr. Neilan's picture equalled the number of minutes then standard for five-reelers, but the job looked like just a quartette of short subjects to the customers.

A decade later, when Paramount investigated to find out whether audiences in general might have progressed in their tastes to the point of appreciating these things, its "If I Had a Million," a seven-section job sporting a veritable milky way of marquee names, ran up a terrific score with the reviewers but didn't convince the sponsoring company that another venture in the same direction was demanded, then or since.

Maybe times, and audiences, have changed.

Certainly Mr. Morros thinks so.

Evidently David O. Selznick, who has a project in kind on his agenda, thinks so, and assuredly the unpublicized sponsors of "This Changing World," the British War Relief-American Red Cross superfilm now nearing completion with more ranking stars in it than all similar enterprises put together, think so most earnestly.

Mr. Morros' announced cast includes Charles Boyer, Ginger Rogers, Henry Fonda, Rita Hayworth, Charles Laughton, Thomas Mitchell, Edward G. Robinson, W. C. Fields, Paul Robeson, Elsa Lanchester, Rochester, Ethel Waters, Victor Francen and the Hall Johnson Choir. More than a dozen writers whose names are screen values, ranging in style from Ben Hecht to Ferenc Molnar, will have contributed their talent and enthusiasm to the enterprise. Julien Duvivier, whose "Carnet de Bal" was a sensation in France and here, is directing.

Mr. Neilan's cast, top talent in 1921, included Wesley Barry, John Bowers, Teddy Sampson, Dorothy Mackaill, Edythe Chapman, Frederick Burton, Lon Chaney, Noah Beery, Anna May Wong, Rockliffe Fellows, Tammany Young, James Neil and James Bradbury, Jr. Walter Trumbull, Thomas McMorrow and Hugh Wiley wrote three of the stories, Neilan the fourth.

Paramount's 1932 venture offered Gary Cooper, George Raft, Charles Laughton, Jack Oakie, Charles Ruggles, W. C. Fields, Gene Raymond, Joyce Compton, Wynne Gibson, Richard Bennett, Frances Dee, Allison Skipworth, Mary Boland, Roscoe Karns, May Robson and Lucien Littlefield, split into seven divisions and directed by Ernst Lubitsch, Norman Taurog, Stephen Roberts, Norman McLoed, James Cruze, William A. Seiter, H. Bruce Humberstone, with scripts supplied by an equally stimulating and expensive array of writers.

Producer Morros' venture, it is to be observed, is launched in the wake of distinguished precedent.

It is a fundament of the Morros reasoning, as it was of his predecessors and is of Mr. Selznick's, that Literature is full of fine stories which rate filming on their merits but don't get filmed because they're short. It is a commercial corollary of this reasoning that a broadside of marquee names, obtainable without prohibitive cost for the short periods of service required, will pull a profitable patronage into the theatres under any and all circumstances.

A similar reasoning governs the British War Relief-American Red Cross charity film, in which virtually all of the ranking stars of America and Britain will be seen under direction of all the ranking directors. To this enterprise, however, all participants have donated their services, somewhat as the personalities of the entertainment world have donated theirs to the Treasury Hour. It is figured that this picture can't miss making a handsome profit for the charities it serves.

"Tales" Now Shooting

"Tales of Manhattan," which is being shot in sections and has four to go after the one now in work, will be some while in getting to the screen.

What it will do when it gets there is, in view of precedents noted and in Hollywood vernacular, "one of those things."

If it should turn out that the public-at-large has caught up with the artists who serve it, all of whom have thrilled to these ventures from the beginning, there'll be joy in every studio in town. Every one of them is in the market for a workable means of utilizing all the talents and all the work-hours available without running the overhead higher than the National Debt. Which is why the Town is saying, by and large and with a sincerity seldom recorded, "Luck to Boris Morros."

150 Theatres in Canada Blackout

The Dominion of Canada's most extensive test blackout took place Monday night, Nov. 10th, with exhibitors in Montreal reporting attendance and receipts about normal. Officials said that the exhibitor's cooperation in making the half-hour blackout a success was 100 per cent.

Approximately 150 film theatres in the Province of Quebec were affected by the blackout, which was the largest ever attempted in North America. The total number of theatres in the province is placed at 180, but some of these, mostly rural establishments, were unaffected.

According to rules prescribed by the civilian defense officials, the 80-odd theatres in the Montreal metropolitan district were directed to give pass-out checks to patrons wishing to leave the theatre for a glimpse of the darkened city when the "alert" sounded at 9:45 P.M. The test took place from 10:00 to 10:30 P.M.

Ushers at Exits

After marquee, lobby, lounge and running lights had been extinguished at 10 P.M., ushers with flashlights were stationed at exits and no one was permitted to leave. This ruling was for the safety of patrons. Emergency battery lighting plants were kept in readiness in case of necessity but were not needed.

Police had cautioned the public against pickpockets and holdup men and theatres provided protection for patrons against prowlers.

Theatre outer lobbies were crowded with pedestrians who were urged by the police to seek shelter in doorways. Despite the excitement, evening business, as reported by managers, was unaffected.

The combined seating capacity of all Quebec houses affected by the blackout is estimated at 120,000. Contributing to this total are 73 houses in Montreal, 11 in Quebec City, four in Three Rivers, and a total of 90 in other Quebec cities and towns.

The blackout affected practically one-sixth of Canadian territory. Civil Protection Committee officers and local police supervised the blackout. All traffic came to a standstill, with lights extinguished.

During the blackout in Montreal earlier in the year exhibitors reported no noticeable effect on box-office receipts.

Another test blackout was conducted in Quebec Tuesday night, Remembrance Day in Canada, from 9:45 to 10:30 P.M. Penalties were levied for failure to cooperate with the Civil Protection Committee.

GTE Quarter Income Up More Than 125%

General Theatres Equipment and subsidiaries, excluding Cinema Building Corporation, on Tuesday, reported for the three months ended September 30, 1941, a consolidated net profit of $393,304 after provision for depreciation and for estimated Federal income and excess profits taxes. This compares with net of $173,797 for the corsponding quarter last year.

Leatherby Succeeds Cox

American Theatre Corp. Buys Minneapolis House

The Esquire theatre, a motion picture house in downtown Minneapolis, which opened several years ago as the Time theatre, has been sold by Ben Berger of the Berger Amusement Co., to the newly formed American Theatre Corp.

The new company was established by Harry Gainsley, a Minneapolis attorney, who has not disclosed who is in back of the new operating firm. The American Amusement company will occupy the house about December 1st.

Canadian Price Rule Group Named

A committee headed by J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was appointed at a meeting of all branches of the motion picture industry in Toronto last week, to deal with the orders of the Dominion Government pegging admission prices and wages for the duration of the war.

No resolution of protest was drawn up covering either subject, but the committee was empowered to negotiate with the War Time Prices and Trade Board and the Labor Control Board on the developments. General regulations have been received, but the industry has not yet specific orders for the application of the control, when the theatres would be in a position to present their case.

It is understood the maximum admission order, effective November 17th, will not include film rentals. The committee comprises the officers of the Motion Picture Section of the Toronto Board of Trade, of which N. A. Taylor is president, Louis Rosenfield of Columbia is vice president, Harry Alexander represents exhibitors and J. P. O'Loghlin distributors, in addition to Ben Geldsaler of Famous Players, and F. T. Tolchard, Board of Trade secretary.

New World Theatre Policy

The World theatre in New York, following the run of the French picture, "The Man Who Seeks the Truth," will inaugurate a new policy by presenting films from Great Britain for their first showings in this country. The inaugural performance on Monday, November 17th, will present the American premiere of "This England," starring Emlyn Williams, Constance Cummings and John Clements.

Albert Dale With NBC

Albert E. Dale, newspaperman and former managing editor, has been appointed director of the National Broadcasting Company Department of Information. Mr. Dale has been director of public relations and publicity for the Greater New York Fund. He takes his new position immediately.

Metropolitan Books Shows

The Metropolitan theatre in Boston, a 4,200-seat deluxe house of the M. & P. chain, will return to stage attractions on November 14th. Xavier Cugat's orchestra is scheduled to open the stage season. The Metropolitan has been without stage presentations for over three years except for the spot booking of Bob Hope in June, 1940.

Argentina Sets Censor Board

Several American made motion pictures have been banned during recent months in Argentina according to a report from the United States Department of Commerce. Buenos Aires censorship authorities advised during the latter part of May that news reels and trailers for feature pictures would be subject to advance reviewing.

A recent Government order has changed the name of the Instituto Cinematografico del Estado. A proposed law introduced in the Argentine Congress in 1938 contemplated that this organization would have jurisdiction over most phases of the motion picture industry, including censorship of all films, but such a project was never approved. The recent decree provides that production of films under auspices of any Government agency shall be under the supervision of the Instituto. However, the Instituto as reorganized, will have little or no jurisdiction over commercial aspects of the film trade.

The following table, based on a compilation of Argentine trade-paper reviews, indicates the number and orgin of feature films released in Buenos Aires during the first eight months of this year, and a comparison is made with the two preceding years:

Country of Origin	1941	1940	1939
United States	243	231	205
Argentina	36	34	38
France	17	26	32
Germany	12	4	5
Mexico	11	5	3
Spain	5	2	6
Great Britain	5	5	11
Italy	3	3	5
Others	4	...	1
Total	336	310	306

The increase in the number of German pictures reflects the efforts of the Ufa representative in Argentina to obtain a wider distribution in thaot market. Up to this time, however, the Germans have succeeded in obtaining first run outlets for feature films in only two houses in the Buenos Aires theatre district.

TELEVISION STYMIED BY PRIORITIES, NOW SEEKS TO SERVE IN 'WAR POST'

Manufacturers and Broadcasters See Chance to Build Public Interest in Medium While Serving Defense Plans

Tied by priorities and with slim hope of expanding on a large scale, commercially or artistically, "for the duration" the television industry is now turning to the national defense program to sell itself as a principal medium of public education and instruction in the war emergency.

All of the major television broadcasters have submitted, or are preparing, detailed plans for local and Washington defense officials to show how the new entertainment medium can be used in national defense. A desire to render patriotic service, executives insist, is the principal motive for television's all-out cooperation with the defense program.

Would Build Interest

It is admitted readily, however, that the television industry believes it also faces the best opportunity of its career to sell itself to the public through the national defense program. By transmitting informative defense programs to television receivers in public places the broadcasters hope to reach people who have never before seen the visual broadcasts. This "educational" work is regarded as an excellent way to build public interest in television against the day when unlimited manufacture is possible.

There are hopes too, that by participating directly, meanwhile, in the civilian defense program the television industry can secure priorities for the manufacture of new receivers. These, it is agreed, will be installed in public places and used primarily for defense education programs.

"The word television has an enchantment that should carry much of the load of marshalling and holding public interest and attention," one NBC official observed in an official recommendation to Washington that the medium be used for defense instruction. Government officials, it is said, share much of the industry's confidence that wide public interest could be stirred by the novelty of televised defense programs. If these were of top entertainment as well as educational calibre it is believed that the medium would be the most effective means of mass instruction yet devised.

Detailed plans for using television have been submitted to Mayor La Guardia, national head of the Office of Civilian Defense, Army, Navy, and other state and local civilian defense organizations. Major Edward G. Riekert heads the New York region's OCD program, James Sauter, of Air Features, heads television and radio work for the area.

Fire fighting, first aid, maps showing city evacuation routes, plane spotting, the use of gas masks, and many other defense subjects of concern to the civilian population can be taught most quickly and efficiently by television, industry leaders assert. Studio demonstrations, lectures, and special training films would provide the program material.

Although in New York there are only about 5,000 receivers the television executives point out that an average of 20 persons can view each set, or 100,000 listeners per broadcast. This figure can be multiplied many times by weekly, or more frequent, repetition of defense programs they say.

There are plans, on paper as yet, but under careful consideration, to ask all present owners of television sets to be "television wardens," gathering groups of their neighbors for the special demonstrations. Other sets, in public places such as cafes, radio stores, and hotels could also be used for the instructions.

Lifting, at least partly, the OPM's priority rulings to permit manufacture of several thousand new sets would also greatly aid the "television for defense" project it is asserted.

James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, one source reports, is enthusiastic over the defense program outlined by the industry. It is said that he plans to ask the OPM and army and navy purchasing agents to release restricted materials for 25,000 receivers. They would be apportioned among existing manufacturers and the new sets would be placed in public or semi-public places. The amount of metal needed is said to be small.

"A television receiver in every precinct in New York would make it possible to instruct key civil defense leaders instantly, swiftly and graphically" one expert observed. He suggested that the industry try to place receivers in schools, police stations and other central points. He said the costs might well be written off as an investment in the industry's future. The receivers, he said, would interest thousands of persons in television. All would be potential customers when the emergency ends, he predicted.

The defense use of television is not new. As early as 1937 National Broadcasting Company executives had submitted suggestions for its use

New York City to License All Television Sets at $2 Monthly

The City of New York intends to collect license fees of $2 per month on all public television receivers, the Department of Licenses holding that the receivers are subject to municipal regulation and tax under the motion picture licensing law. Enforcement of the ordinance in respect to television was held up until the Federal Communications Commission authorized commercial programs starting on July 1st.

Only receivers in public places will be licensed at present, officials said, but they insisted that under the law the city also has the right to license receivers in private homes.

Paul S. Moss, Commissioner of Licenses, on Monday indicated that his department is ready to enforce compliance with the law from all persons exhibiting television receivers in public. Already, he said, about 100 establishments, chiefly cafes and taprooms, are paying the tax on their television receivers. Police and license inspectors have been instructed to issue summonses to all persons they find operating receivers without a license.

Word that the city is ready to seek revenue from the infant television industry brought surprised comment from the broadcasters, manufacturers and many owners of public sets. They predicted a united industry court fight to block enforcement of the law. A chaos of local regulations was predicted if the New York law was not successfully challenged.

"If they feel exercised at the regulation, let 'em come down here; we have lots of room for exercise," Commissioner Moss commented when informed on Monday of opposition to the law. He said its application was plain, and that the Department was proceeding to issue the licenses.

The ordinance, which the Commissioner said was about 25 years old, defines motion pictures as "a display on a screen or other device of pictures or objects in motion or rapidly changing scenery whether or not such display shall be accompanied by a lecture, recitation, or music".

A court test of the licenses will be backed by the manufacturers. Their attorneys will be on hand at the first hearings of summonses in Brooklyn magistrates court on November 18th. If the fees are upheld, they say they will fight the case to the highest court. Meanwhile, it is reported, the industry is seeking FCC support of their cause and an investigation by Mayor LaGuardia into the licensing attempt.

"Television sets are considered the same as motion picture projectors," according to the license laws, Commissioner Moss asserted. He added that he believed the section also empowers the city to license home receivers but indicated that, as with home motion picture projectors, no action would be taken to enforce it.

"We are interested at present only in television receivers in commercial establishments," he said, citing installations in many bars and taprooms. He would not say whether receivers in radio stores, schools, or the broadcasting studios themselves could also be taxed.

Beverage retailers, RCA and DuMont and the broadcasting stations are all studying the regulations and it is expected that a test case will be started soon.

Television Heads Submitting Plans to Aid Defense

to military and government chiefs in Washington. Manufacturers and other broadcasters have also had such plans on hand for a long time.

Current activity is prompted by the recent organizing of the Office of Civilian Defense, and city, state and national civil defense groups. They have been quick to seek cooperation of television, radio and films in publicizing their work and in setting up emergency instruction channels.

Defense programs are going out over the sight and sound airwaves in increasing numbers. Both NBC and CBS this week inaugurate regular defense programs over their New York television outlets. The work is not new for either station.

NBC reports that it has telecast 57 programs in the interest of national defense since commercialization started on July 1st.

These have included promotion of the Defense Bond campaign, programs on the use of gas masks, extinguishing incendiary bombs, first aid and recruiting for the army and navy and defense telecasts in cooperation with the American Red Cross, the Federal Communications Commission, the Office of Civilian Defense, the United Service Organizations, the New York State Committee on Fire Defense, the American Women's Volunteer Service and other groups.

Defense Programs On

To mark National Defense Week, WNBT this week presents three defense programs. Helen Nolan, director of Defense Information for New York State, explained the state defense work on Tuesday. The Wednesday and Saturday programs were to explain television as a medium for disseminating information and practical instruction. Specially trained military dogs were to appear on Saturday.

The Columbia Broadcasting System gave civilian air raid protection a television debut on November 7th over WCBW. A duplicate of the guarded information center "somewhere in New York" was set up in front of the television cameras and its operation upder a bombing attack described.

Other CBS defense programs recently televised include a navy demonstration of safety devices used by air pilots, a demonstration by the Coast Guard of peace and wartime duties and the assembly of an airplane engine used in army training planes. Mechanics of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation demonstrated the manufacture of a new in line air cooled engine while engineers and Office of Emergency Management officials explained the work's defense importance. The army Quartermaster Corps also demonstrated new uniforms for special military tasks. Red Cross, defense bond sales, and women's auxiliary programs have also been televised by CBS.

A one-man crusade to coordinate television defense activity is also under way by Norman D. Waters, New York advertising agent. He has conferred with Mr. Fly of the FCC and other government officials on the establishment of an official U. S. television committee and recently toured Washington executive offices to evoke official interest in television. A meeting of television executives called by Mr. Waters last week indorsed his plan in principle.

Increasing attention to remote sports pickups is evident in WNBT programs. The station is broadcasting Columbia University and professional football games on a regular schedule and boxing and wrestling sponsorship contracts have been signed recently with the Adam Hat Company.

A shortage of receivers and transmitter equipment has seriously handicapped television outside of New York. In Chicago it is estimated that not more than 100 sets, belonging largely to technicians, are in use.

William C. Eddy, chief engineer of the Balaban & Katz station W9XBK, recently told Washington authorities that further construction on the station was practically useless until there was a public to witness the broadcasts. He asked that the priority list be relaxed so the manufacturers could produce more receivers.

The Balaban & Katz station is now on the air 45 minutes daily, five days a week with experimental programs. The priority situation, Mr. Eddy said, and technical problems have retarded the completion of the station. It has renewed its construction permit several times on a month to month basis.

Don Lee Has Film Stock

The Don Lee television station at Hollywood, W6XAO, this week broadcast its first film transmission from the station atop Mt. Lee, near Hollywood. A large film library, said to be comprised mostly of shorts obtained from commercial film companies and Canadian war film footage is on hand. The station is using 16 mm film at present and occasionally makes its own newsreel of local events. Next month the Don Lee outlet marks its tenth anniversary in television experimentation.

The Metropolitan Television Corporation at New York, owned by the Bloomingdale's and Abraham Straus department stores have applied for a construction permit for a commercial station. They have previously held an experimental franchise for W2XMT. The application filed last week with the FCC asks for 500 watts audio and 1,000 watts video power on channel No. 8.

Fox West Coast Acquires Theatres

Lou and Mike Bard, operators of the Colcata Corporation, have sold their Colorado theatre in Pasadena, Cal., to Fox West Coast. The deal involved about $400,000 for the building, land and improvements. FWC plans to convert the 1,700-seat theatre into an all-loge, preview house on a first run basis. The United Artists, present first run theatre in Pasadena will become a move-over situation.

The closing of this deal ends the Colcata-FWC litigations which has been in Los Angeles courts for several years, with the former accusing the latter of conspiring to keep product away from the Colorada in conspiracy with major film distributors.

Burnett Wolfson, representing the Monrovia Theatres Corporation in its anti-trust suit against FWC Theatres asked for and received a dismissal of the complaint in the district court. Immediately thereafter, Dietrich & Fledstein, operators of the Monrovia theatre sold the house to the Euclid-Colorado Corp., a FWC subsidiary.

Buys in San Pedro

FWC has also acquired the Globe theatre in San Pedro, a 500-seat subsequent run house, from Byron Foy and W. H. Callaway, Warners exchange managers, for $10,000.

The lease on the Fox California theatre in Watsonville, has been extended another 15 years by Fox West Coast which plans to spend $20,000 on rehabilitation of the theatre.

Two more theatres built within theatres are under way by the company as a result of the success of the second run Grove theatre in Redlands, Cal., which was built on the stage of the first run Redfern. The new houses will be built on the stages of the Balboa and California theatres.

Ground is to be broken on the recently approved site for a new FWC theatre in Los Angeles. The theatre is to be operated in partnership with Dave Bershon, now a partner at the Leimert and Mesa theatres.

It has also been announced that the entire block on San Fernando Road between Irving and Thompson Avenues, Glendale, Cal., has been purchased by FWC for $42,000. Architect S. Charles Lee announced the completion of plans for a $200,000 theatre to be erected on the site shortly. This will be Fox West Coast's seventh Glandale theatre, the others are the Alex, Geln-dale, Capitol, Gateway, Glen and California theatres.

The Valley theatre, El Centro, dark during the summer months has been reopened by FWC with Herb Norris as manager.

The following changes, meanwhile, have been announced by the FWC circuit: Dave Martin, manager of the Granada theatre in Inglewood for two years has been promoted to manage the Redondon theatre at Redondo Beach, as well as to the supervision of the Strand in that town, the Hermosa at Hermosa Beach, and the La Mar at Manhattan Beach.

From the Starland theatre, Inglewood, George O'Brien has been promoted to succeed Martin at the Granada. Jack Case, assistant manager of the Granada has been shifted to a similar spot at the California, Huntington Park. Bill Lowan, assistant manager at the latter theatres, has been promoted to manage the Golden Gate, Belvedere Gardens, replacing Jerry Cruea, now in the Army. From the Redondo to the Florence in Los Angeles has moved Ernest Sturm, replacing John Klee, promoted to the booking department. Earl Peterson moves to fill Mr. O'Brien's spot at the Starland. He was at the Hermosa. Lee Killibrew is at the Hermosa which is expected to close shortly for renovations.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

World in Action

Convinced that the filmgoing public is seriously minded at heart, and that fundamental issues can be treated in such a way as to make them box office, a British company, World in Action, is to launch a series of short films devoted to the democratic order of today and tomorrow. Causes rather than effects, fundamentals rather than surfaces, will be the keynote.

World in Action points to the immense success of the March of Time, of controversial features of the calibre of "Grapes of Wrath," "Stars Look Down," "Love on the Dole," suggests that this reflects a trend which should be nurtured and which can no less be converted to commercial ends in so doing.

In order to put this policy into practice the company proposes to engage as writers men prominent in their profession, and to entrust policy to an editorial board composed of men-of-letters who possess practical experience in film production. It will be the task of the Board to conduct research and to appoint experts on the subjects chosen for production.

The nucleus of the Editorial Board has already been established and agreements have been entered into with Anthony Asquith (Consulting Producer), J. B. Priestley (Literary Adviser), Walter Greenwood, Herbert Read and others.

Among the subjects in preparation are:

"Fascism," by Andre Labarthe. This will show how in the ordinary citizen, harassed by economic conditions in a world in which all spiritual and moral values have lost their meaning, the disease of fascism can arise, and how affecting a whole people, it develops into a pseudo-revolutionary creed, leading ultimately to total war, total disintegration, and moral nihilism.

"Culture and Democracy" by Herbert Read. This will show how culture in the industrial machine age has gradually become divorced from life itself, with the result that our present culture has become lifeless and our life culture-less.

"The City of the Future" by H. de Rochefort. This which it is hoped will be made in close co-operation with various bodies now engaged on planning future cities, will demonstrate the necessity for re-planning, show the close inter-relation between town and country, between individual and community.

"The Scourge of Europe." by R. Preston and H. de Rochefort. The story of the German army of the last 50 years showing how as an instrument of caste and class it has become a law unto itself.

"Our Daily Bread." The story of bread from the Empire Wheat fields to the consumer's table. It will give the scientific, economic, sociological implications which today rule this primary need of all men, expressed in the Lord's prayer: "Give us this day our Daily Bread."

"Between Midnight and Dawn." This film is programmatic for the whole series, as it sets out in an imaginative way the hopes and views of the ordinary people of Britain for the future of mankind.

Adding yet another portrait to her gallery of famous women, Anna Neagle is presently putting finishing touches to her conception before she starts actual work on the Herbert Wilcox film on Amy Mollison, "Women With Wings." Wilcox is preparing this at Denham for RKO-Radio release. He will himself direct and produce.

The film will tell the story of Amy Mollison, put the woman flier on the walls of screen fame beside Miss Neagle's portraits of Queen Victoria, Nurse Cavell, Nell Gwynn and Peg Woffington. It will be romantic as well as dramatic, include not only the abortive efforts of Jim and Amy to make a flying as well as a domestic team, their ultimate divorce and their reunion as ferry pilots for a Britain at war.

Steam Engine

Playing a minor but not unimportant role in "The Young Mr. Pitt" is one of the landmarks of British engineering—James Watt's first steam engine.

The London Science Museum authorities allowed this and other originals to be brought up from bomb-proof vaults, and in the empty museum (now closed to the public) the archaic machinery was filmed by a camera crew from Shepherd's Bush studios. Actors in 18th Century engineering clothes clambered around Watt's steam engine with oil cans, as the cameraman filmed it in action.

Another original invention, filmed in action at the museum, was Cartwright's famous power loom. A student from the School of Weaving turned actress and plied a full-scale model of Hargreave's spinning-jenny for the cameramen.

A suggestion from the Ministry of Information to Michael Balcon, production head of Ealing Studios, has inspired Will Hay's next film, "The Goose Steps Out," due to go into production in the near future. The comedian will be a schoolmaster again—but a schoolmaster with a difference. He becomes a British agent masquerading as a Nazi professor in a German university.

The original idea for the subject was put up to the Ministry of Information by film writer Reginald Groves, who suggested it as a short propaganda film with Will Hay. The Ministry liked the idea, thought it had in it the makings of a feature-length comedy, and passed it on to Ealing Studios.

Bombing Scenes

Netting a maximum of column space in the dailies, in the fan papers, and in the trade press, just now, is Two Cities' "Unpublished Story" which Harold French is directing at Denham for release ultimately by Columbia, and in which Richard Greene, Valerie Hobson and Basil Radford are leading names. The story is one of the British newspapers and newspapermen in the London Blitz, is being produced on lavish lines at Denham by Anthony Havelock Allen.

One of its major points of appeal will be its recreation for screen purposes of the bombing of the London Docks and the City and East End in September, 1939, but from the story it would seem that something more than a documentary flavor is going to be found in it, for romance and comedy have been provided for, and so far, achieved in sequences already in the can.

Locations so divergent as Fleet Street and the Docks, a Tube Shelter, Government offices in Whitehall, Dunkirk and the French farmlands, are included.

Empire politicians and functionaries recently paid a visit to the Studio while the film was being shot and recorded for the benefit of the B. B. C. microphone. The result will by now have been broadcast to the U. S. and Empire stations.

On location currently is the Leslie Howard unit which is making "First of the Few" the dramatisation of the life of R. J. Mitchell creator of Britain's spitfire. The unit has already taken up residence at Denham, but so far has been shooting sequences on a British fighter station, where, with the collaboration of the Air Ministry and Fighter Command, shots have been taken of "sweeps" and "scrambles," takeoffs, landings, etcetera.

Howard, intent on ensuring authenticity of dialogue and situation, was given permission to film and record scenes of pilots returning from operations.

On one occasion the fighters returned to report the destruction of a Junkers 88. On another, one youthful pilot came back to the station minus most of his rudder, having been closely concerned in an attack on a couple of heavily armed enemy merchant ships. Having reported to his C.O. and the intelligence officer, he hastened back to "The First of the Few" unit to continue filming.

The co-operation of fighter pilots and ground staff has not been the limit of Air Ministry interest and assistance. At the same station a captured Heinkel Bomber, complete with Swastika and black crosses, has taken off to re-enact its losing encounter with Spitfires. This sequence naturally called for the closest staff work between the service and civil defence organisations.

'RED, WHITE AND BLUE' STAGE SHOW CIRCUIT OFF TO ENTERTAIN ARMY

Thirteen Shows To Start Tour of Camps Beginning Nov. 24; Fund of $645,000 Available; Audience Put at 22,500,000

A specific, tangible all-around program for entertaining the nation's armed forces with stage shows previously much publicized, has finally gotten under way.

November 24th will mark the opening of the "Red, White and Blue" show circuit which the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy is launching through its affiliate, Camp Shows, Inc. Thirteen shows, six legitimate and seven musical variety revues, with more to come, will tour 186 Army camps and Naval bases, playing in 71 theatres located in 57 camps and 14 bases, and 115 other spots, reaching an estimated audience of 22,500,000 over a 153-week period. Films have been screened for the forces from the beginning of the emergency.

More Funds Granted

Following the conference held in Washington in October, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Oct. 11th, at which representatives of the screen, stage, radio and theatrical unions met with officials of the Army and Navy, the United Organization granted $145,000 to the Citizens Committee, this in addition to the $500,000 turned over last spring for the April 1st to November 1st period. Camp Shows, Inc., with its New York headquarters and Hollywood branch, will administer the $645,000, paying for actors, stagehands, advance men and touring expenses of cast and technicians. Some of the production and traveling expenses will be defrayed, it is understood, by an admission charge of 25 cents per person to each performance, which is a reversal of the USO policy established last spring of free entertainment for servicemen. Eddie Dowling, Broadway producer and actor, president of Camp Shows, will have full charge of production. Harry Delmar is handling musical shows under Mr. Dowling's direction. Mr. Delmar produced the seven outdoor vaudevilie units that played to a total of 3,200,000 men last spring and summer.

"Funzafire," a musical show, will open on November 24th at Fort Eustis, Virginia. On the same night, at Fort Leonard Wood, Waynesville, Mo., Ada Leonard and her All-American Girl Band will stage a revue for the boys. Five additional streamlined musicals are in preparation but Camp Shows has not set their dates and the Army has not yet determined their itinerary. Broadway's hit play, "My Sister Eileen," produced by Max Gordon, is the first of the new series of legitimate shows which Camp Shows will send on its circuit. "Cuckoos on the Hearth," "Arsenic and Old Lace," and possibly "Charley's Aunt," will follow. Mr. Dowling persuaded Broadway producers to contribute their late hits and services gratis so that servicemen will have entertainment on a par with Broadway fare.

Ronald Hammond, assistant to Mr. Dowling, is directing "My Sister Eileen," which began rehearsals on Monday. Mr. Hammond, Lawrence Phillips, executive vice president of the organization, producers Brock Pemberton and Richard Aldrich and director Antoinette Perry, met in New York last week to discuss token payments to script authors of plays and also the question of payment to directors and producers. No decisions were made by the group, however.

Noble Sissle has been commissioned to produce a Negro revue to tour camps where Negro troops are stationed. Top-ranking Negro theatrical stars and acts will be included in the unit.

Since Camp Shows was organized two weeks ago by the USO as a non-profit company to handle theatrical production as a regular unit, a number of stumbling blocks prevented its immediate functioning. Actors' Equity attempted to set up control of the casting of both legitimate and variety shows. In a statement made public last week by Bert Lytell, Equity president, the union emphasized that it was the only group that would have any authority in handling jobs for actors.

Jurisdictional Fight Avoided

Camp Shows hurdled the predicament by arranging with the Broadway producers of the legitimate plays on its circuit schedule to take charge of all casting and thus, the first jurisdictional fight was avoided. But it is understood that Equity will have a hand in casting of the shows. Camp Shows decided that it would not give auditions to volunteer groups that have prepared plays or acts on speculation and Equity, disapproving of such projects, prohibited its members from participating in such groups. As Camp Shows is a "professional effort," non-professionals are to be engaged only when professionals are not available; persons holding membership cards in any of the unions affiliated with the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, the A. F. of L. parent body of all entertainment unions, are eligible.

On Wednesday, Alfred Harding and Paul Turner, representing Equity, met with Lawrence Phillips, of Camps Shows, to iron out last minute tangles and establish the Equity contract by which the newly organized unit will operate.

As it now stands, Equity will assist Camp Shows in casting; units and plays sent out will be classified as productions, not stock companies; salaries will be at least Equity minimum, $50 a week, with higher salaries for leading players.

Insofar as Hollywood is concerned, Leonard Beilenson, of the Screen Actors Guild, Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and chairman of the Hollywood branch of the motion picture defense committee, with Jock Lawrence, secretary of the latter committee, are organizing the talent pool for Camp Shows on the West Coast. All three men were present at the Washington conferences and pledged their cooperation. It is understood, however, that not many stars will be available to tour Army camps and Naval bases for a one-week or two-week period. The most Camp Shows can hope for is a single night star appearance at a camp adjacent to Hollywood. Screen feature players and others who are not under contract, however, will be able to fit into the talent pool schedules which will be worked out.

The first of Hollywood's contingent to tour for the Citizens Committee this season, the Laurel-Hardy-John Garfield troupe, is now in British Guiana, following appearances in Porto Rico and Trinidad. With the comedy team and the Warner Bros. star, are Benay Venuta, Ray Bolger, Jane Pickens and Mitzi Mayfair. A wire received on Monday from Atkinsonfield, in British Guiana, informed USO that upon its arrival the troupe was "mobbed, just like in Trinidad"; that "police reserves were called out" and that the Hollywood actors "finally appeased the crowds by staging an impromptu show" on the balcony of the Georgetown Hotel. The Army camp is "in the heart of the jungle." Many of the natives had never before seen a live Hollywood actor. USO reports that the troupe has met with great success in all three stops and that "appreciative morale of the servicemen" is high.

Vaudeville Shows Planned

Camp Shows, in addition to preparing its 13-show program, is planning a secondary circuit to tour an additional 115 camps and bases where lack of theatre space and stage equipment will permit only impromptu vaudeville acts which require a minimum of theatrical props and setting. The first of these shows should get under way between November 24th and December 1st.

Exploitation, publicity and advertising for all shows will be handled by Camp Shows, in cooperation with the Army. An advance men will be sent out from the New York office to stir up enthusiasm for each show and arrange for other publicity tie-ups.

Some regret has been expressed in certain quarters at USO that the Army and Navy officials handling publicity for the shows are "not geared to do theatrical publicity." With a minimum of publicity staff people available in the New York and Hollywood units of Camp Shows, it is felt that the Army and Navy should attempt "a better job" in coordinating show promotion plans and techniques.

Within the next two weeks, a complete schedule of dates and itinerary of the 14 Camp Shows' productions will be available, following the spot locations designated by the Army and Navy. It is understood that a minimum of "red tape" would have facilitated this schedule for an earlier announcement so that Camp Shows would have been able to start without undue delay.

Will Horwitz, operator of the Uptown Theatre Center in Houston, Tex., opened a soldier's service club for men in uniform in his theatre last week. It will be open from 3:00 to 11:00 P.M. daily. Usherettes from the four Horwitz houses will take turns serving as hostesses for the club. The room is equipped with various amusement and recreational facilities. Free coffee and cake will be served for men in training. Mr. Horwitz also will present a free stage show on Saturday.

WOULD PRE-RELEASE FILMS FOR ARMY

A resolution adopted on Monday by the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners recommended that prints of all films be made available to Army posts prior to their national release date in the interests of morale on condition that Army theatres admit only servicemen.

The resolution instructed member exhibitors "who may be hurt because of the particular clearance that an Army post may have" to send a report of the matter to Robert H. Poole, executive secretary, for forwarding to Francis Harmon of the MPPDA and coordinator of the motion picture national defense committee. It was also suggested that the latter committee appoint a subcommittee on clearance to take care of such complaints.

'Lady' Premiere In New York; Others Planned

New York's Criterion Theatre in Tuesday played host to a premiere—Edward Small's "International Lady"—and to celebrities, klieg lights, and other appurtenances of a first class opening.

Meanwhile, Universal's exploiteering staff prepared for the world pre-release premiere of its Abbott and Costello comedy, "Keep 'Em Flying," at the Fox theatre, Detroit, November 19th. Paramount's "Skylark" was selected by the Red Cross to open its new recreation center at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, Tuesday—an opening attended by many Army and screen notables. Metro's "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," will open at Boston's Loew's State, and Orpheum theatres, December 4th, the company decided. And United Artists announced that its Arnold Pressburger release, "Shanghai Gesture," will have road showings in ten key cities.

Stars Attend

Celebrities at the "International Lady" premiere Tuesday night at New York's Criterion Theatre were Ilona Massey, feminine lead, Walter Wanger, Alan Curtis, Erroll Flynn, Hildegarde, Lana Turner, Bruce Cabot, Louis Hayward, Sheila Barrett. The ceremonies were broadcast over radio station WHN. Newsreel cameras also recorded it.

Exploiteers arranging the world premiere of Universal's "Keep 'Em Flying" at the Fox Theatre, Detroit, next Wednesday, are Bob Moak, Tommy McLeod and John Baker, aided by Dan Thomas from the studio, and Dave Idzal, manager of the theatre.

Expected to be at the opening are Abbott and Costello, Carol Bruce and Dick Foran, from the picture, and Arthur Lubin, its director. Road exploiteers will be in 50 key cities, following the opening in Detroit, and will prepare a campaign under direction of Sidney Davidson.

Termed "the smallest premiere for the greatest cause," there was the opening of Paramount's "Skylark" in Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, Tuesday, coincident with the opening of the Red Cross' new recreation center there.

Army notables, and some from the screen, were present; so were 200 convalescent soldiers.

Hampton W. Howard, director of the National Motion Picture Service of the Red Cross, arranged the opening.

Roadshows for Pressburger Film

The projected roadshowing of Arnold Pressburger's "Shanghai Gesture" by its distributor, United Artists, was announced by Arthur W. Kelly, sales manager of the latter, in New York this week. He added release is in January.

Warner Brothers' British release, "Target for Tonight," a factual account of bombing of Germany, was screened Tuesday morning on the hangar deck of the H. M. S. Furious, British aircraft carrier, in the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Officers and men from that ship, the H. M. S. Manchester, nearby, and the Yard, saw the film. It is the first screening on a British ship in American waters.

Twentieth Century Fox's "Swamp Water," starring Walter Brennan and Walter Huston, was to have its first Broadway showing Saturday, at the Globe, New York.

The company has decided to ballyhoo its latest "big" attraction, "How Green Was My Valley," via trailer to be sent to houses in which the film will play, for attachment to regular newsreels. In newsreel form, this trailer of more than 300 feet shows the famed personalities who attended the world premiere at the Rivoli, and has commentary by Lowell Thomas.

Walt Disney Productions announces 150,000 have seen "Dumbo" at the Broadway Theatre, to the beginning of this week. The figure is an all-time record for the theatre.

Paramount will trade show its Technicolor musical, "Louisiana Purchase" in Chicago in conjunction with a district managers' meeting, November 21st and 22nd; and it will give the picture its first Chicago public showing at the Esquire theatre.

The company's "Nothing But the Truth" finished its third week at New York's Paramount Tuesday with $45,000 in receipts.

Milton Officer Wins Award

Milton Officer, manager of the Iris theatre in Chicago, is the winner of the John Balaban silver trophy for the best record during the past three months. In addition, he received a $100 award. The trophy and money prizes will be made every three months to the manager of the Balaban and Katz circuit with the best showing record. Abe Platt is chairman of the circuit trophy committee.

Cinema Library at Denver 'U'

Establishment and endowment of a library of the motion picture arts and sciences at the University of Denver is being made possible through donation and support by the Rocky Mountain Screen Club of Denver with a membership of 124 film and theatre men, it was announced this week, marking the club's second venture into civic movements. Last year the group donated $3,000 to the Denver General Hospital for the furnishing of rooms and wards in the children's pavilion.

The collection of cinematic books, films and articles will be kept in the Mary Reed library at the University; any rare items will be kept in the Treasure Room and in the library vault. Equipment for the collection will include a Recordak for the filming of books, articles and films that are rare or perishable.

The Movement was the result of conferences between Frank H. (Rick) Ricketson, Jr., Screen Club president, and Caleb F. Gates, Jr., chancellor of the university. A governing board will be set up, composed of three from the school faculty and three from the Screen Club, the latter to be headed by Mr. Ricketson. An advisory committee will be formed of Hollywood directors and producers, yet to be named, and headed by C. B. DeMille.

Irving Phillips, credited with supplying nearly 60 per cent of the ideas used for Esquire Magazine's cartoons, has been engaged by RKO to submit special material of the "gag" variety for use in the Bert Lahr-Buddy Ebsen filmusical, "Sing Your Worries Away."

Robert Kilgore Resigns

Robert Kilgore has resigned as manager of Loew's Palace in Memphis, Tenn., to accept partnership in the Victory Amusement Company, which operates two theatres in Denver.

So What and Why

Arthur Brisbane, who wrote his way to fame in short paragraphs and simple thoughts dramatically expressed, used to say that "A newspaper man is like a hen: because she has to lay a new egg every day." In our observation they are more like roosters, but we'll pass that.

For us of the amusement business, each day is a new approach to that same job, a show for sale at the box office.

The plan and purpose is always the same. The appeal must, however, seem different.

The theatre needs to have a show, and one new to the customer, every time the customer decides he wants a show.

Republic, with its policy addressed at the whole American family, recognizes the diversity of demand, and the demand for diversity with a program addressed at the range of whims that express a basic taste.

Republic's offerings for 1941-42, delivered on a dependable schedule—and a dependable schedule is part of that policy—will include thirty-two feature productions, on themes of comedy, melodrama, music, action tales and such topically inspired stories as may be derived from the news and trends of these stirring days.

Besides all that, there will be thirty Westerns, presenting those same stars, made and proved at the box office in the rise of Republic; Gene Autry, elected to major stardom by grace of the box office dollar, Roy Rogers, The Three Mesquiteers and Don "Red" Barry.

Additionally Republic will continue to dominate the serial market with four chapter-plays for the coming season: Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the football sensation, in "King of the Texas Rangers," Ralph Byrd in "Dick Tracy Versus Crime, Inc.," "Spy Smasher," another Fawcett cartoon subject, backed by the same campaign that made serial history with "Adventures of Captain Marvel," and the new Serial Queen Frances Gifford in "Perils of Nyoka."

These productions are made strictly for the customers.

National Decency Legion Classifies Six Pictures

Of the six motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were approved for general patronage and three were found to be unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage; "Buy Me That Town," "Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring" and "Riding the Sunset Trail." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults; "Appointment for Love," "Hot Spot" and "Swamp Water."

Cincinnati Building Bought

The Strand Office Building, including the 1,200-seat Strand Theatre, in the heart of the downtown business sector, in Cincinnati, formerly owned by the Delta Realty Co., which has been in process of dissolution under receivership for several months, has been purchased by the 531 Walnut Street Corp., recently incorporated in Ohio as part of Associated Theatres, Inc., Detroit, of which Alex Schreiber is the head. Sale price was $380,000. The theatre will be reopened upon completion of extensive improvements, Mr. Schreiber said.

Selznick Signs Blake

David O. Selznick, producer and new owner-partner of United Artists, announced in New York this week that he had signed Carter Blake and placed him in charge of talent. Mr. Blake, who has been general manager for Alfred de Liagre, Jr., and associated with him in the production of many Broadway stage successes, the last of which was "Mr. and Mrs. North," will have offices in New York and Hollywood.

Rosalind Russell Signs Contract

Columbia has signed Rosalind Russell to a five-year contract under which she will make two pictures a year for that studio. The contract goes into effect in mid-February. Miss Russell's first picture under the new agreement will be the film version of the Broadway stage play, "My Sister Eileen."

RKO, RCA Sign Deal

Negotiations have been completed for RCA service to eleven preview rooms of RKO Radio. The contract includes the furnishing of parts and other items to both sound and projection equipment. Adulph Goodman, RCA assistant service manager, handled the deal for RCA, while A. A. Schubart negotiated for RKO Radio.

Bette Davis Head of Film Academy

Bette Davis, five times nominee and twice winner of the outstanding actress award, has been elected president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the first woman to hold that post.

The new Academy board of governors at its first meeting named Miss Davis and the following officers: Walter Wanger, retiring president, as first vice-president; Edward Arnold, second vice-president; Rosalind Russell, third vice-president; James Hilton, fourth vice-president; Jane Murfin, secretary; Nat Finston, assistant secretary; John Aalberg, reelected treasurer; Peter Smith, assistant treasurer.

The new board also reaffirmed Donald Gledhill as executive secretary. The board shelved plans for a new Academy building, a project which had been planned for some time, when Sam Wood, committee head, reported priorities prevented the obtaining of the necessary materials.

Following her election Miss Davis announced the appointment of Darryl F. Zanuck to serve a third term as chairman of the Research Council of the Academy. While the appointment of the Research Council chairman usually takes place toward the end of the year and is for the calendar year, the advance reappointment of Mr. Zanuck of 1942 was voted by acclamation by the Academy board at its annual business meeting Thursday night, November 6th, in recognition of his outstanding leadership of the Council's activities in cooperation with the War Department.

RCA Distributes B-L Rectifiers

The RCA Manufacturing Company, of Camden, N. J., has taken over the foreign and domestic distribution of B-L motion picture rectifiers, manufactured by the Benwood Linze Co., according to an announcement sent to film equipment dealers and distributors.

B-L rectifiers will be distributed by the photophone sales division of RCA. Recently this division announced they had taken over the distribution of Brenkert projectors and arc lamps. The agreement with Benwood Linze Co., is another step in rounding out a complete line of motion picture equipment and supplies which RCA intends to offer equipment dealers, the company announced.

MGM opened its new 1,800-seat Cine Metro Copacabana, in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Wednesday. The threate has been furnished with modern fixtures, and has air conditioning.

Murphy Succeeds Schertzinger

Ralph Murphy has succeeded the late Victor Schertzinger as director of Paramount's "The Fleet's In." Mr. Schertzinger had practically completed the picture when he died Sunday, October 26th.

Fox Extends Romero Contract

Twentieth Century-Fox has given Cesar Romero a new term contract calling for two years services and options on four additional years. Mr. Romero's next picture will be "A Gentleman at Heart."

Daugherty and Silver Elected

M. A. Silver, until last week New York state zone manager for Warner Theatre Management, was named chief barker of the new Albany Variety Club, tent nine, at its first election November 7 at the Ten Eyck Hotel in Albany.

Mr. Silver, instrumental in the formation of the club and its temporary chairman until the election, has just been named to the Pittsburgh division managership vacated by the promotion of Harry Kalmine. Members of the Albany Variety tent, however, decided to honor Mr. Silver as its first chief barker. Mr. Silver has announced that he will resign as soon as the permanent organization is completed. He will be succeeded by Louis R. Golding, Fabian Theatres divisional manager at Albany.

Others Named

Officers elected were: M. A. Silver, chief barker, Louis R. Golding, first assistant chief barker, Clayton G. Eastman, Paramount branch manager, second assistant chief barker, Charles A. Smakwitz, Warner district theatre manager, dough guy and Herman L. Ripps, M-G-M branch manager, property master. The canvasmen are Meyer Schine, Gloversville, S. H. Fabian, New York, William Smalley, Cooperstown, M. A. Grassgreen, 20th-Century-Fox branch manager, Fred Archibald, Albany Times-Union publisher and Samuel E. Aronowitz, lawyer.

The club will open its new suite of rooms at the Ten Eyck Hotel late this month and anticipated installation of officers late in November. John H. Harris, chief barker of the national organization, will preside at the installation.

In Washington, D. C., Vincent Daugherty of the Paramount sales staff was elected Chief Barker of the local Variety Club, succeeding Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO Keith's.

Sam Wheeler and John Allen were chosen assistant chief barkers, Eddie Fontaine, secretary, and Sam Galanty was reelected treasurer. Carter Barron and Abe Lichtman were reelected delegates to the 1942 convention in Los Angeles, with Mr. Galanty and Rudolph Berger as alternates.

New members of the 1941-42 board of governors are John J. Payette, Nate Golden, Fred Kogod, Harry Lohmeyer, Mr. Galanty, Mr. Barron, Mr. Berger, Mr. Fontaine, Mr. Daugherty, Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Allen.

Cincinnati Activities Set

The Cincinnati Variety Club will hold its annual election November 17th with the installation of officers on December 1st.

As a means of stimulating activity in the club, the board of trustees has decided to extend an invitation to members of casts of legitimate shows playing in Cincinnati to attend a midnight lunch in the Club's quarters on Friday nights. Club members will participate in the affairs.

The Variety Club of Baltimore has inaugurated a new policy of installing theatrical night each Tuesday evening. Artists appearing at local theatres and night clubs will be invited guests.

Stage Night, also, has become a weekly feature, with a different member as "King for a Night" each Monday. The club is now holding dances each Saturday evening, with music by a local orchestra.

Francis J. Guehl has been elected president of the Universal Club in Pittsburgh. Other officers are P. C. Quiter, secretary and Angelo Marino, treasurer.

Underprivileged children in Indianapolis, from the orphans' homes, the day nurseries and other institutions, will be guests of the local Variety Club at a three-hour circus program in B. F. Keith's theatre on November 21st.

Kenneth T. Collins, chief barker, pointed out this was a change from the tent's usual policy of having a Christmas show for the youngsters.

The Warner Club in New Haven, Conn., will stage its annual Fall dinner dance on November 21st at Waverly Inn, with Russell Clark in charge of arrangements, assisted by Cy Barrett, James Bracken and John Matthews. About 400 representatives of the exchange and theatre departments, and staffs of over 30 Warner houses in the zone, are expected to attend.

The Variety Club of Kansas City announced that it has secured to play for dancing at its 11th annual movie ball, November 21st, Little Jack Littel and his orchestra. There will be numerous floor show numbers and novelties. The event will be held at the Pla-Mor ballroom.

DRIVE STARTS

Motion picture leaders, in New York, on Armistice Day, last Tuesday, sounded the Roll Call of the American Red Cross for the new year, under W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall theatre at Rockefeller Center, who will serve as chairman of the film division of this, the 25th anniversary of Red Cross drives.

Mr. Van Schmus said this year's contributions would represent "a definite contribution to national defense", in view of the extended participation of the organization in war-and-defense service activities.

The Roll Call will continue through November 30th.

Sauter in Defense Post

Col. Franklin D'Olier, regional director of the second defense region of the Office of Civilian Defense, has named James E. Sauter, public relations counsel of New York, regional information officer, serving as a volunteer. He will be in charge of press relations, radio and newsreel activities for the area.

Industry Boosts Federation Drive

Full support was pledged for the 1941 fund drive of New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities by the motion picture, theatrical and amusement division of Federation at a luncheon held last Friday at the Hotel Astor, New York. Major Albert Warner and David Bernstein, co-chairmen of the division, presided. The co-chairmen will name working committees within the film division for the duration of the campaign at a meeting to be held November 25th.

George Z. Medalie, president of the New York Federation, and Paul Felix Warburg, chairman of the business men's council, spoke at the luncheon. The city-wide philanthropic organization aids 116 hospitals, old-age homes, child care agencies and other institutions in Greater New York.

In stressing full support of the amusement industry for Federation's drive, Major Warner said, "We have always done the job and will try to do it better than ever this year." Mr. Bernstein pointed out the vital need for strengthening the home front by the support of such charities.

Those in attendance at the luncheon, at which preliminary campaign plans were discussed, included:

Barney Balaban, Joseph Bernhard, Max B. Blackman, Harry Brandt, William Brandt, Leo Brecher, Irving Caesar, Max Cohen, Oscar Doob, M. J. Fessler, Leopold Friedman, Louis Frisch, Leon Goldberg, Milton Green, Monroe W. Greenthal, Toby Gruen, Marcus Heiman, Arthur Israel, Jr., Henry Jaffe, Joseph Kaufman, Jack Alicoate.

Also Malcolm Kingsberg, Bertram Lebhar, Sam E. Morris, Paul Moss, Louis Phillips, Sam Rinzler, Herman Robbins, Harold Rodner, Samuel Rosen, Sam Schneider, Max Seligman, Charles Sonin and A. P. Waxman.

'Night of Stars' November 26th

Representatives from most top-flight musical comedies on Broadway promise to appear at the forthcoming eighth annual "Night of Stars," refugee relief show, at Madison Square Garden in New York on November 26th, according to an announcement by Marvin Schenck, chairman of the producers' committee.

"Let's Face It" will send the largest contingent, headed by its new star, Danny Kaye, and including Eve Arden, Mary Jane Walsh, Bennie Baker, Sunnie O'Dea, Billy Daniels, Punkin Parker and Tommy Gleason and His Royal Guards.

"Best Foot Foward" will be represented by Rosemary Lane who will sing a number of the hit songs from the show.

Sophie Tucker and George Jessel, stars of "High Kickers," will entertain with a group of showgirls.

Vivienne Segal, star of the long run show, "Pal Joey," will sing its song hits and Arthur Treacher, comedian of "Panama Hattie," will also appear.

Nathan Strauss, committee chairman, has announced that all of the $25,000 worth of box seats have been sold.

Industry executives and members of the Motion Pictures Associates in New York, have made personal donations totaling $1,000 to the Motion Picture Associates charity fund, it has been announced by Joseph J. Lee, president of the organization. Mr. Lee at a luncheon meeting urged greater effort on the part of the membership of obtaining advertising contract of the association's journal, one of its chief sources of revenue, issued in conjunction with the annual dinner and dance, November 19th.

Abe L. Einstein of Warners Theatres in Philadelphia, has been named a member of the public relations committee for the 1942 United Charities Campaign there.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Columbia

OFFICER AND THE LADY, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Roger Pryor, Tom Kennedy—A very good programer that seemed to satisfy our patrons.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PINTO KID, THE: Charles Starrett—Starrett is not the attraction like some western stars, but does satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Somehow Wallace Beery don't go here, yet the few who saw it said it was grand, but they were so few. Business low. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 13-14.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—Not Beery's best, but still good. Beery is very popular with our customers and they enjoyed this feature. Quite a relief from Metro's sophisticated comedies. Played October 12-14.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main —Fair picture but not as good as first series. Something missing here, maybe Marie Dressler. Seemed to go over well with patrons. Business fair, but could have been better. "Time Out for Rhythm" second attraction. Not a strong Beery town. Might be worth trying elsewhere. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 26-27.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

BARNACLE BILL: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Virginia Weidler—Box office fairly good. Story weak; had only one patron comment and that was favorable. Let's hope producer does better by Wally's fans. He is usually "rough but good at heart," but this time he wasn't and, therefore, failed to keep sympathy. Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 23-25.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BIILY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy —Good picture that was a little different from usual western. Color very good and I think average patron enjoyed this one. Business fair, about same as "They Met in Bombay." Used a reissue, "Her Enlisted Man," with this feature. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 12-13.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy— Very catchy title which did very good business, but not the best of super-westerns. Played October 24-26. —Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Very good picture for ladies especially and I used it on Premium Nites, which sure clicked. Patrons enjoyed this one, not only females, but males alike. Business exceptionally good both days. Book this right away unless you don't care to please patrons. "Sweetheart of the Campus" second attraction. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 19-20.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—This was a very godo picture and the color was excellent. The story was as human as any of the "Boys Town" pictures. While it did not draw any too well at the box office, I am not sorry that I gave it a Sunday date as a picture of this kind gives prestige to your theatre. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST: Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon—Makes exhibitor proud of his calling when presenting a picture like this. Excellent box office Sunday matinee, fair at nights. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 19-21.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner—This old chestnut wouldn't have had a chance if not had not had Spencer Tracy at the head of its cast. As it was, a lot of our regulars laid out on it. The cast is tops, especially Bergman. But it is still the horror that it was in the silent days, and I don't think the public wants many of this type.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—As with all series, this one, too, is slipping, and this one is the weakest that has come through so far. Of course, it still is a lot better than program fare, as it should be with one of Metro's top casts. They are not grossing as the first ones did, and that is the criterion that tells the story when a series picture begins to pall on the public.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DOWN IN SAN DIEGO: Bonita Granville, Leo Gorcey, Henry O'Neill—I saw no roars from Leo on this one. It is well that he didn't for it is possibly one of the weakest pictures that Metro has produced. False heroics from a lot of the new stars that did not ring true. Many walked out on it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LADY BE GOOD: Ann Sothern, Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Lionel Barrymore—As a musical, it is okay. If only they had jazzed up the story that went with it. The high spot of the show goes again to the colored boys, a team by the name of the Berry Brothers, plenty good. It would have been a more solid picture if they had not let it drag so in the narrative. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—About the same as the other Hardy pictures. Did better than average business but not in comparison to the rental we had to pay. Not the best of this series as the trailer promised, but was satisfactory entertainment. Played October 19-21.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Lewis Stone. Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—While not measuring up to any in the past series, it was still enjoyed by everyone. Judy singing a song or two would have strengthened it some. However, Rooney still goes over in a big way here. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 19-20.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy—The name kept them away but was good and got good reaction from the ones who did see it. Played October 10-12—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Was disappointed in this picture. Was most silly. Lots of patrons walked out. Business fair. Played October 22-23.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—These "Kildare" pictures are very well liked and you can always look for a crowd when you run them. Played October 21-22.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RINGSIDE MAISIE: Ann Sothern, George Murphy —This is sure to please the masses. Starts off with a bang, slows down to a canter, but as a whole is just what the public enjoys.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

RINGSIDE MAISIE: Ann Sothern, George Murphy —Every "Maisie" picture wins sympathy, in the opening scenes, for the unlucky girl who is out of a job. This one is no exception, as she battles her way through bad luck to eventual happiness. This is a prize fight story with strong appeal all the way. Running time, 96 minutes. Played October 14-16.—N. W. Huston, Liberty Theatre, Columbus, Kan. General patronage.

RINGSIDE MAISIE: Ann Sothern, George Murphy —Just fair. A prize fight picture is hard to sell. Quite a few of our regulars did not show up on this account. Same old hat, same old costume, same old talk. The producers seem to have forgotten that George Murphy is an excellent dancer, but our customers remember it. Played October 24-25.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

THEY MET IN BOMBAY: Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell—Fairly good story and done well by Gable and Russell. Business fair but not what I expected, for even second day giving away Defense Bonds it was off quite a good deal. Played with "Dance Hall" (Cesar Romero, Carole Landis). Running time, 92 minutes. Played October 5-6.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

WHEN LADIES MEET: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall—Good enough picture, but I didn't take in film rental. This is definitely not a small town picture, though the women will like it. Joan Crawford is poison here. Running time, 105 minutes. Played October 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMAN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Picture was good, but did not take in film rental. People stayed away in droves. No drawing power. Played November 1-3.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner—A great musical that was too long. This had a good story and seemed to please all. Next time make them shorter. Played October 17-19.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

FLYING WILD: East Side Kids—Nice little action picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

QUEEN OF THE YUKON: Charles Bickford, Irene Rich—This picture had a good story and the few who saw it liked it, but was a total loss to me. Played October 6-7.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

RIDIN' THE CHEROKEE TRAIL: Tex Ritter— Was a pretty fair western. Played as a double bill. Tex Ritter has much too much music with his picture and not enough gun play to suit the week-end trade. Business was good. Played October 17-18.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE SILVER SPURS: Ray Corrigan, John King, Max Terhune—Was a good western that pleased the week-end trade. Business fair. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

WRANGLER'S ROOST: Ray Corrigan, John King, Max Terhune—Monogram, how about giving us a western with Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard and some of the other old-timers, similar to the "Rough Riders." These old-timers still have a great following.— Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—Polish off your superlatives, and use them all in this uproarious comedy of a playboy who got into the army by mistake. But he made vigorous war on potatoes, got free rent in the guardhouse, drove a tank to destruction and the Colonel to distraction, chased Dorothy Lamour all over the scenery, and in general conducted himself like the usual Boh Hope screwhall. Never a dull moment in this one. Dorothy Lamour looked like a different girl with clothes on. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 26-27.—N. W. Huston, Maywood Theatre, Galena, Kan. Mining territory patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant, Rochester—A lovely picture that really let us down. I thought it fine entertainment, but our creditors didn't, because it didn't make much more than film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—The title fooled them in. They expected some kind of service picture. Mary Martin is not popular with our customers and she does not click on the screen. The produeers are using the fine grain film and Paramount puts a very poor light with it. Any light is bad with this type of film and it seems to be just another gag to force exhibitors to buy high-priced arcs. Played October 26-28.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—Fair picture but rather disappointing, I thought, for it moved very slowly and only part interesting, to my mind, was "Rochester" dance number. Business good due to so many stars and advertising. Used "San Antonio Rose," another musical, with it for seeond attraction. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 23-24.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—They just didn't seem to go for this offering, something laeking. The title was no help, and that goes for the song too. Running time, 82 minutes. Played Octoher 26-27.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

POWER DRIVE: Richard Arlen, Jean Parker—Good title, but picture did not please. Lots of complaints. Played October 28-29.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew, Eddie Bracken—This is one of those pereentage flops which barely did film rent. Should have heen in low allocation. No sympathy for the hero. Ellen Drew's talent wasted in this one. We reached for the sun and got a hunk of cheese. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 7-8.—N. W. Huston, Maywood Theatre, Galena, Kan. Mining territory patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Good picture, well acted hy stars and Harry Carey, but color did not seem as good as Metro's. Business very good both days. Used "The Get Away" as co-feature. Would suggest this one soon. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 21-22.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—This was a grand picture. Betty Field was unusually good and all comments were good. Business good. Played October 15-16.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

WEST POINT WIDOW: Anne Shirley, Richard Carlson—A very good picture most suitable for college towns. Anne Shirley was very good.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WORLD PREMIERE: John Barrymore, Frances Farmer—Terrihle. No reason for making anything as poor as this. Duck it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 29-30.—E. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

Republic

ANGELS WITH BROKEN WINGS: Binnie Barnes, Gilbert Roland, Mary Lee—We picked this up late, a fill-in on our Bargain Nights. Found it was good enough for any spot. Another pleasing picture from Republic. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 28-30.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

ICE-CAPADES: Dorothy Lewis, James Ellison, Jerry Colonna—Very good pieture. About Republic's hest.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MERCY ISLAND: Ray Middleton, Gloria Dickson—Good program picture hut not big enough for Sunday. Running time, 77 minutes. Playcd Octoher 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NEVADA CITY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Did nice week-end business. Everybody happy. Playcd it on a single bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—If we could have more down to earth pictures like this, the small town theatre would make more money. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Harold H. Meyer, Lamar Theatre, Manito, Ill. General patronage.

SEVEN CONTRIBUTORS RESUME REPORTS

Seven contributors, whose reports have been missing for some months, have resumed writing to "What the Picture Did for Me" department. They are:

MRS. W. A. WIGHT, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla.
MRS. S. STONE, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Can.
DANIEL KORMAN, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can.
H. BETTENDORF, Opera House, Foley, Minn.
OTTO W. CHAPEK, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D.
HAROLD H. MEYER, Lamar Theatre, Manito, Ill.
AUSTIN G. DODGE, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—Played late, but was surprised at the turn-out of the public and all comments were good. Was real good entertainment. Business good. Played October 20-21.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—Pretty thin. It didn't get by here at all. Played October 22.—E. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

UNDER FIESTA STARS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Very good. The children really liked "Tadpole." They are already asking if he will be in the next Autry. Repuhlic, I'm afraid you've started something you can't stop! Let's have more of "Tadpole."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CITIZEN KANE: Orson Welles, Joseph Cotten—An artistic triumph, hut not a small town picture. Had some walkouts. Business was fair. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 2-3.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOOTLIGHT FEVER: Alan Mowbray, Donald MacBride—Just a fair picture that had to be played. Played on double bill for week-end trade. Business good. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—Excellent jungle show containing the highlights of all of Frank Buck's previous releases, and timely, too, for no one has attempted to make a real jungle picture lately. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

MELODY FOR THREE: Jean Hersholt, Fay Wray—A fair little picture. Played as a double bill for the week-end trade. Business fair. Played October 10-11.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON: Disney Feature Cartoon—This was a sleeper for adults, although some did not sleep so sound, but what they could get up and walk out on the picture. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Harold H. Meyer, Lamar Theatre, Manito, Ill. General patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON: Disney Feature Cartoon—Boys, you all must get wise to this one. No business; in fact, lowest Sunday of the year. Kiddies weren't even much more numerous than usual. Skip it, if possible, even if it isn't as bad as its gross. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

SAINT IN PALM SPRINGS, THE: George Sanders, Wendy Barrie—Was a good little picture for a douhle hill. Playcd to a good house. Played October 24-25.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

SCATTERGOOD BAINES: Guy Kibbee, Carol Hughes—This was a fair program for our small town patrons. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Harold H. Meyer, Lamar Theatre, Manito, Ill. General patronage.

THEY MET IN ARGENTINA: James Ellison, Maureen O'Hara—In my estimation, this picture was a definite "B" and I would suggest it heing used as such or with strong feature. Used a re-issue here, "The Prisoner of Zenda," which outclassed it. My suggestion would be to skip this one. Business off excepting "Bank Nite." Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 14-15.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Burgess Meredith—This isn't Ginger's best by any means; in fact, it's her poorest in any humble opinion. Did a fair business, hut RKO better give her better material, or Ginger will be looking for a new job. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 5-6.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ACCENT ON LOVE: George Montgomery, Osa Massen—For a low budget picture, this one is surprisingly good. I don't see why this Osa Massen and Montgomery don't get better breaks. They both show in this one that they know their way about, and it takes just that, in these program pictures to put them over. Miss Massen has a lot of personality.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney—Here is a grand picture, in swell color, which did a knockout business here. It has aetion, suspense, everything to make it an outstanding entertainment. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 19-20.—N. W. Huston, Maywood Theatre, Galena, Kan. Mining territory patronage.

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—Another good color picture which is tops for entertainment. Lots more to it than just a bull fight. The audience ate it up, and the box office grinned all over. Running time, 125 minutes. Played October 12-13.—N. W. Huston, Liberty Theatre, Columbus, Kan. General patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis—This one was enjoyed by everyone and also was successful at the box office, which naturally is what interests all of us. I think that this was Jack Benny's best picture to date. In the past he has had to rely on "Rochester" to pull him through, and he did all right by himself in this one. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Walter Eldred. Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE BLONDE, THE: Mary Beth Hughes, George Montgomery, Fuzzy Knight—People didn't seem to care so much for Montgomery. Fuzzy Knight has a very good role.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles (Buddy) Rogers—I don't know whether it's me, but Withers gets on my nerves, and does us little good at the box office.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Old, hut good. In fact, it was a pleasant surprise to us. Jack Oakie was really the star and he appeals to our class of patronage. We overlooked the Willard-Dempsey fight pictures but they helped us the second night. Average business with no complaints. Played October 17-18.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE DUANES: George Montgomery, Lynne Roberts, Eve Arden—Good western picture which pleased the week-end fans. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable—Swell picture and well done in color. Business very good on this one. Sold out first day and did almost as well second day. Used "Meet Boston Blackie" as second attraction. Suggest booking this one if you haven't already played it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 7-8.—George O. Wiggin, Maplewood Theatre, Malden, Mass. Neighborhood patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—Betty Grable, always an eyeful, has now developed under Fox directorship into a capable actress, losing her former wooden recital of lines. Wonderful color. Played late, but to fairly satisfactory return. "Too much drinking," was a patron's comment. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 26-28.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MURDER AMONG FRIENDS: Marjorie Weaver, John Hubbard, Cobina Wright, Jr.—A screwhall murder comedy that has some merits. Suitable for dual billing.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RIDE, KELLY, RIDE: Eugene Pallette—A very good race horse picture. Played October 22-23.—H. Bettendorf, Opera House, Foley, Minn. Town and country patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller, Milton Berle—Nice picture, good music, good eomedy, excellent skiing, exeellent skating and very good box-office. It is a long time since I have been ahle to make statements like those. Now I want some more like it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 30, W. Varick Neveins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John

Payne, Milton Berle, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra —Fox's sun-kissed darling seems to be slipping. She is still tops on skates. The picture as a whole is just fair and gets by on a very slight margin. No raves as formerly; just apathy; they have seen another picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Played this second run to poor business. Too many saw it the first time. Still a good picture.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WILD GEESE CALLING: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett—If this one is a special, I would hate to run Fox's programers. The goose laid an egg at the box office. Another case of over-selling in the trailer. The superlatives roll out of the narrator and then the picture does not measure up. No wonder the public is getting skeptical when they go all out on what proves to be just another program picture and that is all that "Wild Geese Calling" is.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—A very good picture that did only average business. Those who saw it liked it.—Harland Rankin, Center Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL LADY: George Brent, Ilona Massey, Basil Rathbone—Here's one to please everyone. Played nine days with good business. This should not be missed. Believe it better than any other spy picture ever put out. Good comments from all. Rathbone excellent. Running time, 104 minutes. Playcd October 20-29.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

POT O' GOLD: James Stewart, Paulette Goddard —Gay, breezy and sparkling is this delightful musical based on the well-known Pot O' Gold program of the airwaves. Sprightly tunes in clever arrangements (especially the dinner table chorus singing) by Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights add zest to the film, while comedy by the one and only Charles Winninger, ably aided by lovable Mary Gordon, kept our audience in a constant uproar. James Stewart and Paulette Goddard co-star in perfect teamwork and the result is a very pleasing picture which should prove satisfactory to everyone. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 1.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—Old, but excellent, nevertheless.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THAT HAMILTON WOMAN: Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier—A dated picture with two so-called top stars, laid in the days of England's great Admiral, Lord Nelson. And the sum total is that the small town audiences may like the British so much (which I doubt) that they are standing for the highest tax bill in the history of the country, but they still do not go for their pictures.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind., General patronage.

THAT HAMILTON WOMAN: Vivian Leigh, Laurence Olivier—They stayed away. The ones that came didn't like it. Too long and too heavy. Running time, 126 minutes. Played October 19-21.—E. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn. Rural patronage.

TOPPER RETURNS: Joan Blondell, Roland Young, Carole Landis—Eddie (Rochester) Anderson stole the show. Without him it would have been a flop. Got lots of laughs and that's what counts. Played October 14-15—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D., Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

HOLD THAT GHOST: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Richard Carlson, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer—Would like to have more pictures like this so the customers could forget their troubles for a while. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 16-17.—Harold H. Meyer, Lamar Theatre, Manito, Ill. General patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Richard Carlson, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer—This one was by far the best picture, starring Abbott and Costello, to date. In fact, the laughs were so numerous, most of the gags were lost. We need comedies of this type in these present times. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 17-18.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

PONY POST: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Nell O'Day—Johnny with his gun and "Fuzz" with his comedy can bring my western trade in. Up to standard. Business good. Played October 24-25.—Miss Cleo Manry, Buena Vista Theatre, Buena Vista, Ga. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BRIDE CAME C. O. D., THE: James Cagney, Bette Davis—Not as good as "The Strawberry Blonde," nor was business and any newcomer could have done what Davis did in the way of acting, but after all, the teaming of such direct opposites as Cagney and Davis has a definite drawing possibility. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 19-20.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Oregon. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan, Olympe Bradna—Good air picture of the gallant flyers with some thrilling shots of bombing, but I think that we have seen the same shots before in other air pictures. They seemed familiar.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold—Very fine picture in all ways, but box office was only average here. Played it late through no fault of my own and with a high guarantee. We took in only five dollars over the guarantee so things will probably have to be fixed up. This, in spite of additional local pictures I ran as an added attraction. I would rather have met John Dough. Running time, 122 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—Good picture that seemed to please. Played October 7-9.—Otto W. Chapek, New Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NANCY DREW, TROUBLE SHOOTER: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—A strictly program picture for a double bill situation. Everyone seemed to enjoy it.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell—A good gangster picture. Plenty of action, suspense and just enough comedy to please the majority of our patrons. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 26-27.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIN: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan—Very good. Perfect cast.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE, THE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—My people seemed to enjoy this. Cagney always very popular here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffery Lynn, Philip Dorn, Kaaren Verne—Exceptionally good. Very timely. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

HOST TO A GHOST: Andy Clyde—This Andy Clyde comedy has some new angles on slapstick and drew a good many laughs here. I played it for the Hallowe'en angle as the last half has some good spooky comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LIONS ON THE LOOSE: Pete Smith Speciality—Cute and suspenseful scenes of two lion cubs, a sheep, a monkey and a python. Pete Smith's comment helps as usual. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

OFFICER POOCH: Technicolor Cartoons—This was an excellent cartoon. Metro's Technicolor Cartoons are getting better with each one. Running time, 8 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

WATER BUGS: Pete Smith Specialties—A very entertaining short. You can always rely on a good short when you book a Pete Smith short subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Cal. Small town patronage.

Paramount

HOW TO TAKE A VACATION: Benchley Comedies—Mildly amusing. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN A ZOO: Speaking of Animals—Very clever with live animals seeming to talk. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MARINE ROUND-UP: Grantland Rice Sportlights —Very interesting. Ted Husing's narration helps to put this series over in a big way. Running time, 10 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

MEET THE CHAMPS: Sportlights—Entertaining reel on archery. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CRAIG WOOD: Sportscope—Craig Wood shows how to make easy and difficult golf shots mostly aimed at golf enthusiasts. We have some of them here, but not many. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

DONALD'S CAMERA: Walt Disney Cartoons—The woodpecker who did not want his picture taken made this a really funny one in the Disney series. Running time, 8 minutes.— W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 3: "Sailors with Wings"—This issue "Sailors With Wings" traces the history of naval flying from further back than you would believe and brings it up to date. It is interesting, but not as dynamic as usual. Maybe that is just as well. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PANTRY PIRATE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Every-

Twentieth Century-Fox

AMERICAN SEA POWER: The World Today—Nice battle scenes of navy practice in green tint. One of the best of its kind. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

AMERICAN SEA POWER: The World Today—An excellent subject and very timely with the Defense program. Running time, 10 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

HIGHWAY OF FRIENDSHIP: Adventures Newscameraman—Just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD OAKEN BUCKET, THE: Terrytoons—Definitely a big improvement in the Terrytoon line-up. This is quite a cute color cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

OLD OAKEN BUCKET, THE: Terrytoons—For some reason, these cartoons do not measure up to any of the other producers. Animation and story are inferior to the others. Running time, 7 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Cal. Small town patronage.

TWELVE O'CLOCK AND ALL AIN'T WELL: Terry-Toon—These cartoons are not to be laughed at. Terry needs new gag men, music and stories. Running time, 7 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

VACATION TIME: Ed Thorgesen (Sports)—Told Fox to send us "Sports Reviews" short subject for this date but had to shelve it after initial showing, as it is nothing more nor less than clips from "Moon Over Miami," which was our feature attraction for the program. Running time, 10 minutes.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WELCOME LITTLE STRANGER: Terrytoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WINTER IN ESKIMO LAND: Father Hubbard Alaskan Adventures—Nice Father Hubbard travel reel in Alaska if your folks like them. Mine are non-committal. One suggested he should make one where he gets caught in the ice and title it "Hubbard Squash." That's the kind of an audience I have, but I like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Universal

I DREAM OF JEANNIE WITH THE LIGHT BROWN HAIR: Two Reel Musicals—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Vitaphone

ALL THIS AND RABBIT STEW: Merrie Melody—This short helped get a good crowd to the show. My whole town likes these Bugs Bunny cartoons and so do I. They are always asking for the next one. At present, I cannot answer them as I see no more coming up in the near future. Darn! This one is a dandy. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CARNIVAL OF RHYTHM: Technicolor Specials—I expected something big in this, judging from the past in this series, but was disappointed. Did not succeed in pleasing the patrons. Running time, 18 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

HIAWATHA'S RABBIT HUNT: Merrie Melody—Real good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SEEING EYE, THE: Broadway Brevities—Real instructive.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THROWING A PARTY: Elsa Maxwell—A light comedy. Just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

U. S. CALIF. BAND AND GLEE CLUB: Melody Masters Bands—The musicians and singers are excellently photographed and recorded, but the result is not as excellent as it should be. However, it is well worth playing. Mostly college songs take up the running time. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WINGS OF STEEL: Technicolor Special—Another excellent short from Vitagraph. This patriotic series is tops, packing within the short space allotted an interesting story and perfect photography in color. Every real American is interested in the U. S. Air Corps and this film covering the training of fledgling airmen is a real thrill. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Serials

Columbia

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 8: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—Twenty years ago this stuff was all right. Very poorly produced. Running time, 17 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Lyons, Neb. General patronage.

IRON CLAW, THE, CHAPTER 9: Charles Quigley, Walter Sande, Joyce Bryant—Hercules battles on, amid the noise effects of screaming and moaning background music. Running time, 18 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Neb. General patronage.

Six New Plays Open in New York

During the week of November 8th six new stage presentations opened or were scheduled for openings in New York. This brings the total presentation of Broadway stage plays to 28.

Last Saturday night A. N. Langley's "The Walrus and the Carpenter" opened at the Cort Theatre. On Tuesday, "Spring Again" opened at the Henry Miller theatre. This is Guthrie McClintic's production which he also directed. Also on Tuesday Shakespeare's "Macbeth," with Maurice Evans, opened at the National.

"Theatre," by W. Somerset Maugham and Guy Bolton, was presented by John Golden at the Hudson on Wednesday night. While "Dark Horse," an adaptation of the French play, was to be presented at the Golden. Reginald Denham's production of "Play With Fire," by Edward Percy, was scheduled to open Saturday at the Longacre.

Oldtime Projectionists Meet

Over 200 attended the annual dinner and dance of the 25-30 Club, at the Grand Street Boys' Club House, New York, last Sunday.

Membership of this club consists of men who have been projectionists at least 25 years; a number have seen 35 to 40 years service. Abe Kessler was chairman of the committee of arrangements, J. S. Winick was vice-chairman, Dave Marcey secretary, and Joe Abrams, Tom Foresteri, Al Polin and William Gluck were the committee in charge.

Mike Berkowitz, president of the 25-30 Club, presented gold cards to the three honorary members of the organization: James D. Lynette, supervising chief inspector of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, New York, and Bart Green, chief inspector, Borough of Manhattan of the DWSGE, and P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of International Projector.

Jack Segal Returns

Jack Segal, Columbia's assistant foreign manager, returned to New York, Tuesday, November 14th, from Buenos Aires, Argentina, after attending the company's convention there with J. A. McConville, foreign manager, who remained in South America for further discussions.

Defense Plan for Kodak

A plan to buy Defense Savings Bonds from their earnings has been offered employes of the Eastman Kodak Co. by Frank W. Lovejoy, board chairman of the company in Rochester, N. Y. Under the plan, employes may authorize payroll deductions of any desired amount.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

HAIL, ALL HAIL

Well, it is good to know that being a good guy still pays off, that sweat and savvy still get a man places. Which this moment has to do with a flock of nice people elected for bigger jobs over at Warners. The cheering in this corner is a bit hoarser because they are of the Round Table and long-time supporters of these activities.

On behalf of the membership, the heartiest good wishes are extended to:

Harry Kalmine, in the new post of assistant general manager of Warner theatres, under Joseph Bernhard.

Moe Silver, who succeeds Kalmine as zone manager of the Pittsburgh division.

C. J. Latta, assistant to Harry in Pittsburgh, appointed to take over in the Albany division, following Silver.

Joe Feldman, named assistant to Moe in charge of operation. And Jim Totman, who moves into Feldman's former post as Pittsburgh zone publicity director.

Continuing applause in the direction of the distribution division is for Mort Blumenstock, who takes on extra duties as national advertising and sales promotion manager. Soundly theatre-seasoned, Mort is another of "our gang" who has helped to make the job of the man in the field a bit easier.

PRESTIGE INTO BOXOFFICE

The weight of a manager's participation in community activities is ofttimes measured by the health of his theatre. The showman in the thick of communal projects is popular with his co-workers, usually the important people, the big merchants, newspaper folk, civic heads. That means heavy prestige, the kind that translates into profitable boxoffice.

In Jackson, Tenn., J. M. MacEachron, Malco City Manager, is one of those laddies. A leading figure in Exchange Club work, Mac right now is engaged in drives to aid the "Y" and the Red Cross, among other things. Recognizing these co-operations, the Jackson Sun recently devoted a half-column editorial sounding the praises of the Round Tabler for his community consciousness.

The paper had further to say about the fine entertainment policies of the Malco theatres, their value in bringing trade crowds from outside to buy at local stores.

With things racing as they are these days, it is hardly to be expected that members can find time to do any more than send along their campaigns. And when regular contributors lay off for a bit, we know there must be a reason that needs no explaining. Nevertheless, the boys are considerate enough to keep in touch to say they are still around, and a recent note from one of our active Round Tablers says it this way:

"Haven't forgotten you or the good old Round Table, but what with defense work, draft and all, we have been busy trying to keep some semblance of an organization going here. Been doing some exploitation, but have been slow in sending it through. Hope you will forgive us."

THEY DO IT IN ST. LOUIS

Some of the big-gun exploitation set off for the openings of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Swamp Water," is noted on a following page. The real old-time sockeroo of it, especially in St. Louis, is conveyed here by one of our scouts, an observer on the scene. He was quite impressed by the way those Fanchon & Marco folks and the Botsford forces took a-hold to hit the boxoffice jackpot.

Good to know, but nothing new to hear. Those St. Louis showmen have been cuttin' up for quite a spell. The Round Table often has had the pleasure of telling the readers about it.

ANOTHER ROUND, FOR PAT

Another step-up for another of our favorite members, and another round of applause, this time for Pat McGee. The Round Tabler, taking off from his post of Schine Ohio district manager, returns to the J. H. Cooper Enterprises, as head of all the circuit's Colorado houses.

The Ohio boys gave McGee a golf bag and traveling case, a good-bye gift. Knowing Pat as we do, he will probably be using the latter a durn sight more often than the former.

ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

The reason for the traffic-stopper in the lobby of the Academy of Music, New York, was Bob Ungerfeld's barn setpiece to advertise his swell Hallowe'en party. Simulated 24-sheet plugged special stage attraction and fences were scrawled with catchlines and holiday drawings in keeping.

In keeping with the beauty of the picture was Sam Gilman's front, at Loew's Harrisburg, for "Smilin' Through', made up of white lattice, grass mats and cutout lettering.

Street car completely decorated for "Fantasia" at the Cinema A B C, Geneva, Switzerland, was used by Armand Palivoda, RKO Radio manager, to make the main lines of the city.

Lobby setup at the Beach, Miami, by Manager Howard Pettingill for "Honky Tonk" invited patrons to try for guest tickets by beating the dealer at Black Jack. Girl dealt to several hundred daily patrons.

For "Parachute Battalion" at the the RKO Chester, New York, Myron Feltheimer and Ray Malone promoted training school for demonstration of plane assembling in the lobby. Decorations included large parachute.

Scare lobby by Fred Curtice for "Hold That Ghost" at the Uptown, San Francisco, had stars in front of panel with green mesh in front of ghost to left, flasher behind eyes and fan to make the ghost move. Spider and spider-webs were also made by artist, Ken Purchase, entire board flooded with blue spots.

Stressing the adventure and thrills of "Sundown" at the Tri-States Rock, Rock Island, Ill., Dick Stoddard made up a lobby of handbags and machine gun against desert background. Usher in tropical hat demonstrated the rat-tat-tat.

Dramatic electric title lighting in lobby, with cast circle in spot, proved a stopper for Charlie Pincus for "Dawn" at the Utah, Salt Lake City.

Selling $5.00 bills for $4.90 on the streets, as noted, was the stunt used by Joe Longo, Boston Loew's ad head, for "Never Get Rich" at the State and Orpheum. Gerald Lucas was the philanthropist in charge.

Colorful soldier figure with eyes flashing on and off was Maurice Druker's main lobby display for "Chocolate Soldier" at Loew's State theatre, in Memphis.

Smith Finds Theatre Innovations Important Boxoffice Attractors

Aside from the screen entertainment, every effort is being made at the Apex, Washington, D. C., a unit of the K.-B. Amusement Co., to sell the various innovations which are regarded as unique and behind which consistent campaigns are directed for public attention.

The first of these, listed by Manager Bill Smith, is a soundproof, air-conditioned nursery, glass-enclosed, from where parents with infants can view the performance, thus eliminating any annoyance to other patrons. Baby pens, high chairs and toys are provided for the youngsters, with a matron in attendance to oversee the play activities. One-frame screen trailers extend an invitation to patrons to inspect the nursery, and Smith reports a lot of grownups accepting the bid.

Another innovation, for the adults, is called "The Embassy Room", also soundproofed and glass-enclosed, where smoking is permitted, and made known through trailers. There are 31 very comfortable chairs and an added charge is made for use. Patrons who inquire about the service are directed to the enclosure, in many instances leading to seat-exchanges for this extra privilege.

The third advertised service is a free parking lot, one of the theatre's most important assets, a hard-surfaced area directly in the rear of the theatre with accommodations for 500 cars. The lot is heavily advertised via the screen and is responsible for much added patronage in this neighborhood situation. Writes the Round Tabler:

"Week in and week out we are gaining many new friends through the word-of-mouth by patrons impressed with the inviting innovations the Apex has to offer. This we attribute considerably to the fact that the short trailerettes are presented to emphasize their importance."

Warnermen Click for 'Underground'

The attention-grabbing lobby display used by Manager Martin Goldberg, on "Underground" at Warners State, Philadelphia, was a unique representation of an open cellar door to the hideaway basement quarters, following the action of the picture. To complete the illusion, the display, covering a space seven feet by five, was laid flat on the lobby floor. Large arrow was stood upright in rear pointing to copy: "Danger. The lid is off 'Underground' the Heroic and Dangerous fight against Hitlerism." On the balcony stairs against a white marble background were silhouettes of a character broadcasting with a pistol in his hand. Copy: "The hidden radio speaks against Hitlerism. See'. etc.

For the date at Warners Whitehall, Chuck Shannon worked the "freedom radio" stunt for a clever contest idea promoting use of microphone, large speaker, portable amplifier and extension cable. Speaker was concealed on the marquee and rest of equipment in room inside, so that announcer could broadcast from either spot without being seen. At regular intervals, following was announced: "You are now listening to a hidden radio, forbidden in Nazi Germany, an illegal radio the Freedom Fighters are now using in Nazi Germany to fight the Hitler tyranny. The thrilling story of these Freedom Fighters is shown in, etc., etc. To the first five persons phoning the management of the Whitehall giving the exact location of this radio, we will give a guest ticket to", etc.

Public reaction was terrific, says Chuck, necessitating moving the mike to the roof after the first day. Added excitement was had with wide distribution of the special full-page newspaper flash gotton up for the date, newsboys carrying picture banners doing the "wuxtry" gag. This same stunt was used by Manager H. T. Rastetter, at the Warner, Erie, Pa., the sheet circulated all over the industrial area. Here, too, the hidden radio stunt was worked, Rastetter using the concealed loud-speaker in the donwtown area broadcasting, "This is the voice of the Underground", etc.

The picture was tied locally to the many local plants turning out defense material with a letter to factory heads inviting them to a special screening, the invite noting, "because we feel this picture carries a message of vital importance to everyone engaged in defense work", etc. The Round Tabler broke all the local columns and obtained other editorial comment to boost the showing.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Prizes Given for Smiles On "Smilin' Through"

Three picture breaks, of three, four and six column size, on successive days, was the take of Francis Deering, on a candid camera tiein for "Smilin' Through" at Loew's, Houston, Texas, the hookup made with the local Post. The paper sent out a photographer to roam the town on a photo identification contest, the camera man snapping a group of smiling soldiers, a crowd of smiling high school girls and a street shot of smiling pedestrians.

Photos when run displayed some in each picture within a white circle, with copy explaining that passes would be given at the theatre by Deering to those who brought along a copy of the paper and identified their likenesses. In addition, individuals in each photo showing the widest grins were also circled in white, and also upon proper identification were awarded the cash.

Boys 'Make Hay' On Pigskin Tieins

Up to their boxoffice ears in football promotions, especially in spots with big time college teams, Round Tablers are making some fancy tieups, as noted currently by the work of Frank Bickerstaff, L&J headman in Athens, Ga., and Harry Unterfort, head Schiner in Syracuse, the former getting plenty of buildup through newsreel shots of the local University of Georgia team playing against Columbia and Alabama.

Ahead of the Columbia game, Paramount News had a man on the campus to shoot the team in practice. The L&J-man arranged for these clips for his newsreel showings which opening at the Palace on the day the team returned from beating Columbia, in New York, brought in a lot of fat added admissions. Frank was able to repeat his success with the Metro shots of the game, having the sports editors of the college and local papers and coaches in for an advanced showing. The publicity this brought was added to with attendance of the team and friends at one of the regular showings when after the break with the house lights on, the Round Tabler requested the team to take a bow. A 40 by 60 of the team lettered with the score and "now showing" was used out front.

To tie in on the Georgia-Alabama game, Bickerstaff had shots taken at the station where the student body gathered to see the team off, announcing that the pictures would be shown at the Palace. The result was that some 900 of the students came in to see themselves on the screen. On the same program, a Community Sing short of college songs was billed in addition to "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi". This brought down the members of the fraternity's chapter who also worked with the theatreman in selecting the chapter's "sweetheart" as a further promotion.

Unterfort Sets Stage Rally

The fiftieth game in the football series between Syracuse and Colgate will be celebrated in Syracuse and Harry Unterfort has completed plans for a proper observance on the stage of Keith's, the Wednesday night preceding the battle. For this purpose, graduates who played in the first game have been invited to speak before the students at the rally. The presidents of both student bodies will make a wager on the stage, the winning collegians to get the rival goal posts. Coaches and teams will be on hand, students and university band parading from the school to the theatre. Silver trophy for the winning team will be displayed in the lobby and a contest planted with the college paper for the guest tickets to the rally.

Floyd Cracks Paper for Series

For the "Football This Week" series, booked for the Indiana-Illinois Jefferson, Goshen, Ind., Manager Floyd Robinson reports success in cracking the local daily to go along with him, the paper cooperating to run the contest score-guessing blank three days weekly in advance of each of the shorts in the 13-week series. In addition, the daily is getting behind the promotion with a lot of valuable publicity for the buildup, which Robinson feels will lead to other effective tieins for the future.

Record Campaign Greets "Swamp"

Since the picture has mainly to do with local backgrounds, the world premiere of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Swamp Water" was held in Waycross, Ga., the campaign directed by Lamar Swifth, L. & J. man, for the double opening at the Ritz and Lyric.

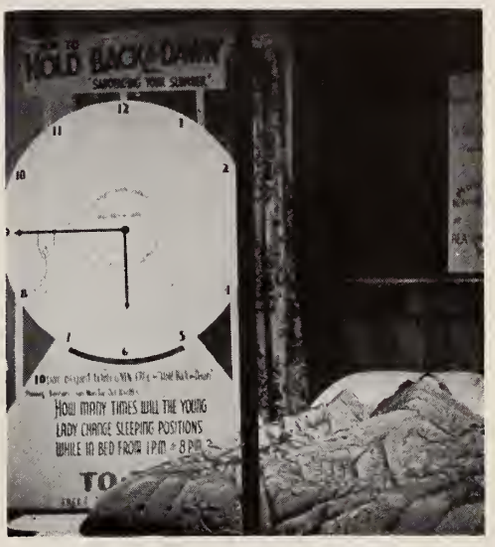
The unusual event brought complete support from civic authorities and merchants, the latter cooperating enthusiastically in a window display contest, sponsored by one of the dailies, for the best representation of the picture's locale. Decision was made by reader vote, the paper running blanks daily for the purpose. Other publicity aid came with a 16-page special section of the paper, carrying ads from most every store in town.

Front of the Ritz was converted into a replica of the famed Okefenokee Swamp, main locale of the attraction. Vines, trees, ferns and other shubbery was used. Caged wildcats, snakes, swamp bears, 'coons, squirrels and alligators gave life to the display. Colorful also was a giant street parade, in which participated many units of local organizations, their bands furnishing the music. After the opening, a gala ball was held where prizes were awarded to the best "swamp dancers." A "swamp" beauty contest was another feature.

St. Louis Also Goes to Town

For the opening of the picture at the Fanchon & Marco Fox, St. Louis, Les Kaufman and Manager Clyde Brown put together a hard-hitting series of promotions, outstanding being a foyer and lobby display of five stuffed wild animal panels and other exhibits of swamp fauna borrowed from the civic art museum and Zoological Gardens. The special lithographs painted by Thomas Benton for the picture were also shown, a complete set of these put on display at the Public Museum, the theatre taking extra newspaper advertising to note the showing. The front was in keeping, stressing the terror angle of the picture, one of the scenes in the story being re-created for added atmosphere. Newspaper ads also sold "terror."

For publicity purposes, baby alligators were sent to all critics, columnists, radio commentators. Cards attached to the reptiles read: "Wait'll you see my grandpappy in Swamp Water." Since the story in serial form was run by the Saturday Evening Post, the local news distributors arranged for tack cards on all newsstands. Window displays on hunting and fishing equipment were planted with leading sport stores.



"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Rose Reports a First-Time

It took quite a campaign to do it, but Harry Rose finally landed the papers to include Loew's Globe, in Bridgeport, Ct., among newspaper reviews. The attraction was "Jungle Cavalcade", put across with a colorful campaign, featured with lobby of stuffed animals, tropical decorations, three-sheet cutout for the background and hidden recorder giving off wild animal sound effects. Six-day coloring contest was planted on the date and in advance, the entire personnel wore bannered tropical hats.

Sleeping Girl in Window Tied to Contest on "Dawn"

HOW many times does a sleeper move in seven hours of slumber? The exact number is 472. The authority is Jimmie Redmond, of the Tri-States Bonham, Fairbury, Neb. The inspiration: a promotion on behalf of the date for "Hold Back the Dawn".

Despite the difficulty of securing a young lady to do her sleeping in public—and in the afternoon—Redmond finally persuaded a local girl to do so, in the interests of science, as herein explained. Arrangements were speedily made with Montgomery Ward's, located on the town's busiest corner, to turn the best window into a bedroom, completely equipped, where the subject was to slumber from 1:00 in the afternoon to 8:00, on Saturday before the picture opening.

To give the public something to do besides look, and to guarantee a bit of traffic-stopping, a contest tiein was made, offering guest tickets for the 10 best guesses on how many times the girl would move in her sleep. This was carried in the newspaper publicity, and the store took extra advertising to announce it (see cut), also calling attention to the official blanks available at the store where entries were to be deposited. Alongside the bed in window, a giant clock was rigged to note the passing of time, the base carrying contest details and theatre copy, bannered above with "How to Hold Back the Dawn from sabotaging your slumber", the inference being that the store's beds could do just that.

Officially tucked in by a matron who stood by to see that she remained covered, the girl "corked off" and two judges stationed out front began the count of the moves. Boys circulated through the crowds offering contest blanks. In all, over 1,700 guesses were turned in, the closest coming to within 5 of the actual total, 20 others guessing within 50. By check, over 3,600 people came up to look and by 9:00 o'clock the theatre and store 'phones were flooded with calls from contestants who wanted to know the results of what Jimmie terms the greatest theatre publicity stunt ever worked locally.

Show "Starr" Trailer On Outside Screen

Featured stunt for the date on "Belle Starr" at the New York Roxy, was a trailer projected on a screen hung on the rear wall of the Winter Garden, across from the main entrance of the theatre. Reported by the Hal Horne forces as a first-timer in the Broadway sector, the trailer was projected nightly from a specially equipped room in the Hotel Taft, adjacent to the Roxy.

Ballyhoo slants that caught interest included a four-horse stage coach driven by men in cowhand costumes; a girl on horseback costumed as the star; an Indian chief, While Eagle, in full regalia, camped out in front of the theatre in front of a wigwam, lettered: "I'm waiting to see", etc. Camera fans were tied in to a newspaper contest to "shoot" the girl rider for prizes of camera equipment, photos displayed on inside lobby of theatre.

Further newspaper attentions were had with an outdoors debate staged in Columbus Circle between Cliff Younger and Longhorn Bill Smith, Western old-timers and intimates of the actual Belle Starr, on the merits and demerits of the famed woman bandit. Extra ad space was taken to announce the debate and interviews with the old-timers were had as a follow-up, and ads in the personal columns offered rewards for the recovery of Belle Starr's revolvers, supposedly stolen.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Two girls distributed candy kisses for John G. Osborne, Court, Wheeling, W. Va., as part of his "Honky Tonk" campaign. Included in each piece of candy was the message: "We know you'll enjoy this kiss—but not half as much as Lana Turner enjoys the kisses of Clark Gable, etc."

For his engagement of "Dive Bomber" at the Coral Theatre, Coral Gables, Florida, manager Tom Manning tied in with the U. S. Navy's recruiting program, offering free tickets to the film to the first 15 men applying for the Navy's booklet on enlisting. Manning also had a display of model planes and bannered the front of the house with naval flags.

Charlie Whittaker of the Dade, Miami, went after "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day" with a comprehensive campaign including 1,000 wedding invitations, a jewelry window on wedding rings offering free tickets if customer picked up one to fit her ring finger on first try, a vitamin pill envelope calling the film vitamin plus in screen entertainment and a bally car, bannered "Just Married."

Trunk-check stickers were used ahead of "The Bride Came C.O.D." by Herschel A. Wheeler at the Pace Theatre, in Gordon, Neb., the theatreman pasting these carrying title copy and playdates on windshields and grocery sacks. In addition in theatre lobby and cooperating department stores, bundles were wrapped and on display with the same stickers plastered conspicuously.

Top promotion by Manager George S. Fraser for "When Ladies Meet" at Warner's Columbia, Portmouth, Ohio, was a page tieup sold by Fraser personally under the heading "When ladies meet they urge each other to patronize those money-saving places." Merchants were encouraged to come in with a contest slant wherein cut pieces of star mats were placed in each ad with readers required to put them together to form the face of one of the stars.

A girl dressed as a nurse handed out 2,000 heralds plugging "Blossoms in the Dust" as a feature of the campaign put over by Claude Flater for the film's engagement at the Rivoli, Spencer, Ind. The heralds were distributed on a Saturday night along the town's main street.

Contacting editor of local daily, Jim McDonough at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario, secured underline on the comic strip in connection with his date on "Blondie in Society." Through tieup with local cleaners, Jim has also made a contact whereby each week the merchant takes an ad which is tied directly to his current attraction.

Stoltz Novelty

One of the recent Arnold Stoltz novelties, this time a tiein with local optician for a take-off on the eye-examination card. All type and illustrations were printed in green to hook up directly with "The Feminine Touch" at Warner's Avon, Utica, N. Y.

Sablosky's "Face" Contest

All copy on Dave Sablosky's newspaper campaign for "Woman's Face" at the Norris, in Norristown, Pa., was tied up with the cool movie vacation idea. Dress shops and beauty parlors cooperating stressed the "How clothes accentuate a Woman's Face" angle, same tieup arraged with hat shops and other cooperating merchants. For outdoor stunt, Sablosky offered guest tickets at picnic grounds to those making best sketches of "A Woman's Face." Winning sketches were on display in lobby.

Contacting his local merchants ahead of "Sun Valley Serenade," Bill Harwell at the Warner Ohio, in Mansfield, promoted a single truck co-operative page which featured cuts of Henie, Glenn Miller and Berle. Bumper strips were planted on fleet of taxis and local music store came through with loan of radio-victrola for lobby which played hit tunes from the picture week ahead.

Outstander in Lige Brien's street stunt for "Big Store" at Warner's Belmar, Pittsburgh, Pa., was a boy in shorts walking around town in a barrel. Tiein copy across the barrel read, "Clothes or no, I gotta see the Marx Brothers at the Belmar."

When the University of Georgia football team left for their first out-of-town trip on the day that "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" opened at the L. & J. Palace, Athens, Ga., Manager Bickerstaff arranged to have some of the co-eds at the station to kiss the boys goodbye. Giant theatre banner explaining the osculation was witnessed by the student body on hand to see the team off.

On the recent acquisition by Odeon of the Casino, Halifax, N. S., and reopened after an extensive renovation, Manager Tom Courtney promoted a special section of one of the evening papers. In addition to featured stories and advertising Tom was given a personal break with a two-column photo and story on his theatre career.

Since Billy Conn is very popular in that sector, Manager Andrew Gorzo was able to promote the local Montgomery Ward store for a contest tiein on the date for "The Pittsburgh Kid," at the Alpine, Punxsutawney, Pa. Store took two column full on the sports page, copy including eight questions on the picture and sports in general with passes for best answers.

Deciding that in his situation, plugging of the title would do the most in selling the date, Manager Leo Haney put across "Man Hunt" at the Bucklen, Elkhart, Ind., with a teaser campaign around the title. Haney used a series of single and two-column type ads building up to a three-column smash for the explainer.

On "Yank in the R. A. F." at Warners' Fox, Philadelphia, Manager Bill Israel invited sailors attached to British battleship in drydock at local navy yard. Shot of the English tars in the theatre broke into the dailies.

For "Citizen Kane" at the Astor, Reading, Pa., J. Lester Stallman used a plane flying giant theatre banner over the area. Date on personal appearance of "Singer's Midgets" was distinguished with key to the city given the troupe by the mayor.

Warners' Hippodrome, Cleveland, is now getting some extra publicity on tiein with WHK's "Assistant Housewife" program through an offer of eight guest tickets weekly to women submitting best household hints. In exchange, Dave Bachner reports theatre receives announcement about current and coming attractions.

For "Jungle Cavalcade" at the State, Anderson, Ind., Mel Blieden used a giant mechanical elephant for street ballyhoo that paraded around town on a trailer chassis. Cost was paid by cooperating merchant in exchange for credit card underneath the theatre banners.

SOME LATE AD LAYOUTS

Exhibitor Lucas and FCC Row Over Air Permit

Irked by a suggestion of Arthur Lucas, Georgia film exhibitor interested in broadcasting station WGST at Atlanta, that the Commission could secure from the Georgia delegation in Congress information which it was seeking about him, FCC Chairman James L. Fly last Friday called attention at Washington to the fact that the Federal Communications Commission sets forth the procedure to be followed in administration of the law and declared flatly that, so long as he (Fly) was chief of the FCC, "Decisions are going to be made on their merits and not in accordance with purely political influence, threats or coercion."

The issue involved was an application—which the Commission denied—for permission to take depositions in Georgia in connection with a hearing on renewal of the station's license, to be held in Washington December 1.

The chairman's blast, however, was precipitated by the alleged "broadcasting" by Mr. Lucas of a letter taking exception to the commission's refusal to permit the taking of depositions. Copies of the communication, it was said, were sent to the White House, members of the Georgia delegation in Congress and others who might be in a position to exert influence.

The correspondence brought out that Mr. Lucas and his partner, William K. Jenkins, are to operate WGST if its license is renewed.

Agent Sent

An FCC agent was sent to Atlanta to make "secret inquiries" about the two men, Mr. Lucas charged. "For your information, let me say, each of the two Georgia Senators knows Mr. Jenkins and me well, as do the ten Georgia members of the House," he wrote. "Your investigator could have saved the taxpayers the money he is spending by making his inquiries of the Georgia members of Congress."

In his reply, Mr. Fly denied the investigation was "secret" and declared such inquiries were conducted regularly, as required by the law. He charged, in return, that a private attorney "who represents the state and presumably your interests in the matter," threatened to appeal to the courts if the application for the taking of depositions was denied.

The station is owned by the Georgia School of Technology, and Mr. Lucas asserted that the Commission's action denied the rights of a "sovereign state."

"In view of the great controversy which has surrounded the Governor, the state educational institutions and this radio station," Mr. Fly replied; "in further view of the facts that the state and all of the parties had Washington counsel; that the executives interested in the school and the radio station were frequently in Washington; and that the entire Commission's staff to be engaged on this matter are located in Washington where we have records, offices, hearing rooms and all necessary facilities, the Commission early concluded that the hearing should be held in Washington."

The net effect of the taking of depositions would be to transfer the hearing to Atlanta, he declared.

"According to your plans," he continued, "you are about to enter into the management of this station and thus to enter upon a new line of relations with this Commission. I think you ought to understand at the outset that this Commission must conform to its duty and decide all these matters upon the merits. * * * You may as well know, however, that so long as I am chairman of the Commission decisions are going to be made upon their merits and not in accordance with purely political influence, threats or coercion. I cannot refrain from commending to you the adoption and pursuance of a course of conduct which is consonant with these principles."

FCC Rules Delay By Stipulation Seen

Speculation on whether the Federal Communications Commission would effect its rulings of May 2nd on Saturday, November 15th, as originally scheduled, ended over the weekend, as it became known in New York that attorneys for the Commission and for the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, both suing the Commission to vitiate its anti-monopoly regulations, had begun stipulations delaying enforcement of those rulings.

It was said the stipulations would prevent enforcement of the regulations until after December 15th, when a three man federal statutory court will consider the NBC, CBS briefs and arguments.

This week, the attorneys were to advise Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard of their agreement, or otherwise; if the latter, the judge was to convene the statutory court as soon as possible; and that body was to decide whether a stay of regulations shall be granted until after December 15th.

The networks had asked for a temporary injunction against the FCC rules, one of which asks the NBC to divest itself of one of its networks. However, last week, Judge Goddard turned down the petition, specifying the statutory court should decide the question.

Facts for Decision

Comprising that court are Federal Judges Goddard and John Bright, and Presiding Judge Learned Hand of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The question of FCC anti-monopoly regulations can be decided on fact on records, for legality, and not by trial, in the opinion of Samuel Brodsky, assistant U. S. Attorney, who last week filed a cross-motion for dismissal of the broadcasters' complaints, and for summary judgment for the FCC without trial.

Judge Goddard said Friday, November 7th, he favored delay of FCC rules enforcement until after December 15th, if attorneys for all cannot agree on stipulations; but that he could not speak for the two other judges.

Meanwhile, the Mutual Broadcasting System, which has not seen eye to eye with the other two broadcasting chains in several matters pertaining to FCC rights, last week announced it had joined them in their suit against FCC regulations. Its position was described as that of a "party in opposition" to the FCC.

The FCC rulings particularly objected to by the chains are not merely those asking the NBC to rid itself of a network, but several which prevent affiliated stations from giving time, and otherwise committing themselves exclusively to the parent network.

Spaeth Suit Discontinued

The discontinuance of a $500,000 libel suit brought by Sigmund Spaeth against Warner Brothers has been filed in the United States district court in New York. No reason for the discontinuance was disclosed. Mr. Spaeth claimed a part in the film, "Naughty But Nice", was a take-off on him which held him up to ridicule.

Miss Temple Comes Home

Shirley Temple is home again.

That is not to say that Miss Temple has made a come-back—and the first showman to use that phrase in this connection rates a bawling out—for Miss Temple has not been away.

Miss Temple, no matter what you've heard or read, merely has been arranging for a change of material, tangible and intangible, from what she'd been getting to what she has now, which is what she had before they buried her under a blanket of Technicolor, extras and whimsy.

Whether Miss Temple or her parents or the House of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer or all of them are responsible for what's been done is beside the point, which is that in "Kathleen" Miss Temple is again seen as a little girl in a little story about a little girl, with some but not too many capable adults playing her elders and with no miracles of script or stagecraft dragged between the little girl and the customers who come to see her.

You can take it on the basis of a public preview, at which the audience laughed and cried with Miss Temple as her audience used to do in the four years of her eminence as Top Money-Making Star, that this is precisely what the box-office doctor ordered for the juvenile star and for the box-office. To producer George Haight, to director Harold S. Bucquet and to writers Mary C. McCall, Jr., and Kay Van Ripper are due the thanks of a nation's showmen and their customers for giving Miss Temple back to the common people.

The story, in simple, concerns a motherless girl of twelve years whose father is too busy to give her much attention and whose governess has given her a reputation as a problem child. Dismissing the governess, he employs a lady psychologist to take her place, and the psychologist turns out to be not only young and pretty but intelligent enough to allow the child to develop her own natively gentle personality. There is a measure of talking about science in connection with the matter, although not enough to make the thing bookish, and the outcome is as it should be. There is also some practical application of pictorial phantasy, both for humor and effect, which adds a good deal to the whole.

The good folk of Glendale, convening at the Alexander theatre to catch the nightly preview without foreknowledge of the picture they'd be seeing, gave a round of applause when Miss Temple's name appeared on the main title and relaxed in their seats with no further show of emotion until, perhaps five minutes into the story, the young lady got to her first bit of serious business. From then on she had them between laughs and tears just as she always did in what may be called, despite her years, the good old days.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER

Rise and Shine

(20th Century-Fox)

Football Comedy with Music

There are so many individual contributions of merit, good music, amusing situations and clever performances that "Rise and Shine" should add up to much more than it does. For Jack Oakie fans, his return to musical farce will be welcome indeed.

The story winds about a phenomenal football player of unpronounceable name who will save his college from malnutrition and solve the problems of all principal characters, but the "Menace" if he can only pass his exams and indulge his amazing capacity for sleep at the proper times. Caught in the involutions of plot are such eccentrics as "Grandpa," who still fights the Civil War on occasions, although his eye for blondes is undimmed; "Seabiscuit," the man who neighs like a horse; "Professor Murray," who mixes magic with his economics and extracts eggs from unsuspecting ears; and, in addition, the normal pair supplying the love interest, in the persons of George Murphy and Linda Darnell.

Producer Mark Hellinger no doubt expected a dizzy pace to cover the lack of sustained plot interest, but too often it serves only to emphasize the musical-comedy-blackout technique. Bits of acting stand out: Ruth Donnelly as Grandpa's current blonde and Milton Berle as "Seabiscuit," in particular. The whole, under the direction of Allan Dwan, and in spite of Robin and Rainger music and some Thurber humor, is amusing without ever becoming hilarious.

Design for Scandal

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Entertainment for Everybody

"Design for profits" could be a trade-title for this comedy packed with marquee personalities, with entertainment for masses and classes and with performances balanced as neatly as the totals in a prosperous showman's account-books.

But "Design for Scandal," the title for the billboards, fits the film as snugly in spite of the fact that nothing scandalous—nothing to bring the flush of embarrassment to the youngest or oldest customer in the house—occurs in the nonetheless sparkling and (in correct sense) sophisticated proceedings.

Rosalind Russell, a standout among Hollywood personalities just now by reason of many performances which have pleased the public and a marriage conducted with a complete lack of ballyhoo, adds to her Fame with a portrayal of a feminine judge to whom romance comes as a counterfeit which turns genuine.

Walter Pidgeon, whose screen Crossley is regarded as steadily rising, enacts with skill and conviction a young man who sets out to fabricate a semblance of scandal as an instrument for influencing Her Honor and winds up, after many complications, betrothed to her.

casting, displaying a talent for humor which a sequence of serious roles, mostly on the heavy side, has too long obscured.

The story, an original screen play by Lionel Houser, has to do with a wealthy man's attempt to escape, by means inside the law but feloniously contrived, payment of alimony to an ex-wife who married him to get it.

Norman Taurog's direction is rich in audience values and profits by change of pace, by restraint and by fine timing.

Confirm Or Deny

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama of Modern Journalism

Here is a motion picture of the men who gather and report the news which is headlined day by day from war-torn London in the newspapers throughout the United States. It is a story of the exploits of American correspondents and the dangers and hardships these reporters face in gathering the war news for American readers as it happens in Great Britain. It is a newspaper story which exhibitors may sell to their patrons as something modern, and different from previous film ventures into the movie-made glamor and adventure of the fourth estate with which the audience and showmen alike have become familiar in the past decade.

Direction by Archie Mayo for producer Len Hammond keeps the action flowing smoothly and crisply with only a modicum of romance inserted to round out the plot. Don Ameche heads the talent roster as the glib-tongued, overpowering boss of the London branch of "Consolidated Press," while Joan Bennett is seen in a role as the girl from the British Ministry of information who lends the romantic element to the production. Others in the cast, including Roddy McDowall, who has been widely praised for his work in "How Green Was My Valley"—as the office boy of the press association who gives his life in the line of duty; John Loder as the British censor, Arthur Shields as the blind press employe whose simplicity and easy-going manner are heart warming, perform masterfully and extract the maximum from the material on hand.

It is a story of which much could be expected. However, the film's one drawback is the anticipated climax which never quite materializes. Audiences who have enjoyed previous newspaper melodramas will find this much to their liking, while exhibitors may offer the names of Mr. Ameche, Miss Bennett and Roddy McDowall as the big attraction in a story of modern journalism.

Romance in Retrospect

Equipped with a cast whose names may be depended upon to bring into the theatre a maximum attendance despite its uninformative title, this exploration into the romantic reminiscences of two sweethearts who married other mates gives all its players plenty to do and all its witnesses plenty of reasons for being glad they came in. It's got something for everybody old enough to have an unconsummated romance left over in his or her memory and something for everybody now engaged in their first.

King Vidor's direction, specializing in understatement, makes every one of the 117 minutes pay a dividend on the script which he and Elizabeth Hill derived from John P. Marquand's novel. In the absence of a screen credit for producership, it is to be concluded that Mr. Vidor must have taken care of that chore also. In any case, it is manifestly a Vidor creation, with perhaps just a touch of the "Citizen Kane" influence in the matter of telescoped sequences and time switches. Just enough of this to keep a long story from seeming long.

The story picks up Robert Young as a Boston aristocrat of today, in his forties, who receives a phone call from the girl he was going to marry in his twenties, but didn't, and who still feels, as she does, that they missed something important. Over night he runs back in memory over his life, their meeting, wooing, separation, the years before and after. And next day he calls upon her. They discover that they belong to the lives they have lived with others and separate again. The framework has been used in other pictures and will be again. But the material strung upon it this time has not been matched in any other effort.

The story is told with feeling, with humor, with sincerity and with no phoney sentimentalism. Also with no excursions into the objectionable. A couple of sections of dialogue refer to the passing of the monied class as a regrettable inevitability, but no social doctrines are preached. World War 1 supplies one sequence and World War 2 shows up three times in newsapaper headlines. But only as scenery.

Mr. Young achieves something of a high point for himself as the Bostonian who looks back, Hedy Lamarr gives realism to her side of the romance without going exotic. Ruth Hussey as the wife he married sets a new example for actresses similarly cast, while Charles Coburn, Van Heflin, Bonita Granville, Leif Erickson and the others act up to these high leads.

Other ventures in kind have striven for laughs or tears, generally forfeiting conviction in the striving. This one just tells what happened. It tops all the others.

The Stork Pays Off

(Columbia)

Comedy about Gangsters

"The Stork Pays Off" is an unpretentious production about what happens when a group of gangsters take over what they believe is a night club, only to discover that it is a nursery. The consequences are reformation of character, a dramatic moment or two, and a number of laughs.

The three henchmen responsible for the faux pas are Maxie Rosenbloom as "Brains Moran," Horace MacMahon as "Ear-to-the-Ground Hinkle," and George McKay as "Photofinish Farris." However, once they fall under the benign influence of the stork, they reform to the point where they even go to night school to become educated, a particularly amusing sequence. Maxie Rosenbloom's slaughter of the English language needs no further elaboration as to its comic appeal.

The plot of the picture concerns Victor Jory, racketeer and leader of the gangsters, and Rochelle Hudson, who manages the nursery. They fall in love and Jory, finding that he cannot throw off the shackles of his past, confesses his guilt to the district attorney. Because he had never really killed anyone, and because of his earnest desire to become a good citizen, he is given a nominal sentence, and is then free to pursue a career as an Assemblyman, to which he had been elected, and as a husband to Rochelle.

Jack Fier was the producer and Lew Landis the director.

Judging from the reaction of the audience, "The Stork Pays Off" in laughs and general satisfaction.

Sierra Sue

(Republic)

Autry Western

Presented with the usual Autry breeze and charm "Sierra Sue" is a film story of the modern west and two groups of ranchers who feud over the proper method of ridding the grazing land of poisonous devil weed. Produced by Harry Grey and directed by William Morgan, it ranks with the best of previous Gene Autry productions.

Fay McKenzie plays the feminine lead as the daughter of a rancher who cannot be won over by Gene to the modern method of removing the poisonous growth, while Smiley Burnette, again in the role of "Frog Millhouse," continues as Gene's aide and colleague. Others in the cast include Frank Thomas, Robert Homans and Dorothy Christy, all of whom enact their roles capably. Also worthy of mention is the excellent outdoor photography of Jack Marta.

In "Sierra Sue" Gene Autry is given ample opportunity to render a number of musical pieces in his own manner, including the title song, "Sierra Sue," as well as "Be Honest With Me," which he sang at the New York rodeo and which was greeted with an ovation at its conclusion, "Ridin' the Range" and "Heebie Jeebie Blues," also are sung by Smiley Burnette.

I Killed That Man

(K.-B. Productions - Monogram)

Melodrama

Maurice and Franklin King (formerly Kozinsky) repeat their unusual standard of maximum production values on a minimum budget with "I Killed That Man," which Monogram will release. The brothers, whose production debut was P. R. C.'s "Paper Bullets," have achieved in this new picture the same outstanding values which marked their first effort. In addition, it offers the names of Ricardo Cortez and Joan Woodbury as the top marquee embellishments. Others in the cast are Pat Gleason, George Pembroke, George Breakston, Iris Adrian, Herbert Rawlinson, Ralf Harolde, John Hamilton, Harry Holman, Jack Mulhall, Gavin Gordon and Vince Barnett.

The picture, as previewed in Hollywood, lacks several connecting links in the story needed to make it a meritorious melodrama capable of filling its task as supporting program fare.

Phil Rosen, veteran of the low budget field, guided the production smoothly, except for the story faults.

A man condemned to die in the electric chair is killed by a poisoned dart in front of the witnesses to the scheduled execution. Cortez, as an assistant district attorney, takes the investigation in hand and with the aid of Miss Woodbury, in the role of a newspaper reporter, tracks down the killer.

Double Trouble

(Monogram)

Comedy

With "Double Trouble," Monogram introduces the first of a series of comedies starring Harry Langdon and Charles Rogers, veteran cinematic fun-makers. More or less in the nature of a comeback for both, the picture drew a number of laughs at its preview, held on a Friday night at a neighborhood house before an audience of young and old.

Supporting the comedy duo are Catherine Lewis, a comely miss who displays much promise; Louise Curry, Benny Rubin, Mira McKinney, Dave O'Brien, Frank Jaquet and others.

The story gets started on the premise that two youngsters are being sent from war-torn England to the home of a bean cannery owner in America. The "youngsters" arrive, but are dim-witted adults. They become involved in the affairs of the cannery to the extent of misplacing a $100,000 gem in a can of beans. Because of publicity given the gem, thousands of orders for the beans arrive, the customers hoping to buy the can which contains the jewel. The rest of the story deals with the efforts to get back the gem.

William West directed the film, which is heavy on the slapstick. Barney A. Sarecky was Dixon R. Harwin's associate producer.

Previewed at the Fox Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, to a mixed audience which showed it had a good time.—V. K.

The Devil Pays Off

(Republic)

Spies and Sabotage

"The Devil Pays Off" is about spies, sabotage and espionage, of contemporary significance, but without propaganda coloration. The foreign powers involved are only faintly suggested, and there is nothing to provoke war or racial hysteria. The story, written by George Worthing Yates and Julian Zimet, with the screen play by Lawrence Kimble and Malcolm Stuart Boylan, is calculated to arrest and sustain attention.

The plot is concerned with the efforts of the hero to secure the necessary evidence to convict a shipping magnate who has sold his ships to the United States, but who is suspected of preventing their delivery because of other deals with foreign powers.

William Wright is the hero, and he makes an ingratiating and efficient one. J. Edward Bromberg is especially good as the shipping magnate whose conscience gives him no peace, and Osa Massen is very pretty as his wife, who doesn't give him any peace, either, because of her flirtatious inclinations. Margaret Tallichet pretends to be the hero's wife, in order to aid him in his work, and then marries him in reel and real fashion.

Without stars of the first magnitude, or production values in the higher brackets, the audience will nevertheless enjoy the picture as rather exciting melodrama, once they have been lured into the theatre. "The Devil Pays Off" is entertainment, in this particular instance.

Albert J. Cohen was the associate producer and John H. Auer directed.

Frightened Lady

(Hoffberg)

Mystery Melodrama

Based on one of the late Edgar Wallace thriller's, "Frightened Lady" is a fair to middling melodrama set against a background of an old English mansion. A British production, this follows their flair for the mystery-melodrama in handling, but falls short of the top flight rating accorded other such pictures from the English studios.

However, the film has a good deal of suspense, also two murders, two sinister butlers, a character with a dark past, who, incidentally, is disposed of rather abruptly after a big build-up as the cause of it all, and a romantic couple.

The story revolves around an apparently sane young man, an English nobleman who is a bit of a composer on the side. Likeable and friendly, he is the least of those in a prominent part to be suspected, that is until the picture is about three-quarters run, when it becomes quite evident where the finger will be finally pointed. His method of killing his victims is strangling them with a scarf. He is about to strangle his third victim when the Scotland Yard operative assigned to the case closes in. The film ends with the suicide of the murderer.

S. W. Smith was the produced and the picture was distributed in England by British Lion Film Corporation. George King directed.

Marital Drama

PRODUCED by B. P. Schulberg. Directed by Alexander Hall.

PLAYERS: Fredric March, Loretta Young, Robert Benchley, Helen Westley, Allyn Joslyn, Joyce Compton.

SYNOPSIS

This is the story of a successful playwright and his equally successful actress-wife. They have planned to retire to a farm following the run of their current hit show. When the enthusiastic playwright announces on the closing night of the show that he has the manuscript of a new play "Bedtime Story," the wife rebels and heads for Reno. He goes ahead with the staging, believing that she will see it his way before long. The wife gets her divorce and returns to New York. The playwright tricks her into taking the part temporarily but she eventually sees through the trick and retaliates by marrying a pompous corporation lawyer. Both the playwright and the actress realize their mistake and are reunited when it is discovered that the divorce had been obtained under false pretenses and is illegal.

HONOLULU LU (Columbia)

Comedy

DIRECTED by Charles Barton.

PLAYERS: Lupe Velez, Bruce Bennett, Leo Carrillo, Larry Parks, George McKay.

SYNOPSIS

Leo Carrillo in this portrays an adventurer and swindler. When he checks into Honolulu's leading hotel and indicates that he comes from a wealthy, noble family, his niece (Lupe Velez) leaves him. She wanders into an ice cream parlor where she has a run-in with three sailors. She also meets a native girl, who insists on becoming Lupe's maid. They go job hunting, winding up in a burlesque theatre. Lupe is an immediate success. A romance develops between Lupe and one of the sailors (Bruce Bennett). Meanwhile her uncle has attached himself to the wealthy ladies in the hotel. They are preparing a charity campaign, the climax of which is to be the naming of a "Miss Honolulu." Lupe wins but only after much pro and con on her burlesque status.

BULLETS FOR BANDITS (Columbia)

Western

DIRECTOR: Wally Fox.

PLAYERS: Bill Elliott, Tex Ritter, Frank Mitchell, Dorothy Short.

SYNOPSIS

In this, "Wild Bill" Elliott impersonates a gambler, whom he is unjustly accused of murdering. As the gambler he returns to "his" mother's ranch to prevent it from being taken over by an unscrupulous townsman and his henchmen. Meanwhile the sheriff (Tex Ritter) comes to the ranch seeking Elliott. He stays to help Elliott drive off the invaders and, incidentally, to pin the murder charge on a henchman of the townsman.

Drama-Romance

PRODUCER: Scott R. Dunlap. Directed by Arthur G. Collins.

PLAYERS: Movita, Warren Hull, George Piltz, William Davidson, Russell Simpson, Kenneth Harlan, Pierre Watkin.

SYNOPSIS

A blind artist on his way to Java to have a noted eye specialist operate on him reaches an island shore when the steamer is wrecked. A native girl nurses him back to health and even dives for pearls—which is forbidden on the island—so that the artist will have money for the operation. When she finds a priceless pearl, a trader pretends to be the eye specialist in order to obtain it. The scheme fails. The specialist is finally persuaded to come to the island and he performs the operation. The artist leaves but returns when he realizes he loves the native girl.

NO HANDS ON THE CLOCK (Paramount)

Comedy-Mystery

PRODUCERS: William H. Pine and William C. Thomas.

PLAYERS: Chester Morris, Jean Parker, Rose Hobart, Dick Purcell, Astrid Allwyn.

SYNOPSIS

Chester Morris and Jean Parker are teamed here for the first time. The picture also serves to bring back, after a ten-year absence from the screen, James Kirkwood, former stage favorite and silent screen star, in an important role. The story concerns a private detective and his wife who start on a search for a missing person during which several murders ensue before the ending. It is the first in a new series of six pictures Mr. Pine and Mr. Thomas are making for Paramount's 1941-42 schedule.

RIOT SQUAD (Monogram)

Melodrama

PRODUCED and directed by Edward Finney.

PLAYERS: Richard Cromwell, Rita Quigley, John Miljan, Mary Ruth, Herbert Rawlinson, Mary Gordon.

SYNOPSIS

Richard Cromwell in this portrays an interne who, with the police's knowledge, takes a job as doctor for a gang of criminals. His fiancee (Rita Quigley) breaks their engagement because of Cromwell's association with the criminals, not knowing the true purpose of his act. Cromwell reports the movements of the gang to the police, who capture the gang one by one. In the climatic scene, Cromwell drives the gang leader to the police station in an ambulance. He explains things to his fiancee and they become re-engaged.

A MISSOURI OUTLAW (Republic)

Western

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER - DIRECTOR: George Sherman.

PLAYERS: Don "Red" Barry, Lynn Merrick, Noah Beery, Paul Fix, Al St. John, Frank LaRue.

SYNOPSIS

Cliff Dixon (Don "Red" Barry) returns to his home town of Sundown and is jailed by his sheriff father (Noah Beery) who is determined Cliff should face trial for a killing in which he was involved. Cliff knows that he was framed and will be unable to have a fair trial as long as a group of racketeers, who have formed a "protective association" are in control of the town. When the sheriff jails two of the association's members, he is killed and evidence planted to make it appear that Cliff killed his own father. Cliff escapes and by process of elimination finds the murderer.

FIGHTING BILL FARGO (Universal)

Western

DIRECTED by Ray Taylor. Associate Producer, Will Cowan.

PLAYERS: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Nell O'Day, Jeanne Kelly, Joe Eggerton, James Blaine, Ken Harlan.

SYNOPSIS

Released on parole after serving three years of a prison sentence on a framed-up murder charge, Bill Fargo returns home to Buffalo Springs, on the eve of an election. The better element of the community want to oust the incumbent Sheriff Hackett, tool of crooked Cash Scanlon. Bill's father, before his death at the hands of Vic Savage, one of Scanlon's gunmen, was the half-owner and crusading editor of the Buffalo Springs Independent. After Bill was railroaded to prison, the elder Fargo was murdered because both their activities had begun to jeopardize Scanlon's plans to swindle the townsfolk and the ranchers. This left the Independent in the hands of Clem Fillmore, a weakling in mortal fear of Scanlon.

Bill's arrival is a happy day for his sister, Julie, and his pal, Gabby, who look to him to take over the paper and support the reform candidate for Sheriff, Tom Houston, sponsored by the town's leading citizens.

Bill helps elect the reform candidate, succeeding in outwitting the lawless element.

LAW OF THE TIMBER (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Melodrama

PRODUCED and directed by Bernard B. Ray.

PLAYERS: Marjorie Reynolds, Monte Blue, J. Farrell MacDonald, Hal Brazeal, George Humbert.

SYNOPSIS

A lumberman and his daughter receive a huge national defense order. The foreman covets the company and arranges for a series of mysterious accidents, topped by a forest fire, in which the owner of the company is killed. His daughter carries on in her father's stead. Overhearing a conspiracy to wreck the log train, the daughter attempts to stop the conspirators but is captured and left in the cab of the runaway train. An easterner employed by her, boards the train and races it over the danger spot. The culprits are apprehended as the daughter and the easterner, who turns out to be the son of her late father's partner, prepare to make the company a one family affair.

BORROWED HERO (Monogram)

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY (Univ.)
Serial—12 Episodes (6681)

Don Winslow (Don Terry), commander of the U. S. Navy destroyer 620, is transferred to Naval Intelligence at Pearl Harbor and detailed to investigate the mysterious torpedo sinking of the Corda-Queen in the South Pacific. Red Pennington (Walter Sande), lieutenant senior grade and Winslow's pal, accompanies his chief on the 620 to Tangita, a small island off the main southern trade routes. Rondana Bay, on the island, is being converted into an auxiliary naval base.

At the bay, Winslow and Red meet three old friends, Mercedes Colby (Claire Dodd), navy nurses; Misty Gaye (Anne Nagel), her friend, and Mike Splendor (Wade Boteler), retired intelligence officer.

Unsuspected by Winslow, the gold mine which is located at the northern tip of Tangita Island is actually a secret submarine base operated by Winslow's old enemy, the spy-master known as the Scorpion (Kurt Katch). The Scorpion's chief agent on the island is Merlin (John Litel), superintendent of the mine.

In the action which follows, the young commander pilots a mosquito boat in the path of a "human torpedo" device; dives from a burning automobile into the sea; rams a submarine with a freighter; fights the spy-agents in a dynamited mine kill; gets trapped in a water cell; battles a man-eating shark; is buried alive in a bombing raid; gets locked in a chemical reducing chamber; pilots a fighter plane in a dog-fight over the ocean; invades the Scorpion's undersea headquarters; gets caught in a tunnel cave-in and deliberately signals for a depth bomb attack upon the spy submarine in which he and his friends are captors.

THE EFFECT OF PRIORITIES ON 1942 THEATRE COOLING

NOVEMBER 15, 1941

It must be White!

Just as a washing on the line must be snow-white to satisfy a good housewife, so too, must the light on your screen today be snow-white for the satisfactory projection of colored films.

High intensity projection lamps alone project light of the same characteristics as that under which Technicolor pictures are produced in Hollywood. Without this type lamp you cannot secure the beautiful reproduction which is possible with these expensively made productions.

The light of your old low intensity lamp appears a dim, muddy yellow by comparison. Furthermore, to secure the desired screen brilliancy with present dense black and white films, TWICE AS MUCH LIGHT is required as is possible to project by any low intensity lamp.

This necessary doubling in light is possible at an increased combined current and carbon cost of LESS THAN 2c PER HOUR, wit low-cost Strong Utility High Intensity Proj Arc Lamp.

Increase your business by installing St Utility One-Kilowatt Arc Lamps now. The goers readily recognize good projection go where it is offered.

Plastic Material Described

A NEW CATALOG, completely illustrating in color, the finishing materials manufactured by the Formica Insulation Company, Cincinnati, has just been issued. Some of the material has been previously published in special folders; the new booklet deals comprehensively with the line, which includes genuine wood veneers as well as Formica laminated plastic veneers available in solid colors, pattern effects, and with metallic inlays. In addition to application suggestions, the booklet also contains construction detail drawings.

The availability of Formica has not thus far been reduced by defense priorities. In the meantime, the company has been conducting intensive research into non-critical materials that can be used in the manufacture of the sheet. This has already revealed that at least 90% of the critical materials employed can be dispensed with, and remaining materials on the critical list probably are procurable. No serious restrictions on manufacture of Formica is expected.

Reflector Prices Reduced

REDUCTION OF the prices of Sparkle-lite reflectors manufactured by Climax Reflector, Inc., Canton, Ohio, has been announced by E. C. Smally, president of the company.

The reflectors come in two sizes. The smaller size (frequently used with 3- and 7-watt lamps), is now priced at 75 cents; the larger one, which can use lamps up to 10 watts, is now 85 cents.

Folder on Carbon Saving

A FOLDER describing the use of Droll processed carbons in projection arc operation, has been issued by the Droll Theatre Supply Company, Chicago. It is available on request.

Reports Business Doubled

MARKING THE beginning of his company's 18th year, A. A. Feinberg, president of the United States Air-Conditioning Corporation, Minneapolis, has announced that business to date this year has been more than twice that of last year. He stated that it was during 1941 that the company made its 8,000th installation of air treatment and ventilating equipment in theatres. The firm's facilities are now importantly devoted to defense work, he added.

ASK YOURSELF THIS QUESTION:

What Would 50 to 100% More Screen Light Mean For My Theatre?

● Theatre managers who have adopted High Intensity projection know that the increased screen light means

IMPROVED PICTURE QUALITY
BETTER AUDIENCE RESPONSE
INCREASED ATTENDANCE
MORE PROFIT

The new "One Kilowatt" High Intensity arcs supply 50 to 100 per cent more screen light than low intensity lamps at practically the same operating cost. Initial cost is also low.

Ask your dealer to give you the figures and a demonstration of this modern projection light.

YES—here is a theatre-seat that is wonderfully soft and comfortable. It's American Seating's Feather Foam Front—the latest, greatest achievement in theatre chair design.

Feather Foam Front takes the pressure off the Popliteal. This is done through elimination of hard steel wires and rolled or packed stuffing across the front edge of the seat. It's so soft, legs can't go to sleep!

Feather Foam Front is now available—at no extra cost—on American Bodiform, Commodore, Zephyr and Zenith Chairs. New color schemes . . . new streamlined designs . . . and Feather Foam Front make these chairs indisputably America's greatest buys in theatre chairs. See them.

* Popliteal—according to Webster—"the back part of the leg behind the knee joint." Pressure on the Popliteal causes legs to "go to sleep" and is responsible for discomfort and nervousness.

ISSUE OF NOVEMBER 15, 1941. VOLUME 145, NUMBER 7

News Flash Service For Theatre on Way

AT A TIME when Americans have more and more reason to be alert to the "spot" kind of event report, the organization which has been developing a unique method of bringing spot news reports to the theatre screen has announced its readiness for national operations beginning the first of the year. For several months Theatre Communications, Inc., of New York, has been conducting, in association with the Altec Service Corporation, fields tests in a substantial number of theatres in Boston and other cities of New England.

The company, headed by Paul J. Davis, has secured the news reporting service of Transradio Press Service. Altec, in affiliation with Theatre Communications, will provide the machinery of distribution and the servicing organization, and will also manufacture, it is understood, the news-flash projector and any accessory equipment.

Each theatre—and nearly 4,000 houses could be thus supplied news reports from twice a day, as in more remote sections, to many times a day, as in the larger centers—will be equipped with a projector especially designed for the purpose, and a teletype machine. The latter, of the Bell System type, will receive and automatically type the report on a film developed by the Miller-Bryant-Pierce Laboratories in Aurora, Ill., and manufactured by the L. C. Smith-Corona Typewriter Company. The film is a specially processed Dupont cellulose-base film, and the teletype machines "stencil" the words of the news flash directly upon it, and the message is transferred directly to the projector.

The film in the projector moves upward at a rate exposing about 90 words a minute. Each news cast is planned to contain not less than 300 words. Projectors will be specifically adapted in lens equipment to meet the picture-size conditions of each theatre. The size and portability of the projector and its pedestal are such as to permit projection through an observation port if another suitable port is not available. The teletype machine may be placed in the manager's office, if that is desired.

The arrangement calls for the Transradio Press to edit the news received from its correspondents throughout the world, and its affiliated news-gathering organizations, into flashes suited to theatre audiences, and distribute these flashes to theatres enjoying the service, at the intervals for which the theatre has arranged. All of the equipment in the theatre is placed in the theatre by Theatre Communications, none of it is sold.

Selling an Impact

To turn from the serious and immediate, to the fanciful and remote, we consider Mr. Robert W. Russell's "dynamic screen." This innovation, suggested simply as "the one upheaval capable of meeting the commercial necessity of a sudden impact of novelty," may be recalled as the subject of a note in these columns last month. The projection of motion pictures on a screen occupying the entire front wall of a theatre was to be proposed in a paper presented before the fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in New York, and a detailed report of the paper was promised. These paragraphs are by way of keeping that promise.

Details, however, have not been made available by presentation of the paper. Assuming that Mr. Russell, a resident of Los Angeles now in the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army, has worked them out, the methods by which his "dynamic" picture would be realized were omitted from his discussion. His idea is not devoid of interest, however, and some notes we took during the presentation may be worth passing on.

First of all, let us dispose of Mr. Russell's notion that the motion picture exhibits a commercial need of "a sudden impact of novelty" in order to retain its public. He endeavors to convince us that the film, a novelty in itself at first, has experienced a succession of crises in which it was losing its patronage. Sound saved it from such a crisis in 1928. His "dynamic screen" will save it from that which he now sees confronting the film industry.

"Today," his statement goes, according to our notes, "we are approaching another period of stagnation. Pictures have been made on every subject. Books and plays are searched for stories and fancy prices paid for them. But it is the screen personalities that account for grosses."

At the same time, radio is taking away millions of customers from the theatre, while television is on the way!

But the motion picture industry can save itself, if it wants to, by adopting the "dynamic screen." And what is that? Here, depending again on our notes, we will have to let Mr. Russell speak, because his paper was more inspirational—"impressionistic," perhaps—than descriptive.

"With the dynamic screen," it went, "the picture shifts its field and limits for subjective purposes. The audience may see a pin-point of an image, or perhaps a panorama. The borders are not fixed arbitrarily, but are selective.

"Each photographic problem is allowed to take its appropriate form and dimension. A train becomes a broad horizontal, not part of a locomotive photographed at an angle. The picture is framed in selected limits, or simply vignetted"—that is, faded out at the edges.

This requires a huge projection area over the whole front wall of the auditorium. It would be best, according to Mr. Russell, to have this wall, which would be flat, curve in a little at the top and sides, uniting in continuous effect with the ceiling and side walls. To fill this area, as desired, the 35-mm. frame would be projected by a wide-angle lens.

But frequently the whole area would not be used. "Within this field smaller fields would be used. An over-all style for outline and movement between outlines is required."—So at least go our notes, which we believe to be accurate even though we don't know what they mean. And to continue, "The fields can be a series of squares or circles, or a progression from a horizontal series into a pyramid or series of squares and into a vertical, and this could then expand into a climactic use of the full field."

And while the present frame would be kept, the picture would not be limited by its arbitrary dimensions, which Mr. Russell believes are somewhat cockeyed, anyway.

And that, to date and perhaps forever, is all of the information available on the "dynamic screen."

Handling Motor Trade

It is curious how much variation is to be found between the methods of one theatre circuit and another in the handling of parking facilities for patrons. Such broad differences are quite clearly indicated by information received in response to a number of inquiries sent out in preparation of a projected study, still projected, of the influence of the automobile on theatre locations; here, however, are a few interesting examples of the way in which the parking problem is being dealt with.

At one end of the scale is the free parking lot for the use of which there's no stub or other indication that the motorist is to attend or has attended the theatre. He just drives in and parks, comes back later to get his car, then drives off, no questions asked. One circuit so disinterested points out, however, that where they have free parking lots, the theatres are in neighborhoods where the only place to go to in the evening is the movies. But it could be that the motorist's Aunt Hannah lived just across the street, couldn't it?

Fees are charged by a large number of theatres. At the Ogden in Denver, a Fox Intermountain house, the price paid at the parking lot may be applied on the purchase of a ticket to the theatre. The parking fee is 25c, and the motorist is given a special ticket which he can turn in at the box office.

One twist noted among the free parking arrangements is participation of merchants in the expense. Where the theatre and parking lot is near a shopping center, these parking facilities offer the stores a service also, and there are several ways in which the merchants can share the construction cost and upkeep of the lot. United Detroit Theatres maintain the lot themselves, and the tradesmen merely pay them a specified fee.

The latter circuit, however, has a parking system for its downtown theatres that is the most elaborate of those reported. By arrangement with a large garage chain, patrons may park their cars in an open lot one or two blocks away from the theatre for a dime; or in a garage for 20c; or have a uniformed, bonded chauffeur take their car at the theatre, park it in a garage, and return it when they come out, for the price of 40c (recently raised from 30c).

In September over 9,000 cars were parked in one of these manners by patrons of United Detroit theatres, and it is the belief of the circuit that instead of the charge being resented, the convenience at such prices has had real ticket selling value for the downtown houses. The services are explained on a printed card handed to each patron.

For theatres in outlying districts, however, free parking facilities are a growing necessity, simply because the private automobile is the much preferred, if not in many instances the only, means of convenient transportation, and it is becoming more or less expected that the price of admission includes a place to put the car.

But it is too easy to restrict this service to bona fide patrons of the theatre to let anybody use it. As Ed Jones, adverising manager of RCA Photophone, has pointed out, simply require presentation of a stub of the theatre ticket for reclamation of the car, and this is being done by some theatres having an attendant at the lot.

Paragraphs

Drive-in theatres are getting bigger, and if not better, somewhat more complex. Up to a year or so ago, the drive-in operated by N. S. Barger near Chicago, was the largest in the country with its accommodations for 1,160 cars. Recently, however, Paul Wintner, who heads a company already operating drive-in's near Buffalo and Toledo, announced plans for three more, each to hold more than 1,200 cars, near Rochester, N. Y., Dayton and Columbus, Ohio. And each is to have a night club with an outdoor dance floor!

E. M. Loew, New England theatre operator who was one of the first to espouse the cause of the drive-in, is providing for at least 1,000 cars in four new outdoors enterprises, in Hartford, Conn., Philadelphia (two there), and Washington, D. C. (Loew's second there). And they will have, besides refreshment stands, various game facilities, including bowling alleys.

And 1,000 cars will be the capacity also of the drive-in to be part of the $500,000 home-shopping-amusement center development projected by Harry and Elmer Balaban, brothers of the B & K-Paramount Balabans, at Melrose Park, Ill., Chicago suburb. This will also provide 600 fixed seats in front of the car area for those who really want to see the picture. In winter it is planned to remove the seats and flood that area for skating (what folks won't think of next!). The development is to have a regular theatre, too—to seat 900.

This is probably irrelevant, but in noting these increased drive-in capacities we couldn't help reflecting on the fact that a 500-car layout puts the last row of patrons a distance from the screen equal to ten times the width of a 45-foot picture. Add windshield and car windows, preferably clean. Count on your fingers. What's the answer?

A news story from Charlotte, N. C., said the other day that blacking out of signs there to conserve electricity for defense purposes has gladdened theatre operators by saving them money and increasing patronage. We know of nothing more certain to make exhibitors happy than less overhead and more patronage. But the theatre can't get along without light—bright, lively, gay, sparkling light. Charlotte people are just finding this dimmed sign business a novelty. Better just regard it as a defense measure, not a new way to get 'em in. —G. S.

The Theatre's Place and Needs in National Defense

An examination of the question whether modernization and judicious extension of the film exhibition plant impedes our defense production

By BEN SCHLANGER and GEORGE SCHUTZ

THE motion picture theatre, standing in the position of an activity which has much to contribute in support of the national effort against Nazism, is also one that needs little from the stocks and production which must be devoted to that effort. It has, indeed, a definite defense job to perform as the nation's chief source of inexpensive recreation; and what it requires in vital defense materials to maintain and extend its service to a citizenry faced with increasing sacrifices today and deeper uncertainty on the morrow, is not only negligible in relation to the significance of this service to morale, but meagre absolutely.

This is true of new construction as well as remodeling and of equipment repairs and replacements. Any threat of severe, almost abolitionary curtailment of motion picture production and exhibition would certainly be untenable, and there is none. The motion picture theatre, however, is more than an enclosure for the housing of film reproduction equipment and an assembly of people; it is a popular recreational center, co-ordinating for its peculiar psychological purposes, manifold devices of story-telling, comfort and environment. It is as such an institution that a theatre provides the emotional stimulation and gratification which, in the final analysis, constitute its wares, hence to consider maintenance of the nation's film exhibition plant as merely a matter of a few carbons, nuts and bolts is to establish a point of view leading to restrictions which could well mean severe curtailment of theatre operation.

A step in that very direction was taken early in October by the Supply Priorities and Allocation Board (SPAB), in its order prohibiting all application of building materials to non-defense purposes. Thus far there has been no indication that theatres are not wholly included, despite the validity of their claim to exception. Yet a study of theatre construction would show that the kind and amounts of materials needed would have little or no bearing on defense production.

This would be truer still with the adoption of feasible changes in structural design, and limiting of theatre construction, by a permit system, to projects considered justified by the service to be rendered its community. And even in ordinary times, a theatre is seldom built or remodeled if local requirements do not suggest it; otherwise, there could be little expectation that it would return the money invested.

The total number of potential theatre projects in the entire country in any one year would form such a small proportion of the total amount of commercial construction that prohibition of theatre building and remodeling would prove of extremely little value, if any real value at all, in the conservation of defense materials. The average theatre building, with its interior finish and furnishings, represents a substantial amount of material of one kind and another; but of materials considered critical in defense production, it contains very little, and it could have less without impairing its structural strength, architectural beauty, or functional efficiency.

This discussion will consider the materials needed in some detail; however, let us turn for a moment to a country actually at war, fighting a declared war for over two years. Canada saw the results of a war production boom similar to those observable in this country now. Declaration of hostilities with Germany brought an increased flow of money from new employment and higher wages. The Canadian theatre business got its share of the larger amount of money in circulation, and having allowed its properties to suffer perforce from less happy economic conditions, it began to use its increased earnings to improve and extend them. And for two years of actual war, it was allowed to do so. The Canadian government's priority ruling on steel did not go into effect until October 1, 1941!

Canada Applies a Permit System

Canada has been applying a license or permit system to theatre construction. Sometimes a project has been considered unwarranted, and the application for a permit to build the theatre has not been issued. Since the beginning of the war, however, about half a million dollars has been spent in Quebec Province alone on theatre construction and remodeling, and several houses are still under construction.

The same substantial dimensions characterize theatre building that has been going, and is still underway, in Canada's other well populated province, Ontario—in Chatham, Owen Sound, Parry Sound, St. Catherines, Ottawa, Hamilton, Fort William; Port Arthur, North Bay, Cornwall, Sarnia, Kingston and other towns. In Toronto, where construction has been lively during the entire war period, four projects were but recently started. In the Western provinces, Famous Players-Canadian and the new Odeon circuit have been building and remodeling at a rate never before observed in those areas. It is, in fact, the expressed opinion of theatre operators in Canada that the total amount of theatre building and remodeling since 1939 has been far greater than for fifteen years prior to that year.

Building Ban Called Unnecessary

MEETING in Detroit the first week of November, the National Association of Real Estate Boards raised a fund of $25,000 for the purpose of collecting facts and figures with which to convince the SPAB that it was wrong in issuing its comprehensive order, in October, prohibiting "non-defense" construction. The members "hope to prove to Washington", according to a report of the plan in the New York Herald-Tribune, "that a less restrictive regulation of small-house building would not disturb in the least the supply of critical materials needed for war work".

Materials for Theatre Construction

The basic materials of construction, such as cement, sand, gravel, bricks, plaster, wood and glass, are as yet available and plentiful for both civilian and defense needs; and it is these materials that constitute the bulk of materials used in theatre construction—that is to say, theatre construction of the usual capacities, up to 1,000 seats. Of course, it is not here suggested that at this time theatre projects should be promoted of capacity and design that would require appreciable amounts of steel, as, for example, would be needed in large balcony construction. Balconies of this type could be entirely avoided. The day of the "super-colossal" theatre is over, anyway, since it has been proved that moderately sized theatres, properly located in relation to the community served, usually serves best the purpose of exhibiting films.

The only other materials than those named above, needed in a theatre building and appear to be essential to defense needs, are hardware for doors, plumbing pipes and fixtures, and metals used for decorative and trim purposes. Hardware for a 600-seat theatre project amounts to as little as $400. As to the plumbing fixtures and piping requirements for a moderately sized theatre, such a theatre requires only two more plumbing fixtures than would be needed for a one-family residence. It would therefore seem completely out of proportion to prohibit construction of a theatre costing about $65,000, because of the requirements of eight plumbing fixtures, when a small residence costing $7,000 would require six plumbing fixtures.

Metal doors can be entirely avoided in theatre construction where local building authorities would permit. A wood door, especially of the solid flush type having a thickness of all its parts of at least 1¾ inches, is for all purposes just as hazardless as a metal door, since it is sufficiently slow-burning to insure safe egress of an audience. The only doors that really need be of metal (Continued on page 32)

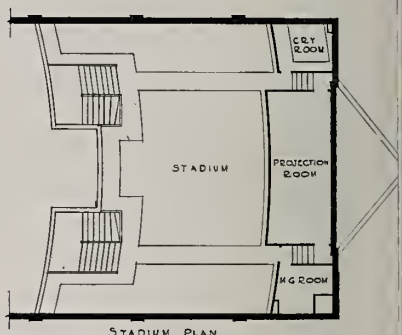
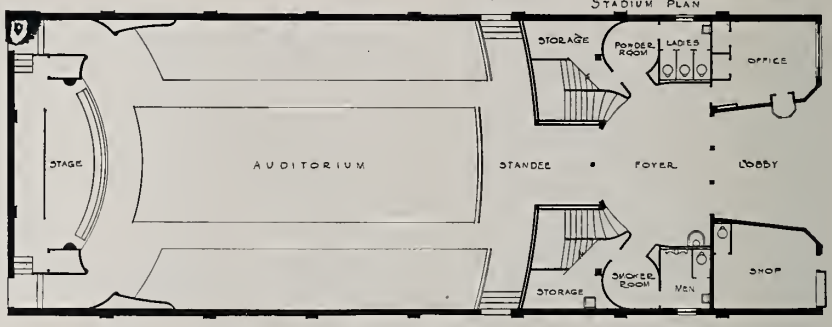
TWO SMALL THEATRES

¶ The Gateway in Fort Worth, Tex., and the Village in Houston, Tex., are two new Interstate Circuit theatres serving suburban communities and with similar capacities, but differing in character of patronage, plan and appointments. Each is dealt with separately on following pages.



■ The Gateway (above), owned jointly by Interstate and P. G. Cameran, is of masonry and reinforced concrete construction, with front of stucco in two tones of salmon. Sign and marquee are porcelain enamel, in sea green and lemon yellow. Attraction boards by Adler. Marquee soffit: metal, painted ivory. Vestibule walls: sea green ceramic tile, ceiling plaster painted off-white. . . . The Village theatre has walls of buff-pink veneer over structural tile, and limestone coping. Front color scheme also includes green and vermilion. Vermilion squares accentuate ticket booth.



The GATEWAY

Architect:
RAYMOND SMITH

CONSTRUCTION: Masonry and reinforced concrete. PATRONAGE: Middle and upper-income groups, merchant and professional classes.

STADIUM PLAN

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

■ The problem presented to the architect was that of designing a small two-price stadium type theatre of minimum personnel requirements. The resulting plan (see drawings) provides for a total capacity slightly exceeding 750, with access to stadium from foyer rather than auditorium. The stadium, moreover, is ramped, instead of having stepped aisles, the gradient being 1½ inches per foot. Stadium seating is staggered, using 30-inch chairs at alternate row ends. The foyer (pictured above) is semi-circular, with retiring rooms, office, stairs, refreshment facilities and auditorium entrance compactly located around the rim, for easy supervision. The side ticket booth is reached through the manager's office, who thus has both front and foyer conveniently under observation. Moreover, the ticket taker can handle candy and popcorn sales as necessary. The foyer has blue-green plaster walls, natural birch doors, tan and ivory tile fountain. Carpeting here, as throughout theatre, is Alexander Smith Velvet in tan, buff and black modern pattern. Both women's and men's lounge-anterooms have blue-green plaster ceiling. Pastel green plaster walls, asphalt tile floors with red field and gray border. Toilet rooms have tile wainscots (women's, apricot; men's, brown), and tile floors (women's, buff; men's, tan). Foyer and retiring room lighting is white neon, in ceiling cornice coves.

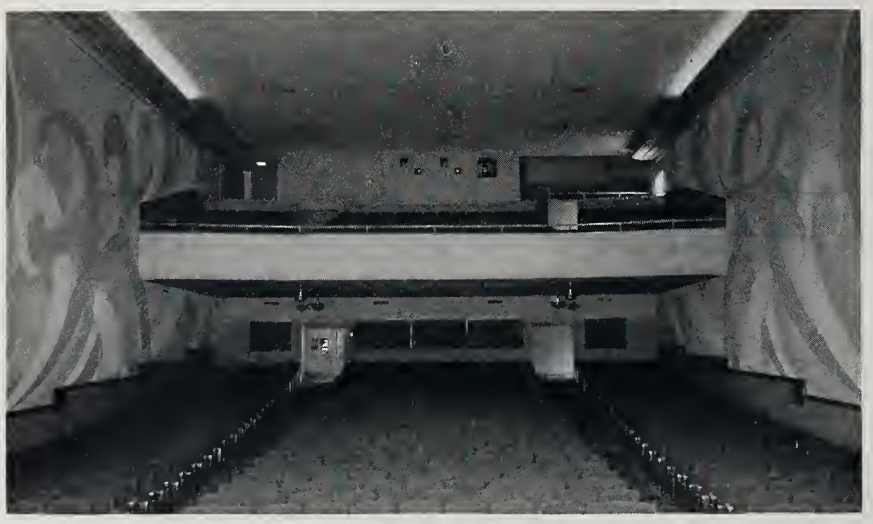
The VILLAGE

Architects:

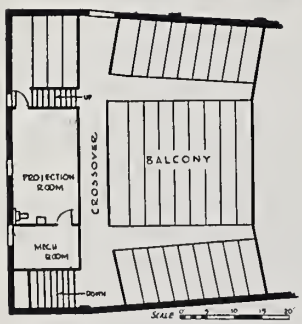
MacKIE & KAMRATH

CONSTRUCTION: Reinforced concrete foundations and slab, structural tile walls, steel columns and roof trusses. PATRONAGE: Upper-income group.

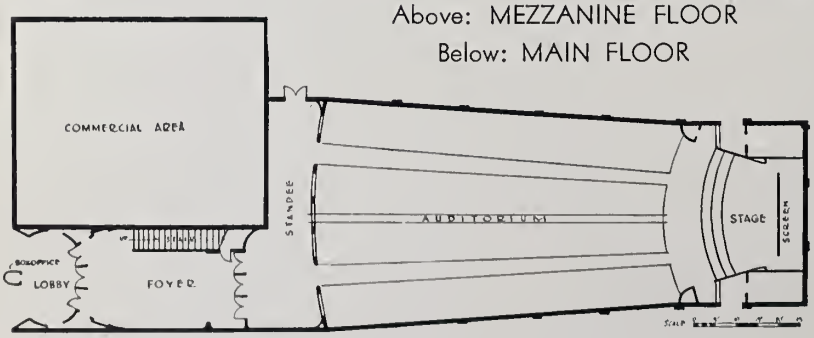
■ Looking into the cosmetic room forming a small anteroom leading into a toilet room. The general treatment is similar to that of the mezzanine lounge shown below, but with right wall mirrored over shelves and lighted with white fluorescent lamps.



■ The commercial value of the site advised inclusion of shops, so an irregular plan was adopted, placing the theatre entrance at one side, near a corner. The vestibule, pictured above, has walls of green and vermilion glazed tile forming a stripe pattern, while the ticket booth base is corrugated metal painted pale green. The terrazzo floor, green with vermilion stripes, and vermilion squares to accent the ticket booth, is carried to the curb.



■ The main foyer (above) has plastered walls and ceiling, and natural birch woodwork, including stair rail. Walls are painted grayish-green, the ceiling off-white. Illumination is by neon in transverse recesses covered with diffusing glass. Note also spotlight-type lamps trained on candy display. Carpeting throughout the theatre is Wilton in a traditional plume pattern in gold on red ground. On the wall opposite the staircase is a large mirror, beneath which is a built-in seat upholstered in rust Fabrikoid. . . . At right is the mezzanine foyer. Lighting is by filament lamp ceiling fixtures. Walls beige-pink, ceiling off-white.



FLOOR PLANS

Below: MAIN FLOOR

■ The auditorium is finished at both walls and ceiling in acoustic plaster. The ceiling is merely tinted (preserving full efficiency of acoustic plaster) in a pale pink; the walls carry an over-all design in a modernistically stylized representation of waves in tones of green interspersed with yellow. Extending to the ceiling, the proscenium opening is flanked by hard plaster walls in gray-green, the outer edges of which are notched in a design formation, but for the functional purpose of providing on each side for public address system speakers, and air outlets, immediately behind which is located a Govenaire unit conditioner serving the auditorium. The screen curtain is gold plush. . . . The main floor of the Village has approximately 700 seats. The balcony adds about 200 more. On the main floor, the middle bank is arranged in a stagger plan, with 30-inch chairs at alternate row ends. The chairs, by International, have backs upholstered in rust mohair, seats in red leatherette. . . . Lighting of the auditorium is entirely by a ceiling cornice cove with filament lamps on a dimmer circuit. The standee area is separated from the auditorium by a partition having openings fitted with Venetian blinds. The standee area has acoustic plaster walls and ceiling, the walls painted rose-tan, the ceiling beige. Standee lighting is by ceiling fixtures like those in mezzanine lounge. . . . The air-conditioning equipment of the Village includes a third Govenaire unit on the mezzanine level, serving that floor. The Gateway employs the same air-conditioning methods as the Village, confined, however, to the auditorium.

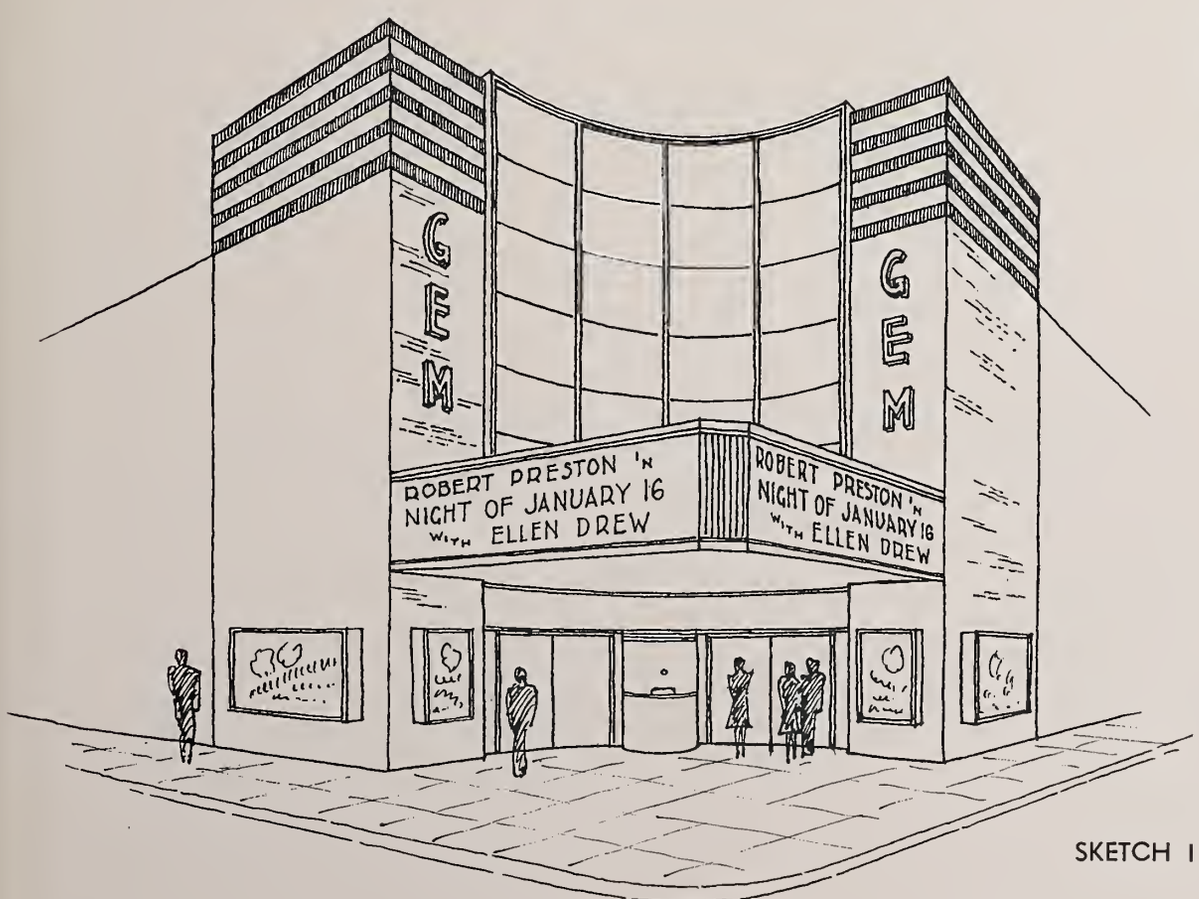
SCHEMES FOR FRONTS THAT AVOID USE OF DEFENSE MATERIALS

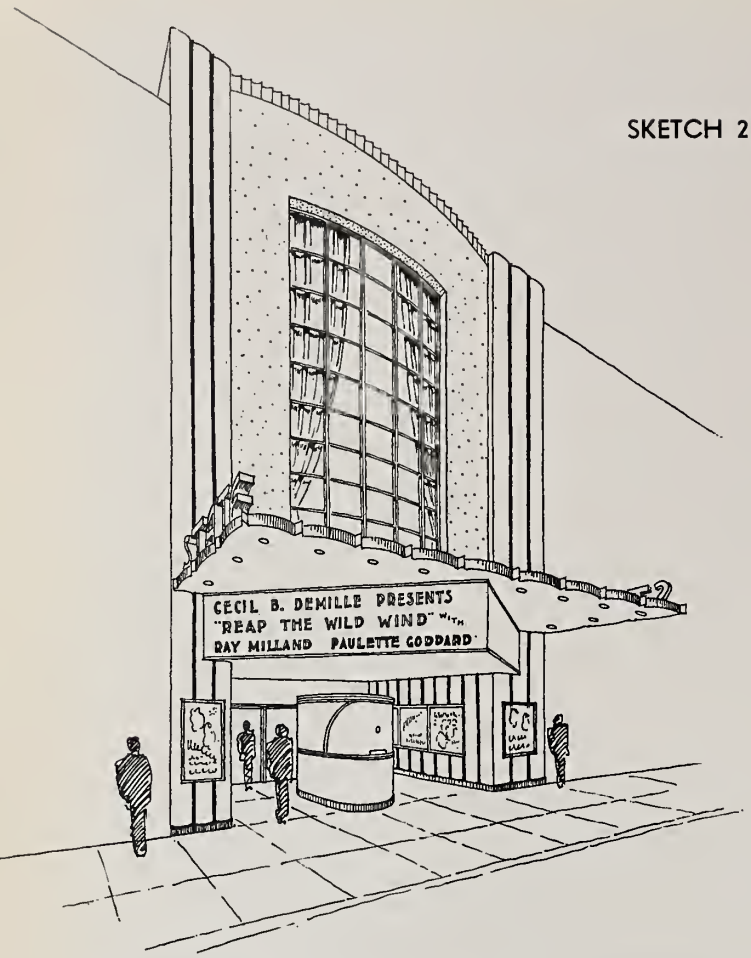
CHARLES C. BURTON
Architect & Engineer, Paramount Theatres Service Corporation



THE national defense program has already cut substantially into the supply of materials available for non-defense construction, under which classification theatres are included, at least tentatively. There is no denying the restrictions thus placed upon the designer and the theatre operator. So long, however, as the national policy is not one of comprehensive, arbitrary prohibition of theatre building, whether it be new or modernization work, much can be done by reducing severely the use of materials which Priorities have made unavailable except by special dispensation, and by employing substitutes. Then, of course, there are many materials which are not needed in defense production.

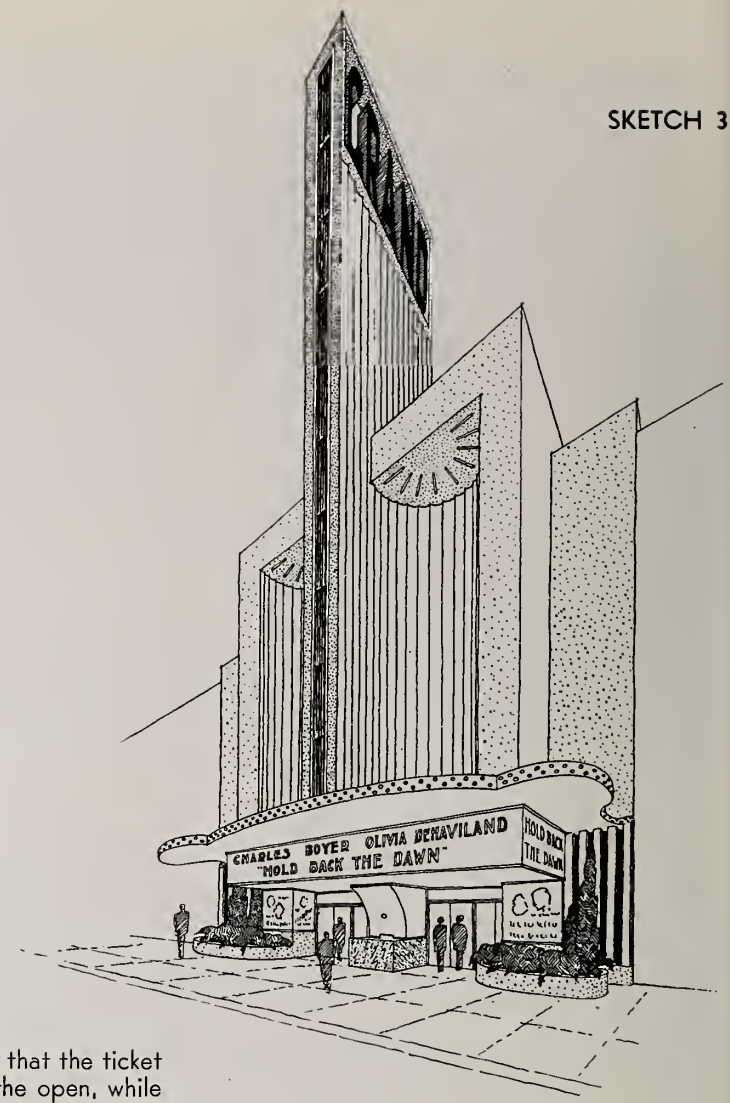
The substitutes can be found among old materials which have been somewhat superseded by newer ones in modern practice, and also among the new materials themselves. The designer, by applying a liberal dosage of ingenuity, can still put plenty of sparkle in a theatre.

Some new materials have recently been brought to the attention of the author which have a great deal of merit in the revamping of theatre fronts. Their introduction, however, is not always easy because the prospective user's experience with extravagant claims in the past has made him cautious. One avenue of assistance in this connection is the standard material specifications. The American Society for Testing Materials, for example, has initiated a scheme for speeding approval of new specifications and are making temporary emergency revisions of existing standards. The Federal Government also is permitting the use of National Emergency Specifications in place of many of its established standards. If a new material can be admitted on authoritative specification, it is usually widely acceptable.



One accepted material that is plentiful is applied in Sketch 3. It is known as Pyro-Stop Golden West stone. Pyro-Stop aggregate consists of several carefully selected grades of Volcanic Scoria quarried in Napa Valley, California, blended in predetermined proportions for use in plaster or stucco, or the manufacture of concrete blocks and artificial stone. By test this cast stone is acid proof and does not disintegrate in salt air. It is light in weight and fireproof and can substantially resist water absorption.

Pyro-Stop plaster can be applied on all types of backings such as wood lath, metal lath, brick, concrete or other materials normally used as plaster or stucco backings. This material can also be used on interiors of theatres; it offers effective insulation in extreme temperatures, and some acoustical properties.



SKETCH 1

Sketch 1—This indicates a theatre on a corner. The entire theatre, with the exception of the central panel, is built of brick in a beige color and striped with a dark colored brick. The central panel is built of flexiglass.

Sketch 2—This portrays a theatre front with a reinforced concrete canopy under which is placed an attraction board. The two pilasters flanking the center motif of glass constructed of porcelain enamel. It is noted that porcelain enamel carries into the first set of doors. The center motif of the facade is constructed of stucco. It is suggested that the stucco have an integral color. In this particular theatre, the upper part of the mezzanine contains a large lounge, thus accounting for the huge window.

Sketch 3—In this design the marquee is constructed of reinforced concrete, the edges of which are studded with Climax reflectors of various colors. The entire front and huge upright sign is constructed of Pyro-Stop Golden West stone. A glass panel along the front edge of the sign structure is translucent glass (blocks or sheets), behind which is placed fluorescent lighting. Fluorescent lighting is also installed at the top of the curved front portion. It is recommended that the base of the box office be constructed of translucent glass or alabaster marble, behind which is placed fluorescent lighting of selected colors. The planting bends in the front are of reinforced concrete and tend to offer depth to the front. The top portion of the box office is constructed of curved glass, which gives the illusion that the ticket seller is sitting out in the open, while actually she is inside.

Sketch 4—This design is indicated for a city of at least 25,000 population. The entire facade is built of reinforced concrete. The squares shown on the front are of flexiglass. The huge display area may be used to advantage for exploitation.

WAGNER SLOTTED CHANGEABLE

PLASTIC LETTERS

. . . when ILLUMINATED they have the BRILLIANCY of NEON

Wagner's PLASTIC LETTERS are a sensational success in marquee displays. Nothing like them has ever before been available. Made in 5 colors: Opaque Black, Translucent Red, Green, Blue and Amber. The color goes all the way through—not merely a surface color to chip or scale. The translucent colors are so brilliant that when set against an illuminated background they have the brilliancy of Neon—yet the color is dense enough to form a clear silhouette. The translucent color letters can be flashed their own color and then as a black silhouette by using a complementary color in Neon steady burning in background, and flashing incandescent lamps on and off.

SKETCH 5

Sketch 5—The entire front in this design could be constructed for finishing in stucco. The stucco could be in a tint, contrasting in tone with the floral design ornamenting the curving, ribbed center section. The floral piece could be cut out of sheet metal of approximately 20 gauge, painted, and preferably outlined in neon, or lighted with a color wheel from the roof of the marquee. With a white or pastel treatment of the stucco facade, this design could be given further interest by use of the new plastic attraction board letters, which are available in a number of colors. These could be used against a white attraction panel, or one so equipped with both white filament lamps on flasher or dimmer, and fluorescent lamps in a shade that is the complementary color of the color of the letters, so as to have, alternately, colored letters against a white panel, and black letters against a colored panel.

Sketch 6—The greater portion of the front indicated in this drawing could be built up of stucco with a cast stone or colored marble base. Because of the absence of prominent marquee, and the architectural separation of the attraction boards from the developed areas of this front, this design also especially suggests the use of colored, translucent attraction letters. The name of the theatre could be readily made of stucco or sheet metal. The square area containing the clock might be finished in porcelain enamel (very little is required here), or of structural glass, such as Carrara and Vitrolite. Incidentally, note biased shielding of displays, ticket window, etc.—this lends some novelty to the scheme, but also reduces interfering light.

The Effect of Priorities On '42 Theatre Cooling

Adjustments indicated by the defense program

By CARL F. BOESTER

AT THE PRESENT time there seems to be about as much misinformation as correct and useful information on where the theatre owner stands with respect to the installation of complete new air-conditioning systems in existing or new theatres. There is also quite a bit of confusion as to repairs or improvements to existing air conditioning installations.

Some equipment manufacturers and installation contractors appear to feel that there won't be much commercial air-conditioning done, and that since theatres fall in the group of commercial air-conditioning classes, such as restaurants, stores, shops, small offices and the like, that there will be relatively little activity in the field of theatre air-conditioning. This, to the writer's way of thinking, is far from the actual facts—and more particularly, far from what they can be.

Manufacturers of air-conditioning equipment are still planning to do as much, if not more, business than ever, if we may judge from their sales and advertising effort. There is every reason to believe that those who need air-conditioning equipment for the coming year will be able to get it—*provided that they do two things*s One is that, here and now, they make plans to put in equipment to cover their air-conditioning requirements; and that instead of relying on the engineering made available "free" by contractors who bid on installations, the services of competent consulting engineers be employed to design the installation to fit specific needs, rather than permitting equipment to be adapted to the job. There is a tremendous difference in both first and operating cost between an engineered job and an adapted one.

CARL F. BOESTER

Air-conditioning, like building a house, requires an expert, and many people feel that when building a house they can save money by dispensing with the services of a competent architect. There never was, and probably never will be, a good house erected without the services of someone trained in the design of such a house. This is true in the field of air-conditioning. Many theatre operators have had the sad experience of accepting a contractor's "engineering," only to find out that they had an excessively high operating and maintenance cost!

SAVINGS FROM DESIGN

In order to meet the cost of engineering, the contractor's engineering department may leave out important control or service valves, or in other ways cut corners. The net result is that the first time a breakdown occurs or service is required, the refrigerant charges are lost as a result of the lack of valves to isolate properly that section of the system which is defective.

We could go on indefinitely enumerating expenses directly chargeable to the lack of good engineering, or the unwillingness of the purchaser of air-conditioning equipment to avail himself of good engineering advice. The competent engineer is an expert trained with one purpose in mind—to provide the most efficient air-conditioning system at the lowest possible first and operating cost. You certainly wouldn't permit your usher to tinker with your projection equipment; why should you allow an installation mechanic to design your air-conditioning system. The top flight air-conditioning engineer knows what pieces of equipment or combinations of equipment can produce the best results for you, and if you start early to avail yourself of his services he can always guarantee you the greatest performance at the least cost, even including his fee.

MEETING PRIORITY SITUATION

Priorities don't necessarily mean that you can't get equipment; it simply means that you can't get equipment as promptly as you used to be able to get it.

Most theatre air-conditioning installations, the records show, have been contracted for in April and May, with operation expected on July 1st. To the operator who expects to do things on that basis, it is safe to advise him that he won't have air-conditioning in his theatre in 1942. He had better place orders for his requirements this year, or the first month or so of next year at the latest, if he expects it in 1942.

Many new practices have been developed, particularly in the last few months, as a result of needs for substitution, and it is always the consulting or designing engineer who gets this information first, or who is responsible in many cases, for the development of such application and engineering improvement.

We have a new factor in the cost of air-conditioning equipment, besides that of increased cost for the various pieces of equipment that comprise a complete system, and that is a 10% tax on all of these parts. So with increased costs for air-conditioning systems, as much as 25% or 30% on the various pieces of equipment, ways and means must be worked out to get greater efficiency from less equipment, and the only way we know to do that is to employ an engineer trained in that particular endeavor. It is certainly reasonably safe to state that a well engineered air-conditioning installation can reflect enough economies to offset the increased equipment cost; so that your cost per seat for air-conditioning ought to be no greater than in '42 than it would have been in '40 and '41.

Incidentally, the installation of air-conditioning equipment, under certain conditions, permits the deduction of the cost of such equipment when computing your income tax return. Undoubtedly, the expert who makes out your income tax return can point out to you that in most cases money that normally would go to pay taxes can be invested in plant improvement. Which would you rather do—pay it out in taxes, or give your customers greater comfort?

CURRENT POSSIBILITIES

Certain shortages in materials, as before mentioned, will cause fundamental changes in engineering practices. There is a terrific dearth of refrigerants, particularly Freon, and these will probably become increasingly difficult to get. Refrigeration systems employing direct expansion and large quantities of refrigerant as a result of this application, can be changed to those employing water as the refrigerant, and be so redesigned as to chill this water with a minimum of refrigerant and equipment, with cold water being circulated to do the refrigerating job.

WASHERS AND CONDITIONERS

Undoubtedly this situation will spur the improvement of washed air installations in those parts of the country where weather conditions are such as to make this method adequately effective for cooling. Well water and ice-actuated installations probably will also come more and more into use. In the case of refrigeration installations, undoubtedly the principle of storage refrigeration will play a much greater part in the field of theatre air-conditioning in the coming year. With this method smaller machines running a greater number of hours per day can produce refrigeration in storage units to supply the refrigeration needs during the operating periods.

There have been some tremendously worthwhile improvements in the field of storage refrigeration, and in this connection the exhibitor should bear in mind the advances made in the design of self-contained units, which may be put in in multiples to handle any size of load. This equipment can substantially reduce installation costs, and thereby make remarkable contributions to reduced over-all costs.

NEED OF PROMPTNESS

There is naturally a shortage of skilled mechanics in the installation of refrigeration equipment, and during the spring months many of these experts will be busy putting existing equipment in shape for the summer months. Right now, however, and during the winter months these men are not as busy as they will be in the spring, therefore the installation work can be done during regular hours, and paying for overtime is not so likely to be necessary.

The shortage of galvanized iron for duct work has brought to the fore many substitutions in the way of ducts fabricated out of lath and plaster, and of various types of fireproof wallboards. The practice of using smaller quantities of air at greater temperatures makes possible smaller duct size, but at the same time calls for much more careful engineering to insure even and draftless air distribution. The improvement of the newer grilles and outlets permits the use of smaller quantities of air per ton of refrigeration, such air being introduced at greater temperature differences.

To those operators who are confronted with the problem of maintaining and repairing existing equipment, a firm word of warning should be given—that if you wait until March, April, or May to put your systems in operating shape, you will definitely be behind the eight-ball. It will certainly be a safe prediction that you will not be able to get your equipment tuned up and brought up to highest operating efficiency if you wait. Now is the time to do it.

DEVELOPMENTS IN EQUIPMENT

Descriptive reports of air-conditioning, ventilating and heating products and comment on their application

HUMIDITY REDUCTION BY CHEMICAL MEANS

FOR THOSE theatre men who are unable to get refrigeration equipment for the coming year for air-conditioning, the following information may be of particular value. It would also be worthwhile for those whose air-conditioning capacity is a little bit short, and who had planned adding equipment but are unable to do so readily because of priorities.

We all know that a refrigeration system does two things: One is that it cools the air; the other is that it dehumidifies, or condenses out, the excessive moisture in the air. The Surface Combustion Corporation of Toledo, Ohio, has just published a bulletin describing their new Kathabar dehumidifying unit, which accomplishes the function of dehumidifying by passing the air through a spray of a chemical solution that has a terriffic affinity for moisture. The air leaves this equipment extraordinarily dry. The air then only has to be cooled just a little in order to reduce the water content (humidity) of the air.

The little cooling that is required can be accomplished by passing well water or cooling tower water through the coils, since only the sensible heat need be accounted for, and lowering of the sensible heat is always the smaller portion of the complete air-conditioning load.

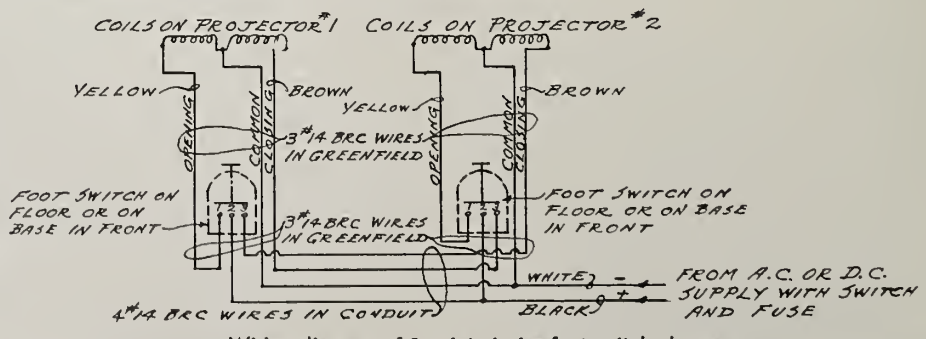
Making Changeovers Certain and Smooth

IT IS WITH something of a shock that a person connected with the motion picture theatre business occasionally runs into the notions held by the public concerning projection and sound reproduction. One of the things the public cannot understand is how a complete show can be put on the screen without stopping for changing of the reels. Some patrons are under the impression that one large reel is used, and when it is explained that several reels are used alternately on two projectors with switches for changing from one to the other, they appear amazed by the simplicity of the method. However, even though the method of projector changeover appears simple and easy in operation, there are many items that must not be overlooked or neglected in the installation or maintenance of changeover equipment.



In the first place, there are several different types of electric automatic shutter changeover controls. Some have foot switches mounted at or near the front of each projector base, others have hand-operated switches that mount at the rear of each mechanism. They all require proper wiring circuits and methods of installation; however, since the foot switch type involves an especially exacting procedure, and because it is used in so many standard changeover theatres, this discussion will confine itself to this one.

WIRING PRECAUTIONS

When the installation is in progress there always seems to be a question as to how many wires should be run, where the conduit outlets should terminate, and what type of wiring should be employed between the foot switch and the changeover coils on the projector mechanism. In every case the electrician on the job should know what type of changeover device is intended for installation and if it is to operate on a.c. or d.c. supply, and on what voltage. Where this information cannot be had at the time of pulling the wires, at least four No. 14BRC wires should be run in the conduit between No. 1 projector and No. 2, leaving these wires coiled up about 24 inches at each end. In this way provision will be made to accommodate any of the standard changeovers, as in many cases it is found at the last minute that the foot switch requires four wires instead of the three installed. This means pulling in an extra wire, which involves a lot of extra work, and loss of time.

Wiring diagram of 6-point, 3-wire foot switch changeover.

Wiring diagram of 3-point, 4-wire foot switch changeover.

An item that should not be overlooked is pulling the conduit wires that are color coded. That is, each wire should be of a different color so that it may be identified at all times. In this way there will be less likelihood of a mistake in the hookup; also, the colors are convenient in checking the circuits in case trouble should develop later on.

In laying out the conduit and wiring circuit for the changeover, the "run" should be from either an a. c. or d. c. panel, as called for the type of changeover device, having a proper cutout switch and fuse for instant control and protection. The changeover circuit should never be tapped off a motor feed circuit, for then in case of trouble, both the changeover and the motor will be "dead." This changeover "run" should end at the front of the projector base, toward the operating side.

CONDUIT OUTLET LOCATION

Extreme care should be taken that the exact location is determined where the conduit turns up from the floor, as the type of projector base and angle of projection will tend to vary this location. In the latest types of totally-enclosed projector base, this changeover conduit should terminate inside and to the front, with Greenfield-armored cable run through a tapped hole in the base to where the changeover foot switch is located. In most cases the foot switch is fastened directly to the lip of an enclosed base; on three-or five-point bases, to the right front leg. What must be kept in mind is to make this foot switch as convenient as possible for the projectionist to operate. A good idea is for the projectionist to establish this exact location for mounting the foot switch, as he is the one who will work it and he knows the best place for quick and easy manipulation.

One should be sure that the foot switch is fastened rigidly, and at the proper angle, either on the base or on the floor, to receive the heavy impact of the foot, otherwise the switch will work loose from the wires, causing a short, or bending the switch blades so as to cause arcing, which will shorten the life of the device. A special bracket can be obtained with the foot switch for making a rigid fastening to either the base or to the floor; or an iron bracket can be made.

From the foot switch, the three No. 14BRC wires should be in Greenfield cable

A.B.C. = G-E

(Embassy Theatre, Atlantic City. Joseph H. Josephson, contractor for marquee; M. B. Markland, contractor for building.)

WHEN you get down to the A.B.C.'s of the theatre business . . . when you start thinking about rock-bottom fundamentals . . . you realize that the show you're putting on inside your theatre actually begins out front—right on the sidewalk.

And that's why A.B.C. equals G-E . . . because General Electric's breathtaking beautiful new fluorescent lighting puts on a smash-hit show out front that irresistibly draws patrons past your box-office into the theatre!

The Embassy Theatre in Atlantic City is a practical application of this fundamental principle, worked out through the use of General Electric fluorescent lamps. G-E MAZDA F lamps are used throughout . . . in attraction letter panel, marquee soffit, glass columns and ticket booth . . . a total of 120 40-watt, 16 30-watt and 29 20-watt G-E MAZDA F lamps. Here's lighting that steps ahead of competition . . . not only the competition of other theatres but also the competition of other businesses competing for the consumer's dollar. in the "run" to the changeover coils or the projector head, and never in three conductor BX; most local electrical codes will not grant approval of the latter. At the present time there are three well known foot-switch changeover devices on the market. One is a three-wire, six-point changeover using only three wires throughout for two, three or more projectors. It is used in combination with an automatic shutter control actuated by an opening and closing coil in a totally enclosed housing mounted on the left rear projector head cover.

In fastening the coil assembly the two screws on the projector back cover should be removed, and the two screws supplied with the changeover should be used for mounting the bracket to the head by means of the two holes. Also with this changeover coil assembly, an extension for the focusing stud is supplied in order to clear the mounting bracket.

Wiring diagram of 4-point, 4-wire special foot switch changeover.

FOOT SWITCH HOOKUP

In hooking up the foot switches, all terminal posts marked No. 1 inside the switch should be connected together by one wire from foot switch to foot switch. The black, or positive, wire should always connect to terminal post No. 2 inside the switch. The brown wire to the closing coil should connect to terminal No. 4; and the yellow wire, to the opening coil, to terminal No. 5 inside the switch. The common return, or center white wire, from the changeover coils, should always be connected to terminal post No. 6 inside the switch. This procedure should be followed when installing and when in checking for cause of trouble.

Another foot switch changeover device is a three-point, four-wire type for two projector installation and is also used with the standard automatic shutter control in combination, the same as with the six-point, three-wire system. In installing the wiring for this type of foot switch, the yellow wire to the opening coil should be connected to terminal post No. 1 inside the switch, and the black, or positive, wire to terminal post No. 2, which connects together with post No. 2 on the other switch. The brown wire to the closing coil should connect to terminal post No. 3 inside the switches, and the white, or negative, wire should run straight through and connect together the common return, or center lead, from the changeover coils.

The third type of changeover is a four-point, four-wire system using only three points in each switch for a two projector installation. The yellow wire to the opening coil should connect to terminal post No. 2 inside the switch. The black, or positive, wire should be connected together to terminal post No. 3 in both switches, and the white, or negative, wire should run straight through and be connected together to the common, or center lead, from the changeover coils. The brown wire to the closing coils should be connected to terminal post No. 4 inside of each foot switch. It is to be noted that the color of the wires is taken arbitrarily and can be changed as desired, but the sequence in installation should be followed.

CHECKING TROUBLE CAUSE

In case of trouble in the changeover, extreme care should be taken that the source of trouble is checked carefully before attempting to take apart the foot switch or changeover coil assembly. Many times it is found that only a fuse has blown out, or a terminal post is loose, or the plunger on the device is holding fast. A lot of harm can be done by haphazardly twisting or forcing apart the plunger blade contacts, as they are set exactly at the factory and it is rarely that they give any trouble in normal operation. However, once they are knocked out of alignment by tinkering, trouble is bound to result.

Another very important matter consists in the little screws that hold the changeover coil assembly together. These screws are of a certain size and length made especially for the cover plates; in case the coil assembly is taken apart and these screws are lost, screws of the same size should be ordered from the dealer rather than to drive in place any old screw that may be handy. What happens is that when these odd-sized screws are driven in tight, the end punctures, or just barely touches, the coil windings and causes a short, which will require installation of a new coil.

It is true that present-day changeovers permit the simplest installation both in mounting and wiring, and provide for smoothness in operation and easy replacement of parts; nevertheless, they are sensitive devices and to enjoy their advantages fully, one must be sure that they are installed and maintained precisely according to their operating characteristics.

¶ Reducing Light Bills

THE LIGHTING of a theatre, on the interior as well as the exterior, runs into a heap of money in a year's time. But if the lighting schemes and methods are the best possible according to the latest improvements in illumination, it is money well spent, for light is truly "a first tool of showmanship."

Every progressive and successful business man, be he a theatre man, small store owner or large manufacturer, is interested in practices which eliminate or at least reduce waste, and in no other field are matters of economical operation and maintenance more exacting than in the theatre business. Illumination is one of the major items on the cost sheet.

We all know that electricity must be paid for either by the demand or peak load method of calculation, and established rates. In other words, charges must be paid on the current available at the theatre, whether it is used one hour per month, or 24 hours per day for 30 days per month, together with a certain charge for the amount used. These extra charges, besides the cost of current used, are known as demand or meter charges and are figured at so much per kilowatt on the peak usage reached at any one time during the month. That is to say, for example, if the theatre lighting is wired for 10,000 watts, a demand is created of 10 kilowatts. Now, if this maximum load is used for just one hour a month, that demand of 10 kilowatts has been created on which there will be a monthly charge of so much per kilowatt. This charge is made because the electricity is there to be used at any time at the full capacity of the lighting system.

"DEMAND" AND "PEAK LOAD"

This charge is in addition to the actual cost of electricity used. Let's say, the lamps in the lighting system were used only 5 hours during the entire month, and used 50 kilowatts at a charge of 3 cents per kilowatt, the cost of the current used would be $1.50. But to this would be added the demand load charge, since a demand of 10 kilowatts was created when these lamps were turned on. Now if these same lamps were used 10 hours a day, 30 days a month, that would be 100 kilowatts per day, or 3,000 kilowatts per month, and at 3 cents per kilowatt, the cost would be $90 per month for the electricity used. And to this would still be added the demand load charge at so much per month.

Another way that the theatre exhibitor pays for electricity is by the increase in the cost of current throughout a certain first bracket, or a specified minimum of kilowatts used per month. This cost is based on the peak load used the previous month, or so much per ampere, or horsepower, or wattage needed for use. However, regardless what the rate is, whether 1c or 10c, the established demand rate must be paid at fixed charges. For example, let's say a theatre has four hundred 25-watt lamps, which means that each lamp will burn 25 watts per hour of illumination. As a result, 10,000 watts must be available at all times in order to use these 400 lamps, and for this a demand load charge must be paid. If 1,000 watts are available on the lighting service, a fixed demand load is made which runs in some localities at about $2 per kilowatt. In this case, $20 would have to be paid, in addition to the charge for the amount of current actually used by the lamps.

The cost of "juice" thus accounts for the lion's share of illumination expense. One problem is how to reduce the demand charge; another, how to reduce current consumption. It is not practicable to do either, however, if thus to save money would mean less effective illumination, for the theatre lives on light. A number of sound methods are available; this comment on the problem has been prompted, however, by examination of installations of a certain type of lighting unit which efficiently applies small-wattage lamps.

HOW SAVINGS ARE EFFECTED

The unit obtains its efficiency by employing an aluminum reflector and diffusing glass roundel. Reflectors of this type have been applied to marquee and sign lighting, as well as interior cove illumination, at a number of theatres. In one installation examined by the writer, they were used to replace 4,000 exposed filament lamps. The original lamps were 25-watt, which consumed 100,000 watts, or 100 kilowatts per hour, creating a demand load of 100 kilowatts at $2 per kilowatt per month, for a total of $200 per month. By installing Climax reflectors with natural color glass roundels and lamped with 7- and 10-watt bulbs, throughout the exterior and interior, the above volume was reduced to about 40,000 watts, or 40 kilowatts. This meant that a saving of 60,000 watts, or 60KW, was made, as well as a saving on demand load charges of $120.

A 3-watt or 7-watt blue (depending on the size and type of roundel) equipped with a multifacet or diffusing lens, creates a beautiful effect in arches, coves, and luminaire fixtures which ordinarily would require the use of standard 40-watt filament lamps. This holds true for the red and orange bulbs, but where a blending of colors is desired, such as red and blue to make a purple effect, a 3-watt red should be used with a 7-watt blue to equalize the light output, as red is a color that has more light transmission value and must be used with a higher rated blue, which has a lower transmission characteristic. Yellows, greens and orange are the same, but care must be taken that the proper wattage and sizes are used to get a warm effect.

The outstanding characteristics of these reflectors are that they reduce the demand load charge, reduce the cost of current, and using less current, prolong the life of the flasher equipment. They also use lamps of longer rated life. Color is permanently in the glass, not painted on, so light transmission with color is relatively high, while cleaning does not impair the coloration and can be easily cleaned due to the smooth protective glass lens. The weatherproofed housing reduces the chances of lamp breakage due to weather conditions; the lower wattage is also a factor here.

Two marquee and sign lighting schemes using Climax reflectors to replace exposed lamps of larger wattage. The marquee borders and trim use 3-watt lamps, the signs 10-watt. The left-hand theatre is RKO's Colonial in New York, the other is the Paramount in Toledo.

These low-wattage reflectors can of course be used to special advantage in theatres having over-loaded lighting circuits and accompanying flasher troubles.

¶ Carpeting Mat Areas

WHEN PLANNING to install carpet in a lobby or foyer where rubber mats have been recessed in the floor, it is very important that certain precautions be taken before the actual laying. Usually these recesses are anywhere from ⅜-inches to ½-inch deep, with a cement or terrazzo border all around. In a case like this it is far better either to fill in these recesses with cement, or entirely remove the borders in order to have a perfectly level floor for the carpet and lining to lay on.

Let us assume that these recesses are filled in with ½-inch lining, then over this another layer of ½-inch lining is placed, continuing over the entire area of the room, with the carpet on top as a finished job. What happens is that in several months the lining in the recesses will pack solid, leaving the hard cement or terrazzo borders projecting slightly into the other lining and carpet. These sharp corners of the borders will tend to cut into the carpet under the impact of hundreds of tramping feet and leave wrinkles at these points, especially if the floor has an incline. Also on close inspection it will be found that in time a perfect outline of these areas can be seen in the carpet. Under such conditions, the carpet cannot have the long life expected of it.

Let's assume further that the rubber mats are left in place in these recesses, and over them and the terrazzo or cement border, first lining and then carpet is placed. Rubber mats will tend to deteriorate somewhat with age, especially if they have already seen hard usage, and have a tendency to absorb or retain moisture under them when no ventilation is provided. That is the reason why under solid corrugated mats moisture will always be found, while under perforated matting very little will be seen, as the holes permit movement of air to help dissipate this dampness. Any carpet having dampness under it will not wear as well as carpet with perfectly dry areas underneath.

Seams at the door saddles between the lobby and standee areas are bad since patrons have a habit of twisting their feet as they round the door jambs. If the floor is pitched, an added strain is imposed on the seams as the patrons dig in their heels. Where the door saddles are badly worn or loose, it is best to remove them entirely if the carpeting is to run straight through from the lobby to the standee area. Leaving old or loose door saddles under the carpet, and to avoid a "hump" by reducing or cutting the thickness of the lining underneath at these points, is very bad practice. The main purpose of the lining is to prolong the life of the carpet and to give softness under foot, and when the thickness of this lining is reduced it eliminates entirely these benefits. It is better to cut off a little of the bottom of the doors—or better still, remove the saddles.

EASY IMPROVEMENTS

A GENERAL check-up of your theatre may reveal many improvements which can be made at a nominal expenditure. The importance of these improvements in proportion to the cost of executing them is such as to make it tempting for any exhibitor to take advantage of them.

1. If you have black masking around the picture image any greater than 4 inches wide, it should be removed or covered so that only 4 inches of the black masking can be exposed. Such a change will improve the picture image considerably.

2. If you have a stage platform in front of a screen which has a surface light in color, or is a smooth and reflective surface, the stage platform should either be painted in a black mat diffusive finish, or be covered with a dark diffusive cloth.

3. Observe the walls and ceiling surrounding the screen and note if any particular portions of these surfaces produce highlights caused by light being reflected from the screen. These particular surfaces should be painted dark enough and with a paint diffusive enough to eliminate these highlights, since they are annoying to the patron while viewing the picture.

4. If you have a theatre in which there is a bank of seats centered on the center line of the screen, and if the sightlines from this center bank of seats are such as to cause obstruction of the view of the picture, arrange to have these seats staggered. These chairs can be reset from 40c to 50c apiece.

5. Lighting fixtures in the form of bracket or hanging luminaires along the side walls of the auditorium that are visible to the audience while viewing the picture, should either be removed or not be illuminated. These lights are a source of considerable annoyance to patrons. All lighting for the auditorium during a picture performance should be located on walls or rear wall so that they will not be in the range of direct vision.

6. If you have rattley Venetian blinds or dirt collecting drapes above the standee wall for the purpose of preventing street light or lobby illumination from showing on the picture, it would be a considerable improvement to eliminate these and consider a rearrangement of the lobby doors and street doors so as to introduce an architectural barrier or baffle.

RECENT OUT-FRONT PROMOTION

Above: The Lord Baltimore theatre, Baltimore, using Adler attraction advertising equipment, still gets plenty of white space on end panels despite small size, and adds an Adler panel over the entrance for coming attraction promotion. Left, the five line Adler panel of the Lansing theatre, Lansing, Mich., with emphasis balanced between two pictures by giving larger letters to second attraction.

An orderly, highly legible arrangement of copy, making effective use of Wagner 4-inch letters with 10-inch on a panel of medium height, is shown above on the Euclid theatre, Lucas & Jenkins house in Atlanta. The marquee and sign equipment installation was part of a complete new front treatment by Balton & Sons, Memphis, using porcelain enamel.

At left is pictured the use of billboard advertising at the corner of the theatre itself for coming attraction promotion, as on the 20th Century theatre in Cincinnati. Mounted on the side of the building, the board does not intrude upon front architecture, yet is visible up the street.

Getting Theatre Itself into Copy Is Growing Trend

By A-MIKE VOGEL

Chairman Managers' Round Table
Motion Picture Herald

WHEN MONEY is tight the theatregoer is apt to shop more for his entertainment.

In flush times, there is less emphasis in this direction.

The defense program and attendant expanding pay-rolls clearly are making these factors known more generally among theatremen. The appeal of individual pictures is variable. Entertainments of lesser worth are apt to follow strong attractions in the same theatre. The manager cannot honestly sell both features with the same vigor. He can somewhat equalize the audience value of both programs by a consistently aggressive advertising on behalf of other and more permanent appeals.

That these institutional factors are being depended upon for more dividends is indicated in the growing consciousness of exhibitors now tending to stress theatre as well as pictures in their regular advertising.

There are many ways of making capital of these permanent values. The Apex theatre in Washington, D. C., a unit of the K-B circuit managed by William Smith, and a neighorhood situation has been promoting of late its soundproof, glass-enclosed nursery, from which patrons with infant children are invited to view the performance without incurring any annoyance to other patrons.

Another "permanent-value" being promoted by Apex is the "Embassy Room," also sound-proofed and glass-enclosed, where smoking is permitted.

In Monroe, Mich., the Butterfield circuit's city manager, J. R. Denniston, devotes large space in his advertising to theatre service and equipment. Recent copy under the heading of "What Makes the Movies Move and the Talkies Talk?" emphasized the physical comfort of the theatre, detailing the high points of the ventilation, the sound, the screen, and other tangibles, noting that the circuit had invested in excess of a quarter million dollars in Monroe in theatre building and equipment to insure patrons the finest of entertainment and comfort.

These are but a few of the straws in the wind to show a growing trend in theatre public relations.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

The Various Types of Liens

By RUDOLPH ALLEN
Member New York Bar

IN these "tabloid" discussions of legal matters affecting theatre operation, effort is made to relate all points of law to practical theatre affairs as directly and concretely as possible. At this point, however, several aspects of law will have to be dealt with in a general way, in order to make certain following discussions perfectly clear. One of these general subjects is Liens.

The word "lien," derived from a Latin word meaning "to bind," is one occurring frequently in normal business relationships. It is often misapplied, however, and given improper interpretation. It is in reality nothing more than a legal claim or hold on property as security for a debt or charge.

There are two definite types of liens: possessory, meaning where tangible property is in the possession of a person; and non-possessory. where a lien may attach even though the property is not in the possession of the person seeking to execute this particular legal right.

In the non-possessory class, the most well known type of lien is classified as a mechanic's lien. The object and purpose of this type of lien is to protect a person who enhances the value of real property by furnishing materials or performing labor in its improvement with the owner's consent, by giving to such a person an interest in said real property to the extent of the value of the materials or labor furnished.

A person asserting a non-possessory lien must file with the County Clerk a statement showing in detail the nature of his contract, the amount of labor and materials furnished, and an affidavit to the effect that he has not been paid. The effect of filing such a document is to serve notice upon the entire world that there is now outstanding against this particular parcel of real estate a mechanic's lien, with the result that the building cannot be sold until the lien has first been satisfied. It can be readily seen that this type of lien creates great security for the mechanic or worker.

A second type of lien of the same classification, is a lien on vessels or ships.

The lien with which most people are familiar, and concerning which legal questions continually arise, is that type affecting persons who have in their possession property upon which they have either rendered services, improved the value thereof, or did something in connection therewith. In these cases, the courts and the Legislature have carried out the old legal adage, "Possession is nine-tenths of the law," and have given to such persons a lien or hold on the property.

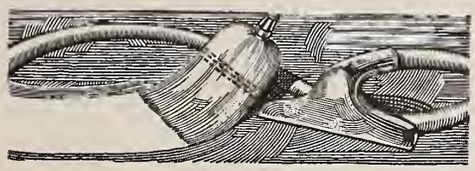
The law goes further than that, and provides that in the event that the claim, debt or charge upon which the lien is based should not be paid within a certain reasonable and specified time, then the lienor may, by following certain procedure, sell the property in his possession in order to satisfy his lien. The most outstanding examples of such types of liens are:

1. A film laboratory lien, which enables a laboratory which stores negative and positive films to keep such films until all repair and storage bills are paid.

2. A garage owner's lien. In this particular case, a restriction is placed upon the garage owner, who is not permitted to charge more than 30 days's storage in the event that he allows the car out of his possession.

3. An artisan lien. This is a situation where a person makes, alters, repairs or enhances the value of any article of personal property. There are, of course, various other types coming under the heading.

In addition there are two other types of liens neither of which properly come under the classifications discussed above:



1. Attorney's lien, which permits a lawyer to retain papers and records in his possession until his fee has been paid; and

2. A Hotel keeper's lien, which authorizes the retention of personal baggage until an account has been settled.

While Better Theatres cannot perform the service of legal counnsel, inquiries from readers are invited and will be answered as fully as permissible.

Good Housekeeping Methods Of a Neighborhood Circuit

¶ Detailing an outstanding demonstration of high standards

By SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

IT has always seemed to me that the capacities of those in charge of theatre management are constantly reflected in the maintenance of the theatre property itself. Business-like management will recognize, in the first place, that the most effective protection against excessive deterioration of building, furnishings and equipment is methodical inspection, regular cleaning, polishing, etc., and prompt repair. There will also be alertness to the fact that it is good business to make the theatre inviting in appearance and to keep it free of conditions which repel people. Nor will it be overlooked that a theatre which shows that the management places real value on its appurtenances will be subjected less to the mutilations of the careless and the mischievous.

SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

I observe all sorts of theatre housekeeping policies—good, bad and indifferent. For a number of years I have been in an excellent position to note the good policy of an important circuit operating in Brooklyn and also on Long Island. It quickly became clear that this group of theatres was most pridefully and methodically maintained. It so happens that I pass one of the theatres in going to business and, having become aware that the porters were doing a certain cleaning job in the vestibule whenever I passed, I began to check the coincidence against the hour: Over a period of five months I found that I could set my watch by the performance of this particular vestibule job!

And so it has occurred to me that an inquiry into the methods of this circuit—the Century, which operates 35 theatres—and of the reasons for and results of those methods, might well make an interesting contribution to these columns. Accordingly, I have interviewed Mr. Leonard Satz, the man who is in charge of maintenance and purchasing for all of the Century houses, which include both first-run and second-run situations. His job includes all aspects of maintenance, of course, not merely cleaning and sanitation; the methods applying to each department are correlated, so that to deal with Century maintenance policy means discussing it in its general application. In doing this, I am going to let Mr. Satz speak directly, with only a few questions (in italics) interposed by me as he goes along.

In response to my inquiry as to why the Century circuit insists upon such high standards of cleanliness in every theatre, regardless of differences in price and clientele, Mr. Satz replied:

We feel that high maintenance standards help the box office. What constitutes "good maintenance" is not something you can put your finger on when a patron walks into a theatre. So far as the patron is concerned, what we theatre people call maintenance is "atmosphere." It is simply this: People much prefer going into a place that is bright, clean, pleasing to the senses.

Our methods of maintenance are standardized. A general scheme operates throughout the circuit, with certain differences in actual routine to meet differences in operating hours, equipment, etc., between the various theatres.

The cleaning schedule for each theatre is made at circuit headquarters. Each theatre, however, makes changes in accordance with its needs.

Standardization includes materials and implements for cleaning, polishing, sanitation and so on. We make practical tests of a product under the conditions presented by the entire group of theatres, and finally select one suited to all houses, then standardize on it, buying in quantities compatible with our needs that earn the best possible price. And in seeking a product on which to standardize, we do not look for miracles. There are no magic cleaners. Cleaning usually means plenty of good old elbow grease, no matter what soaps, powders, etc., you use. As for chemicals in general, I personally feel that the only ones really needed in a theatre are gum removers and one good compound for prevention of corrosion and odors in urinals.

In the finishing of toilet rooms, we prefer tile or terrazzo floors, and tile walls. And the tile walls are built up to 6 feet from the floor, so that the plaster walls above are too high for youngsters to write on. Plastered portions of the room are painted with flat or semi-gloss paint. Glossy finish not only shows imperfections and irregularities of surface, but it does not have a "finished" look.

Do you have a regular system for the inspection of equipment?

We most certainly do. Motor-generators, blower motors and pumps are inspected regularly. A competent electrical contractor inspects all generators. I think that with respect to such equipment our record is quite remarkable. For example, we have never had, to my knowledge, a major generator breakdown. Not a single generator has had to be removed for repair. For projection emergencies, we have 20 spare mechanisms distributed among a number of theatres so spaced geographically that in case of a breakdown or removal for repair every theatre can get one or two of the spares immediately.

Do you require projectionists to make written reports on condition of equipment or of film?

No, for I don't believe such reports are faithfully made out. What we do is this: Each month a lubrication inspection chart is handed to each theatre. This chart lists every motor and part needing lubrication in the particular theatre to which it is sent. It is the duty of the house electrician or maintenance man, as the case may be, to place a check after each motor after he has inspected it, oiled it and made any repairs. Both he and the manager of the house sign the chart, and if there is any burn-out later, due to lack of lubrication, they are held jointly responsible.

Our carbon inventory is monthly. The carbon burning rate has been figured out for each theatre, and when consumption, as shown in the inventory report, runs high, the equipment is inspected.

What we regard as a very important item in our maintenance system is a fuse bulletin. Often a lot of time is wasted in a theatre when a fuse blows out, waiting for an electrician to come and find it. In each theatre we have cards posted, showing the location of all main fuses; one of these is in the manager's office, another in the projection room, and another either backstage or in the meter room.

What is your procedure on repair of auditorium chairs?

We employ experts who do nothing but repair seats and carpeting. They go from theatre to theatre constantly. Whenever a tear is found, the entire seat or back, as the case may be, is recovered. We do not believe in patches. The upholsterer makes other repairs and attends to squeaks.

Carpeting is of course cleaned daily by the house staff. For our vacuum equipment we insist upon from 2¾ to 3 inches of vacuum. Floors beneath the seating in all of our theatres are painted. We do not think unpainted concrete beneath the seating looks well; also, unpainted concrete is harder to clean. Floors beneath seating are mopped at least once a month, first with water and mopping powder, then with clear water.

You have told of your inspection of certain items. You have a general inspection?

Yet, twice a year. This covers everything in the theatre, and the building itself, from basement to roof. I do this with an assistant, and we take with us the head of the construction company that does our work, and also an engineer. Some reconditioning is done at regular intervals regardless of inspection findings. For example, the marquee is repainted each year, preferably in the spring. The marquee soffit is also painted, and inside of the attraction board frame so as to keep reflection of light as high as possible.

From time to time alterations of a rather general nature are made. One of the first things we consider in such jobs is how to improve the men's and women's lounge and toilet rooms. Such facilities are extremely important in "selling the theatre" and keeping it "sold." We do not believe it a good policy to be niggardly about supplying soap, paper towels, convenient receptacles, etc. Before Saturday matinees in some theatres we may reduce the amount of paper towels, for example, but the dispensers are replenished at the end of the afternoon.

Most of our theatres provide paper cups for drinking water. About a quarter of them also have bubblers. We use penny dispensers for the cups, and this has proved a worthwhile source of income, at least enough to pay for the service, in some houses more.

Do you feel that your housekeeping standards and prompt repairs really represent economy in the long run?

That depends on what the money is spent. After all, you must expect operation to cost money; you expect to get it back, with dividends, at the box office. A theatre must be attractive, and it costs money to keep it so. However, if you are referring to items of care and repair which might grow into more serious ones if allowed to go undone, then you can surely say that you actually save money by making regular inspections and prompt correction.

LLOYD HUTCHINS has leased for another year the Ozar Amusement Company theatres in seven Olahoma cities, from Mrs. GENE HIGGINBOTHAM.

The Palace Theatre in San Leandro, Calif., will be opened after remodeling by Golden Gate Theatres, Inc.

ROY MCMINN, exhibitor of Superior, Wis., has been elected vice preident of the Association of Commerce there.

The new 1000-seat Perakos-Quittner Eastwood Theatre in East Hartford, Conn. has opened with a full-week policy. NAT RUBIN, former assistant at the Poli theatre in New Haven, is the new manager.

RICHARD SHACHT has succeeded CARROL HANNAH as manager of the Lido theatre in Michigan City, Ind.

The Lodi Theatre in Lodi, Calif., recently severely damaged by fire, will be rebuilt.

A refreshment booth is among the improvements recently made at the Hoo-Hoo theatre in Gurdon, Ark.

The Riverside Theatre in Milwaukee has reopened after summer closing, with E. J. WEISFELD as manager.

The opening of the new Reeves theatre at Elkin, N. C., was attended by CY DILLON, manager of the Republic Exchange, and other Charlotte film notables. The house is operated by Dr. and Mrs. W. R. REEVES, who also operate the Elk theatre there.

PETE NICHOLAS, who managed the Rex theatre in Chicago, is the new manager of the Thalia theatre.

The new Camp theatre in Foster Falls, Va., has opened under the management of BYRON GOSH, who is planning two other theatres.

JOHN LOVERIDGE, who has operated theatres in New York, Chicago and Texas, has bought the Casino theatre in Des Moines, Ia., from ABE FRANLE.

The Liberty Theatre, Jonesboro, Ark., has been remodeled.

The 600-seat Starling theatre in Martinsville, Va., has been opened by F. W. CARPER, who now operates three of the five theatres there.

RICHARD GREENWOOD, president of Heywood-Wakefield Company, visited the Portland and Seattle branches of the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company, accompanied by PAUL POSSER.

HENRY SORK, operator of the Rio theatres in Reading and Schuylkill Haven, Pa., has purchased property for a new theatre in Schuylkill Haven.

EDDIE SKOLAK has reopened the President theatre in San Francisco.

The Arcade theatre at Gas City, Ind., operated by Mr. & Mrs. D. B. SIMPKINS, has reopened after closing for extensive remodeling.

FRANK MANENTE is the new assistant at the Glove theatre in Bridgeport, Conn. TONY MASELLA succeeds him as assistant at the Poli in New Haven.

SAM J. MOSER has succeeded LEONARD A. SCHELLING as owner of the Roxy theatre in St. Helena, Calif.

RAY MACCORMICK, formerly manager of the Forsythe theatre in East Chicago, Ind., is the new manager of the Vogue theatre there, succeeding RAY HELSON.

The Miner Amusement Company has renovated its Grand theatre in Chetek, Wis.

The Arkansas theatre in Little Rock, which has been closed for several years, will be remodeled for resumption of operation at a cost of approximately $25,000.

The Cosmo theatre in Chicago, part of the Warner circuit, has been reseated with 1,200 Ideal chairs in green leatherette and mohair.

The Capitol theatre in Philadelphia is being remodeled inside and out for reopening under the ownership of I. J. HOFFMAN, with BERNARD GORDON as manager.

G. CAREY and E. R. GILLETT have scheduled the opening of their new Stadium theatre at Caruthersville, Mo. for Thanksgiving Day. It has a seating capacity of 800.

RCA Photophone has contracted for comprehensive service to 79 theatres of the Comerford-Publix Theatres Corporation in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New York. CHARLES A. RYAN represented the Comerford theatres in the negotiations, and DAN HALPEN, W. L. JONES, and JOHN BETHELL, RCA.

The Joy theatre of Smackover, Ark. has been rebuilt and reopened after being damaged by fire.

HANS SMITH has rebuilt the burned Irving theatre in Irving, Tex., and is reopening it. It now has a seating capacity of 700, modern furnishings, and RCA Photophone sound.

The De Luxe theatre in Moline, Kans., has been taken over by Mrs. THEMA M. MORRIS.

The Linda theatre at Marysville, Calif., was recently destroyed by fire.

LEN S. and ROSALIE MARTIN BROWN have purchased the Mainstreet theatre in Racine, Wis., which they have operated for eight years.

HARRY NEPO's Kimbark theatre in Chicago is being modernized, with Kroehler push-back chairs, a Walker screen, Simplex projectors and extensive redecoration.

ROBB & ROWLEY plan to open a new theatre at Benton, Ark., with a seating capacity of 900.

AL WARSHAUER is directing the installation of new seats in the Paramount theatre in San Francisco.

The new Lake theatre has been opened at Winneconne, Wis., under the operation of VINCENT BROS. of De Pere.

TED AUSTERLADE, owner of the Era theatre in Harvey, Ill., has taken over the Harmony theatre in Chicago.

The Wilson theatre in Covington, Ky., owned by the Richard P. Ernst Realty Company, is being extensively remodeled by the F & Y Building Service, which recently completed the redecoration of the Liberty theatre owned by the same company.

The Park theatre, formerly the Cosmopolitan in New York, is being reopened after renovation, under the management of HAROLD GOLDMAN.

The California Theatre in San Francisco is to be remodeled and reopened under the name of the State, according to EUGENE H. ROTH, manager.

The Rio Theatre in Van Buren, Ark., has opened under the management of OSCAR MILLER, with new equipment and furnishings.

Paramount and Fanchon & Marco will operate jointly the El Capitan theatre in Hollywood, under the name of the Paramount Hollywood theatre, after modernizing it at a reported cost of $150,000. LEONARD GOLDENSON of Paramount, and C. E. TOBERMAN of Fanchon and Marco, negotiated the deal. W. L. and HAL PEREIRA, Chicago architects, are designing the improvements.

ADOLPH GORTATOWSKY, operator of the Albany, Liberty and Ritz theatres in Albany, is constructing another theatre to be known as the State. It will seat 800 and will have a full stage and dressing rooms for the presentation of stage acts in addition to films.

Warner's plan remodeling the Model and Stanton theatres in Philadelphia.

STANLEY WEIR has acquired the 250-seat theatre at Wayside, Wis., and is operating it four nights a week.

San Francisco Theatres, Inc., will remodel the Alexandria theatre in San Francisco, at a cost of about $28,000.

MR. AND MRS. O. W. MCCUTCHEN, owners of the Ritz and Roxy theatres in Blytheville, Ark., have opened a theatre at Charleston, Mo.

The front of the Capitol Theatre in West Allis, Wis., is being modernized at a cost of about $3,000.

HELEN ULMAN is replacing the burned Opera House at Salisbury, Md., with a new house to be called the Ulman theatre.

EDWARD BROWN has opened the Lyric Theatre at Goldfield, Nev.

The Del Mar Theatre of Carpinteria, Calif., has been taken over by WILLIAM SWANSON.

The Harrison theatre in Chicago, operated by MOE LANG, is modernized with a porcelain enamel front, and Simplex projectors and sound system.

MR. AND MRS. EARL H. BARRETT have bought the Pike theatre in Murfreesboro, Ark., from ALTON TERRELL.

VALDON GORHANN of Fort Dodge, Ia., plans to open a theatre at Renwick, Ia., in a building being remodeled.

The Theatre's Place and Needs in Defense

construction are those leading to the projection room, where a door has to be able to confine intense, concentrated heat in an emergency.

Wood can be used as a structural material with much greater safety than is commonly supposed. The amount of damage done by fire in a building using a wood structurally can be substantially reduced if the cross-sectional area of the wood members is made maximum in square area, for example, joists 2 inches thick are undesirable, 3 inches being minimum. This thickness applies to wood members which might be used to support a false ceiling shape, as well as to joists which would be the actual roof supports. No vertical wood hanger supports of any thinner section should be used, either. It is always more efficient to use steel for the main roof supports, and usually about five steel girders or trusses are sufficient for the roof of a moderate-sized theatre. These supports could be substituted by using wood, but here again the amount of steel required for this purpose is very small in proportion to the entire material requirements of the structure.

Projection rooms must be constructed entirely of fireproof materials. There is no reason why the projection room cannot be supported on masonry piers and its walls built of masonry, using for both the floor and ceiling of the room a reinforced concrete slab.

As to the large finished surfaces of the auditorium, there can be no material better than ordinary hard white plaster, the thin white coat being finished on the base coats of gypsum plaster, which in itself has a fairly good fire-retarding characteristic. The plaster itself must be supported by a metal lath, but this metal lath can be stapled on to wood framing members, provided that the wood is kept at a minimum thickness of 3 inches. The metal lath weighs only about 3½ pounds per square yard. One steel girder for a theatre has enough steel in it, in weight, to account for about seven metal lath ceilings of a 700-seat theatre.

Necessity of Priority Rating

Unless some sort of a priority rating could be given to justifiable theatre projects, theatre construction would come to a standstill, even though the amount of necessasry materials which would affect the defense program, proved to be negligible. Without a priority rating the exhibitor who wanted to build would find that he could get his materials, if at all, only by paying excessive prices.

The extent to which priority ratings may be made available for theatre construction depends on whether the claims of the motion picture theatre to a function important in the national emergency are far-sightedly recognized. These claims are sound ones; in 1917-18, a theatre business much less competent in both plant and the art it purveyed, than today's magnificent motion picture establishment, was excepted from the general restrictions applying to non-essentials; and the motion picture theatre requires few "critical" materials, and little of those.

These considerations are of course distinct from any that may apply to other fields, and that are of significance to the national economy in general. It is interesting to note, however, that the construction industry, the nation's second largest, employs 6,500,000 people, hardly a number too small to permit of failure to study each field of construction for its specific, actual effect on defense production. Referring to the issuance of over-broad prohibitions, Arthur Clifford, Bridgeport, Conn., lumber dealer told a Congressional subcommittee studying house building:

"After all, in this great fight for the democracies of the world, there is such a thing as sane judgment and an over-all view. Here in the United States we do rate some consideration. It is one thing to give our all and by so doing find it to be a short-sighted policy that defeats itself in the final analysis. It is quite another thing to work and give in a sane and rational way that permits industry in the United States to live, help and let live to help some more."

Mr. Clifford also cited the effect of strikes, which he said caused far more of a slow-down of defense production than even the unlimited building of homes would cause if home building took 5% of all critical materials.

Theatre construction and remodeling does, of course normally contribute appreciably to the prosperity of the building trades; yet even normally it uses little of the materials that have become necessary to national defense. And the mission of the theatre in the Emergency is what it normally is: To give the nation's millions recreation of a kind to which they have become habituated, and one not otherwise accessible to the vast majority of them. Now, and to the end of this period of strain and denial, they have but greater need of it.

Modern Wiring of Projection Rooms

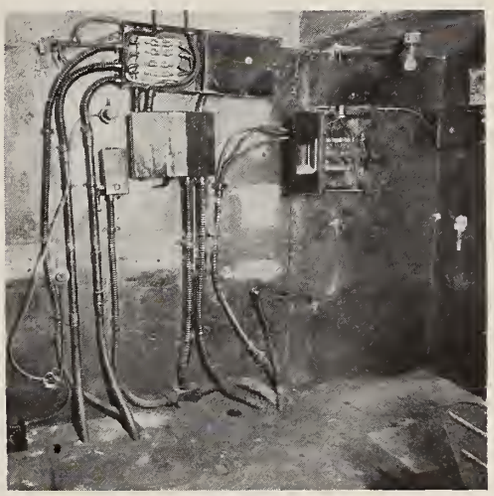
Outlining installation practices to follow in order to secure a safe and efficient electrical layout

IN THE INSTALLATION of projection equipment there is always a good way, and just a passable way of doing this work. Years ago when the industry was just developing and equipment and installation methods were rather crude, almost any wiring job was considered acceptable practice. Today, however, with equipment itself improved tremendously, and operating and safety standards much higher, the old ways of doing things are entirely outmoded and no up-to-date projection room should have a projection layout, in either equipment or wiring, that cannot compare with present-day practice.

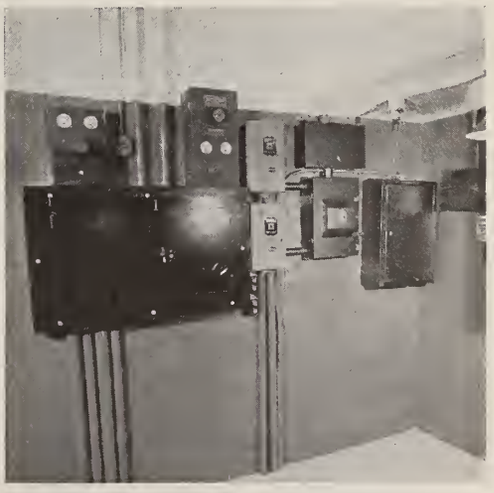
Cut-out switches and panel board distribution switching has been greatly improved, line starters are more efficient and and offer greater protection, and even conduit fittings and connectors and designed to do better work. Yet one still finds conditions persisting that recall nickelodeon days. In the old days, for example, the conduit system was laid out usually in a "slip-shod" manner, part conduit and part armored cable, in straight runs, with the wires at the connections dangling dangerously, and even loosely. The switches, panelboards and starter equipment were laid out all over the walls with utter disregard for the safety and convenience of the projectionist who would have to operate them. At best, this type of installation looks "sloppy," not to mention the hazards and inconvenience it presents to anyone that has to work with it, day in and day out.

In laying out a modern projection room installation, first safety must be considered, then efficiency, and finally appearance. Before installing the conduit and wiring for the lighting and power feeders coming to the projection room, the exact loads of each should be figured, with the voltage drop in these circuits added so as to have the wires heavy enough. A mere guess will not do, as nearly every projection room has different requirements even if it does look like another. After the exact loads of these main feeders are calculated, it is a good practice to have the wires and conduit at least 20% larger than actually required in order to prepare for any future unforeseen demands.

Since motion picture equipment is constantly undergoing improvements ample provision should be made in order to be at least a couple of years ahead of what is to come. There are many projection room wiring installations today that will have to be replaced perhaps soon at great expense because of failure to look ahead in the first instance. Conduits once buried in concrete floors and masonry work cannot be easily and cheaply removed or replaced.



Whenever possible, it is a good thing to use the latest no-fuse circuit breakers on feed lines, instead of the old open-type fused knife switches. For controlling the feeds to the motor-generator sets or other high-rated power equipment in the projection room, starters for a.c. should be of the type that have overload and under-voltage protection. Starters of the old straight across-the-line type should never be used as they offer hardly any protection for the motors. For the larger motor-generator sets, only reduced voltage-compensator type starters should be used, as all power companies insist on their installation, and most electrical code authorities specify them.



DISTRIBUTION PANELBOARD

The a.c. distribution panelboard in the projection room should be of the "dead-front" type with no "live" parts exposed. The d.c. switching panelboard should have the fuses on the "dead" side of the switches; that is so that whenever the switch is in the open position, no electric current can possibly flow through the fuse blocks. In this d.c. panel there should always be provision for at least a 6-inch gutter all around on the inside in order to have sufficient space for pulling the heavy arc feed wires and in making a definitely tight fastening to the lugs.

These wires in the gutter should run in neat straight lines, be well taped where necessary, and never should have open or many "legged" splices. These arc feed wires should be of the approved braided-rubber covered type of sufficient capacity to carry the load of the arc.

These wires and conduits between the d.c. panel and the arcs should always be larger than actually required so as to prepare for any possible future needs. Also a larger conduit will make pulling in the wire easier and is less likely to break or have the insulation scraped off, as might be the case where conduit of smaller diameter is used.

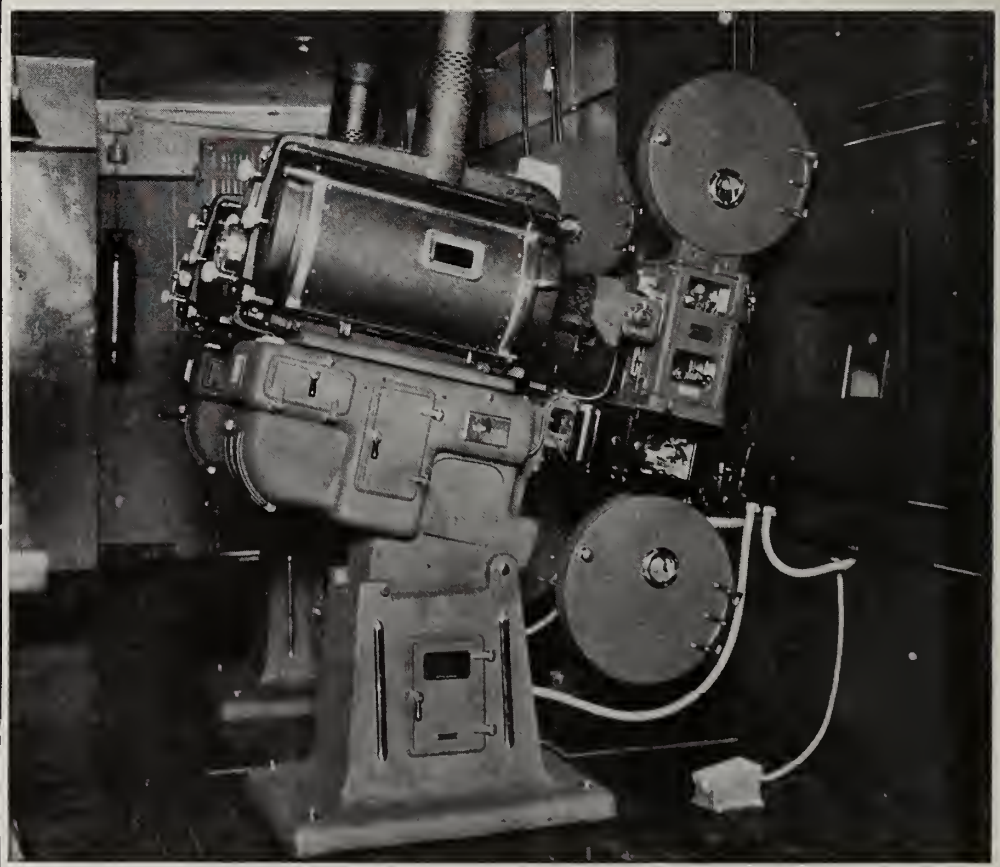
Where the arc feed wires leave the conduit at the projection base and runs to the arc lamphouse switch, they should have asbestos covering as a safety precaution.

The wiring at the front wall of the projection room should always be in conduit that runs in straight lines up and across when exposed; better still, it should be concealed whenever possible. The outlet box on this wall should terminate at the exact height of, and in line with, the equipment it is to feed. Outlet boxes that are located "any old way" inevitably mean that the flexible connections to the projector are bends, but a gradual curve or radius when running criss-cross, making a hazardous installation and a very unsightly job.



In a first-class installation, the outlet boxes that feed the soundhead, exciter lamp and motors are always located to the left of the center line of the projector, and in line with this equipment. The Greenfield-armored cables that carry the motor and exciter lamp feeds, as well as the coaxial cable, if used, should run straight across, without sagging, to their respective terminals. It is a good idea to install a metal hanger bracket on the back of the lower magazine for fastening rigidly in place these various cables. In this way the cables will be always in their respective positions without any interference to moving parts by hanging loosely.

Whenever a coaxial cable is used on the sound system, it should never be shortened or lengthened, for it is very delicate and is accurately calibrated at the factory. It should always be handled carefully in the installation, with no sharp right-angled bends, but a gradual curve.

Variously remodeled and re-equipped during the past couple of years, the Tivoli has been most recently modernized with Simplex High intermediate type projection lamps and Strong rectifiers. Truman D. Rogers, projectionist, also reports the following equipment: Motiograph projectors, RCA Photophone PG-140 sound system, Walker white screen, Globe enclosed rewind. Strong changeovers, and Bausch & Lomb lenses. Facilities also include a shower bath in the projection gallery. The picture size is 18 feet, 5 inches by 13 feet, 4 inches.

"HERE'S A NEW WAY TO BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS"

"I never knew until recently the great importance of good projection.

"I did know that we were regularly getting what seemed to be dense prints. Furthermore, Technicolor pictures apparently meant little at the boxoffice.

"Then I began reading about the advantages of the new low cost one-kilowatt Simplex High Projection arcs over my old low intensities—how they were doubling screen brilliance and bringing out all the beauty of colored films. A free demonstration in my own theatre convinced me that all the things which were claimed in Simplex High advertising were true, in fact the performance of this lamp surpassed all expectations and made the advertising sound really conservative.

"But the important thing was that after installing these lamps everyone seemed to appreciate the improvement. Raves over the beauty of Technicolor pictures became the rule.

"The boxoffice told the story. Believe me, when I say it really pays to install Simplex High Lamps in any moderate sized theatre with a screen up to 18 feet in width and to tell the world you've got them.

"You, too, should see the Simplex High in your theatre and see the difference on your screen . . . buy them and see the difference in your grosses. Get the jump on your competitors today!"

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

The S. R. P. to Blame? Or Projectionists, or What?

CUES, FILM mutilation, changeovers in general, continue to clamor for attention in these columns. The letters received from projectionists and even from theatre owners, only a few of which can possibly reach these pages, certainly show that there have been, and are, things very wrong with the handling of the film at various places along the line, from distributor to projector.

F. H. R.

One of several communications on the subject, all offering constructive comment, that I have chosen for publication this month, is from Jack Prater, who is an exhibitor as well as projectionist in Palouse, Wash. Jack writes:

"It is plainly evident from the variety of individual cues added to prints by projectionists that the Standard Release Print cues have not been entirely satisfactory. Regardless of individual opinions it seems reasonable that if S.R.P. cues were adequate, projectionists would not bother to add their own marks, a process which at best is considerable work. The fault is not entirely with the original specifications, either. Different producers have taken so much latitude in interpreting and following the specifications, especially those concerning threading leaders, that it is difficult to believe that the variety of print makeup we have been receiving for several years was all made by the same standard.

"Then, too, only a few exchanges build up threading leaders and the footage between motor and changeover cues to the original length when portions are damaged. Seldom do they remove non-standard marks applied by projectionists. All this reflects upon the specifications, when the worst trouble is caused by not giving even the old standards a fair opportunity to do what they were intended to do.

"Local 150, Los Angeles, has undertaken a national survey of all IATSE locals, sending questionnaires to individual projectionists in an effort to learn their preference concerning cues and identification leaders. Their survey should bring in some helpful information, and Local 150, with many of its members engaged in production work, should be able to make good use of such data to bring real relief to the situation.

"Let us hope that when a new and improved set of specifications is decided upon that it will meet with co-operation from studios, exchanges and projectionists.. The best specifications are worthless if they are not followed down the line—and let's not forget that the theatre patron is at the end of the line."

Here's the Way One Chap Handles the Cue Problem

THE CONTROVESY over the S. R. P. and home-made cues has served to revive the active interest of a projectionist who has been, in the past, one of my most stimulating correspondents. He is John M. Jones, Jr., now chief projectionist of the Silvertown theatre in Thomaston, Ga. He has a lot to say, but doggone it, I am going to let him say a good deal of it. He writes, in part:

"It's been a long time between letters, some four or five years; in fact, the last occasion was, I believe, when I invented that new Rectangular Proportional Projection Carbon, which bounced right off the Industry like water off of a duck's back. So—no soap. As you will recall, I am what is known as a small town operator, having been in this one job some nine years.

"I started messing around 'booths' at the tender age of eleven years, so you see I couldn't have known what I was doing, nor in anyway be responsible for the life I was laying out for myself. I continued to 'shine moom pitchers' and run lantern slides all through High school, and even in college (was educated as an electrical engineer). After college I went to work for the power company at home, but the old longings were too great to resist, so I finally succumbed to the wiles of the pictures and threw up my job and went to work as a projectionist. One thing leads to another. Management of theatres and ownership. Then came sound. I had invented a disc equipment back in High school days, so I merely re-adapted it to handle the 33⅓ RPM discs, and presto—I was off as a manufacturer, equipping hundreds of theatres in the Carolinas. Later I brought out a 'gimmick' sound-on-film head, known as Projectophone.

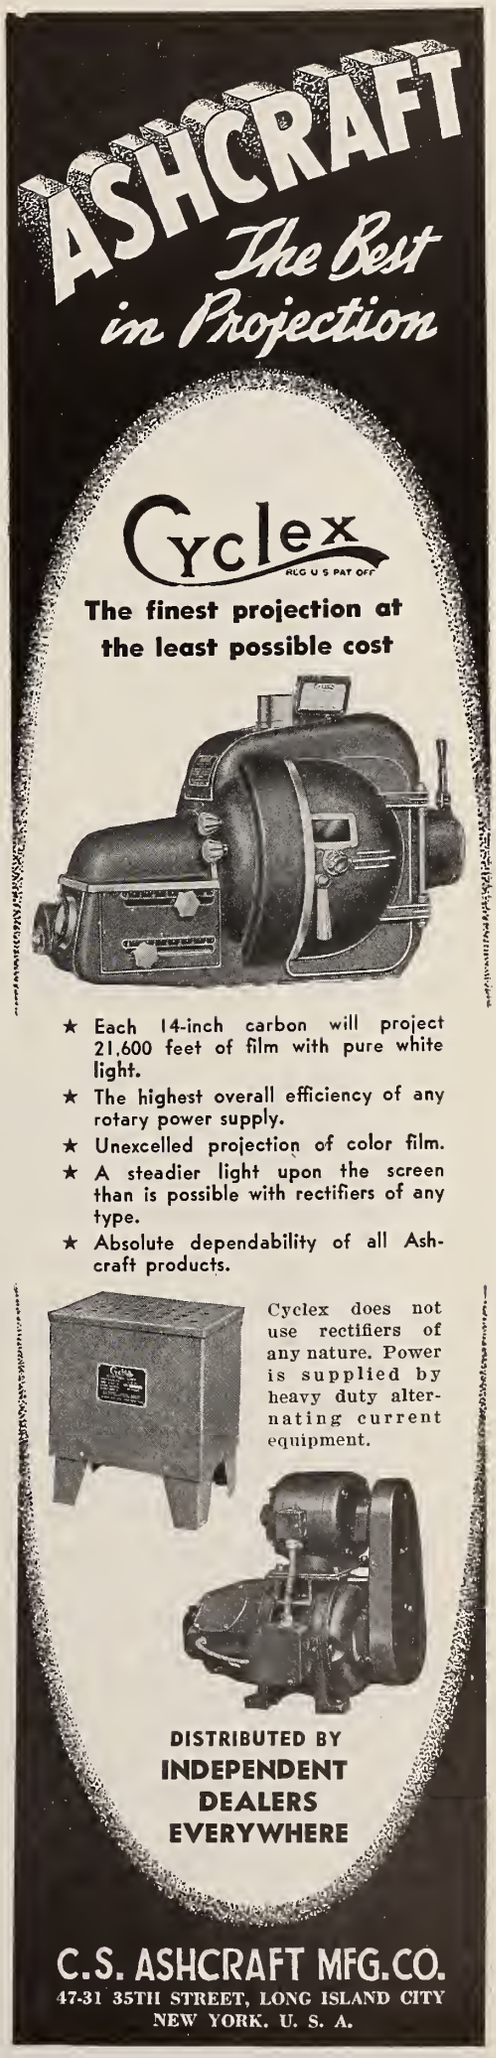
"Then as the theatres began their movement to the standard equipments, I joined DeForest. With the playing out of that and the onset of the depression, having then just been married, I came here to settle down to a projectionist's job at $21.50 per week, and invent on the side, having an inventor's complex, and a bushel of ideas I had collected through the years. The pay was doubled some four years ago, and is still rising to where projectionists in the nearby theatres look with envy on my job. I can truthfully say that with two or three exceptions, I have never asked for parts and materials that were not ordered cheerfully and no questions asked.

Sees Change Rapidly Approaching

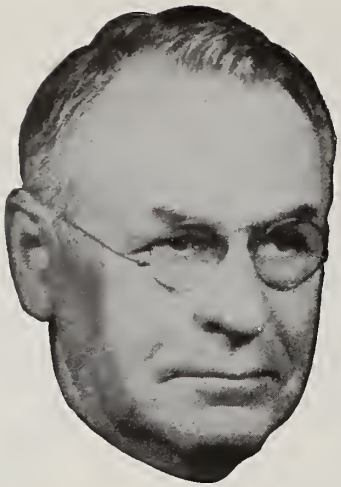
"When a man has stood at the ports as long as I have, and has seen every conceivable type of film mutilation, purporting to be helps to the art of projection, but in reality are atrocities, he is moved to say, 'Coming events cast their shadow before,' for I know by the mutilations on the screen that a change is rapidly approaching. I can't for the life of me, understand why an 'operator' will take a new print with standard exchange cue marks all properly in place, and then proceed to insert his own, either via punch marks or a china marking pencil. If his motor starts too fast, he might remedy it by installing overhanging-rim fly-wheels on the motor shafts. Back in the old days when I was manufacturing sound equipment, we encountered the problem of too quick a start or take-off and I remedied that with the design of the overhanging-rim.

"Most motor shafts do not extend far enough to accommodate both fly-wheel and pulley, so the idea is to design a combination fly-wheel and pulley made all in one piece, with the rim of such proportions as to clear the bearing box of the motor and come up close to the motor housing. The weighted fly-wheel does away with all resistance insertions in the motor circuit and allows for normal operation, besides exerting a steadying influence on the motor, thus holding the speed more constant. In all cases where these were installed the projectionists were delighted with their operation.

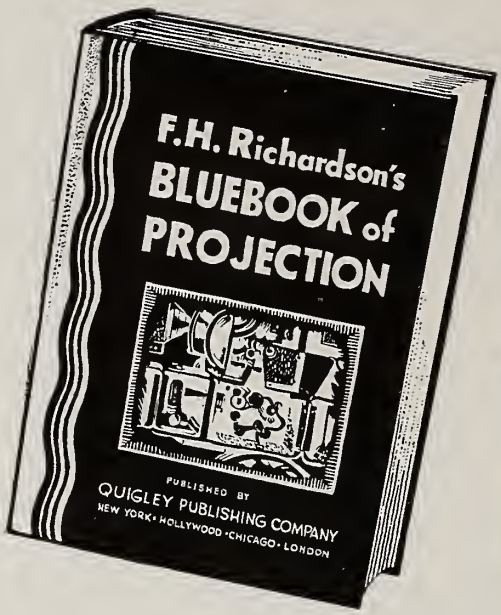
"I note too that some of the boys say they make memos of which footage mark to start on. I have my bench edge marked off in two 1-foot spaces, and I measure off the leader from the first frame of the picture backwards, and punch it to identify it in threading. These punch marks are in the leader and of course do not show up on the screen. In fact, I think more punching of the leader would give these punch-fiends an outlet for their 'energies' and save projection a lot of eye-sore presentations.



"The argument running rife in your columns in BETTER THEATERS about 'Film Mutilation,' 'Cues' and 'Smooth Changeovers' interests me. I guess it's too much of a job to ask you to do; but if you will look over your old files of Moving Picture World, of about 1922-23-24, you will find that I wrote you about an automatic changeover I was working on. I clipped the article, but it had no date on it. Well, I've been on that particular job, on and off for some 18 years, and have only recently perfected it. It is a honey! Essentially it is a mechanical timing device attached to the shutter shaft of the projector. It operates a momentary switch, which in turn actuates the electric changeover device. It is readily reset with a flip of the hand at threading time.



"It eliminates entirely any need for a C. O. cue. S. M. cues are all that are necessary. Standard practice cues work perfectly. Where the regular cue is not right, due to missing footage, I provide one by punching out a cue from a piece of blank film and cementing it to the film at a place properly measured to comply with the standards. The automatic changeovers I'm using automatically handle the changeover. In fact, I could turn away from the screen after starting the motor, and the incoming projector would cut itself in, the outgoing projector out. The fader, being wired into the changeover circuit, is similarily operated at the same time. We do present a smooth show.



"Now I have in mind a mechanism to be contained in the reel-hubs which will take care of S. M. cue at the proper time, starting the incoming motor by means of a solenoid switch. Then the projectionist will merely strike his arc after the bell drop rings and stand by while the outgoing projector starts the incoming projector, and the incoming projector will operate the changeover devices. I am told by men in the profession that such equipment is too complicated, and besides it will enable ten-dollar-per-week boys to hold down the job of projectionist. Don't they want any progress? Don't they know that their's will be the job of maintenance? Don't they know that such a device will make a smooth running show by removing the human element?

His Equipment "Too Complicated"

"Men in the know—projectionists, sound engineers, et al—have advised my boss that I've got my 'booth' too complicated, that another 'operator' couldn't step in and handle it. Perhaps a little complication offers nothing to me, but I just can't see where there's anything in it that any good man couldn't understand and handle, and mayhap handle it better than I do. I've never been of the opinion that I knew it all. In fact, I've learned a whole lot from men who have only been in the profession three to six years. I have seen 32 years of projection (off and on), I'm 43 now. The projectionists of 32 years ago had nothing at all to compare with the projectionist of

Put Richardson to work for you!

■ The name of F. H. Richardson is synonymous with good projection and sound reproduction everywhere. His Bluebook of Projection has always been unanimously accepted as the most practical and authoritative treatise of its kind.

The second revision of the sixth edition of his book has been brought right up to the minute in keeping with the most advanced developments in sound reproduction and projection.

Running to more than 700 pages, it is now supplemented with detailed trouble-shooting charts that enable the projectionist to spot and repair sudden breckdowns. Every theatreman who has been faced with the calamity of sudden projection trouble will testify to the inestimable value of this new department. Many important changes have also been made throughout the text, and an alphabetical index system has been installed that reveals the information you seek with no more than the twirl of a thumb.

today in the matter of equipment. If they were human beings, which they were, there isn't the slightest doubt in my mind but that they resisted changes as stubbornly as my present day 'partners in crime.'

"Another thing I have done, after ten years of designing, inventing, labor and sweat, is to bring out a device I call the 'Lobbyphone,' which as its name implies, is for use in the theatre lobby. It is essentially a cabinet with a translucent glass screen on the front, together with a speaker unit. Inside the cabinet is a complete motion picture projector and sound mechanism of the integrated type, a film repeater mechanism for handling the film endlessly over and over again, and suitable amplifying equipment. The whole idea is to place a trailer or prevue in the machine with the ends joined together so as to run continuously. Thus, the theatre has a motion picture advertising medium in its lobby, whereby the current film attraction is advertised right out in the lobby.

"What could be more expedient than to sell motion pictures with a motion picture? The repeater mechanism holds 500 feet of 35-mm. film. The lighting arrangement is my own design and invention and provides the necessary light without danger of firing the film, and without blowers, as some of the 16-mm. 'soundies' of today are using.

"Well, 'Fren' Richardson, you have fought a good fight in the interests of projection. I know that your efforts have not fallen on fallow ground. Probably you will never know the impact that your personality, knowledge and perseverance has made on the profession of projection, for that is what you, and you alone, have made of it. God Bless You!"

History Repeating Itself In Current Cue Problem

AND NOW WE HEAR from Theodore P. Hover, Lima, Ohio. His letter, too, is lengthy, but, I believe, it will hold your interest from beginning to end.

I give it to you just as he wrote it:

"To judge by the current projection literature, there seems to be a great furore on the subject of mutilated rundown leaders and motor start and changeover cues, and considerable effort is being made to change the S. R. P. I have given the matter considerable thought. Suppose we look back to about the time when I first met you, Dad. It is over twenty years and I am sure you will have no difficulty in recalling that at that time two important problems faced the industry.

"They were mutilated reel identification leads and tail pieces and excessive projection speeds. I believe that you had both items fairly well licked when sound came in. And standard projection speed in sound work polished off the few remaining die-hards who insisted on projecting 60 feet per minute film at the rate of 110 f.p.m.

"The matter of film mutilation was on the decrease, without a doubt, and the reason for this decrease provides the key for the solving of the present problem. From 1920 to about 1930, whether you realize it or not, there was an enormous amount of propaganda in existence to correct the evils of film mutilation. Your own columns were very active, with quite a number of effective chapters; also many unions had rigid rules upon this subject. A number of film exchanges were also active in publicizing the superiority of written cue sheets over scissors scratches, punch marks, etc.

"Today we have an entirely different situation. Your own column limited to a monthly, projection societies inactive; trade journals devoted to quotas, consent decrees, etc. And two other important features: First, the gradual lowering of the morale of the projection craft during the depression due to excessive wage cuts, theatre closings, and other factors (our industry is not alone in this matter, as any industrialist or manufacturer will tell us). The second item revolves around the many new faces to be found in the projection craft. This is particularly noticeable in the small town theatres.

"In the majority of these cases the projectionist is a High school student with no technical knowledge whatever, who works every evening and all day Saturday and Sunday for a sum which seldom exceeds $10. I know many who work for $5. Their projection knowledge is usually gained by a couple of weeks' service as an usher, doorman or popcorn seller, then graduation as an apprentice to a screwdriver and pliers mechanic, who in turn quickly walked out on a poorly paid proposition and went to work in some industry as soon as the depression started to lift.

"This projectionist (?) is not always to blame for the condition in which film leaves his hands. Film is usually run 'cold' and an indistinct or misplaced changeover cue is remedied after the first show with any instrument which happens to be handy, the commonest one being a door hinge mounted on the rewind bench, and a sharpened nail through one of the screw holes

CUT CARBON COSTS 10% TO 25%

Droll processed carbons provide a milled male end and a drilled female end. You simply join two of them and clip with a sleeve of pure copper, which matches exactly the copper coating on the carbon and which is consumed without altering light quality or intensity. When a carbon is burned to about 3" it is fitted onto the next carbon. No dirt, delay, work, or machine to buy. Burn every inch of every carbon.

Available in: Negatives, 6 mm x 9", 6.5 mm x 9", 7 mm x 9", and Positives, 6 mm x 12", 7 mm x 12" x 14", 8 mm x 12" x 14". Also High Intensity 13.6 mm x 22" (machined for adapters) which provide 20 minutes more burning time per trim.

Shipped at regular carbon list prices plus 75c per hundred for milling, drilling and clips; less 5%, 10 days.

does the work. In a majority of cases these activities are the result of pure ignorance, and the remaining cases are usually thoughtlessness or carelessness.

"We talk of amending the S. R. P. Why talk of changing something when it was never lived up to in its original form? If I remember correctly, the cue dots were to appear at some place where changing background or action would not detract from its visibility. Sometimes I think the producer went to considerable trouble to place this mark in the middle of an action scene where it would be doubly difficult to locate. At least 20% of the present S. M. marks are absolutely invisible on the screen when the print is run the first time. In the larger theatres where regulations forbid film mutilation, click marks can be placed, or a cue marker used to place a thin ring around one single changeover dot. One is sufficient, not four, or six, or eight, which is quite common with many of the prints which we receive. Changeover marks still appear in various positions on the screen; every now and then one of them appears near the bottom of the picture. I believe that Technicolor prints are the worst offenders of all, and any form of cue marking which may be added to a color print looks terrible.

"It all boils down to one fact which was behind the original S. R. P.; namely, that proper cue marks should be placed by the producer, and when he doesn't do it, someone else will, improperly. As I have repeatedly stated at SMPE meetings, projectionists, regardless of their background or the size of the theatre or the town in which they work, are not film butchers, but for the past few years they have all been confronted with the problem of making satisfactory changeovers with a minimum of assistance from the producers and the exchanges.

"Now that I have outlined the trouble, how about a cure? In the first place, how about devoting a small percentage of publicity funds normally devoted to the sale of some 'B' picture into an active and aggressive educational campaign, not from the home office, but from each exchange manager to every theatre which he serves; acquainting the projection staff with the use and application of the present S. R. P. markers. This would be of particular use to the many new projectionists, who would willingly co-operate if the matter were properly brought to their attention. Considering the damage done to prints in each exchange territory, it would not be an outrageous thought to hire some competent projectionist to visit some of these theatres which are the worst offenders. There are only a few in each territory—and let us not kid ourselves, the exchange employes know who they are!—and if they do not, they are lax in their own work.

"After a reasonable educational campaign, let the exchange clamp down on the willful violators. And after a theatre manager pays for a damaged print, immediate action will be taken to correct the fault.

"It all boils down to a statement which I made to you over ten years ago. I do not believe exchange managers or producers are interested in the condition in which prints reach the theatres. They are interested, first, in the original sale or booking contract; after that, in getting the money, and to hell with anything else.

"Secondly, how about taking up a contribution among interested projectionists, to purchase copies of the present S. R. P. instructions, and furnish them, one to each film laboratory or producer.

"Dad, you can't tell me that the producers have ever read anything about S. R. P. in the light of some of the prints which are coming right out of their laboratories, first run. The print which we are running at the present time, 'Sergeant York'—reel 4, if changed over according to the cue marks, cuts off the last two words of one sentence! The sound on this print extends past the picture c. o. (Reserve one copy of the instructional bulletin for Warner Brothers).

"Do not get the idea that I am trying to lay the blame on the small town theatres. But I do believe that their faults can be corrected by education; and for the projectionists of years of experience who are still mutilating film, a little pressure will cure them.

Thought you fellows might like to see a picture of the old-timer on the left in the snapshot above, taken at my home recently. Of course the old-timer at the right is your humble servant. But it's the other guy this picture is really about, for he's Will C. Smith, who is perhaps the oldest living projectionist who was associated with projecting pictures on a screen when the intermittent movement came on the scene. At that time he was "projectionist" at a little stereopticon theatre. My friend for over 35 years, Will is still active, working for a theatre supply dealer and occasionally as a projectionist.—F. H. BAUSCH & LOMB

OPTICAL CO. • ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

ESTABLISHED 1853

THE challenge of the War Department finds one answer in the words of Edward Bausch when he says, "My associates and myself have obligated this company to a program that eclipses in magnitude and speed all previous efforts."

This pledge is underlined and italicized three times every twenty-four hours by the long lines of workers in each change of shift. Every resource and facility gained in filling the diverse optical needs of education, research and industry is being concentrated in maintaining an unbroken flow of optical instruments to America's front lines of defense and to America's defense industries.

Many are the Bausch & Lomb products that help to "keep 'em flying." There are bubble octants for aerial navigation; photo lenses for mapping and reconnaissance, height finders, searchlight mirrors and flank-spotting scopes for anti-aircraft defense; binoculars for spotters; Ray-Ban Glasses for fliers.

The accepted optical aids to industry developed by Bausch & Lomb—the Contour Measuring Projector, the Metallograhic Equipment, the B & L Littrow Spectrograph—are now in the first line of production, doing important work in keeping them flying.

Theatre Interests Fared Well on SMPE Program

FEW COULD HAVE got the keen satisfaction out of attending the 25th Anniversary convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers that I did. I was very much around when the Society was founded, back in 1916. I have been a highly active member of it through those 25 years. Some months ago I had to reduce my activities considerably . . . and there was a time awhile back when I had no right to plan on joining the members of the SMPE this fall in the celebration of its 25th birthday. But I was there—and it was fine!

The fall convention has been pretty well reported by this time; however, I do want to congratulate the papers committee on the substantial number of papers procured that dealt with the practical interests of the theatre. Henry Behr's paper on cost considerations in arc lamp and screen light equipment was excellent, as was the description of a constant torque film takeup friction clutch, by W. Hotine of the Rotovex Corporation.

A paper that was extraordinarily interesting for the clarity with which it described the design of a projector was one by E. L. Boecking and L. W. Davee of the Century Projector Corporation. I congratulated these men from the floor of the meeting, and stated my belief that this paper should be made easily available to projectionists who are not members of the Society. It is too often true that papers of general interest to projectionists never reach them, inasmuch as the vast majority of projectionists do not receive the SMPE Journal.

Of course, projectionists are eligible to membership in the Society, and membership entitles them to the journal. Every once in awhile I receive a letter from a younger projectionist, asking me if projectionists who have not extensive training in their craft can join. Even a beginner is eligible to an associate membership. Those interested should write to the Society at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York City.

A Tip to Projection Men Going to the Army

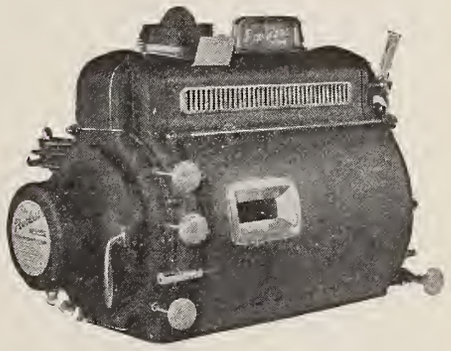
FROM OUR GOOD friend W. E. Limmroth, who is doing his bit for Uncle Sam down in Camp Polk, La., comes the following letter, which I am sure will interest the many who want to know how to go about getting into their chosen field when they are drafted. The letter reads as follows:

"Dear Pop: I received your nice letter and am preparing data on motion pictures in the army—both educational and for entertainmnt. One of my friends is an expert photographer. He is now on furlough, but just as soon as he returns I will send photographs of the projection room and front of one of the theatres. We have two theatres in this camp, each seating over 1,000. Due to the very isolated location of Camp Polk the 'movies' are definitely the most important form of entertainment available.

"I would suggest to any projectionist who is subject to draft and who would like to continue in his own work, that he will do well to study up on radio if he is not already tops in the subject. There are more ratings in this field than in any other unit and, too, the training is very good and will naturally benefit projectionists, due to its close relation to sound pictures.

"I, myself, completed a six weeks' course in radio maintenance last week and was given a fourth-class specialist rating (incidentally this will give me $15 more a month, and $15 added to what we get is not to be snezzed at).

"Tomorrow I start in radio operators' class and will attend for five weeks. Studying during the day and working at the theatre at night makes me keep on the jump, but I like it. In fact, I like the whole setup down here."



We will await with interest Brother Limmroth's next letter, telling us more of his work in projection and accompanied by those pictures.

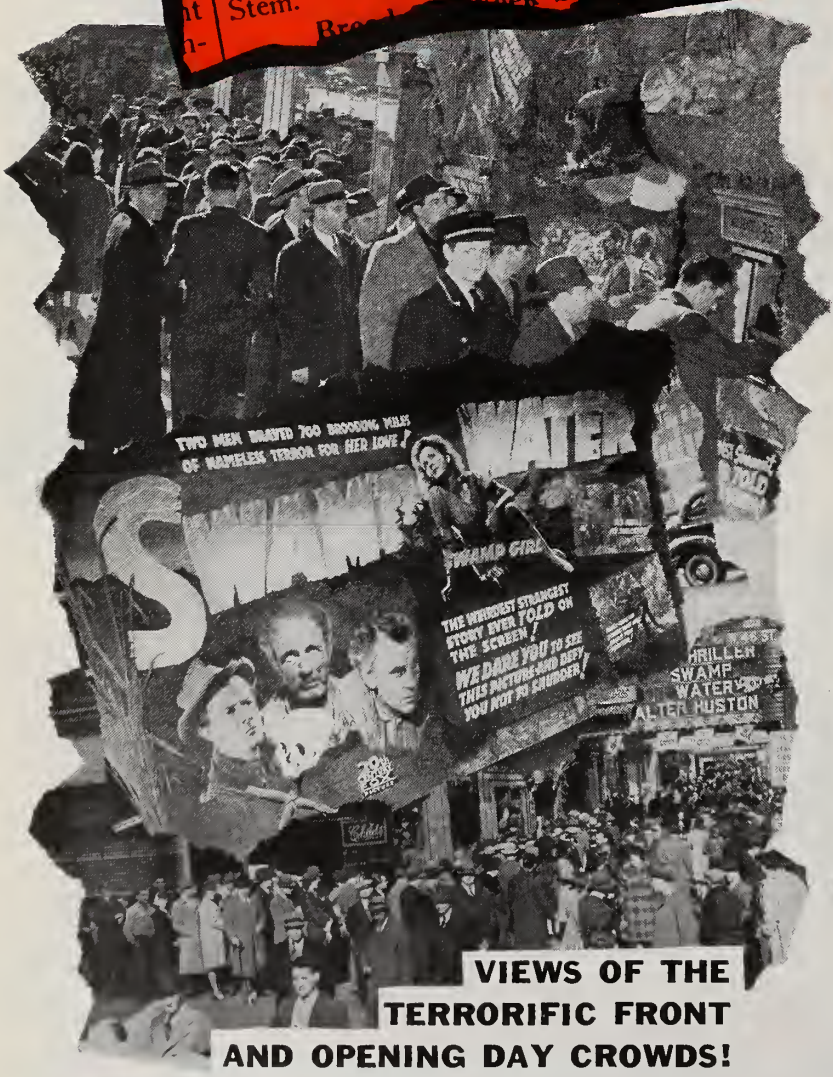
Exhibitor Interest On 'Swamp Water'; B'way Grosses Big



"Swamp Water," 20th Century-Fox picture opening at the Globe tomorrow, holds New York exhibitor interest. The picture comes here after an exceptional campaign and record business in St. Louis. Similarly in San Francisco the picture brought in a gross of reportedly record proportions.

This gives 20th Century-Fox three films on Broadway, with "Week-End in Havana" at the Roxy and "How Green Was My Valley" at the Rivoli, thus dominating the Main Stem.

GENIUS AT WORK

THAT process of decay, increasingly notable, in the standards of decency and taste in the making of motion pictures in Hollywood has arrived now at a tide-mark.

It comes with the announcement of a project to make a dramatic production entitled "The G-String Murder Case". It is to be based, we are told, on a volume by that title ascribed to the authorship of one Gypsy Rose Lee.

Gypsy Rose, you may be remembering, arrived at fame, of a sort, by taking off her clothes on the burlesque stage of New York. That inspired, it seems, her onetime employment in Hollywood as an artist for the enhancement of the cinema. However, for reasons too tedious for detailing here, she was announced to the screen world as Louise Hovick. After that, not very much happened, although the motion picture industry got the full publicity benefit of its diligence and enterprise.

To avoid possible misunderstanding, it is perhaps well to observe that there is a considerable probability that the "G-string" in this case pertains to neither harp nor violin, although there may be a deal of fiddling about it.

While there is no confirmation of any report that the entire staff of Minsky's has been engaged as consultants on this impending contribution to the achievements of the screen as an American art, it may safely be stated nothing will be spared in the endeavour to make this production take a place in the motion picture's hall of fame and an eternal memorial to the art of the G-string.

THE "TEN BEST"

THE annual speculating about Motion Picture Herald's annual poll of exhibitor judgment on the "Ten Best" money-makers of the screen has been opened in the columnist and syndicate press.

One manifestation in the Hearst papers professes a considerable line of inside information as to the whole array of ten positions, from "my informant."

The informant is probably a crystal gazer, since the poll is yet in progress and no figures are in existence. The results will be known when the Herald gives them out, and not until then. The results also will be reflecting no Hollywood columnist opinion, either. It is an exhibitor judgment, to be had only from the exhibitor.

SAYS FOR A HEADLINE

PRESS headlines, which represent what it is all about, have greeted an expression from Mr. Garson Kanin, Broadway dramatist and Hollywood director, before the National Board of Review convention in New York, that "the movies are doomed if they insist upon producing only entertainment."

Mr. Kanin, it may be recorded in passing, is "in the army now" and currently detailed to the Office of Emergency Management. He is in consequence laden with message that he'd have the screen deliver.

It is observed that Mr. Kanin has arrived at his present station by reason of a number of factors, including conspicuously his success and fame in the manufacture of entertainment, from his actor days in "Spring Song" to his direction of "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Broadly it may be said that there is often evidence that publicity is not served by consistency. Meanwhile, when the screen theatre ceases to present entertainment, there will not be any such theatre. As has been observed currently by Mr. John Grierson and Mr. Lester Cowan, there is always plenty of message, elsewhere and everywhere.

WIDE SCREEN AGAIN

THE last issue of Better Theatres, out last week, has a piece from Mr. George Schutz, editor, in which he discusses some young engineer's notion of salvation of the motion picture industry with a gadgetry idea of an ultra-wide screen.

As Mr. Schutz indicated, the motion picture is not at this time especially in need of rescue by novelty or other device.

It is of a certain order of amusement, however, to observe a recrudescence of the "wide screen" notion. It is to be recalled that in the period when sound was getting its introduction there were many hopes of miracle, including the big screen and assorted versions of stereoscopic picture dreams.

By 1930 what was then called the Fox Film Corporation was finding that it was in error by about $20,000,000 on an item in 60 mm. called "Grandeur Films", and down in the region of Twenty-second Street Mr. Elmer Boucher, of the RCA Gramercy Studios, had something around a million dollars to forget in ventures with the Spoor-Bergeren process which involved a film about 70 mm. wide and was alleged to have three-dimensional qualities. Two of the dimensions were on the screen and the third was in your hat. Your editor, consulted about both at the time, was overruled by executives, some of whom are still charging the stockholders for their perspicacity.

One of the nice things about selling miracles, on or off the screen, is the fact that they are bought in advance.

But, coming back to Mr. Schutz's doctrinal discussion, it is plain enough that the motion picture, as it is now presented on the screen, is an amply able medium for telling a story, delivering an emotional impact.

The motion picture is always as competent as the people who make it.

NEW YORK has a hobby museum. On display there, from the mind and hand of Mr. Gillette Burgess, the father of the "Purple Cow", is a "nonsense machine, designed to do nothing in a very complicated way". Some serious students consider it a social statement or outline of history of the industrial age. Others think it is a biography done in cogwheels.

Odeon vs. FPC

FAILURE of Odeon Theatres to buy Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product away from Famous Players Canadian and to acquire or build theatres in the maritime provinces, it was reported in St. John, N. B., Tuesday, has completely changed the character of negotiations by Odeon to affiliate with circuits in that area.

Thus far the N. L. Nathanson-Odeon group has been limited to three theatres in East Canada, the Empress and Capitol, in Moncton, N. B., and the Casino, at Halifax, N. S. Governmental bans halted Odeon construction plans and northeastern theatres, and at least one circuit with whom it had been negotiating for leases or operating control are reported to have cooled markedly in their interest in the Odeon offers.

A few weeks ago it was a foregone conclusion at St. Johns that a leading maritime circuit was ready to leave FPC for Odeon. Contracts were said to have been signed. It is now reported that the transfer has been checked and FPC is favored locally for continued affiliation. Only a few details remain to be settled. FPC, it is said, has also offered four more houses to the regional circuit. Three of the theatre owners objected to the FPC lease or operating rights being turned over to the circuit, but discussions are underway to work out deals.

An unexpected development in the Canadian circuit competition and supporting PPC came Wednesday, when N.A. Taylor, general manager of 20th Century Theatres, incorporated the enterprise under company charter as Twinex Century Theatres Corporation, a group of 40 theatres affiliated with FPC, which previously had not been a legally formed company although operating under partnership and pooling contracts.

Haskell Masters, western and Canadian sales manager for United Artists, on Wednesday became vice-president and general manager of Odeon Theatres of Canada. He was also elected president and general manager of N. L. Nathanson's Empire Universal Films of Canada.

Bioff Turned Down

WILLIE BIOFF and George Browne are still in jail—New York's Federal House of Detention—from which they have emerged only twice since their conviction two weeks ago; once to be sentenced, Wednesday, November 12th, to ten and eight years, respectively (with $20,000 fines for each); the second time to be examined, Monday, about their property, and ability to pay those fines.

Their appeals for bail were denied Friday, November 14th, by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, New York; and Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard then ordered them in court Monday for examination by Assistant U. S. Attorney Martin Klein.

United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa, who conducted successful prosecution of the two for extorting $550,000 from Loew's, Twentieth Century Fox, Warners, and Paramount—a prosecution which brought out that they extorted much more than this—opposed bail at the Friday hearing, saying no matter how high it was, it would not keep the convicted men within jurisdiction. He added that Browne's $50,000 bail before trial came from Chicago projectionists' union, Local 110, and that he did not know who furnished Bioff's bail. He added they could put up very large sums of money for bail, through control of the IATSE.

The men may decide whether to remain in the New York city jail until appeals are resolved, or to begin their penitentiary terms now.

Meanwhile, Louis Kaufman, business agent of Newark IATSE, Local 244, now under $15,000 bail under indictment for extortion, along with fugitive Nick Dean, as accomplice of Browne and Bioff, appeared this week to have confidence of his union. The entire incumbent administration was renominated, for elections December 9th. Mr. Kaufman's term runs two more years.

Says Dies to Fly

CHARGING that Goodwin Watson, new chief broadcast analyst of the Federal Communications Commission has been for many years a "propagandist for Communism and the Soviet Union," Congressman Martin Dies, of Texas, Tuesday published a letter to James L. Fly, FCC chairman, in which he expressed concern "that one of such outspoken Communist views and sympathies should be named to the position of chief broadcast analyst with such important decision entrusted to him."

The $5,600 a year analyst, Mr. Dies pointed out, is studying broadcasts from foreign countries to determine the probable trends of the war and the internal morale and condition of foreign countries. He named a long list of "red" organizations with which he said Mr. Watson was affiliated.

Bromberg Retires

ARTHUR BROMBERG retired from the motion picture business Wednesday after 35 years. He disposed of his Republic franchises in five cities in the southeast, to Republic Pictures Corporation. Mr. Bromberg's only plans, he said in New York Wednesday, were to tour South America. James R. Grainger, president of Republic, said the personnel of the Bromberg exchanges will remain intact.

Peace for 'Little 3'?

THE Department of Justice last week refused to discuss widely circulated reports that it would not proceed with its New York anti-trust case against Columbia, Universal, and United Artists, because it had not had enough time. Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said in Washington any such reports were mere speculation upon the Government's inaction to date on the cases still pending against the little three majors.

The big five majors are entitled, under the decree, to use its "escape clause" exempting it from tradeshowing films, and selling them in blocks of five, if the Government does not prosecute and win its case against the other three companies by June 1st.

Mr. Wright admitted a possibility of speeding up the cases against those companies, by stipulations. Such stipulations might drop conspiracy charges, and allow the case to go to court on the question alone of block booking versus freer booking.

The Department lawyer is reported to have said, two weeks ago, that, in event the five majors use the escape clause, "we have other strings to our bows."

Linda the Specialist

A STATEMENT from the home office of 20th Century-Fox, in New York, reads:

"Linda Darnell, Twentieth Century-Fox star of Mark Hellinger's 'Rise and Shine,' who yesterday operated on the floor of the New York Curb Exchange as a 'specialist' in United States Defense Savings Bonds, has the double distinction of being the first woman ever permitted to operate in that exclusively masculine body, and of having sold a greater volume of bonds and savings stamps than any other 'salesman' in the half-hour she was 'working.' . . ."

Lorentz and Roses

FILM documentarian Pare Lorentz has gone to work on the production of something or other for RKO Radio, with a deep, dark secrecy that is unusual in Hollywood.

He has even moved away from the home lot, where RKO studio chief Joseph I. Breen had berthed him, and has established his unit at the old RKO-Pathe studio in Culver City. Mr. Lorentz will not divulge title, talent or story nature of his present effort; but it was learned elsewhere that it is a documentary with a Mexican background.

Mr. Lorentz appears to have turned his attention to Mexico as a subject for filming during his visit to Mexico City last month with that Hollywood "goodwill" pilgrimage headed by RKO's Mr. Breen and George Schaefer.

It was on that trip that the producer of the U. S. Government's maternity picture ("Fight for Life") met up with the "Cantinflas" (Mario Moreno), Mexican comedian of stage and screen, who has since gone to Hollywood at the invitation of Mr. Lorentz. The producer is now talking to RKO chieftains about a player's contract for the Mexican star, to appear in Lorentz documentaries. This matter is now in the hands of Mr. Schaefer.

Announcing "Cantinflas'" arrival in Hollywood, an RKO press statement described him as the "idol of Mexican film fans and rated the most gifted stage and screen star of that nation . . . one of Mexico's most brilliant and versatile men . . ."

"Cantinflas" recently won wide acclaim in Mexico for his performance in "Fuddled Policeman," produced down there by Posa Films, and which performance prompted Pare Lorentz to ship 24 roses to the actor by airplane from Hollywood.

'Upsa-Daisy'

GRADWELL SEARS' resignation from Warner Brothers on that Friday morning of October 24th, brought a $750-a-week salary increase to Joseph Bernhard, the new general manager of Warners.

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., acting in accordance with Federal law, has reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission that it has entered into employment contract with Mr. Bernhard, extending for five years from November 1, 1941, to October 31, 1946, at a salary of $2,500 a week and an additional sum of $500 weekly for entertainment expenses.

Up to the morning of Mr. Sears' resignation, Mr. Bernhard operated the Warner theatres, at a salary understood to be $1,750 a week, plus the same $500-a-week expense allowance.

Meanwhile Gradwell LeBerthon Sears arrived this week at United Artists to take over the vice-presidency. See page 27.

Up Go Admissions

"NO mills and no pennies" is the slogan of St. Louis theatres attempting to make even sums of their admission prices. Cooperation is coming from Independents and circuits. Fred Wehrenberg, president of the local MPTOA, reported last week the change at his 24 theatres was successful. The St. Louis Amusement Company is also reported changing prices.

The changes result in advanced admissions, those of 22 cents becoming 25 cents; those of 28, becoming 30.

Milwaukee exhibitors are following suit.

Admission price increases, to make even sums, and to account for increased overhead, are occurring generally. Higher film rentals are also an excuse. Minnesota exhibitors this week were reported planning to make the patron pay more because, they say, the majors, resuming state selling, are asking higher film rental than last year.

Several Philadelphia theatres are reducing admissions for high-school age patrons. These become members of a "Students' Club," present cards at boxoffices. Theatres using the idea, up to this week, are the William Goldman group, Herbert Elliott's Fern Rock, and Luke Gring's Erien.

Wants Love Lessons

AN extensive use of motion pictures in public schools to teach young people the proper aspects concerning love, sex and marriage was advocated by Judge Lois Mary McBride, of the County Court of Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, in speaking before the Philadelphia Motion Picture Forum at its annual autumn luncheon on Monday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. At the same time, she accused the screen of contributing to juvenile delinquency, increasing divorces among young people and fostering a moral laxness among adolescents.

Ooops! 'twas a Slip

HOLLYWOOD producers Walter Wanger and Frank Lloyd might read almost any place about how their new releasing contracts with Universal, for one and three pictures, respectively, will apply to the 1940-41 season, which ended last September 1st. And the appearance of such notice in print, as circulated in press statements, could easily send the distributor's exhibitor customers hurrying to the nearest 'U' exchange demanding why the company had not delivered for 1940-41, Mr. Wanger's "Eagle Squadron" and Mr. Lloyd's "River Lady," "The Spoilers" or "Saboteur."

It was all a mistake. The Universal statement, which quoted Universal sales manager William Scully, should have specified a 1941-42 release for all four films.

OPM SAYS NO NEW THEATRES, BUT REPLACEMENTS WILL BE AVAILABLE

Exhibitors Can Get Repair and Replacement Parts, but No New Theatre Work; Strategic Materials for Studios Reduced

There will be little new theatre construction in the U. S. until the war-and-defense needs for materials have been met, but exhibitors will be able to get repair and replacement parts with a minimum of difficulty.

There will be few new broadcasting stations constructed, but existing installations will be maintained.

Motion picture producers will have to exercise economy in the use of strategic materials, but their needs will be met as completely as possible.

Television will not be permitted to develop extensively during the emergency.

"Juke box" production will be restricted; some substitutes may have to be found for materials going into phonograph records.

This, in brief, is the result scheduled to follow the adoption of the several priorities orders which have been announced from time to time by the Office of Production Management at Washington.

No New Construction

Summed up, they mean that new construction will be held down, except where essential to defense purposes or the public welfare, but maximum assistance will be given in keeping existing facilities in working shape.

But, of course, there are other angles to the situation which will affect the motion picture and radio industries, particularly the restrictions on office and other equipment. It will become increasingly difficult to install "plush" offices, for instance; new electric signs may become hard to get, and other necessities may be put in the class of luxuries.

These restrictions are not intended to handicap business, but are predicated upon the belief that in the emergency the old desk, the old sign can be made to last a little longer.

So far as the production end of the film industry is concerned, OPM spokesmen say that there had been few difficulties reported so far in securing needed materials. A few requests have come in for aid in getting certain chemicals, containers and one or two other products, all of which were dealt with speedily and satisfactorily.

Completion Allowed

In the exhibition end, while it is not likely that any new theatres will be approved in the near future, assistance has been given to secure materials for the completion of houses that were well along in construction when the ban was imposed last month. No figures are available as to the number of houses under way at that time, but it was not very large, so far as can be learned.

New broadcasting stations will be authorized only where they are necessary to provide initial—not additional—service. The Federal Communications Commission has not yet had occasion to develop a policy for dealing with construction permits, but will not grant any, it is expected, where the OPM will not make materials available. To grant a permit under those conditions, according to Chairman James L. Fly, would be a "futile gesture."

In the case of television, it is not expected that any new stations will be permitted, although stations which have been operating experimentally will probably be permitted to shift over to commercial activities.

Materials Needed

In the case of the radio installations, it is pointed out that they require large quantities of highly strategic materials as well as equipment which the Army and Navy is in need of.

In the case of "platters," the restrictions on phenolic resins and other products may necessitate some substitutions; in the case of juke boxes the restrictions on materials will control the output.

But in all cases, efforts will be made to assure the availability of materials for maintenance and repair. A blanket priority order has been issued for that purpose, its intent being to insure the continuous operation of existing installations.

This order will not, however, permit any additions to present installations, but it will permit a limited measure of modernization where the failed equipment is absolete and repair parts are difficult or impossible to secure.

War Department and Hollywood Map Plans for Speeding Training Films

Determined to speed up the training of troops as current events bring World War II steadily closer to American shores, the War Department this week laid plans to expedite the production of training films.

Just how the production of the films will be expedited remains a state secret, but it was made known by the War Department that the program was laid out at a conference in Washington of high Army officers with officers in the Signal Corps, including Colonel Nathan Levinson of Warner Brothers, Lieutenant Colonel Darryl Zanuck of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Major John Aalberg of RKO, all members of the Chief Signal Officer's Advisory Council, and all of Hollywood.

About one-third of the Army's training films are now being produced commercially in Hollywood, where actors and commercial technicians are largely used, but the bulk of the pictures are coming from the training film production laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Wright Field, Ohio, where the majority of the personnel is military, including many men who were actors or film technicians.

The training films are used to demonstrate graphically to the troops subjects essential to their own activities, such as tactical exercises, the mechanical functioning of weapons and motors, and the use and care of new equipment. They have been found to be more effective than personal demonstration, since the various actions may be shown in both slow motion and normal speed.

Darryl Zanuck, as chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, this week announced the start of production of another War Department training film, entitled "Cryptographic Security," dealing with methods of protecting Army codes and cryptographic devices.

The film will be made by Paramount, directed by Joe Youngerman.

Pre-Holiday Grosses Jingle Box Office Tills

"Birth of the Blues," "Swamp Water," "One Foot in Heaven," "The Chocolate Soldier," "International Lady," "Look Who's Laughing," "Sergeant York," "Weekend in Havana" and "How Green Was My Valley" were among the principal box office grosses and hold-over performances this week.

At the Globe Theatre in New York, Fox's "Swamp Water" took in an estimated $7,500 for Saturday and Sunday, one of the biggest week-end grosses that theatre ever had. Paramount's "Birth of the Blues" is continuing its "successful box office business" in early key city engagements, according to home office reports. Warner's "One Foot in Heaven" played to heavy business at the Radio City Music Hall in New York with a four-day gross upwards of $60,000. "How Green Was My Valley," another Fox film, now in its third week at the Rivoli in New York, drew an estimated $16,000 Friday through Sunday. MGM's "The Chocolate Soldier," at the Astor, did $6,200 for the same period, and "Weekend in Havana" at the Roxy, grossed $30,000 over the week-end.

RKO reports that "Look Who's Laughing" established the highest opening day figure on record for the Golden Gate Theatre in San Francisco. Items on Warner's "International Squadron": grossed $24,320 for a four-day period at the Strand in New York and has piled up a number of hold-over runs.

THREE MORE MAJORS GIVEN DECREE EXEMPTION TO SELL IN MINNESOTA

Warner, 20th-Fox, and RKO Freed by Federal Court from Blocks-of-Five Rule; Loew's Is Considering Move

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard last Friday relieved Warner Bros., RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox from the blocks-of-five clause of the consent decree in Minnesota to allow them to sell in conformity with Minnesota's state law requiring distributors to offer all their pictures for sale and not only blocks-of-five as per the decree.

Paramount and United Artists previously had been granted similar relief. They resumed selling in that state two weeks ago.

Loew's is the only one of the "big" five decree-bound companies which has not as yet applied for relief in the courts. It was indicated in New York this week, however, that Loew's was considering an application to the U. S. District Court for exemption from provisions of the industry-decree to permit its product sales in Minnesota under the state's anti-block-of-five law.

Judge Goddard also upheld the validity of a three-year franchise made by Fox and the Sudekum Circuit of Nashville. This deal involves 100 Crescent Amusement Company theatres and, although it was not formally signed, according to the Government's contention, until after June 6th, 1940—the decree deadline for such deals—the distributor produced deal sheets to show that preliminary agreements had been reached prior to that date.

Further Modification Denied

At the same time Judge Goddard denied a plea of Fox for modification of Section 7 of the decree which permits an exhibitor to cancel a film where it is objectionable to the moral standards of a community. Representing Fox, Frederick Lorenzen, attorney, argued that this clause was unnecessary and improper in Minnesota so long as an exhibitor in that state had the blanket right to a 20 per cent cancellation under the local statute. However, Special Assistant Attorney General Seymour Simon, disagreed with this contention, claiming that the Minnesota law did not affect Section 7 in any way.

The court concurred with the Government in opposing this phase of the Fox company application and denied the request, without prejudice to its renewal in the event of a subsequent motion.

Meanwhile, immediately following Judge Goddard's ruling giving Warner Bros., RKO and Twentieth-Century Fox the legal green-light on product selling in Minnesota, Benjamin Kalmenson, general sales manager for Warner's, issued a statement on Friday declaring that he was happy over the ruling and was glad that his company would again be able to sell in Minnesota. Mr. Kalmenson notified T. E. Mortenson, publisher of Greater Amusements, Minneapolis trade paper, that Warner Brothers had taken immediate steps to make their product available in that state. Mr. Kalmenson also said that the firm had been anticipating the action and had made their plans accordingly.

Another statement of the "wonderful news" regarding the Goddard ruling, came on Friday from Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, whose officers and members immediately called for a directors' meeting to be held in Minneapolis on Tuesday to study the product situation. Fred Strom, executive secretary of Northwest Allied, said "The court action will allow many Minnesota theatres to remain open, which otherwise might have had to close before the first of the year for lack of suitable pictures." Mr. Strom announced that his organization would take no steps to prevail upon MGM to seek relief in New York Federal court.

Loew's decision, meanwhile, on its future operations in Minnesota, slated for discussion by company officials on Tuesday, was delayed, due to the absence from New York of William F. Rodgers, vice president and general sales manager. It was understood that decision for action would be taken following Mr. Rodgers' return from Philadelphia later this week.

B. & K. EXPANDS CHICAGO CIRCUIT

Following three years of negotiations a deal was consummated this week whereby Balaban and Katz take over the Portage, Drake and Admiral theatres, Chicago, now being operated by the GSC Circuit. The properties are taken on a 20-year lease, effective January 1, 1942.

The sale was made with the full knowledge of the U. S. Department of Justice, according to Morris G. Leonard, general counsel for Balaban and Katz, as a case is still pending in the Chicago motion picture arbitration tribunal filed by the Portage Theatre against the consenting companies and involving properties of B. and K.

Mort Goldberg, president of the GCS Circuit, announced in Chicago on Tuesday that disposal of the three GCS theatres, Portage, Drake and Admiral, to Balaban and Katz, meant the dissolution of the circuit and its retirement from business, with negotiations already under way for sale of the Fox, Jeff and Revue.

Theatre Planned in Chile

Building plans have been approved by municipal authorities and ground will be taken in a few days for the Cine Metro, a new 2,000-seat theatre in Valparaiso, Chile. The Cine Metro, which is scheduled for opening April 15th, 1942, will be an orchestra-balcony type theatre with air conditioning and all other modern features. This is the second Metro theatre in Chile.

Overlapping of Trade Shows Hit

A movement, headed by Jack Kirsch, president of allied of Illinois, is underway in Chicago to facilitate trade showings there. Many complaints have come from exhibitors about methods of consenting distributors in arranging these showings. Conflicting dates, it is said, cause two and sometimes three screenings on the same hours on the same day. This lack of consideration for them, exhibitors say, is the main reason for the sparse attendance at some of the showings, particularly the morning ones.

Chicago exhibitors, as a rule, do not arrive on film row for the day's business until almost noon, with the result that morning screenings have practically no exhibitor attendance. Afternoon showings usually draw a representative crowd.

Mr. Kirsch wrote a letter to all distributors this week urging that each distributor select one day of the week as their trade showing day, in order to solve the problem of overlapping of screenings. He also suggested that morning shows be eliminated entirely and pointed out that when pictures are shown in the mornings and afternoons of the same day it becomes impossible for the exhibitor to carry on any normal or routine business on that day. As an example he said that a film screened at 10:00 a.m. would be over approximately at noon. Between the hours of 12:00 and 2:00 p.m. exchange employees are out to lunch, therefore when a second picture is scheduled for 2:00 p.m it is practically impossible for the exhibitor to transact any business that day.

Mr. Kirsch is advocating that screenings start uniformly at 1:00 p.m. with not more than two pictures shown on any particular day.

Famous Players Renews Frankling Hershorn Deal

J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has announced the renewal of an agreement with the Frankling Hershorn Theatre Company, Ltd., operators of a group of theatres in the Canadian Maritime Provinces, including the Mayfair and Dundas theatres in Dartmouth Community, the Family theatre in Halifax, the Mayfair, Regent and Palace theatres in St. John and the Community theatre in Yarmouth.

The Community house is now being rebuilt and redecorated.

Lasky at Twain Celebration

Jesse L. Lasky, now preparing the film production "The Adventures of Mark Twain" for Warners, has been selected as the city's guest at the annual Mark Twain celebration in Hannibal, Mo. The event, honoring the author's birthday, will be held December 1st.

Associated Acquires Theatres

Associated Theatres operating a circuit in Southeastern Michigan, is expanding into Ohio, taking over the closed 1,700-seat Strand at Cincinnati. Mort Maius, field manager of the circuit will be in charge of the opening.

ALLIED'S INDUSTRY UNITY PROGRAM WILL BE WRITTEN BY ALL: KIRSCH

Head of Illinois Unit Pledges Welcome for All Ideas at Meeting in December; Warns of "Playing Politics"

The industry moves toward that "unity meeting" in Chicago in December, under National Allied States Association sponsorship and with the hoped for attendance of distributors, and leaders of all other exhibitor organizations.

This week there was a continuing flow of comment from exhibitor leaders anent the practicability of the meeting, of forming a "united front" to the "outside" enemies of the industry, and of working out intra-industry differences.

Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, had his say Monday, at the annual convention of the Indiana Associated Theatre Owners, in Indianapolis. Any plan written at the forthcoming meeting would be written by the whole industry, he said, not by Allied alone. Allied, he asserted, had gone as far as it could in outlining the ideas of unity for all to act upon.

Others Should Aid

He added: "To have gone further would have been impertinent; the others who are expected to cooperate have a right to join the writing of the details. Allied was not so brash as to think it could write an elaborate plan in all its details, and expect the rest of the industry to swallow it."

Allied's methods have demonstrated its sincerity, Mr. Kirsch said. He warned of the danger, however, that "certain exhibitor leaders, instead of practicing the unselfishness Allied leaders have shown, may wreck the movement by playing exhibitor politics." Such actions, he said, would place "responsibility where it belongs."

In New York, with the probability of an all-industry meeting in Chicago in December growing, the Independent Theatre Owners Association, captained by Harry Brandt, circuit head, was reported planning to postpone or cancel its own such meeting.

The MPTOA, approving unity in principle, in a bulletin signed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president, last week drew a distinction between the aims of the forthcoming conference: a united front to outsiders, and establishment of fair trade practices within the industry.

Mr. Kuykendall doubted whether distributors would cooperate as fully as intimated in internal fair trade agreements: He said: "The easy alibi of the risk of anti-trust prosecution if they (the distributors) cooperate with each other to end industry abuses, and improve the business, is readily available for those who want to avoid responsibility."

He then added: "We have been trying to bring about negotiations with the distributors for many years, with varying success."

He also warned: "The whole approach to solving our difficulties by joint negotiation must be on the basis of good business, and an honest desire to build a better industry, not to hang onto unfair advantages, nor to grab something away from the other fellow. . . . MPTOA exhibitors await with much interest a definite indication that the major distributors will give organized cooperation to a trade practice program at this time. A favorable response, now or in the future, is all that is needed."

THEATRES ADOPTING "TEEN-AGE" PRICES

Independent exhibitors in Philadelphia have inaugurated a "teen-age" admission scale for school youngsters, permitting a reduced adult admission to those of in-between ages under 20. Theatres adopting the policy include Henry Friedman's Lansdowne, Herb Elliott's Fern Rock, Luke Gring's Erlen and the William Goldman independent circuit.

The plan calls for those qualifying for the teen-age admission to fill out an application, which calls for verification of age. Those qualifying are presented with membership cards in a Students Club, which when presented at the box-office, allows the recipient the reduced admission.

Majors Forcing Shorts, Is Allied Unit Charge

The forcing of shorts, contrary to the consent decree, was charged against the major distributors by Eastern Pennsylvania Allied at a meeting Thursday in Philadelphia. A resolution was also passed attacking the interlocking scheme of the distributors, mentioning Paramount specifically, of withholding the sale of one block of pictures until the exhibitor has bought the preceding block. Plans, not disclosed, were formulated to combat these discrepancies.

The Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska will discuss anti-consent decree legislation similar to that in Minnesota, it was predicted this week, before the convention, next Monday and Tuesday, in Des Moines. Other subjects to be discussed will be uniform fire regulations, an anti-ASCAP law, action against portable 16 mm circuits.

Circuits may be admitted to membership, by action at the meeting.

MGM "Exhibitor Forum" In Columbus Next Week

Approximately 600 exhibitors are expected at MGM's "Exhibitor Forum" to be held at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, Tuesday, with opening remarks by Henderson M. Richey, MGM's director of exhibitor relations, and Governor John W. Bricker, of the state.

He will be introduced by Martin Smith, Toledo, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Visitors, who will be introduced by Mr. Richey, who also will outline the purpose of the forum, will be welcomed by Edwin M. Booth and Frank D. Drew, MGM managers in Cincinnati and Cleveland, respectively. "Good Newspaper Advertising" will be the subject of an illustrated address by William A. Greene, New York, representing the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Association. A floor discussion and inspection of advertising aid displays will precede the 1 P.M. luncheon by MGM.

"Ideas That Work" will be dwelt upon by William R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation manager, at the opening of the afternoon session, after which Edward Salzberg, a Bluefield, W. Va., exhibitor, is scheduled for an address, "An Exhibitor Speaks."

The forum will conclude with an inspection of "The Show Builder," Metro's new mobile exhibitor aid unit, in charge of Ken Prickett.

The following Metro representatives are expected to attend: E. K. O'Shea, central division manager; John J. Maloney and Harris Wolfberg, district managers, and the following exploiteers: C. C. Deardourff, Cleveland, Charles Baron, Pittsburgh, William A. Slee, Detroit, Jack Gilmore, Buffalo, Irving Waterstreet, St. Louis, John E. Watson, Cincinnati, Ted Morris, Indianapolis. Todd Ferguson, Memphis, James Burge, Oklahoma City and Claude Morris, Kansas City.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio annual banquet will be held in the evening, with the organization's ninth annual convention opening the following day.

New Haven Allied Affair December 9th

Plans are progressing for the first annual movie dinner-dance, to be sponsored by Connecticut MPTOA, December 9th, at the Hotel Taft, New Haven. The party will begin at 7:30 p.m. with cocktails in the Ball Room, followed by dinner at 8:00, a floor show and dancing. George H. Wilkinson, Jr. of Wallingford is general chairman, Samuel Seletsky, Republic manager, treasurer, Herman M. Levy, secretary, Lou Schaefer, Paramount Theatre manager, chairman of entertainment, Harry F. Shaw, Loew Poli division manager, in charge of decorations, lighting and music, Lou Brown, Loew-Poli publicity chief, in charge of publicity. Film men and their friends from all parts of the state are expected to attend.

Officers, Directors Elected By Indiana Theatre Owners

The annual convention of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Allied unit, in Indianapolis, Monday and Tuesday, resulted in election of directors, as follows: Alex Manta, Maurice Rubin, H. Lisle Kreighbaum, Douglas Haney, A. H. Borkenstein, Roy Kalver, Marc J. Wolf, William Studebaker, J. M. Dixon, Leonard Sowar, P. H. Dickson, Sam Neall, Abe Kaufman, J. B. Sonce, Stanley Cooper, Walter Easley, Roy Harrold, Trueman Rembusch, S. J. Switow, Oscar Fine, Harry Kornblum, H. H. Johnson, H. P. Vonderschmitt, A. B. Thompson, Dudyey Williston, Fred J. Dolle and Carle Niesse.

In addition to Jack Kirsch, Illinois Allied president, whose speech is referred to earlier in this story, other speakers were Claude Lee, director of exhibitor relations for Paramount; Henderson M. Richey, the same for MGM; and George B. Loy, Indianapolis chief for the U. S. Secret Service;

Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, was the principal speaker at the convention. Mr. Myers mummarized the events of the past year, as they affected the industry and particularly stressed results of the consent decree. He questioned current selling methods, saying that much was being experienced under the new system which was no more satisfactory to him than it was to distributors. The Allied counsel also warned against additional taxation, pointing out that exhibitors are in an exposed business and that there is grave danger of increased levies.

All ATOI officers were re-elected for the coming year, at the close of the convention. Roy E. Harrold of Rushville, begins this third term as president. Other officers are H. H. Johnson, Madison, vice-president; Marc J. Wolf, Indianapolis, treasurer; Don Rossiter, executive secretary, and Christine Kirk, secretary.

SCREEN NEEDS 'MESSAGE' FILMS, SAYS KANIN, BRINGING ATTACK BY COWAN

Director, Now in Army, Tells National Board of Review Views on Present Films; Quincy Howe New President

"The movies are doomed if they insist upon producing only entertainment." Such was the statement delivered publicly, last Friday, by Garson Kanin, Hollywood director, who was drafted for the U. S. Army last Summer, rose to the rank of sergeant of the Signal Corps' motion picture training films center at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and is now with the information division of the Office of Emergency Management. Mr. Kanin delivered his remarks at the National Board of Review conference in New York last Friday.

"The recent Senate investigation was a farce because the producers, instead of producing too many pictures which might have propaganda value, have in reality done nothing in the interests of national defense," Mr. Kanin said.

Editor's Note: Exhibitors are invited to comment on the stand taken by Mr. Garson Kanin that the motion picture is doomed if it depends only on entertainment. Address the Editor, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York.

At the Saturday session of the conference Lester Cowan, producer and former executive secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, attacked the position taken by Mr. Kanin. "The movies cannot take any particular side in the controversy now going on in this country," he said, "but we will produce any movie which has entertainment value."

Mr. Kanin said: "The movie producers have the means to reflect what is going on in the country today, but because they refuse to be aware of the crisis in this country, they continue to release the same type of movie they were making five years ago.

The last film directed by Mr. Kanin before he entered the army was "Tom, Dick and Harry," RKO Radio.

Films Should Revive Hope

Pointing out that the motion picture could be a perfect medium for keeping the public informed, he said: "The movies could be this medium if the producers would become aware themselves of the conflicts in the world today. It is in the hands of the producers to release films which revive hope in this country. There should be many pictures in the theatres today which would remind people of the fine traditions of our country. The producers should realize that if they make pictures which tell the story of our contemporary history, they will be doing a great favor for national defense."

The motion picture will disappear "as completely as miniature golf," Mr. Kanin prophesied if it does not follow what he asserted was the example of the American stage—"become a part of American life which educates and inspires the audience into an understanding of human nature.

"The producers have been apathetic and uninformed," he continued. "The artists and writers are "eager to do all they can, but their hands are tied."

Mr. Cowan in an answer to Mr. Kanin the following day said: "Garson Kanin, in his criticism of movie producers, was indulging in the favorite pastime of taking a potshot at those in charge of production and blaming all the faults of the movies on them."

He said the basic blame should rest on the writers. "A producer will always make a movie," he said, "that has the quality and substance of good story and audience appeal.

"If a message is contained in the entertainment value of a film, so much the better, but it is not up to the movies to lecture or to preach," Mr. Cowan concluded.

Speakers who addressed the National Board of Review three-day conference included: Julian Bryan, James Shelley Hamilton, Louis Nizer, Dr. Frederick M. Thrasher, Elizabeth Hawes, Dr. Russell Potter, Bosley Crowther, New York Times motion picture critic, Morris Ernst, and many others.

A special screening of "Swamp Water," Twentieth Century-Fox, was held at the home office last week for the delegates.

At the final luncheon meeting of the conference on last Saturday election of Quincy Howe, executive of Simon and Schuster and WQXR commentator, to the presidency of the National Board of Review was announced.

Sportcast Productions Signs Bob Elson

Bob Elson, sports broadcaster for Station WGN, Chicago, and the Mutual Broadcasting System, has signed contracts as the star and voice of a new series of sports films to be produced in Chicago by the Sportcast Productions. The company is a subsidiary of the Teletone News Corporation, headed by E. M. Glucksman, who produced the Mentone musical shorts released by Universal several years ago.

It is planned to produce 52 reels yearly for which national distribution is now being arranged. First subject is expected to be released early in January.

Screen Obligation in Democracy Told by Martin Quigley

The contribution of wholesome public entertainment to the ideal of democracy was discussed by Martin Quigley in an address to a session of the Seventh National Catechetical Congress devoted to the subject of motion pictures in Philadelphia last Sunday, November 16th.

The presiding officer of the session was Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati and head of the Legion of Decency.

"The ideal of democracy," said Mr. Quigley, "based on the concept of the dignity of man and the subordination of the state to man's natural and supernatural purposes, demands strict and unswerving maintenance of right moral standards in public entertainment.

"Wholesome entertainment ennobles and strengthens a people. Vicious entertainment corrupts and weakens. People who give themselves to diversions which violate decency, honor and morality are in danger of losing even their national power. Entertainment based on right moral standards constitutes a bulwark of democracy.

"The organized motion picture industry in the United States has recognized the existence of the moral influence of the film and has accepted the attendant responsibility. There is to be found in that record an attitude and an accomplishment that is unique in the history of business.

Moral Standards Cited

"When in 1930 the industry entered upon a systematic program of maintaining right moral standards in its entertainment, it was the first time in the age-old history of theatrical entertainment that any such responsibility was so recognized and so provided for.

"The goal of good motion pictures—good in moral character and good in entertainment value—is not easily obtainable. It can be reached by no simple fiat despite much that has been said to the contrary. Good pictures must be supported, because if good pictures are not supported they will not be made. Alongside of the political axiom that a people gets the kind of government it deserves, it may also be stated that a people gets the kind of public entertainment it deserves."

St. Louis Symphony Opens

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Vladimir Golschmann, opened its sixty-second season last weekend. The orchestra frequently plays to capacity houses during the season. The Little theatre, directed by Gordon Carter, likewise inaugurated its season over the weekend with "Man From Cairo."

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR ENTERTAINMENT, EVEN IN WAR TIMES, SAYS GRIERSON

Canadian Wartime Film Head Calls It Prime Ingredient of All Films; Warns U. S. on Requirements for War

by MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

The strength of the motion picture industry derives solely from its value as entertainment, and wartime films, even those sponsored by the Government for specific purpose, must observe this precept first if they are to succeed in their mission, John Grierson, Canadian Film Commissioner, told the American film industry this week.

Mr. Grierson, who planned and set up the machinery which adapted the Canadian motion picture industry to the necessities of war, warned Americans that after realization of this basic truth, the second requisite was a separate Government department equipped to give professional attention to film matters and to facilitate cooperation among all factions.

As he was speaking, at the National Board of Review conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, Congress was taking final action on amendment of the Neutrality Act.

His talk was well received by 150 clubwomen present at the Board of Review meeting and there was polite applause at the conclusion, but few present indicated a realization that his experiences might become significant as tested standards for this country.

Defines Basic Policy

At the beginning of his speech Mr. Grierson defined the basic policy:

"The first and main plank in the film policy of the Canadian Government is a very simple one. We take the film industry as it is. We don't try, because there is a war on, to build some other kind of film industry.

"We take it the way it is: as a showmen's industry dedicated to showmanship and commanding the attention of a Canadian audience of two and a half million people who happen to be interested in and happen to need showmanship.

"We believe that the strength of the film industry lies precisely in the fact that it is an entertainment industry. What is most valuable to the state in time of war, as in time of peace, is that it commands a vast audience who go spontaneously for the emotional stimulus which the movies give them."

The Government wants to keep the audience in that mood and do nothing to drive that audience out of the theatre, he emphasized.

"The Canadian government did not wish to disturb the essential workings of the industry as an instrument of entertainment. In fact we pledged ourselves that whatever we might ask the theatres to carry in the way of public information would have to measure up to the normal standards of interest, entertainment and emotional stimulus, or we would ourselves be the first to jerk it."

The theory behind this position, the speaker said, is that in time of war information is not the most vital thing.

"There is no end of information. It comes along from a million and one quarters, in quantity and persistence and complexity enough to bewilder the soul."

What is desired, according to Mr. Grierson, is to help the people "to a simple pattern of thought and feeling." And he concluded that this required dramatic action and "the normal dramatic approach of the cinema is the right and most potent approach in times of war.

JOHN GRIERSON

"We put our work on a normal entertainment basis, and use that as a measuring stick of our success in public information," the Canadian Film Commissioner continued with marked emphasis. The monthly war series "Canada Carries On" is not given away but sold commercially because if it wasn't good enough to sell commercially the Canadian Government was no more interested in it than the film industry would be," he said.

Understanding Needed

The success of that policy was attested by facts mentioned by Mr. Grierson. "The series is going commercially to more theatres in Canada than any series ever did before—to about 90 percent of the theatres." It is a box office success at home and even outside of Canada, he commented.

The series has not been distributed in the United States, "because, we have been a bit diffident about operating down here," he added, and with an attempt at humor which did not meet with audience response; "We thought you might think we were trying to do something to you—or something—and we wouldn't hurt you for the world."

Summing up Mr. Grierson said, "It is essential that the Government should understand your industry and how to fit its needs and purposes to yours. In other words it must master the art of cooperating with you in your own terms of interest and entertainment.

"The cardinal sin in employing the entertainment industry as a vehicle of public information is to bore the people away from it. "No one is served.

"The public is not served; the industry is not served: and the Government is defeated in the very purpose it set out to fulfill.

The second basic principle for the relation between the Government and film industry in time of war, after the industry is accepted as an entertainment industry with an audience of millions that seek amusement and relaxation, is that the Government must "also know its own mind," in the words of Mr. Grierson.

He said his most difficult job as Film Commissioner was not keeping the industry in line but explaining to the various departments howling for screen space that the amount of screen time was strictly limited.

"The Canadian government's film interests are operated by a board called the National Film Board, a separate department which plans a common policy from all requirements of the various government departments.

"The main point is that the departments are not allowed to hive off on their own; they can't go to the industry and clamour for this favor or that, and weary a complex business with piecemeal, amateur and catch-as-catch-can requests," he pointed out.

"On our side," he continued, "we do what we can to help the trade in all their problems which involve processes of Government or facilities or sometimes the use of the Government's authority and prestige."

"Minimum Number of Channels"

Although Mr. Grierson emphasized that he was making no suggestions to the United States, his comments appeared to have some relation to the reported jurisdictional disputes between American Government agencies supervising certain aspects of the motion picture. See the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, October 11, page 15.

"It is the duty of the Government," Mr. Grierson said, "to coordinate its requirements and speak, if possible, through a single channel, or at least through a minimum number of channels. What must be avoided is the confusion of a hundred and one public relations departments shouting for film attention: rivalling each other, duplicating and overlapping each other's efforts and operating in different and contradictory and non-professional lines of approach. That way you can only achieve utter confusion in which the poor industry, with all the best will in the world, cannot be expected to do a good job for its country."

Although an attempt of unification of the Government's film relations was made in England, the results have not been too successful, according to Mr. Grierson, "While the Ministry of Information initiates some fine films, like 'London Can Take It' and 'Target for Tonight,' the bad ones it does on pressure from the various Government departments, pull its standard down and make the Ministry of Information no great shakes on a credit title."

"Must Have Definite Policy"

The Government in its war relations with the motion picture industry should have a definite policy and ideas, Mr. Grierson concluded. "But it will be wise to leave a great deal of initiative to the industry itself and while motivating the industry and exercising proper controls in the national interest, the Government should, in general, leave it to operate that business of production and distribution which, one may presume, it knows by experience far better than anyone else.

"The contacts between a Government at war and the film industry are not to be solved by government order or by blueprint or by a purely governmental or academic approach but the contacts must be intimate, and they must be co-operative, and they must be continuous, and they must be creative," he concluded.

An occasional word or expression during his talk stamped Mr. Grierson as a native of the British Isles. He was born in Scotland but his university education was completed at Chicago. For years he was a leader in the documentary film movements. Since 1939 he has been directing the Canadian government's motion picture activities.

Louder and Funnier

They're back again by public demand.

It was only last January that Bud Abbott and Lou Costello marched into the hearts of the public and exhibitors alike with "Buck Privates." They stayed there with "In the Navy" and "Hold That Ghost." Now they're on the spot again.

But enough of that. What you want to hear is that the boys are still terrific; still the answer to a box office's prayer. They are all that and more. If they have been funnier than in "Keep 'em Flying" then by all means get a repeat booking. For "Keep 'em Flying" is a laugh test, a great big dose of merriment designed to wear out the audience—but happily.

There are so many scenes that are so completely funny it is difficult to pick any for special mention. In one, a telephone booth sequence, Costello carries on a conversation with William Gargan that had the reviewers and guests at the screening clinging to their seats.

While the Abbott and Costello team consumed most of the footage, and naturally so, there are other embellishments which would do justice to any production about the air corps. The story has a romance and a songstress in Carol Bruce, a foil to Abbott and Costello in Martha Raye playing a dual role, the best thing she has done, a hero in Dick Foran, and some stirring aerial photography.

Glenn Tryon, the associate producer and Arthur Lubin director can take credit for a job well done.

"Thin Man" Released For Thanksgiving

"Shadow of the Thin Man," the MGM film starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, will be the Thanksgiving week attractions in 42 key city situations, with engagements started in Seattle and Portland, Ore., on Wednesday, and on Thursday in 27 other spots. The new "Thin Man" film is scheduled to start runs in Omaha and Denver on November 26th, and in Tulsa, Canton, Reading, Harrisburg, Houston, Nashville, Atlanta, Memphis and Wilmington, on November 27th.

"Sergeant York," the Warner-Jesse L. Lasky production, will open in Boston on November 28th, at the Metropolitan Theatre. Two days prior to the premiere date, Warners will give a press showing for Boston critics and editors. Phil Engel, eastern field publicity representative for the company, left New York for Boston on Tuesday, to work with a group of Warner field men on the campaign.

"York" will play two weeks at the Metropolitan and then will play two weeks at both the Fenway and Paramount, giving it six weeks of consecutive first run playing time in the Hub. Within three weeks after the Boston premiere, the picture will open in 10 key Mullin and Pinanski houses.

Arthur Van Dyck Elected

Arthur Van Dyck, manager of the Industry Service Section of the RCA Laboratories, has been elected president of the Institute of Radio Engineers. The Institute has more than 7,000 members in 74 countries.

Danziger Leaves MGM

William Danziger has resigned from MGM's advertising department, in New York. He had been with the company seven years.

Army Flies for Universal's New 'Keep 'em Flying'

With national defense as its theme, Universal held a pre-release "world premiere" of Abbott and Costello's "Keep 'Em Flying," in Detroit, Wednesday, preceding a proclamation by the United States Army Air Corps of a nationwide "Keep 'Em Flying" program, beginning November 27th. Both Army and city officials aided the Detroit program.

Detroit entertained Hollywood notables, among them Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Carol Bruce, Dick Foran, Arthur Lubin, Maria Montez, and others.

Mayor Jefferies proclaimed "Keep 'Em Flying Day" in Detroit, and the activities began with a "Keep 'Em Flying" rally on the steps of City Hall. Speakers represented labor, management and the United States Army. A parade up Woodward Avenue to the Fox Theatre, where the premiere was held, followed.

Air Force Participates

The Detroit City Council approved the display of an Army plane in Cadillac Square opposite City Hall, in cooperation with the Army Recruiting Service. The City Council also approved the hanging of a "Keep 'Em Flying" banner on City Hall.

At noon, Wednesday, Selfridge Field staged a mass flight over the city, "bombing" it with leaflets supplied by Universal.

Mutual Broadcasting set a broadcast from the lobby of the Fox Theatre on the night of the premiere, in which distinguished guests participated.

Detroit newspapers set "Keep 'Em Flying" special sections of cooperative ads.

The Ford Motor Company took the Hollywood guests and press correspondents on a tour of their plants, followed by a luncheon. Ford also took pictures of the tour to be planted with the various photo syndicates and to be sent out on the regular Ford mat service to papers throughout the country.

Headed by Dan Thomas, publicity chief of Universal studios, a staff of studio exploitation men, including Bob Moak, Tommy McLeod and John Baker worked with Dave Idzal, manager of the Fox Theatre in Detroit.

"Pulham" in Boston

The world premiere of MGM's "H. M. Pulham, Esq., will be held in Boston, locale of the J. P. Marquand novel, on December 4th, at Loew's State and Orpheum theatres. Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young and Ruth Hussey share starring honors in the film which was directed by King Vidor.

Warner Brothers' Technicolor short subjects, "The Gay Parisian," and "Spanish Fiesta," starring the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, will be press previewed at a cocktail party on December 2nd, at Fefe's Monte Carlo in New York. The company is preparing a feature picture press book for the Ballet two-reelers and is planning a portfolio of special material which will be distributed through public and private schools, colleges, dancing, music and art schools in 75 leading cities.

Norman Moray, short subjects sales manager, reported that on his recent trips to company exchanges, theatre men requested the first of the two shorts be released in December to be available for Christmas-week programs.

WHITNEY GROUP PLEDGES LATINS "THE TRUTH ABOUT AMERICAN WAY"

Film Division of Rockefeller Committee To Combat Nazi Propaganda with "Authentic Picturizations" of Life in U. S.

"The truth about the American Way" is the aim of the motion picture program of Nelson Rockfeller's Office of Inter-American Affairs according to John Hay Whitney, head of the film division.

Mr. Whitney indicated that the Nazi attack in South America on the American Way was a charge of "Yankee exploitation."

"The 'American Way' is its own best ambassador and any future films sent to Latin America, as far as humanly possible, will be utterly truthful and authentic picturizations of American life and objectives. We will not combat false impressions with anything but facts," he said.

Mr. Whitney, Monday, in his first conversations with the press following his return from a two month tour of Latin America described an extensive program to interchange short subjects and documentary films between the United States and other Latin American republics. Accurate motion pictures, he told trade press editors and reporters, will best familiarize the peoples of the western hemisphere with each other.

Plans Educational Films

During his trip through South America, Mr. Whitney said, he conferred with government officials, educators, and businessmen in Brazil, Argentina, Chile, and other principal countries on the United States' plans to exchange educational films and insure accurate depiction of the countries in all motion pictures.

"Everyone, from President Vargas of Brazil down, expressed a great desire to see more of the United States' way of doing things," Mr. Whitney said, explaining the augmented Latin American film program, "we intend to show them, in unvarnished, straightforward, interesting documentary-type films how people in this country live, what they do to make a living, where they go to school, how they play and the other rudiments of the American way which are to us elemental, but which to the Latins are of great interest."

Hollywood will work out details of its cooperation in the program next week when executives of the major companies, in California for annual fall studio conferences, will meet with Mr. Whitney. They will discuss plans for the production of short subjects and 16 mm. product.

At a meeting with home office heads at the Links Club in New York last Wednesday Mr. Whitney described his tour of Latin America and Nelson A. Rockefeller outlined what Hollywood would be asked to do at the meeting next week to insure that both theatrical product and special short features should accurately depict the American Scene. Professional Hollywood talent would probably be asked to make special documentary pictures here and in South America, it was said.

Among executives expected to attend the Coast conference with Mr. Whitney are George Schaefer, Nicholas and Joseph Schenck, Harry M. and Jack Warner, Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Harry and Jack Cohn, Walt Disney, M. J. Siegel, William C. Michel, N. J. Blumberg and John J. O'Connor. Studio heads, including Darryl F. Zanuck, Louis B. Mayer, Joseph Breen, and others will also meet with Mr. Whitney, to discuss making both 35 mm. and 16 mm product. United Artists representation had not been determined; the company this week was setting up a new regime. (See page 27.)

There is a great desire for American educational films throughout South America, Mr. Whitney said. He reported conversations with President Vargas and Roquette Pinto, Brazilian minister of education. They requested U.S.-made films for South American schoolrooms, he said. Chile's foreign minister, Juan B. Rosetti, likewise expressed a keen desire for wider exhibition of U. S. educational films and is setting up a special committee to cooperate with the Coordinator's office.

In most of the other South American capitals committees are being formed from members of the government, local educators and businessmen and members of the American colony and diplomatic staff to cooperate with the cultural program of the Office of Inter-American Affairs. Motion picture sub-committees will relay requests for films direct to Mr. Whitney, he indicated. In every instance his office will endeavor to supply the type of instructional picture requested, whether they are of general type or medical, scientific, classroom or other specialized nature.

100 Shorts Selected

Kenneth McGowan, 20th Century-Fox producer on loan to the coordinator's office, is supervising production of the 16mm pictures. To date he and his staff have viewed approximately 2,000,000 feet of film from the short subject vaults of the major producers and from specialized technical film libraries, Mr. Whitney said. Approximately 100 titles have been selected to date and are being translated and edited for export.

An initial program of about a dozen subjects has already been sent south, it was reported, with approximately 25 more pictures ready for distribution. Both new and reedited product will soon be ready in an uninterrupted stream, Mr. Whitney predicted.

CULTURAL PROGRAM DEPENDS ON TRADE

The promotion of cultural relations with Latin America, including the Government's motion picture program, will be to no avail unless this country maintains an uninterrupted flow of essential commerce to South America, Lieutenant Colonel R. B. Lord, assistant director of the Economics Defense Board, warned in New York on Tuesday.

"You can send all the books and moving pictures you want," he said, "but deny them goods or hold them up for exorbitant prices and it will be of no avail."

Colonel Lord spoke to a luncheon meeting of the Export Managers Club. He said that the "spirit of cooperation that now exists," with South America depended first on the uninterrupted flow of trade.

Distribution, wholly non-theatrical, will be handled through an organization being set up by Phil Reisman, RKO foreign manager, who has been lent "part-time" to Mr. Whitney's office by George J. Schaefer, president of RKO. Mr. Reisman's setup will handle distribution of 35 mm. Latin pictures reduced to 16 mm. form, in this country as well as the U. S. pictures in South and Central America.

Mr. Schaefer said that Mr. Reisman had been authorized to devote "all the time formerly required by his European activities" to forming the new South American distribution system.

Technical aides to help improve the quality of South American shorts made for United States distribution are being sent to Brazil, Argentina and Chile by his office, Mr. Whitney revealed. Another aspect of this same plan of technical help to the Latin American film industry, he said, was the Coordinator's cooperation in bringing to this country Jorge Delano, Jr., who will work in a Hollywood studio with the aim of taking back to Chile a knowledge of U. S. technique.

Mr. Delano is the son of Jorge "Coke" Delano, noted Chilean artist who made the first motion pictures in Chile. His family is related, through ancestors who emigrated from the United States, to the family of Hyde Park Delanos from whom President Franklin D. Roosevelt derives his "D."

Walter Wanger will succeed to the post recently vacated by Kenneth Thomson as executive secretary of the Motion Picture Society for the Americas, Mr. Whitney disclosed. This is the Hollywood group which works with the Whitney office on production. Mr. Thomson found it necessary to resign to devote more time to the Screen Actors Guild, of which he is executive secretary.

David Hopkins, a member of Mr. Whitney's staff, will join Mr. Wanger's group as special assistant to the Coordinator soon after January 1st, it was announced. Mr. Hopkins, the eldest son of Harry L. Hopkins, formerly was an account executive with Buchanan and Company, advertising agency, handling 20th Century-Fox and other film accounts.

His brother, Robert, formerly with the March of Time, is also in government service, a U. S. army volunteer assigned to the Signal Corps, with the rank of private.

Hawkinson to South America

R. K. Hawkinson, Latin American division manager for RKO, was scheduled to leave New York, November 21st, for a South American business trip. Besides Buenos Aires, his first stop, he will visit in Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Colombia and Panama. He will be gone about two months.

British Short Booked

"A Letter From Home," the short subject that was directed by Carol Reed and recently sent to this country from England, has been booked into the Radio City Music Hall in New York starting Thursday, November 27th. United Artists is releasing the film.

MGM Signs Eros Volusia

Eros Volusia, Brazilian dancer, has been signed by Metro Goldwyn Mayer and is now en route to this country for her film debut. She will dance for the first time for American audiences in "Rio Rita," which is on MGM's early production schedule.

SEARS, RAFTERY, KELLY, LAWRENCE, BAGNALL, HEAD NEW REGIME AT U.A.

Former Warner Sales Manager Becomes Vice-President in Charge of Distribution, Raftery Named President in Shift

Long pending, United Artists' new management was disclosed Monday afternoon, by David O. Selznick, who lately joined that company as a producer-partner, also after negotiations protracted and pregnant.

Mr. Selznick called the trade and newspaper press to his Waldorf Towers suite Monday afternoon; and, after they had been regaled with cocktails and attendant demi-sandwiches, and with informational tidbits from assembled United Artists executives, they were told officially, and by handouts from the company's publicity department, that the new executive lineup was as follows:

Gradwell Sears, vice-president and general manager of distribution.

Edward Raftery, president and general counsel.

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and chairman of the finance committee.

Laudy Lawrence, vice-president and executive coordinator.

George L. Bagnall, head of the production committee.

The order of the roster, naming Mr. Sears on top, is official and has been indicated as indicative of agreed corporate policy.

Sears Contract for Five Years

Until two weeks ago, Mr. Sears had been vice-president in charge of sales for Warner Brothers. His resignation there had been preceded, and followed, by reports he would join UA. His new contract runs five years, provides salary plus a percentage of UA earnings. He takes office Monday.

Mr. Raftery had been general counsel. He continues as that and will not relinquish his partnership in the law firm, O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery.

Mr. Lawrence had been for many years manager of European operations for Loew's, and, recently, assistant to Mr. Selznick, a post he now resigns.

Mr. Bagnall had been general manager of Alexander Korda Films. He gives up that post.

Mr. Sears and the company are understood to have conducted their original negotiations, some weeks ago, with a view to establishing Mr. Sears as company president; Mr. Raftery had not been mentioned. Much of what happened subsequently is conjecture, but there was a report from Hollywood that UA producer-owner Charles Spencer Chaplin had ideas of his own as to who was to be UA president.

The new executive realignment may be followed by sales force realignments, not yet disclosed. In the meanwhile, UA let it be known the board of directors' former duties would in the main be assumed by an "executive committee," comprising Messrs. Raftery, Sears, Kelly, and Lawrence.

There will also be a "production committee," headed by Mr. Bagnall; this will comprise representatives from each of the four studios now composing the company's production mainstays: Selznick, Pickford, Chaplin, and Korda.

Daniel T. Shea, executive vice-president of the Selznick studio, has been appointed Selznick agent on this committee; others will be appointed this week and next.

This production committee, the company said Monday, will manage UA's financial interests in various productions. And it will also operate the new United Artists Productions, Inc., which is the "100 per cent" owner of Walter Wanger Productions, Inc.

In this connection, it was disclosed, the new UA production company owns "Sundown" in entirety, and also "To Be or Not to Be," being made by Mr. Korda, under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch, and with Carole Lombard and Jack Benny as stars.

Mr. Kelly's finance committee comprises himself, Mr. Raftery, Mr. Lawrence, and Harry J. Muller, the company's treasurer.

How many pictures UA will produce on its own in its new producing career, what money it will spend, and what sales policy will be followed, are to be determined by UA executives in consultation with Mr. Sears.

The company did state Monday that it would expand its picture schedule, increasing "the amount of independent product which it is presently handling."

The present lineup of independent producers includes Mr. Selznick, Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin, Mr. Korda, Edward Small, Hal Roach, Arnold Pressburger, Richard Rowland, and Harold Hurley.

In the Selznick Suite

The melee was heightened shortly there-knotted pine, spacious living room of the Selznick suite in the Waldorf Towers, in which his brother, Myron, also maintains an apartment. UA sales executives poured into this room and the adjoining foyer and serving room. When Mr. Sears and Mr. Raftery made their appearance the congratulations were effusive and overwhelming. There were many introductions as Mr. Sears met his new salesmen.

The melee was heightened shortly thereafter by the rapid arrival of numerous executives from other film companies and of exhibitor leaders: Joseph Schenck, former president of United Artists, and formerly chairman of the board of Twentieth Century Fox; Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc.; Ned Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales for RKO; Harry Brandt, head of the Brandt circuit; John Hay Whitney, former partner of Mr. Selznick, and now head of the film section of the Nelson Rockefeller division of cultural relations between the American republics; Malcolm Kingsberg, of KAO; Charles Koerner, executive head of the RKO circuits; Sam Rinzler, of the Randforce circuit.

Mr. Sears said that afternoon there would be no shakeup in the UA home and field sales forces. Mr. Lawrence, who, it is understood, will supervise the foreign department, said Walter Gould would continue in charge, and there would be no changes at present.

Mr. Selznick praised the acquisition of Mr. Sears as distribution head, thus:

"Speaking for Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin, Mr. Korda and myself, I should like to say that I feel United Artists is fortunate indeed to acquire the services of Gradwell L. Sears, who in our opinion is the outstanding sales executive that the industry has developed. Mr. Sears brings to our company an experience and a reputation in distribution consistent with our objective of making United Artists the foremost releasing organization in the entire field, the natural outlet for the highest type of independent product, upon which we think the future of the industry to so large an extent depends."

Leo Spitz, Chicago lawyer, was Mr. Sears' counsel and negotiator in the deal with United Artists.

Mr. Sears is a native of Missouri, and an alumnus of its University. He entered the film industry while in high school—as a projectionist. After World War Service, and business experience with the Wells-Fargo express company, he became salesman for the World Film Company, under George Schaefer, now RKO president. He then was associated with Republic, Selznick, and Vitagraph, of which he became vice-president, and then president in 1939.

It was said Monday that Mr. Raftery's presidency was without contract, and to run for one year.

Presidency Vacant Five Years

United Artists' presidency has been vacant approximately five years. Its last tenant was Dr. A. H. Giannini. Temporary administrative heads since then have been Miss Pickford, George Schaefer, Maurice Silverstone, and Mr. Kelly. Rumor in recent weeks had mentioned Mr. Schaefer, Joseph Bernhard, and William F. Rodgers as likely to be appointed.

Carl Leserman, who resigned from Warner Brothers two weeks ago, with Mr. Sears, and was his assistant there, was among those present at the Monday announcement, which did not mention his name. However, it was bruited that Mr. Leserman might shortly be appointed to a UA sales post.

United Artists' new production plans, presumably requiring financing, is producing discussions with the Guaranty Trust Company and other banks, according to reports in New York Monday. Mr. Kelly said at the reception that the company had $1,200,000 in assets. He also added it would probably make eight to ten pictures per year, or be responsible for them.

Rumored a producer, shortly, for UA, is Charles R. Rogers, former Universal vice-president, and last a producer for Paramount.

Monroe W. Greenthal, United Artists director of advertising and publicity; David E. Weshner, exploitation director; and Albert Margolies, publicity director, flew to Hollywood this week to confer with United Artists producers on campaigns for a number of pictures, among them Alexander Korda's "The Jungle Book"; Arnold Pressburger's "The Shanghai Gesture"; Edward Small's "Twin Beds"; "Heliotrope Harry," and Charles Chaplin's new version of "The Gold Rush."

They were accompanied to Hollywood by Morris Helprin.

REPORT WANGER MAY RETURN

The return of Walter Wanger to the United Artists fold was reported possible in New York almost immediately after the announcement of the new company management. Mr. Wanger is due east in three weeks. It is said that he will then negotiate with Mr. Raftery and Mr. Sears for UA release of his pictures.

MGM's home office in New York postcards all to hurry and view its latest short subject, a super-shocker, from Edgar Allan Poe's "Tell-Tale Heart," to see how: "First of all I dismembered the corpse. I cut off the head and the arms and the legs. I then took up three planks from the flooring and deposited all between the scantlings. I then replaced the boards so cleverly, so cunningly, that no human eye could have detected anything wrong. There was nothing to wash out —no stain of any kind—no blood spot whatever. I had been too wary for that. A tub had caught all—ha! ha!"

The RKO-Disney press agents at headquarters in New York insist that the press tell all about how Walter Elias Disney's cartoonists employed parachute troops and dive bombers to simulate old Mr. Stork to deliver the young of the many circus animals who rough and tumble through the new "Dumbo."

The "Dumbo" storks-for-elephants are no heavy-lidded, slowly-winging messengers, both RKO and Disney advise. "They streamline across the Florida skies, where the picture begins, and, 'peeling off' in vertical dives, pelt their bundles from heaven in parachutes down to the winter quarters of the circus," explains the RKO-Disney press document, adding:

"All this twentieth-century squadron stuff is done to the rhythm of a new crackerjack Disney tune, 'Look Out for Mr. Stork'."

THE FOREIGN DEPARTMENT of MGM at the home office in New York apparently believes that a glossary of those "little Americanisms" used by the distributing organization should accompany printed matter issued by the company for the edification of its exhibitor customers abroad.

Some place on the high Atlantic, we presume, tucked down in the hole of a ship in convoy, are copies of a new MGM sales bulletin to which Dave Blum, of the company's foreign department in New York, has tacked an Englishman's interpretation of slang and terms which Mr. Blum believes might be unintelligible to the overseas customers, the English interpreter being Richard Haestier. Mr. Haestier's glossary of MGM's "little Americanisms," specially prepared for MGM's British exhibitors, follows, in part:

A GRAND: 1,000 dollars. An abbreviation of the "grand feeling" induced by possessing so much money, or you would have if you did have.

A SKID ROAD BEANERY: A roadhouse where you "slip" in to have a cheap meal.

BIG SHOT: The boy who can fire you.

BARBECUE PIT: An alfresco cooking pit. Many a raw deal is prepared over a campfire.

CRAP GAME: Liable to give spots before the eyes and a bad liver.

CELLULOID HANGOVER: A sensitivity of nerves that makes the bubbling of health salts sound like a thunderstorm.

GRUNT AND GROAN BOUT: A wrestling match in which grunting and groaning make the pain more pleasurable.

LEGAL MOUTHPIECES: Lawyers. They speak for those who cannot speak for themselves.

NICKEL: One makes a waiter cross; two make a "dime", five a "quarter". Worth about 2½d. before the war.

PRETZEL BENDER: One who ties his opponent in knots. In the sense used in this it refers to wrestlers. A pretzel is a thin biscuit tied in a knot and baked hard.

RARE STEAKS: Not so rare as they should be, because they are, of necessity, underdone. Literally a raw deal. About the only sort of a raw deal an American likes.

STRAIGHT SHOOTER: An honest man. An ideal's his bull's-eye; a raw deal his black eye.

SECOND STORY MAN: A thief who can climb so high in his profession and no higher. A cat burglar who never goes on the tiles. American burglars, like Society, have their own level. A second story man never steals from any other floor. If he did, thieves might fall out—of skyscrapers.

TABLOID: A newspaper so small that it has room only for headlines.

TRIGGER MEN: Bodyguards. Nervous boys who shoot on fright.

WACKY WOMAN: A pleasantly crazy woman, inclined to nit-witticisms.

WHITE LIGHT DISTRICT: A misnomer for Broadway, which is more literally—but only literally—a red light district. But the censorial Hays Office would object to such a description.

ARBITRATION COSTS OWNERS $58 A CASE, REPORTS STURGES OF AAA

Legal Adviser to Association Analyzes Film Arbitration for Law School Audience; Sees Relations Improved

Arbitration costs exhibitors about $58 per case according to Wesley A. Sturges, legal adviser to the American Arbitration Association and Sterling Professor of Law at Yale University.

The per case cost to exhibitors was calculated at $58.18 by Dr. Sturges from statistics on 40 representative cases selected from the 129 actions filed with the AAA up to October 25th. He delivered this first official public analysis of arbitration costs during a lecture at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. on Monday.

Dr. Sturges, a leading authority on arbitration law and a member of the motion picture arbitration administrative committee of the AAA delivered a Julius Rosenthal Foundation law invitation address at the Northwestern University Law School. Speaking on "Law Enforcement by Consent Decree and Arbitration in the Motion Picture Industry" he told an audience of law students and Chicago attorneys how the arbitration system set up by the consent decree has been used to settle disputes between distributors and motion picture theatre owners.

Attorney Fees Not Included

Based on the 40 representative cases the per case cost average of $58.18 to the complaining exhibitor has been distributed as follows: Filing cost $10.90; Arbitrator's fee, $11.64, and stenographic costs, $35.64. The average cost to the defending distributors has included a filing cost of $1.44; arbitrator's fees, $3.45; and stenographic costs, $24.75 or a total of $29.64. These do not include fees for attorneys, he reported.

Professor Sturges attributed the relatively few number of cases filed to date with the 31 regional tribunals of the AAA to the desire of both distributor and exhibitor to conciliate and to uncertainty by some exhibitors as to how much arbitration will cost them. To the question of "Why has there been so few arbitrations under the consent decree?" Dr. Sturges raised the opposing question of why should there be any more. He called pre-arbitration estimates of the number of complaints unfounded.

"It seems to be widely conceded that any complaints of exhibitors which might have materialized in a demand for arbitration under the decree have been settled by negotiation without arbitration. I have been told that it has become the general policy of at least some of the consenting defendants to endeavor to settle such complaints without going to arbitration. To the extent that this is true, apparently the arbitration system has performed an important stand-by service in aid of the provisions of the decree," he declared.

"Apparently, also, there are those exhibitors who prefer to 'deal' and 'bargain' for such advantages for themselves as they can get rather than invoke their 'rights' under the decree," he said. "This 'dealing' and 'bargaining' may be carried out singlehanded or by becoming allied with stronger units whether in a chain, group or otherwise."

"It also appears that some exhibitors will have nothing of the decree nor of the remedies with which it is implemented, either because of distaste for the decree, alleged fear of retribution if they invoke their rights or because they think that the remedies are too slow or too costly."

To aid the latter group, Professor Sturges remarked, "It may be hoped that the factors of time and expense of the remedies under the decree may be improved, if practicable, as further experience shall teach. It seems entirely clear, however, that neither the costs and expenses of the arbitrations under the decree have proved very onerous to the complaining exhibitors nor does it appear that the amount of time elapsing between the date of the demand for arbitration and the date of the award has proved adverse."

"As for those who plead poverty in the motion picture business, it must be remembered that that business as compared with other businesses, or, with the professions, seems to be found in the bankruptcy courts or in debtor-relief proceedings only rarely," he commented.

Of the 129 cases analyzed by him, Mr. Sturges said, an award had been given in 51, 27 in favor of the exhibitor and 24 in favor of the distributor; 28 were dismissed and 50 were still pending. There were 92 clearance complaints, 25 under Section 6 for "some run" and 12 were for clearance combined with other causes. The average time consumed on a case has been 86 days. The shortest one lasted 27

Appeal Board Restores Clearance in Washington, Boston Complaints

The arbitration Appeal Board this week again amended the clearance reduction granted by an arbitrator. In its tenth decision the board held that the elimination of clearance granted the Apex theatre, Washington, D. C., by Louis M. Denit, arbitrator, was not warranted and ordered that the maximum clearance held by the Warner Uptown and Calvert theatres from MGM be cut only to five days after the run of whichever of the two theatres shall show a picture first. Fred S. Kogod and Max Burka operate the Apex.

The appeal ruling, while upholding the arbitrator's finding that present clearance over the Apex is unreasonable, asserted that the facts did not support the ruling that there was no competition between the Apex and the Calvert and Uptown and that any clearance was unreasonable.

The existence of any competition, even though slight, can warrant clearance, although it must be reasonable in time and area the board held. They wrote:

"Only in cases in which it is clear that there is no real competition would an arbitrator be entitled to abolish clearances as purely arbitrary. Where there is competition clearance must be fixed on a reasonable basis, as permitted by Section VIII of the Decree."

In setting the five day margin after the first of the two Warner theatres to play a picture the Appeal Board said:

"Where two theatres in the same competitive area are owned and operated by the same exhibitor and enjoy the same run they may properly be considered together in determining a reasonable clearance over any theatre enjoying a subsequent run."

The ninth decision of the Appeal Board, dated October 31st and released this week by the AAA, modified the dismissal by John Daly, arbitrator, of Boston's second case and granted the Garbose Brothers Capitol and York theatres in Athol, Mass., a run one day after the Shea and Fitchburg theatres, Fitchburg, Mass., and not later than 14 days after Boston. George A. Giles' Orpheum and Uptown theatres in Gardner, Mass., intervenors were granted the same availability after Fitchburg.

Mr. Daly in his decision in July dismissed the Garbose complaint, citing the clearance schedule of the motion picture code of the NRA as the basis for fair and reasonable clearance in the area. The Appeal Board declared that when competition is slight clearance to be reasonable must be short.

Loew's, 20th Century-Fox, Warners, and RKO were ordered to cut the Fitchburg margin and provide availability "not more than 14 days after Boston" as protection against delay by Fitchburg theatres in booking available product.

"Anything less than a one day maximum clearance would result in abolishing clearance entirely, which an arbitrator has no power to do under the Decree where the theatres involved are in the same competitive area and are in competition with each other. Of course the parties themselves by mutual agreement may abolish any maximum clearance fixed by an arbitrator," the Appeal Board wrote.

Costs were equally divided among all parties.

days and the longest one 178 days.

A major portion of Professor Sturges' 85 page lecture reviewed the history of the decree, its legal form, and the mechanics of its administration. To the audience of students and lawyers, some of whom have appeared in arbitration actions before the Chicago tribunal, Professor Sturges emphasized that he had attempted to draw no inference on the success of the film consent decree but to merely sketch its operation.

New York

An intervenor, the Wilbur Amusement Company, operator of the Alvin theatre, New Brunswick, N. J., this week appealed the award of Robert A. Bruce, arbitrator, in New York's ninth case. The Alvin protested against the reduction from 14 to seven days of its margin over the Colony theatre, operated in Sayreville, N. J., by M. L. Rothman.

New Haven

J. Lewis Cannon, Jr., president of the Grand Theatre Corporation, operator of the Grand Theatre, New Haven, has filed a clearance complaint against Loew's, RKO, Warners and 20th Century-Fox, New Haven's sixth arbitration case. The complainant states that clearances actually established and agreed upon have been revoked and the terms thereof violated, making its clearance of no use or protection. He also charges that prints have been arbitrarily withheld, although available. A clearance of not more than seven days after the Pequot, operated by Harry L. Lavietes, is sought, and it is also asked that prints be made available at once under current contracts.

Chicago

A complaint filed November 12th against the five consenting companies by Ray Jarman, operating the Don theatre, Downers Grove, Ill., claims that unreasonable clearance has been given over him to the Westmont theatre, Westmont, Ill., and Balaban & Katz' Tivoli theatre, Downers Grove, Ill. He asks that the maximum clearance between the theatres involved be "reasonably reduced." The case is Chicago's 11th.

A demand for clearance was filed November 13th my Benjamin and Albert Bartelstein, operating the Annetta theatre, Cicero, Ill., against the Big Five claiming that in licensing pictures to the Villas theatre, Cicero, operated by Lasker & Sons, and the Palace theatre, Cicero, operated by Schoenstadt & Sons, they have granted unreasonable clearance. It is the 12th Chicago case.

A declaration of intervention in case No. 9 was filed on November 12th by the A.J.B. Theatre Company, operating the Liberty theatre, Libertyville, Ill., in the Alcyon theatre, Highland Park, Ill., clearance case.

Case No. 8 the clearance complaint filed October 16 by the R & G Theatre Corporation, operating the Olympic Theatre, Cicero, Ill., has been withdrawn by request of the complainant.

Philadelphia

A fifth day of testimony was completed last Friday at Philadelphia in Case No. 11, the clearance complaint of A. M. Ellis' Parkside theatre, Camden. The hearing was continued until this Friday (21), when Judge Joseph J. Varbalow, intervenor, in behalf of his Victoria theatre in Camden, will examine witnesses.

It is expected that upon the completion of the case, all parties to the action will agree to have all the testimony applicable to Case No. 10, Mr. Ellis' clearance complaint in behalf of his Liberty Theatre, Camden. The situations are similar in both cases, involving Metro, Warners, RKO, Paramount and the Warner theatres. Robert J. Callaghan, Jr., local attorney, is the arbitrator for both complaints.

A decision is expected next week from Arbitrator Calvin H. Rankin in the third of Mr. Ellis' clearance complaints, Case No. 9, in behalf of his Broad theatre, Philadelphia.

Memphis

Memphis' third case, the some run action of the Cotton Bowl theatre, Lepanto, Ark., was withdrawn this week after one hearing. Warners, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount and the Strand theatre had been cited.

Portland

William F. Graeper this week settled and withdrew his clearance case against Paramount, MGM, RKO and 20th Century-Fox and the Fox West Coast circuit, and Hollywood, Oriental, Paramount, Orpheum and Liberty theatres. Terms were not revealed. The demand sought a reduction from 91 to 45 days clearance.

Detroit

The demand of Erving A. Moss for a specific run for his Parkside theatre immediately after downtown Detroit first runs developed into the most hotly contested case yet heard in Detroit as hearings on Monday before former governor Wilbur M. Brucker continued until almost midnight. Michigan Cooperative and United Detroit theatres registered bitter opposition to the demand.

Hearings in the clearance complaint of the Ritz theatre, Watervliet, Mich., were completed in one day, November 13th before arbitrator Paul Voorhies, former state attorney general. Mr. Voorhies will render his decision before December 23rd following receipt of briefs.

Honor Rubin, Manente

The Loew-Poli theatre staffs in New Haven and Bridgeport, Conn., as well as many friends will gather for a testimonial dinner and dance in honor of Nat Rubin and Frank Manente at Seven Gables Inn on the Milford Turnpike, Monday night, December 1st. Mr. Rubin, who started as usher at the Poli, New Haven five years ago, has just been promoted to the managership of the Lyric, Bridgeport, while Mr. Manente, former student assistant at the Poli, New Haven, is the new assistant at the Globe, Bridgeport. Bob Russell, Loew-Poli manager, under whom both worked, is chairman of the event, assisted by Bob Portle, manager of the College, and Ted Teschner, manager of the Bijou.

Fire Destroys Theatre

The Sawn theatre, owned by George Goodwin, was almost completely destroyed by fire at Bastrop, La., recently which caused $16,000 damage to the house which was partly insured. Mr. Goodwin said he plans to rebuild at an early date.

Resident Agent Changed

AMPA Shorts Luncheon Honors Mrs. Besa Short

The short subject film was singled out for attention last Thursday at the Hotel Edison in New York, by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, who drew 500 film industry leaders to one of the sprightliest affairs ever achieved in AMPA history.

Mrs. Besa Short, head of the short subject department of Interstate Circuit of Texas, was the guest of honor. Mrs. Short traced the history of the department, citing the maxim set down by R. J. O'Donnell, circuit chief, "If short subjects are worth producing they are worth buying, and if they are worth buying they are worth selling." She explained the extensive and well-planned 16-cardinal-point program inaugurated eight years ago which made selling short subjects to the Southwest successful, and termed the double bill the worst enemy of shorts. Mrs. Short emphasized that the day of the deadly line on theatre programs, "also selected short subjects" was gone with the wind in the Southwest, and she expressed the hope that exhibitors throughout the country would learn, as other theatre managers have in her territory, that shorts are vital to good program-building.

Sees Full Program

"Short subjects," she said, "properly selected and exploited can comprise a full two-hour film program without the presence of a feature picture." Interstate Circuit, she added, stands practically alone in the field in that double features have not become a policy in its theatres and that some two-hour shows consist entirely of short subjects, with many such programs breaking records as money-makers. Only by giving shorts the same kind of advertising and publicity campaigns as features was this accomplished, she said. In certain instances, Mrs. Short pointed out, shorts were billed over feature pictures.

Interstate started with one shorts department head and one assistant and now has four booker-secretaries giving personal attention to each of the 462 changes of program in 165 theatres operating in 35 cities and towns in Texas and New Mexico, Mrs. Short reported.

Robert Benchley, actor and creator of the famous-funny series of shorts, was master of ceremonies and keyed the luncheon to the proper pitch of entertainment which AMPA set with community sings, door prizes, souvenirs and colorful decorations.

Short subject sales managers of the majors, seated on the dais were: Norman Moray, Warner Bros.; Oscar Morgan, Paramount; Bernard Kreisler, Universal, Max Weisfeldt, Columbia; Harry Michalson, RKO and William Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox.

John Kieran, of "Information Please," Graham McNamee, of Universal's newsreel, Grantland Rice, Craig Wood, Don Baker, Don Terry, Juanita Juarez, Ed East and Polly of Colombia's "Kitchen Quiz," Jack L. Warner, were among the other dais occupants. Vincent Trotta, AMPA president, was chairman and Abbott and Costello drew appreciative applause following five-minutes of their well-known baseball-confusion routine.

William S. Hart, who is in New York in connection with Warner Bros.' "One Foot in Heaven", received a rousing ovation from the industry executives and personnel present, when asked by Mr. Benchley to "take a bow." Earle W. Hammons, introduced as "the father of the short subject" also was present.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

L. A. Letter

Esteemed Editor:

As you doubtless guessed, those Eastern press reports of havoc wrought by a tremblor in these parts last weekend were exaggerated in conformity with custom. Some candelabra swerved enough to establish doubt of liquor in the minds of cafe customers, there was some rattling of window panes, but no damage to studio premises, equipment or personnel occurred.

The Torrance theatre, in the hamlet of that name downstate a way, was the only cinema property affected by the disturbance. Up to now not even one press agent has built up a story about the narrow escape of his client, which gives you an idea. Only literally was it an event of earth-shaking importance.

More important to the personnel of the community just now than anything else save possibly the next picture and next year's taxes are a number of matters which group readily under the broad heading of charity.

The annual Community Chest Campaign, under chairmanship of Dr. A. H. Gianinni and with Louis B. Mayer in charge of the motion picture division, is well ahead of last year's mark, at this point, with a new all-time high confidently in view. Attainment of this objective will bring the total of the film colony's contributions to the Chest and its 88 beneficiary institutions to well over $2,500,000 for the period of its participation in the undertaking.

The Motion Picture Relief Fund progressed another step toward realization of its Country House ambition, an $800,000 project, when at weekend Mary Pickford, President Emeritus of the Fund, donated a cottage to be named in memory of her mother. Miss Pickford's is the twelfth bungalow pledged to the Fund, others having been donated by Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor, Otto Kruger and daughter Ottillie, Y. Frank Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Arnold, Jean Hersholt and Osa Massen, Billie Burke and Ralph Morgan, John Stahl, the late Louisa Closser Hale, Charles Feldman, the Artists Managers Guild and the Screen Directors Guild.

This week Friday Hollywood Boulevard becomes Santa Claus Lane, in its annual metamorphosis, with nightly paradings of screen personalities atop such a sleigh as only Hollywood can dream up for the kiddies and, of course, the shopkeepers. Likewise denoting the approach of the Yuletide in a community where slacks and sports shirts are still standard for daytime wear, MGM's Fred Quimby is demanding space on all Clipper planes for conveyance of his "Night Before Christmas," Technicolor cartoon, to all the foreign countries still open to American product and the Spirit of Christmas.

Activity in connection with the practical side of the community's endeavors is noted in a product-report appended hereto.

Activity of a different sort animated the Burbank studios of Warner Brothers immediately following the return of S. Charles Einfeld, director of publicity and advertising, after a two-months' stay in the East. Implementation of a reorganization designed to increase company cooperation with exhibitors required addition of personnel, reassignments and other changes.

Close collaboration with exhibitors in behalf of individual pictures is the major objective of the new Einfeld plans, which contemplate expansion of field forces and an increase in the staff of exploitation and publicity men who will tour the continent in behalf of exhibition success for Warner films.

Focal point of interest on the local box-office scene continues to be the run of "Citizen Kane" at the Hawaii, where the queues form nightly at dinner time and await with patience their turn. Still advertised in the Hearst papers simply as "Big Screen Attractions," the picture is being talked about, by the professionals who will do the balloting, as a candidate for some of the Academy Awards. Just how the Hearst press across the nation would handle the annual "must story" of the Awards, if "Citizen Kane" happened to figure in it, is, shall we say, a matter of fascinating speculation.

PARAMOUNT PIONEERS POST-PREVIEW CASTING

Casting history is to be made by Paramount when it screens its ten-year-old "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" in post-view, so to speak, at the Paramount theatre in downtown Los Angeles for the purpose of inviting the customers to select a cast for the 1941-42 remake of the subject.

Patrons will be supplied with cards on which they will be asked to name the players whom they wish to see play the roles which Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Donald Meek, Virginia Weidler and Edith Fellows played in the original version.

Up to now only Carolyn Lee has been cast for the new "Mrs. Wiggs", which John Fante is scripting and Ralph Murphy will direct.

Product Tie

Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were tied at weekend in the production race (a purely hypothetical contest) with eight pictures in shooting stage at each studio.

RKO-Radio was in second position with six films before the cameras and Warners third with five.

Arnold Pressburger's "Shanghai Gesture" is off the shooting stages and in the cutting room, with censors and public still to be convinced that it's enough unlike the original to satisfy today's standards and still enough like it to do business under the original title, but Producer Pressburger is confident of the outcome to the extent of signing Joseph Von Sternberg to direct a picture a year for the next three years and Ona Munson to act in four more of Pressburger's independent productions. United Artists is releasing "Shanghai Gesture."

NEW PRODUCT CAST ASSIGNMENTS SHOW EMPHASIS ON NAME VALUE

Three Roles Each Set for 8 Top Actors; 18 Stars of Tomorrow Given Important Parts in Features in Work

by VANCE KING
in Hollywood

Seventy-five name value players cast in a total of 116 assignments in two and a half months—that's Hollywood's score in continuing its drive for casts which give exhibitors dynamic material for their marquees. And at the same time, the development of the younger players into boxoffice attractions has increased in intensity.

Since the MOTION PICTURE HERALD's preseason casting roundup (Aug. 16, 1941) which showed 139 stars and featured players cast in a total of 342 roles, studios have cast eight top actors and actresses in three assignments each; 24 in two assignments each; and 42 in one assignment each. Some of the old and some of the new roles have already been completed; some of the former assignments have been temporarily set aside in deference to the newly announced parts.

"Stars of Tomorrow" Cast

Of the 25 top ranking "stars of tomorrow" in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll of exhibitors, 18 have received new duties in the last month, five getting two roles each and the remaining 13, one apiece.

The eight stars receiving three new roles each are Ronald Colman, Olivia DeHavilland, Brian Donevy, Judy Garland, Cary Grant, Bob Hope, Raymond Massey and Ginger Rogers.

Colman's next picture will be "Mr. Twilight," at Columbia, in which he will co-star with Jean Arthur and Grant. Then he will do "Random Harvest" with Greer Garson at MGM and a Howard Hawks production at RKO.

Miss DeHavilland since August has finished "The Male Animal" at Warners and is working in "In This Our Life" and will do "Miss Willis Goes to War" at the same studio.

Donlevy, having been given a new contract at Paramount last week, has made "South of Tahiti" at Universal, and is working in "Twin Beds" for Edward Small—United Artists now. He next will do "Trinidad" at Columbia.

Coming up for Miss Garland at MGM in recent assignments are "Very Warm for May," "Girl Crazy," and "The Youngest Profession."

In addition to the "Mr. Twilight" role, Grant is working in "Arsenic and Old Lace," being produced and directed by Frank Capra at Warners, and will co-star with Miss Rogers in Gabriel Pascal's "Arms and the Man" for RKO.

Hope has, in addition to his other pictures, "Treasure Chest," for Samuel Goldwyn, with release unset; and two Paramount pictures, "Road to Moscow" and "Road to Morocco," both of the latter to be with Bing Crosby.

Having finished "Dangerously They Live" at Warners and working in "Arsenic and Old Lace," Raymond Massey will next go into "Ethan Frome" at the Burbank studio.

Plus her role in "Arms and the Man," Miss Rogers is now working in "Roxie Hart" at 20th Century-Fox, and has a commitment at Paramount to do "The Crystal Ball."

The name players assigned to two roles each since the start of the new season, and their pictures, some of them finished, some of them in work, and others to come, are:

"DUMBO'S" N. Y. PERFORMANCE

Since Walt Disney's fantasy of the flying elephant, "Dumbo," opened in New York four weeks ago, at the Broadway Theatre, it has grossed $108,068, playing to 211,000 persons including 45,000 children. The Disney film, released through RKO, is appealing to more adults than children, it was pointed out at both RKO and Disney offices this week. Figures for last Sunday support the contention; of the 9,576 patrons at the theatre, 1,925 were children.

A break-down of "Dumbo's" gross receipts at the Broadway, is as follows: for the first three weeks it played, $14,352; the first week, $31,841; second week, $32,034 and third week, $29,841.

With mezzanine reservations filled at the Broadway for all shows on Thanksgiving Day and for this weekend, the theatre expects a record attendance by school children home for the holidays. "Dumbo" has been playing continuous performances since it opened.

WORD - OF - MOUTH!

The success of a single short subject series, John Nesbitt's "PASSING PARADE," produced by M-G-M, is doing this industry more good than reams of editorials and testimonials.

To have good pictures they must be supported. To do fine things on the screen requires the co-operation of the theatres. All credit to the exhibitors of America for their judgment in booking and supporting the "PASSING PARADE" series.

The public has indicated its absorbing interest in these shorts that tell of the little events that make living an exciting experience. The sincerity of their production, the sound manner of their exposition in the best magazine tradition, the span of their source material across the by-ways of life make them subjects of extraordinary human appeal.

To those thousands of showmen who have already taken John Nesbitt's "PASSING PARADE" to their hearts, we are grateful. To others who have not yet given their audiences the opportunity to experience the warmth and inspirational thrill of these brilliant little entertainments, we urge an immediate booking. Try them once and you will become an enthusiast for one of the best offerings the screen affords.

RKO Plans Bomber Film

The story of the men in the Army air service who operate the secret bomb-sights and drop the bombs on targets from bombing planes will be filmed by RKO. The title will be "Bombardier," and will be produced by Reeves Espy, with the full cooperation of the United States Army.

Mainstreet Theatre Reopens

The Mainstreet theatre in Kansas City, Mo., has reopened after being closed for several years. This is the second largest theatre in the city and the new program will include a combination stage show and first run films.

Woods with MGM

Henry Woods is the new MGM checking supervisor in New Haven, Conn., succeeding Frank Mullen, resigned.

Regents Board Passes John Steinbeck's Film

The New York State Board of Regents on Friday, November 14th, overruled the ban of the State Board of Censors on the John Steinbeck film, "The Forgotten Village." The regents promptly granted the picture—with the scenes of childbirth and a nursing mother—a license for public exhibition.

The picture, produced by Pan American Films, Inc., is a documentary of rural Mexico. The censors contended that the scenes showing primitive childbirth and the nursing were "indecent, immoral and tended to corrupt morals." Herbert Kline produced the film from John Steinbeck's book, and Mayer-Burstyn are the distributors.

Stage Shows Booked

Harry Fried's Anthony Wayne Theatre in suburban Philadelphia has been converted into a legitimate house for Mondays and Tuesdays. The house has been leased for the two days each week to Nat Burns and Henry Harris, who last summer gave a season of stock productions at the Yardley Theatre, Yardley, Pa. "Philadelphia Story" was presented by the stock company for its opening production, and for subsequent shows, the producers plan to bring in screen players such as Josephine Dunn, Fay Wray and Michael Whalen. Screen shows continue to prevail at the theatre for the remainder of the week.

Drive Leaders Announced

First week's standings in the annual Comerford Circuit Theatres Managers drive as a salute to Frank Freeman were announced by the Comerford home office in Scranton, Pa. Leaders in the six divisions are: Group A—Gregory Beck, Capitol Theatre, Williamsport, Pa.; Group B—Jack Mahon, West Side Theatre, Scranton, Pa.; Group C—Walter Yanovich, Lyric Theatre, Honesdale, Pa.; Group D—Robert Schmidt, Temple Theatre, Berwick, Pa.; Group E— Charles Collins, Columbia Theatre, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Group F—Lewis Hartman, Rialto Theatre, Sunbury, Pa.

Capitol Theatre Sold

The Capitol theatre building in Milford, Conn., has been sold to I. J. Hoffman of New Haven. The property houses the Capitol theatre, seating 800, two stores, offices and lodge rooms, Berk & Krumgold, theatre realty specialists of New York, handled the negotiations for the sale of the building.

FWC Signs Altec Service

Altec service has been appointed to service a large group of Fox West Coast first run and preview theatres in the Los Angeles, Pasadena and Long Beach, Cal., areas. Included in the group also are first run houses in Arizona and in the San Joaquin valley.

Zanuck Plans "Valley" Sequel

Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century-Fox, has announced that he is planning a sequel to "How Green Was My Valley." Richard Llewellyn, who wrote the novel from which the film was made, has been engaged to write the sequel under the title, "Men of the Valley."

Ascap Resumes In Washington

An agreement reached last week between Attorney General Smith Troy of the state of Washington, and the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, paves the way for ASCAP to resume licensing of Washington theatres, radio stations and other music users and to collect fees accrued to the Society since 1937. John G. Paine, general manager for ASCAP, and Herman Finkelstein, attorney, met with Mr. Troy in Seattle to complete the agreement.

It is estimated that about $250,000 in fees is due the Society for the last four years when the Washington anti-ASCAP law became effective. About half of the amount is due from radio, and a good portion of the remainder from theatres.

To Pay Back Fees

Under the agreement, ASCAP will file a list of its compositions with the secretary of the state, as required by statute, and it will drop its appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court of the Federal statutory court's decision upholding the validity of the 1937 state law, which provided for such filing of ASCAP songs. Since the law was enacted, Washington theatres and radio stations have paid no ASCAP fees. Under the new agreement, however, they must obtain licenses and also will have to make agreements with ASCAP on payments for music used by them during the four-year period.

ASCAP officials met with exhibitors of the state in Seattle last Friday to work out agreements on license fees. A compromise payment was expected.

Meanwhile, in New York, station WQXR, the city's station of recorded "good music," signed with ASCAP last Thursday, after imposing the ASCAP-ban since January 1st, along with NBC and CBS, who settled their music-squabble three weeks ago. WMCA, WHN, WNEW and WOV, New York independent stations, have been using the Society's catalog during the last ten months. The ASCAP ranks among the city's independents are now solid, except for station WEVD.

Increase Urged in Canada

ASCAP, through the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd., and BMI Canada, Ltd., proposed an increase last week of fees to be collected in 1941 from radio, and exhibitors, according to the Canadian Gazette. During 1941, PRS was permitted to collect $107,612 and the proposed schedule for 1942 calls for $203,660.

A semi-annual fee of $20 also was suggested by PRS, to be paid for each portable sound producing and motion picture projector and an annual fee of $10 for coin phonographs. BMI proposed that for 1942 a levy of $38,792 from radio, as compared with $13,451 paid for 1941. BMI, however, made no proposals for increasing fees other than those from broadcasting. The BMI request is equivalent to one-third of $116,377, which amount is computed on the basis of eight cents for each of the 1,454,717 radio sets licensed in Canada on March 31st.

Those who have objections to the new fees must file particulars with the secretary of state before November 30th, it was reported.

Broadcast Music, Inc., announced on Monday a new eight-year contract to succeed the current one which expires on March 12, 1942. Under the new contract, BMI's license fees will continue to be based upon a sliding scale related to the gross income of the station.

BMI is the music publishing company set up by the broadcasters when radio put the ban on ASCAP music last January 1st. Continuance for BMI was provided for in the recent peace-pact between ASCAP and NBC and CBS.

More of what the Exhibitor has to say About most Everything

THE MOTION picture exhibitors in this current flow of expression, now being presented in weekly installments, express many and divergent points of view about many aspects of the screen, but they do agree most emphatically that they are in the amusement business—that the product is important, regardless of all other considerations in the world, only if it sells seats.

The motion picture industry in this free America has to make its own living, working for the people who turn to the box offices to buy entertainment. The exhibitor who enjoys no glories of publicity pontificating about "social messages" and preachments on issues, can be rewarded and kept at work only with merchandise that enables him to pay himself off. That is what he is saying in this flood of responses to Motion Picture Herald's invitation to speak his mind, in letters, signed or unsigned, as his situation may require. Everyday's mail brings more and more exhibitor expression in the inquiry. There has never been another manifestation quite like it. But always, it is the Herald where the exhibitor may be found having his say. —THE EDITOR

¶ When "Buck Privates" proved such a great hit, I expected Hollywood to produce many war comedies. As yet they seem to be pushing sophisticated comedies and big action stories. I believe that most patrons, at the present, would prefer some war-time slapstick features. When Metro made the "Great Waltz," it made one of the greatest money-makers for Canadian Theatre. This feature was played many times in one year to capacity audiences. The Strand Theatre, in Toronto, showed it seven times in one year, and did exceptional business at every showing. Why haven't they brought the stars of this feature back in another hit?—AL PERLY, Community Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Canada. (Circuit)

¶ Get away from slightly clad females in pictures. This seems to be getting out of hand again and is going to give the churches a good dig at the industry. Why does a studio permit tremendous salaries be paid to employees and executives? Don't the people who attend theatre read these articles and don't they hurt our industry? (Wisconsin circuit)

¶ Mr. Leonce C. Belanger, Box 141, Cape Cottage, Maine, would like to see a good movie for a change. He claims that so far this season (1941) all the movies have laid an egg (not a pigeon egg, either). (Army theatre)

¶ Good pictures. Less selling to exhibitors and use this money to make better pictures. "Less selling" means circulars and other advertising intended for exhibitors. We are not paying for entertainment. The public is the one who pays—so sell them. (Texas circuit)

¶ Fewer pictures. (Washington circuit)

¶ We want right to buy the particular pictures we need, on their unit merits. Pictures are worth 25 per cent here, no more. Give Western and serial makers a boost. Theatres would be 100 miles apart, except for the oats operas. But, dang it, we still love the business. —J. R. PATE, Assistant Manager, Royal Theatre, Samson, Ala. (Circuit)

¶ I would like to see the blocks-of-five plan discontinued, with some new plan devised to make distributors deliver all product announced for a given season. Also would like to see a 20% elimination become policy of all companies. S. JACKSON, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton Ala. (Circuit)

¶ Pet annoyances: The poor type of "B" pictures that the public must sit through in order to see the feature "A" picture. Also the turning of the "most interesting business in the world" into department stores by give-aways.

Pet hope: The elimination of "double bill" programs which we are forced to play. Exhibitors spoiled the public by getting them used to two or three pictures for a small admittance charge, but I'm sure many exhibitors would welcome a change back to single bills only.—JOHN C. SPERDAKE, Monkland Theatre, Montreal, Que. (Circuit)

¶ Smaller standardized press sheets. Metro is showing the way with the later releases. What is more annoying than these over-sized, stiff-paper press books constructed like a Grecian labyrinth that you have to spread all over two desks in order to find anything. (New York circuit)

¶ One of the things that I believe is the chief annoyance of the movie going public is all talking pictures. To be more exact, the pictures cluttered with "All gab and no go". The next in line for a large share of the general complaint are the stories, where do they get them. It will always be a source of amazement to me that it is simple to find a good book, but never simple to find a good picture. Once in a while we find that some producer has read a good book, but it is a cinch the writers that rewrite a book into script form never did, in fact one often wonders if they can read. UELA McMINN, Beacon Theatre, Superior Wis. (Circuit)

¶ Producers must stop releasing films for countryside free shows. This is our greatest opposition. (Wisconsin circuit)

¶ Cut out present form of buying and selling. 5-5 is no good. Give us the old way. (Texas circuit)

¶ The people seem to enjoy most pictures of common every-day people like "Kitty Foyle," people they seem to know and understand. They seem to like pictures with good laughs in them. They like pictures with heart-stirring scenes, but with a happy ending; singing, dancing; pictures that are entertaining and don't leave them feeling sad. We need more pictures with this in them. (Rio Theatre, Wharton, Texas. (Circuit)

¶ If the studios would make a variety of pictures and stop running any particular scenes on the ground the patron would realize movies are the source of variety as well as of entertainment. (Texas circuit)

¶ Greater care in casting. Major studios should stop duplicating each others' successful pictures. All exhibitors can say on duplication is—"Greater than 'So and So,'" which is definitely unfair to producers of original hit and is generally a lie, anyway. "A" and "B" pictures are bad enough. Leave off the "C" and "D"!—J. I. DENHAM, Port Lavaca, Tex. (Circuit)

¶ I believe every company should make some streamline features to play with long features. It is important that a feature should not be too talkative and more action. People come to be entertained, and therefore it's a good policy not to confine local in one or two sets but should move about as much as possible to the seashore, out in farm, in the woods, in the mountains, to picturesque streams, real street scenes and many other places too numerous to mention. V. MARTINO, Rialto, Albion N. Y. (Circuit)

¶ Better production heads a la Thalberg. Less war propaganda and more red-blooded American stories of which there are plenty.—JACK LYKES, Toledo, Ohio. (Circuit)

¶ I believe that the Quigley Awards are wonderful, but I think M. P. H. could do a lot for managers if they would drop a line to the bosses of these struggling managers and call their attention to these little articles that mean so much to these boys. If the gags are good enough to appear in the M. P. H. Maybe the bosses will notice, also, that these guys are getting out and working.

Also, I believe its up to the film companies to fight these 16 mm-35 mm jackrabbits, as they are called. You can't even fight them with the fire laws, for they are using safety film. (Iowa Circuit)

¶ Thanks for this space. Just want to say that when those brass hats in the production end of the picture business learn that when the average theatre patron reaches Junior High they know more about pictures, stars and release dates than the average exhibitor.

Am just the hired man, but just as long as

"Give us Practical Selling Campaigns"

the producers try to shove such pictures as "Bowery Blitzkreig" and "Flying Bind," and a lot of others that I have played recently, they are going to have trouble with exhibitors.

My beef is due to the fact that I work on a percentage and when they make a picture that has no possibilities they want so much for it that does not take care of the dark brown taste left in the patron's mouth from the last great $7.50 boxoffice wow that they sold you for $35.

Thanks again for the space; just opening the show to try and sell another one of the lower class group. (Texas circuit)

¶ To better this industry: stop giving out the stories to screen magazines so the public can read them before they see the picture.

Give us more American actors and actresses, so the public can understand what they are saying, as it is hard for some people to understand the movies without listening to some foreigner try to mumble out something we cannot understand, and, above all, this would-be foreign "glamour" of which I believe every one is getting sick of. In short, give us some good wholesome, down-to-earth pictures that are true to life, then let the public read them after they have seen them, and we will get some dough in the boxoffice.—LEO STEPHANY, Music Hall Theatre, Newport, Ky. (Circuit)

¶ Make less "C" & "D" pictures. It is not the big pictures that cost exhibitors money, it's the small pictures that can't make house expenses or overhead. Big gross pictures even 50% ones are the ones that make money for exhibitors. (Utah circuit)

¶ It seems to me that in every picture they are making nowadays that somewhere in the picture they take the camera and just swing it around and around, not letting it rest on any one thing in particular. And with that they have 3 or 4 settings on different things on the screen at the same time. You never know just what you are looking at for sure. These two things, I think we can get along very well without.—CHARLES HEMENWAY, Mgr., Ritz Theatre, Booneville, Ind. (Circuit)

¶ Eliminate double features in all class houses. (Texas circuit)

¶ The public to pay as much attention to the advertising on a picture you will positively play, as they do to one that has been taken out through no fault of yours, and blame you for the substitution. When they wouldn't have come to see "the other" picture even if we had played it.—FARNELL STANCIE, Centerville, Ala. (Circuit)

¶ Our theatre (a chain house) is located in a town with less than 1,000 population. We depend mainly on rural patronage and I can safely say that 90 per cent of our customers prefer westerns. The other 10 per cent make up our sophisticated group who come only to see Betty Davis or Joan Crawford. Naturally we can't run a western every day because of the shortage of product, but I am satisfied that if we did run this type of show our business would start climbing.

We keep the house open every night weekly, playing the super-colossal dramas of love, grand operas, etc. Five days of hard work that doesn't gross as much as our 1 to 11 shows on Saturday!

What's to do about it? Oh, yes, occasionally we get a Bob Hope or Abbott and Costello show that will gross, but along comes Gene Autry and Bob Steele and pushes these guys into the background. My suggestion is for the producers to stop ignoring a gold mine and give these folks of the soil what they want. —CECIL G. WINSTEAD, Piquant Theatre, Angier, N. C. (Circuit)

¶ A good serial, or continued story, to be played weekly in the A house. Such a picture can be made by eliminating cliff hanging and railroad beheadings, by substituting elements that are directed toward an adult mind—mystery, suspense, romance in a more dignified manner than the usual serial formula. Story similar to "The Door," which would be ideal.—F. WILSON, Waco, Texas. (Circuit)

¶ Our pet annoyance is Metro's sliding scale. Another annoyance is the exchange's continuous demands for short subject standing orders. Another pill are various drives. (North Carolina circuit)

¶ In my opinion, the theatre industry could profit by having better pictures and by making these pictures run shorter than they do now. When the film companies make a good picture it is usually too long to really enjoy. Also double features should be cut out.—W. H. WOODLEY, Ritz Theatre, Hickman, Ky. (Circuit)

¶ Limit size of film cans to three double (2,000 feet) reels. Eliminate double features. Exchange paste labels inside all film cans, giving accurate running time. Exchanges should have accessories ready before picture is completed so that first runs may have use of them before playdate. (Florida circuit)

¶ There is too much money spent by the producers in selling and advertising product to the exhibitors, when that money could be spent to a better advantage by directing said advertising at the show-going public. (Texas circuit)

¶ Stop this war propaganda and make good down-to-earth attractions at a fair price. Do away with dual bills. (Illinois circuit)

¶ Lack of cooperation on the part of the producers and exchanges in helping the exhibitor to sell high percentage pictures. (Iowa circuit)

¶ Motion pictures that are more entertaining from a higher intellectual standpoint, are the crying need today. It has been said that the motion picture appeals to the moronic type, in past surveys. Today, we need to raise our standard to appeal to classes that are gradually being lost, for want of pictures, not classical pictures, but with greater "mental-meat" in them. (Minnesota circuit)

¶ What I want more than anything else from this industry is more constructive aid in the form of suggestions on selling pictures. For instance, when they make a picture why don't they get somebody in the publicity department who can and has once sold a picture in a big city and some one who has in a small city and work out practical selling campaigns, not a press agents dream, but a campaign that will actually sell theatre tickets. I think they should start out by giving you the selling points on that picture and then working out novel ideas such as heralds, teaser gags, trailerettes, lobby displays, street ballyhoos and the like, something with some "meat" in it. Put it all in the press book where a guy can get some ideas. It's hard for a man in a town of my size to campaign every picture (I play four and five a week) without some helpful suggestions from somewhere. My town has 5,000 people, a one-horse newspaper, no radio station, etc. I can't put on the same type campaign here that your Radio City boys can. Why don't those guys realize that? Why don't they give more attention to accessories and newspaper mats? Tell 'em to give us paper that cut-outs can be made from. I can't have photos blown up on pictures without sending them to New York. Put some of these big timers wise to such and a million other things, Terry; you can do it!—FRED REID, State Theatre, Hendersonville, N. C. (Circuit)

¶ Why is Chicago so far behind the national release date? The theatre I manage is located in a community where the people are able to afford summer and winter vacations and as a result each time these people return from either Florida or the North Woods, their complaint for weeks is that they have seen all the pictures I am running in some small town or village. This also prevents us from deriving any benefit from the national advertising campaigns put on for some pictures as it is some-

ALEXANDRE DUMAS' MASTERPIECE OF ADVENTURE AND ROMANCE

The CORSICAN BROTHERS

The giant entertainment triumph that dwarfs all previous achievements of the adventure screen! Twins—born as one, separated at birth—yet linked thru life by a mysterious bond that made the emotions of each instantly felt by the other! When one fought furiously with his sword, the other suffered the pain of his wounds. When one kissed a beautiful woman, the other—a thousand miles away—thrilled to the magic of her lips! Strange love, strange thrills! Awesome spectacle, slashing sword-play thundering across the screen with all the glory that only Alexandre Dumas, master story-teller of all time, could give it!

"Better Advertising for the Small Town"

times three months before those pictures reach us. Illinois (Independent)

¶ We must have either—(1) elimination of double features or (2) higher admission at boxoffice or (3) lower cost for product. Also (4) divorcement of distributor and affiliated theatre. (5) forcing of unwanted product. Until the above is brought about the poor exhibitor is stuck behind the eight ball.—OSCAR A. BROTHMAN, Avaloe Theatre, Chicago, Illinois (Independent)

¶ When are the "chain" theatre operators going to quite glueing their eyes on the P. & L. sheets and the budgets and put a few of their better "Pipe Organs" back to work? There are hundreds of really excellent organs that could be made into a real asset again. But, I mean present it right, with a good organist and sell it with dollars, not 10c experimental policies. The cycle is due again. I have experimented right here in my own theatre and I'm sure I'm right.—E. STUTENROTH, Fox Theatre, Burlington, New Jersey (Indepenedent)

¶ We have a conviction that pictures made for the "Art Critics" have no place in small community theatres. Naturally every theatre operator is operating for a profit and there is no profit for him in a "class" picture due to limitations of people who enjoy such. I propose the industry avoid "Oscar" on a boxoffice basis, that is how theatre business is kept running. (Independent)

¶ It seems to me that the movies are tending to degenerate into the type of picture that caused a crisis back in 1938. Producers are being careless again. The scripts are depending on star appeal far too much and on extravaganza; the basis for a sound motion picture business is good scripts, good acting, good direction, and good production. There have been too few pictures with these lately. Rhode Island (Independent)

¶ Opportunity for independent to purchase first run on open market against major theatre partner of major producers on a fair basis! Noth Carolina (Independent)

¶ Don't make any more war and propaganda pictures. Also cut out the gangster melodramas. Good comedies, (sophisticated) are welcome in these dreary times. Historic westerns and adventures are best boxoffice.—JOSE SORODKA, Keaton Theatre, Portland, Oregon. (Independent)

¶ Abolishing block-booking doesn't mean anything. Help the independent theatre owner. Stop chain theatre companies, absorbing the independents. Abolish screenings in block-bookings. No one attends them. The exhibitor can't leave his business daily to view these pictures if he lives several hundred miles from exchanges. Most exhibitors are buying pictures blind 1941-42. Block-booking has also made pictures higher for this year. Ohio (Independent)

I certainly enjoy and agree with most of the exhibitor comments you are compiling recently (including the one I sent you). The others are saying a lot of things I would have said if I had thought of them. I am having difficulties with decree selling, too. I certainly hope we can get rid of it. Keep up those comments as they really may do some good.

(Independent, New York)

¶ More institutional advertising by the industry as a whole. More intelligent advertising for tank towns where the "picture you play today must not be too much bigger and better than the other five you have to play the same week."

¶ More organization and a better understanding between independents in small towns. An "all-out" effort to make the arbitration system work. More contempt for the Fidlers and their like. An attitude of absolute indifference to popularity polls that spring from sources outside this industry. Interstate Enterprises, Shaw Theatre, Quincy, Florida. (Independent)

¶ More Technicolor, less propaganda pictures. A story should be for a story's sake, not for a purpose. New faces. Arizona (Independent)

¶ Pictures of 90 minutes or little more. More Technicolor pictures, acting, music and singing; no operattas. And for all exchanges to reestablish the handling of their own advertising including trailers. Oklahoma (Independent)

¶ Make fewer pictures, so each may run longer, and not make so many pictures per year of the same star, cut out the so-called cheap productions entirely. Get some improvement into the newsreels. Same old titles and music and same ideas of shots and eliminate the war stuff as the public doesn't believe what is being shown in newsreels from the war front. Give us some old fashioned slapstick, knock down, rough house, wild misfortunes in comedy either in shorts or even in features. (Independent)

¶ Clearances for subsequent runs to be based upon preceding run and not determined from closing date of first run. Second runs enjoy privilege of steady flow of product usually by clearance set-ups and this consistent flow, enabling run to overcome weak spots in break of product, should be passed on to all succeeding runs. Oregon (Independent)

¶ We need pictures that do not break faith with the public. When a book is screened the finished product is so far from the story that I find the public is losing faith in the movies. We need the good will of all. If a book is worth buying for a story, then use that story. Great offenders in 1941: "Shepherd of the Hills," "Wild Geese Calling" and many others.

¶ A sincere concentrated effort to abolish double features, which could be accomplished with the cooperation of producers, distributors, exhibitors and all others interested in the future welfare of the motion picture industry. This would also enable exhibitors to abolish the "B"s from their screens which in many cases should not even be made and make room for shorts which on the whole are good and exhibitors pay for and cannot use. N. DEL ROSSO, Connecticut (Independent)

¶ The old method of selling film with a 20 per cent cancellation clause. (Independent)

¶ In this part of the country (Oklahoma and Texas) we need more Western type pictures and out-door action. Oklahoma (Independent)

¶ I believe we need more shows which have a definite place in the modernization of our country, such as portrayals of interesting peoples' lives, along with the good comedy (without that annoying repetition of gags) and the musicals which show effort on the part of the producer. WILTON GRAHAM, assistant manager, Co-Ed Theatre, Fairfield, Iowa (Independent)

¶ Features should not exceed 90 minutes. Many a good production has been ruined through its length. New Jersey (Independent)

¶ Shorts built to take the place of some 400 pictures produced for double bills. The elimination of doubles. Idaho (Independent)

¶ Lighter and more entertaining story content. We have plenty of trouble in every-day life without carrying it into the theatre. What circus, night clubs or other forms of competition to the theatre, feature heavy black drama? Texas (Independent)

¶ Night ball games hurt most. People hear the plays on the radio, then don't care to go to the theatre to see the picture. If only few scenes were given on radio people would want to go and see the pictures. If the distributor would discontinue the percentage except on the first-run product we could all make a living and pay good wages, too. Oklahoma (Independent)

¶ Fewer and more consistently good pictures. Too many features are made without a single new idea injected into them. I agree with some that the industry needs a Judge Landis. Also, there is much to be desired in the choice given exhibitors in the buying of pictures. Kansas (Independent)

¶ If you prefer not to call them "propaganda" pictures, okay; but stop making hate-inspiring films of any nature. Denying it doesn't make it less true. Hold your hate films until there is no danger of them influencing lame-brained people. Give Roy Rogers the production values Autry gets and watch Rogers out-gross him nationally. Rogers has woman-appeal: only cowboy who's got it to any such degree. Louisiana (Independent)

¶ A fair and legitimate chance to make an honest living without the fear of the big octopus chain in your hair all the time. Give the small exhibitor a chance to buy his picture and not wait until the chain has milked it before it gets to a small town. Louisiana (Independent)

¶ Fewer film salesmen and cut the price of pictures. Checkers could stay home and the film companies could make more money than they are today (which is plenty). Checkers generally start out in a model "T" Ford and after several months on the road come home in a Cadillac. It's a wonderful life if one is on the inside. F. W. FALKNER, Falkon Theatre, Tisdale, Sashkatchewan, Canada (Canadian Independent)

Hiller, Everett, Arthur Elected Variety Barkers

In Variety Club elections in the past week Joseph Hiller was elected chief barker of the Pittsburgh organization; H. M. Everett was chosen to head the Charlotte branch, and Harry C. Arthur, Jr., was reelected president of the St. Louis Variety.

At the elections held on Monday, November 17th, the following were elected to aid Chief Barker Hiller in conducting the Pittsburgh Variety: Brian McDonald, first assistant; Tony Stern, second assistant; James Alexander, treasurer; Al Weiblinger, secretary. The directors are: James Balmer, Peter Dana, Harry Feinstein, Mark Goldman, Harry Hendel and Byron Stone.

New Officers in Charlotte

The new officers of the Charlotte, N. C., Variety, announced at the recent first annual banquet of the local branch are: Mr. Everett, chief barker; Phil Longdon, first assistant; Lester Sipe, second assistant; H. F. Kincey, dough-guy; J. A. Bachman, property man. The directors are: Cy Dillon, Scott Lett, John Vickers, Thomas Little, Robert Simpson and George Roscoe.

At a special luncheon meeting held last week at the Coronado Hotel in St. Louis, the local Variety Club re-elected almost its entire 1941 crew of barkers, Harry C. Arthur, Jr., chief barker last year, was again chosen to head the organization. Louis K. Ansell also repeats for the forthcoming year as first assistant chief barker, while George Wiegand was promoted from dough-guy to second assistant chief barker.

Edward L. Murphy, comptroller and treasurer of Fanchon and Marco Service Corp., in St. Louis, was named dough-guy for 1942 by the organization, and Ray Nolan, RKO exchange manager, was elected property master.

Canvassmen for the 1942 season are: Fred Wehrenberg, Herb Washburn, Alvin Wolff, Sam Shucart, Clarence M. Turley, and Clarence D. Hill.

Delegates appointed to represent the Tent at the annual convention were: Louis R. Ansell and George Wiegand, while alternative delegates are Joseph C. Ansell and A. L. (Tony) Matrici. National canvassman is Louis K. Ansell.

Testimonials for Three

The testimonial banquet for Harry Kalmine, new general manager for Warner Brothers theatres, will be held November 24th, at the William Penn hotel, the Pittsburgh Variety announced, with more than 1,000 expected to attend the affair.

Committee chairmen for the testimonial were announced last week. Moe Silver and John H. Harris are honorary co-chairmen, C. C. Kellenberg is general chairman, assisted by Joe Feldman, I. Elmer Ecker, Ed Stirling, Joseph R. Silberstein and Jerry Deasy. Sub-committees are headed by the following:

Ticket, Ira H. Cohn; entertainment, Joe Hiller, Harry Mayer, Mike Cullen, co-chairmen; speakers, Joe Feldman; publicity, James Totman; menu, Jerry O'Neill, Harry Kramer, co-chairmen; seating arrangements, Harry Feinstein; reception, Bryan (Buck) Stoner; hotel reservations, Harold Lund, Bob Fiske, co-chairmen; gift, Tony Stern; finance, Ben Steerman, Dr. A. I. Wise.

M. A. Silver, former New York state zone manager for the Warner Circuit Management at Albany, will be honored at a testimonial dinner to be tendered by Tent Nine, Variety Club, in that city early in December.

Mr. Silver, who was promoted a few weeks ago to the post of divisional manager of Warner Theatres in the Pittsburgh area, succeeding Harry Kalmine, was unanimously selected as first chief barker by members of Tent Nine. Mr. Silver will shortly resign his post in favor of Louis R. Golding, Fabian Circuit divisional chief at Albany and present first assistant barker.

Members of the Variety Club met at Mr. Golding's Palace Theatre office in Albany to map plans for the Silver dinner. Up from New York for the meeting was Si H. Fabian, head of the Fabian Circuit and a canvasman in the Variety tent in Albany.

Philadelphia Showmen's Club tendered a testimonial dinner on Monday at the Warwick Hotel in honor of Jack Beresin, head of Berlo Vending Co. and president of the Loft Candy Co., to mark his charitable endeavors in the motion picture industry. The club's benefit vaudeville show the evening previous at the Fay's Theatre was a sell-out.

Other Club Activities

The Philadelphia Variety Club will hold its annual banquet on Sunday evening, December 14th, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. The affair will be held for the relief of infantile paralysis locally and to assist in the President's Birthday Ball for the same cause nationally.

Many stars of stage, screen and radio, including June Preisser, Peter Lind Hayes, Cecelia Parker, Mary Healy, Anne Nagel, and others are expected to attend. James J. Walker, former mayor of New York City, will be master of ceremonies.

The purpose of the annual banquet is to honor the retiring officials. This year the retiring chief barker is Earle Sweigert and the former chief barker Dr. Leon Levy, who resigned in the middle of his term.

The board of directors of the Baltimore Variety Club has approved a memorial committee's proposal that a club furnish a room in the Sinai Hospital in that city in memory of its late chaplain, Rabbi Edward L. Isreal. The furnishings will include a sound-proofed floor, in addition to the usual furnishings.

The Cinema Club of Cincinnati will hold its annual election of officers November 22, in the Variety Club quarters. A lunch will be served preceding the balloting.

DELAY CANADA'S CEILING SCALES

The effective date of the "ceiling" on admission prices to motion picture theatres, set by the War Time Price and Trade Board, has been postponed from November 17th to December 1st, J. L. Isley, Minister of Finance, has announced in Ottawa.

The "ceiling" has been fixed at the maximum charged by any theatre during the period from last September 15th to October 11th.

Shooting Finished On Cuban Feature

by RAMON PEON

in Havana

"Musical Romance," first of a series of Cuban features to be produced by Octavio Romez Castro, is now in the laboratory and will be released in December. The film, which features radio artists, was directed by Ernesto Caparros.

Pre-release showings by two American distributors in Havana have had considerable success. Twentieth Century-Fox's "Blood and Sand" has been held for a second week at the Fausto Theatre at an admission of 80 cents. The picture will not be generally released until 1942. Warner Brothers opened "Sergeant York" at the America theatre at $1.00 admission.

Ramon Garcia, Havana branch manager for Universal, was given a testimonial dinner by his fellow employees last week.

Warners Set Screening Date for Next Block

Warners will trade show five features nationally on December 1st and 2nd, with final screening hours and locations to be announced shortly. The pictures which will be tradeshown are: December 1st, "The Body Disappears" and "They Died With Their Boots On." December 2nd, "All Through the Night," "Steel Against the Sky" and "You're In the Army Now."

"The Body Disappears" stars Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman and Edward Everett Horton. "They Died With Their Boots On," saga of General Custer's last stand, stars Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland. Alexis Smith, Lloyd Nolan and Gene Lockhart top the cast in "Steel Against The Sky." "All Through The Night" cast is headed by Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt, Peter Lorre and Frank McHugh. "You're In The Army Now" has Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman, Phil Silvers and Regis Toomey in lead roles.

United Artists Realigns China Sales Organization

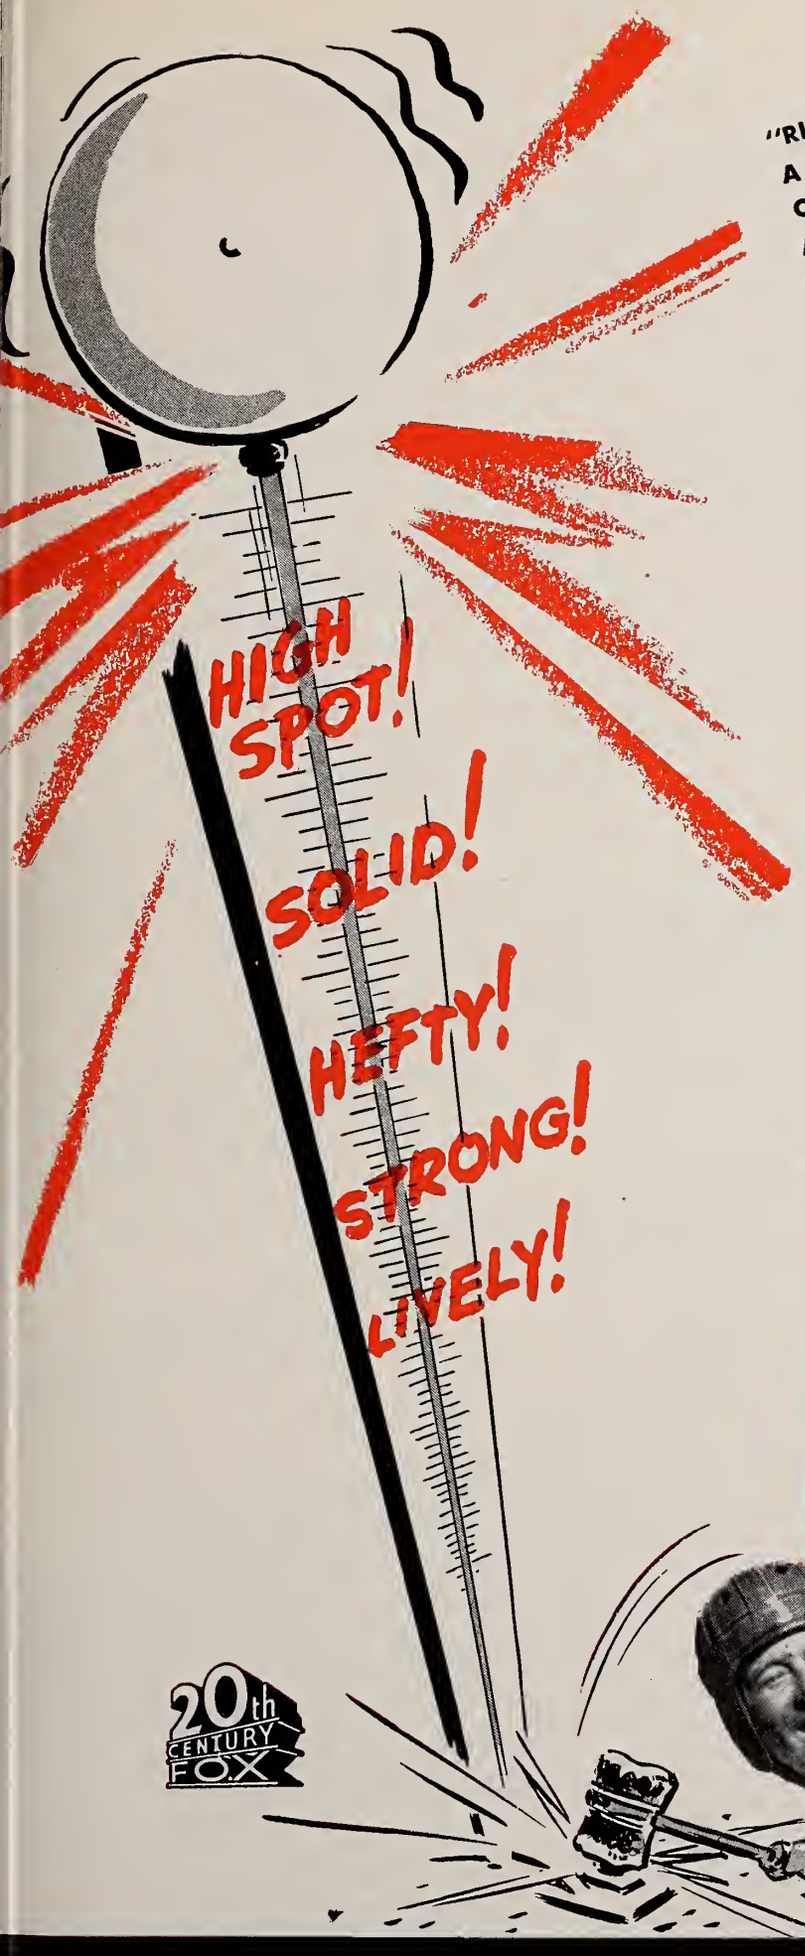
Alfred Katz has been named Shanghai branch manager for United Artists. Harry Odell will manage the Hongkong branch, and Genady Freyberg is manager in Tientsin, all under the supervision of Morey Marcus, newly appointed general manager for United Artists in China. The Marcus appointment completes the realignment by Walter Gould, foreign manager for the company, of the China territory.

Mr. Marcus, formerly Far Eastern manager for Metro Goldwyn Mayer, succeeds Joseph Goltz, who arrived recently for a vacation, and will be given another assignment. Mr. Marcus will leave shortly via Clipper and will make his headquarters in Shanghai.

Honor Edward Murrow

Edward R. Murrow, chief of the Columbia Broadcasting System's European staff, will be the guest of honor at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, December 2nd. The dinner will be given by William S. Paley, CBS president, and many Government officials, educators, publishers, editors, business men and radio personalities are expected to be present.

Directors Promoted



Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is advancing three short subject directors to the feature classification. They are Frederick Wilcox, Frederick Zinneman and Jules Dassin. The latter's first feature assignment is "Out of the Past," formerly known as "Salute to Courage."

McManus with Exchange

Arthur McManus, head of the accessories department of the 20th Century-Fox exchange in St. Louis, has been added to the exchange's sales staff and will sell film in addition to his present duties.

Schwalm Reelected

John A. Schwalm, manager of the Northio Rialto, at Hamilton, Ohio, was reelected to the City Council in his home town. He has been a councilman since 1934.

Theatre Operates On Split Policy

The first attempt in upstate New York to divide billing between motion pictures and a regular weekly stock performance was inaugurated in Hudson, city of 30,000, during the past week.

Harry Lamont, who operates the independent Strand Theatre there with Norman Pratt, booked the show for 10 weeks and may keep it all winter with a permanent cast. Mr. Lamont will show pictures Sundays, Mondays and Tuesdays, with the stage show taking over Wednesdays through Saturdays.

Lined up as leading lady is Jane Laurie of "Penny Wise" and William Sheehan of the "Henry Aldrich" radio program hour.

In Salem, Mass., an increasing use of vaudeville is the houses owned by the Salem Realty Company is planned, according to Philip D. Bloomberg, general manager.

The Paramount, a deluxe house of the firm which seats 2200 persons, recently booked in a Ted Lewis unit as a stage attraction and nearly 1000 persons were turned away during the two-day engagement. More bookings of this sort are planned. Bookings are being handled through Doc Breed of the RKO office in Boston. The Empire of the Salem Realty chain is using vaude on Fridays.

Argentine Distributor Named for Monogram

Norton V. Ritchey, vice-president of Monogram Pictures in charge of foreign operations, who at present is in Buenos Aires, has announced that he has entered into contract with Distribuidora Panamericana to distribute Monogram's current product in Argentina.

At the same time Mr. Ritchey has appointed Nat Liebeskind, RKO's former South American supervisor, to be the company's special representative in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, with headquarters in Buenos Aires.

McClintic's Counter Claim Dismissed

Justice Ferdinand Pecora of the New York supreme court has dismissed a $50,000 counter claim against Paramount Pictures, Inc., Charles Frohman, Inc., and Gilbert Miller in connection with the suit of Guthrie Mc Clintic for $67,608 against Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes.

The counter claim was filed after Mr. McClintic sued claiming that he was entitled to 50 per cent of a recovery obtained by Mr. Sheldon and Miss Barnes against Loew's, Inc., for plagiarism of their play "Dishonorable Lady" in the MGM film, "Letty Lynton." The counter claim asserted that production of the play in Great Britain was backed by the respondents and Mr. McClintic without the playwrights' authorizations.

Ohio Outdoor Shows

Ed Ramsey, owner of the Plymouth theatre, Plymouth, O., who for the past several years has specialized in outdoor shows, has signed up nine situations for outdoor pictures during the summer of 1942. In addition to showing in Plymouth, he will conduct shows under various sponsorships in Seveille, West Salem, Tiffin, Shreve, Applecreek, New Washington, North Park and Mansfield, all in Ohio.

RKO Des Moines Changes

A number of changes have been made at the Des Moines, Iowa, RKO office with the promotion of Paul Leatherby, booker, to the RKO booking department at Indianapolis. Robert Leach, head of the shipping department, has been made booker and Irwin Godwin, assistant shipper, promoted to head of the shipping department, with Melvin Wiese assistant. Dallas Day, RKO booker, forced to leave last January on account of his health, is recovering slowly but it may be some time before he is well enough to return to his work.

Mexico City Theatre Circuit Underway

S. Charles Lee, architect, is at work on contracts to build the first two of a dozen houses in Mexico City.

Named the Teteyac and El Capitan, the theatres are to be 1200-seaters of Spanish colonial design with modern interiors. Refreshment rooms are to be included off the foyer to take care of the South of the Border off-hour eating habits. The theatres will be neighborhood houses, first to be built in Mexico City.

Affiliated Increases Board

The board of directors of Affiliated Theatres, Inc., which with the Y. & W. Management Corp., represents more than 80 theatres in small cities and towns in Indiana, has been increased in size from seven to 11. New directors are V. U. Young, Marc J. Wolf and Albert R. Blocher. The board elected the following officers: Tom Baker, president; Mr. Blocher, vice-president; Sam Eibeck, secretary, and Earl Herndon, treasurer.

Film Group Formed

A total of 14 New Haven, Conn., public schools now have Junior Motion Picture Councils and carry on movie study work, according to Donald A. Eldridge, director of Audio-Visual education in the schools there. Downtowns cooperate with these groups by lowering admission to 19 cents for students accompanied by an identified teacher, up to 6. P. M.

RCA Recorder for Ad Service

RCA Photophone film sound recording equipment has been purchased by the Motion Picture Advertising Service for use in their New Orleans Studios. In addition to RCA's ultra-violet light recording equipment, the Ad Service studios are getting an RCA instantaneous disc recorder for immediate playback tests on sound takes.

McGill in Naval Reserve

Neil N. McGill, manager of the Carolina theater at Charlotte, N. C., until November 1st, has left for Charleston, S. C., to join the intelligence department of the Naval Reserves. Mr. McGill was called early in October to report for duty.

McNicholas Cites Legion Objections

"Continued increase" in the number of films or scenes rated "objectionable" by the Legion of Decency was reported last weekend by the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati, chairman of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures, speaking before the annual general meeting of the Archbishops and Bishops of the United States, in Washington. It was noted, however, that there was a slight drop in features condemned.

Reminding the Bishops of the customary renewal of the pledge of the Legion of Decency in Catholic churches on Sunday, December 14th, Archbishop McNicholas urged that parents and pastors again be told that films rated as A-2, unobjectionable for adults, are not suitable for children.

A total of 521 feature pictures were reviewed by the Legion from November, 1940, to November, 1941. Archbishop McNicholas reported. Of these, he said, 267 films, or 51.25 per cent of the total reviewed, were placed in Class A, Section 1—unobjectionable for general patronage; 197 films, or 37.81 per cent, were placed in Class A, Section 2—unobjectionable for adults; 50 pictures, or 9.6 per cent, were in Class B, unobjectionable in part, and seven, or 1.34 per cent, were in Class C—condemned.

Archbishop McNicholas emphasized the necessity of strong diocesan organization of the Legion of Decency to implement the work of the national office for wholesome films. He expressed appreciation for cooperating with the Legion's work, to the Bishops and priests of the country, the film producers, the Catholic and secular press, and the motion picture department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which reviews pictures for the Legion.

The members of the Episcopal Committee on motion pictures are: the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati, chairman; the Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Archbishop of Los Angeles; the Most Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of Pittsburgh; the Most Rev. John F. Noll, Bishop of Fort Wayne, and the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, Auxiliary Bishop of New York.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eleven Films

Of the 11 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, five were approved for general patronage, two were found unobjectionable for adults, three were considered objectionable in part and one was condemned. The classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Billy the Kid's Roundup," "Land of the Open Range," "The Royal Mounted Patrol," "Sierra Sue" and "Spooks Run Wild." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Cadet Girl," "Weekend for Three." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Escort Girl," "Man Who Seeks the Truth" and "Swamp Woman." Class C, Condemned: "Le Roi (The King)."

Niles Succeeds Tuthill

Legion Classification for 5 Years

Review classification comparisons of feature motion pictures by the Legion of Decency in the last five years were presented last weekend by Archbishop John T. McNicholas, O.P., of Cincinnati, to the Committee on Motion Pictures, at the annual meeting of the Catholic Archbishops and Bishops of the U. S., in Washington, as follows:

	Class A, Sec. 1 (Unobjectionable for General Patronage)		Class A, Sec. 2 (Unobjectionable for Adults)		Class B (Objectionable in Part)		Class C (Condemned)		Separately Classified		Total Classified

Fisher Reports Record Grosses In Singapore

Peak grosses at motion picture theatres in Singapore have surpassed all records with the increased war tension in the Far East, the only threat to a roaring prosperity, according to Joseph Fisher, operator of Singapore's largest theatre, the Capital.

Mr. Fisher, who is vacationing in the United States, said in New York last Friday, "During the two and one-half years of the war an influx of population in the Malay States, principally thousands of Indian, English and Australian troops, has resulted in the best theatre business in a decade, with independent and circuit houses sharing good box-office receipts with distributors of American-made films."

90 Per Cent U. S. Product

Mr. Fisher reported that the 71 theatres in Singapore and 40 houses in Siam, during the course of a year, played 90 per cent of American product and 10 per cent Chinese, Indian, British, Australian and South African films. "Gone With the Wind," ran 21 days at his Capital, on a 3-shows-a-day basis and broke all records in Singapore. "The Great Dictator," was next as a box-office smash hit. MGM's "Tarzan" pictures rate third as big-gross pictures and Dorothy Lamour's "Jungle Princess" is fourth on the list.

The Singapore theatre operator reported, that an average of 120 ocean-going steamers in and out of Singapore harbors daily have facilitated commerce and trade. "There has been no difficulty in getting film shipments from the United States," he said. "During the war, not one print was lost or delayed. Many prints, principally newsreels, arrive via Clipper not less than six days' time from America."

Singapore is truly "the cross-roads of the world," Mr. Fisher pointed out, with its 46 different nationalities, Indian, Chinese, Malayan, Japanese, American and European peoples. Of the 750,000 Singapore population, 450,000 are Chinese, with only about 12,000 Americans and Continentals. During the last three years, he said, the Japanese, who numbered a little more than 3,000 have gradually been evacuating, with hundreds being taken out within the last few weeks by Japanese steamers.

"Film tastes among these different nationalities," Mr. Fisher said, "are pretty much the same as elsewhere, with this exception. Johnny Weismuller in a Tarzan picture, is the biggest hit in the Malay States. The audiences love him and when one of his films is played, they refuse to go home." He predicted that Abbott and Costello, whose "In the Navy," produced by Universal, made the highest gross for Universal, at the Capital in Singapore—in seven years, would "top all records of other comedy teams such as Laurel and Hardy."

"Chinese pictures gross more than some American films," Mr. Fisher said, because of the huge Chinese population which flocks to the theatre whenever a picture from China is advertised. 'This Land of Freedom,' made in China, brought in $3,000 a day when it played at the Capital."

Asked whether or not his Government planned to impose "frozen asset" restrictions on American distributors, Mr. Fisher replied in the negative. "The Government," he said, "is very much in favor of the people being kept constantly entertained, and wants to do everything possible to encourage increased importation of pictures. Moreover, the American film industry has cooperated splendidly in our defense efforts by making available the kind of pictures which tend to boost civilian and military morale."

Singapore, which never had an income tax imposed before, has one now, Mr. Fisher reported. War taxes on amusements, he said, have been absorbed by the public "without any difficulty." The tax schedule on admissions is as follows: 1c on 25c admissions; 3c on 50c admissions; 10c on $1.00 admissions and 25c on $2.00 or anything over.

Mr. Fisher said the film industry in the Malay States had been in constant touch with the British Ministry of Information. "As a result," he said, "practically every motion picture theatre has cooperated by playing a reel or a short dealing with Britain's war activities.

Has 16 mm Films

When Mr. Fisher came to the United States in August, 1940, he had planned to remain only three months, but so much interest was evinced in his 16 mm films that he has spent his time showing his pictures on the West Coast and in other section of the country. He has shot thousands of feet of film in Kodachrome. One picture, showing the Indian troops in action in Singapore, was made with 14 different language sound tracks and was played throughout the Far East. Another, depicts a complete flying trip around the world, from London to Singapore. It took him four months to arrange for permits for these from the authorities of the various countries over which he flew. He has pictures showing Britain's defense preparations in the Far East and particularly the building of naval stations in Singapore. Other reels depict native religious dances and the "indescribable" Hindu ceremonies of high torture; the firewalkers of Singapore, religious devotees, walking through fire, and a reel of a 32-foot python killing and eating a live goat.

He has shown them or is scheduled to show them under the auspices of the Pacific Geographic Society, the National Geographic Society, the Detroit Museum of Natural History and others.

LETTERS FROM READERS

"POLL EXHIBITORS ON STORY MATERIAL"

DEAR MR. QUIGLEY:

Many times we in the exhibition field have sincerely remarked, "Wish I was in Hollywood, I'd know what stories to produce for the American public."

With this thought in mind please allow me to make this suggestion to your popularly recognized and authoritative publication to act as a contact between the producer and the exhibitor—that the producers observe a nation-wide poll, taken by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, of the exhibitors' selection of story material for future production.

For instance, my present choice for immediate production would be, "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" by John Fox, Jr., author of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." I believe the American theatre patron at this time will receive whole-heartedly this simple true American theme, in contrast to the everyday stories of a world at war.

If it can be arranged to have a perforated coupon inserted in the HERALD for the exhibitor to express his selection and return his written preference, and why he believes it would make an outstanding box-office attraction.

Each week for a period of one month MOTION PICTURE HERALD would then in turn tabulate and publish the number of votes given to the first 24 popular selections. It would then become quite obvious to the producer just what is going on in the minds of the exhibitors, because the exhibitor would naturally be contacting his patrons to get their viewpoints, and Hollywood would realize the ultimate success of definitely receiving invaluable data.

I have a deep affection for this great business of ours to the extent that, now, more than ever before in its history, it is being given the opportunity to act as a permanent leader in building progressive community life throughout the nation.

With every kind wish for continued success to you and the staff members of your immensely valuable trade publication,

W. P. SMITH, Manager,
Apex Theatre,
Washington, D. C.

"SELL THE PICTURE AS YOU HAVE BEEN SOLD"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

In the reading of an editorial in your June 28 magazine, I became deeply interested in your urging to shake the doldrums out of every showman. This, in my opinion, is correct. Show business is entirely enthusiasm. The business must be getting big to the showmen for even they are beginning to accept the responsibilities of pulling the business out of the hole. He must sell himself on pictures that have been turned down in New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, or San Francisco; and sell to the American public.

Recent experience of it is here in the Strand theatre in Salina. Salina is a town of 21,000 people. Up to four weeks ago the Strand had advertised only by newspapers and display windows. Then I started an experiment of selling pictures by illustrations, putting it in such a place that everyone entering the theatre would see it. I tried in these displays to put different angles of approach to the people. For my first display which was a jungle setting I used a small colored boy. My second display was a football gridiron. The third was a patriotic display with the American flags. The fourth display will include a western style where the theatre and lobby are to be filled with guns and other western effects. My whole idea of this experiment is to sell the people as I have been sold. I actually believe it is not in selling the public as it is in first selling the showman who sells the public.

Every week and sometimes twice a week men, women, and children seat themselves in the same 15,000 theatres of this nation and let their imaginations send them to new worlds, new places, and completely new environments. For all of them the screen has been and will be the source of entertainment.

The American people want the facts and that is what we are giving them. Show business does affect the nation and some of the facts could never get to the American people if it was not for the screen. The motion pictures' magic appeal to the eye and ear, it plays on them, on human emotion, its vividness and vitality makes it a formidable instrument that builds or destroys, persuades or dissuades as it entertains. The American screen portrays and idealizes American life and reveals by pictures accounts of the struggles and sacrifices that our forefathers went through. The screen deals realistically with modern social problems, crime and human maladjustments. By stories of success it not only glorifies accomplishments, but tells of the equality of opportunity that all enjoy in American life.

Abroad the American screen plays a very important part. A motion picture can have a national conception and an international one too. Abroad it expresses national outlook, traditions, and philosophies of life in an American democracy. Because of the American screen the American life is known the world over. Political and social ideas are diffused to all corners of the world and American principles and ideals filter through international barriers.

With the show business influencing 80,000,000 of our people weekly in all the above-mentioned ways it can easily be seen that it is of very great importance, a force in our lives, and the lives of the people throughout the world.

With the showmen there are left, it is our responsibility to sell ourselves first and in turn sell pictures to do their job as it has never been done before for the good of a United America.

D. H. ALLDRITT, Manager,
Fox Strand Theatre,
Salina, Kansas.

New Company Formed

Vigor Motion Picture Corp. has been incorporated by Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State, in Albany on papers filed by the Continental Lawyers Albany Service, 305 Broadway, New York.

Directors are Sanford Greene, Jerome Edwards and Lillian Schwarz, all of 1450 Broadway, New York. Capital stock set-up provides for 200 shares, no stated par value.

Papers of dissolution have also been filed by Williston Theatre, Inc., Brooklyn, originally filed by Edwin Stephen Schweig, 51 Chambers Street, New York, and by Washton Amusement Corp., New York, originally filed by Edmund Souhami, 214 West 42d Street, New York.

Levy with Universal

Harold Levy, formerly with Columbia's New York City branch, has joined Universal as third booker in Detroit in an expansion of the booking department.

Films Important in Publishing, Says Turner

Exploring the subject of "what the movies do for books and vice versa," John B. Turner, writing in the November National Board of Review magazine, emphasizes "the vast part the movies play in increasing the interest in books and in expanding their circulation." Mr. Turner, book reviewer and translator, is a member of the Board's committee on exceptional photoplays.

Citing figures for "Gone With the Wind" as the best example, Mr. Turner reported, "After a sale totalling 1,000,000 copies of this novel in the regular edition, more than 1,072,000 copies of popular-priced motion picture editions were printed by the publishers. The first printing of 350,000 copies of the film-edition was exhausted 10 days after it was put on sale, directly after the first showing of the picture in Atlanta and New York. This is easily the most historic example of the power the screen has to bring additional audiences to a book."

340,000 "Wuthering Heights"

Just how widely film production of a classic can stimulate the sale of 25-cent and 39-cent books, published by such firms as Pocket Books, Inc. and Triangle Books, which cater to drug stores, magazine stands, the so-called five-and-ten cent chain stores and other outlets, is demonstrated by the number of copies of "Wuthering Heights" sold in the course of the two and one-half years following the film release—340,000 copies—in the Pocket Book edition alone. "Pride and Prejudice" issued a year later in this same inexpensive format, Mr. Turner pointed out, sold 163,000 copies.

The Pocket Book edition to date has sold some 285,000 copies of "Lost Horizon," and Felix Salten's novel, "Bambi," has already had a pre-sale in this edition of 119,000 copies, "although the film is not scheduled for release until January." Further figures offered by Mr. Turner to prove his point are: "Hold Back the Dawn," written by Ketti Frings which had a sale of only 3,000 copies in its original edition, sold 30,000 copies in a 39-cent edition in one month.

"A rare experiment," said Mr. Turner, is being tried out by Triangle Books in bringing out "Reap the Wild Wind," by Thelma Strabel, in an original edition at 39-cents, "though the author received offers from other reputable publishers to issue her book at the regular trade-price of a new novel, (usually $2.50); but the fact that the film from her story is now nearing completion and will soon be ready for release led both the reprint publisher and the author to consider this a more profitable means of distributing the book to a wide audience. At all events, it is an experiment of considerable importance to those novelists whose work has been sold to Hollywood prior to its book publication."

On the other side of the record, the author pointed out that the average yearly total of story-sources for feature-length pictures derived from published materials was approximately 35 per cent. These figures were computed recently from tabulations in Film Facts, issued annually by MPPDA. The material represents novels, biographies, plays and short stories in published form, as against the average annual 65 per cent for original, unpublished screen stories.

Analysis of the listing of annual "ten best" film selections made by the National Board of Review, from 1936 to 1940, shows that between 50 and 60 per cent of those films chosen for the year were based on published material.

EXHIBITORS IN BRITAIN MAP FIGHT ON FLAT RENTS, QUOTA PERCENTAGE

Cutting of Transit Facilities During Winter Months Feared as Threat to Attendance; KRS To Debate Rental Problems

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With two of his major headaches to some extent alleviated, though not necessarily removed—the threat of a wholesale callup of projectionists and theatre staffs, and the no less sinister threat of an early curfew—the British exhibitor has now settled back to lesser problems. Lesser though they may be in their immediate urgency, they are problems which, nevertheless, are likely in the immediate future to cause some concern.

Not least important of the questions which may possibly be raised in the course of the next few months is the perennial one of film hire. Recent discussions in the distributor group, with further and more intensive discussions foreshadowed, bring the likelihood of an onslaught upon flat rentals and a further consolidation of the percentage system.

Transportation Is Problem

The other matter which is causing the picture theatre owner some concern is the question of transport, which, by reason of its abbreviation during the Winter months, may well prove the undoing of much of the good done by the Home Secretary's appeal for a 10 p.m. closing of cinemas at the earliest.

No less urgent than either of these is the question of the Quota. The shortage of British films, with the narrowing of the market, has made it certain that many exhibitors this year will be defaulters in regard to the legal percentage of British films shown. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association will continue to press for a cut in the percentages until the Act is adjusted or amended in some way as to make it possible for them to meet their legal commitments and to do so commercially.

Discussions within the distributor group, the Kinematograph Renters' Society, have arisen again over the question of flat rentals versus percentages. They have been stimulated by the adamantime attitude of one theatre circuit over the question of film hire, being provoked further by the fact that many distributors admittedly are going against the K.R.S. policy of percentages only and selling their films on a flat rental basis. The matter is scheduled for intensive and unequivocal discussion at an early meeting of the K.R.S.

Percentage Selling Only

A general policy exists in the K.R.S. circle, to which individual members are expected to adhere, that films should be sold only on a percentage basis. It is a well known fact, and has been known for some time, that the rule is observed in the spirit rather than the letter. Not only smaller individuals but some of the larger circuits have been and are booking films on a flat basis.

The question now arises whether K.R.S. members should be called upon to implement K.R.S. policy, or whether they should be allowed to let individual consideration over-ride the principles and policy of the K.R.S. organization.

Individual renters have, in some instances, found the flat rentals a good policy, found that they paid better with certain exhibitors in certain spots, than percentages. Some of these have agreed that they would be willing to depart from this breakaway system of selling on a flat rate, would, even at the cost of lost business, be prepared to adhere to the general K.R.S. policy of percentages only. The problem which is likely to arise within renter circles is how far the K.R.S. is able to ensure that this policy should be observed without exception. It is claimed by some of the smaller renters, for whose good the KR.S. exists ostensibly no less than for the larger members, that they are being browbeaten by certain groups and individual theatres with the demand that they either sell on a flat basis or forsake any business at all.

It is not likely that the C.E.A., as a body, will take kindly to any further implementing of the percentages only system, will claim that individual cases call for individual treatment, may even point out that it has always been the K.R.S. contention, as a Society, that it cannot dictate the business terms of its individual companies.

How far the new raising of this question is likely to lead to a CEA-KRS dispute it is not at this moment easy to foresee; that the situation has within it the germs of a minor battle would, none the less, seem to be the fact.

Discontent Over Hours

Considerable discontent exists in certain exhibitor groups currently with the transport position in relation to opening or closing hours. The recent statement of the Home Secretary, already recorded in these columns, appealing to authorities not to impose closures earlier than 10 P.M., emphasizing the recreative value of entertainment to war workers and men and women in the Services, was accepted as the virtual killing of the recent attempt on the part of certain police authorities and Regional Commissioners to impose a curfew as early as 7 P.M. The effects of such a curfew on business would have been more than disastrous; it would obviously have been completely fatal.

A close examination of the situation throughout the country makes it clear that in many districts exhibitors will not be able to reap the box office harvest which Mr. Morrison's benison would seem to have foreshadowed for the simple reason that in many places there will not be enough transport to get people to and from the picture houses of a late evening The proposed early curfew was raised in the first instance at the behest of the transport authorities, was envisaged for the purpose of easing the running of busses, trams and trains during the more blacked-out months of the year. The continued opening of cinemas until 10 or 11 P.M. would not necessarily make the transport situation any worse, but the limits on late transport will certainly not make picture house trade any better or improve the receipts at the Box office.

In London, in the provincial cities, in country towns, and indeed all over the country, buses, trams, trolleys and trains are cut to a minimum after, approximately, 7 o'clock. In many instances the last bus from the centre of towns is as early as 8 o'clock, in few later than 9 o'clock. To meet this difficulty many districts have voluntarily arranged staggered closures. In the heavily blitzed town of Southampton, for instance, cinemas in the centre of town close at 7:30 or 8; in the suburbs, depending mostly on local patronage, the closing hour is 9:15 to 9:30. The hours are entirely voluntary and have been agreed by the local picture houses. In Bradford staggered closures exist, with cinemas shutting down between 9:25 and 9:45; and in the suburbs at 10. Here the closing has been arranged to meet the last bus which leaves the centre of town at 9:30 and the last tram at 10. In Brighton, on the South Coast, a town subject to many military restrictions, as many cinemas as possible close at 9:45. At Birkenhead, on Merseyside, cinemas and public houses keep in step and shut at 9:30. These conditions are infinitely better than the 7 P.M. curfew which was threatened for Birmingham, one of the heaviest industrial areas of Britain, with millions of people employed there on armaments, who, if the 7 P.M. curfew had been enforced, would have been deprived of any recreation or entertainment whatsoever during the week.

Discussion Brings Action

It is believed in enlightened circles in the industry here that Mr. Morrison's step was taken not merely as a result of personal whimsy, but as a direct result of discussion of the matter within the Cabinet itself. The Cabinet probably know full well the recreational needs of the millions of war workers and Service men and women throughout the country, no less well that any drastic or anti-social action of the kind envisaged in Birmingham might have provoked a political crisis with repercussions upon their own heads.

Meanwhile the transport authorities, with little petrol to play with, are not likely to do anything to assist the situation. They have indeed, in some districts, told the exhibitor sections that, unless they bear in mind the limits to, and work hand in hand with local transport, they will find their patrons left high and dry standing in the streets.

PAPER RESTRICTION HITS BRITISH HOUSES

English film houses have been severely hit by new restrictions on the use of paper. The new ruling limits poster use to 10 for each film program. It is based on a demand for a reduction of 50 per cent from the amount currently used. Throwaways and other advertising media also will have to be seriously curtailed.

Arkansas Companies

The Fort Theatre Corporation of Fort Smith, Ark., has been incorporated at Little Rock. Capital stock is listed at 500 shares of $10 par value each. Incorporators are Forrest Dunlap, Dallas, Tex., George Simpson, Temple, Tex., and Charles Brent, Fort Smith.

The Rogers Amusement Company, Inc., Rogers Ark., has also been incorporated with a capital stock of 50 shares at $100 par value each. Incorporators are Marvin Carroll of Rogers, B. B. Busby, Little Rock, and G. W. Jones, Lonoke.

PROFITS REPORTED FOR FOX, RKO; SEC LISTS FILM STOCK DEALINGS

39-Week Figure for 20th-Fox Is $1,549,164; RKO Has $664,774; Paramount Stock Changes Reported by SEC

Financial reports announced for Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO-Radio indicate substantial net profit increases over last year with dollar upswings resulting from sales of new season product. Fox's profit was set at $1,549,164, and RKO's profit was reported at $664,774. This week also brought news from Washington, through the semi-annual summary of the Securities Exchange Commission, of acquisitions, loans and transfers of corporation stock by various major distributing company executives.

Fox Profit at $1,549,164

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. reported a consolidated net profit of $1,549,164, after Federal income tax, for the 39 weeks ended last September 27th, after providing a reserve for foreign assets of $3,150,000. This compares with a loss of $1,075,611 for the first 39 weeks of 1940, after a comparable reserve of $2,200,000.

The company's increase in new season sales was understood to be the cause for these improved earnings.

For the third quarter ended September 27th, the consolidated net profit, after all charges, including provision of $1,650,000 of reserve for foreign assets was $687,886. This figure compared with second quarter profit of $457,189, after a reserve of $1,150,000, and a loss of $1,192,824 for the third quarter of 1940, also after providing a reserve of $1,400,000.

No portion of National Theatres Corp. earnings is included in the figures since no dividends were declared by that company during the first 39 weeks of either year. The firm is not liable for excess profits on the earnings for this period, it was stated.

Directors of Twentieth Century-Fox declared a cash dividend last week of 37½ cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1941 on the preferred stock, payable December 4th to stockholders of record on December 10th.

Gross income of the company from film rentals, during the first 39 weeks, according to the report, amounted to $32,548,311.33; operating and other expenses were $28,449,447.03, leaving an operating profit of $5,033,770.18.

The consolidated income account for 39 weeks, ended September 27th, compares as follows:

RKO Nets $664,774 For 39 Weeks

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiary companies reported a consolidated net profit of $644,774, after all charges, for the 39 weeks ended October 4th, an increase of more than 100 per cent over the same period last year when the net was $318,385.

PARAMOUNT THEATRE'S FIFTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

"Skylark", the New York Paramount theatre's fifteenth anniversary screen attraction, which opened Wednesday, is the 575th picture to play the theatre since its opening, November 19th, 1926. It is also the third time Claudette Colbert, who appears in "Skylark" with Ray Milland, has figured as a milestone in the theatre's history. When the theatre went straight sound, seven years ago, Miss Colbert was the star of the policy's opener, "Cleopatra". When the theatre adopted its present name-band policy, six years ago, Miss Colbert was starred in the screen presentation, "The Bride Came Home".

RKO's operating profit before the usual deductions for the first three quarters of 1941 amounted to $1,971,201, compared with $1,867,691 last year. Depreciation for the 39 weeks this year was listed at $997,658; income tax provisions, $289,266, and provisions for dividends on the preferred stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum in the hands of the public, $39,501.

The company and its subsidiaries show a net loss of $661,801, after all charges, for the 53 weeks ended last October 4th. RKO reported net profit of $485,605 for the first half of the current year, indicating a net for the third quarter of $159,169.

The consolidated income account for 39 weeks, ended October 4th, compares as follows:

	39 Weeks Ended October 4, 1941	39 Weeks Ended September 28, 1940
Net profit from operations, before items listed below	$1,971,201.25	$1,867,691.27

	$684,275.87	$537,965.90
Provision for dividends on preferred stock of a subsidiary company, in the hands of the public	39,501.00	219,581.25
Net Profit after all charges.	$644,774.87	$318,385.65

SEC Reports Stock Dealings

Acquisition of 1,000 shares of Paramount Pictures common stock by Stanton Griffis, New York, director, through a trust, and exchange of 1,000 shares of second preferred for 900 shares of common, were reported November 22nd by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its final semi-monthly summary for September.

The report also showed that Maurice Newton, New York, director, exchanged 2,810 shares of second preferred for 2,529 shares of common.

At the close of the month, Mr. Griffis held 7,500 shares of common direct and 22,900 shares through four trusts, while Mr. Newton held 10,647 shares.

The SEC also reported that R. B. Laruc, New York, officer, disposed of 200 shares of General Theatres Equipment capital stock during the month, leaving him with 400 shares.

A belated report on Keith-Albee-Orpheum showed that in June Michael J. Meehan, New York, sold 16,023 shares of seven per cent preferred stock to Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and acquired 882 shares, holding 63 shares at the close of the month.

A number of returns on Monogram pictures, held for correction, was released by the commission. These reports showed that in August W. Ray Johnston, Hollywood, officer, received 959 shares of common as payment on a loan, giving him a total of 24,232 shares, and that through Monogram Film Distributors of Kansas City, he acquired 1,918 shares of common, which was disposed of as payment on a loan, and acquired 3,285 shares through Monogram Pictures of Cincinnati and 1,778 shares through Monogram Pictures of St. Louis.

John W. Mangham, Atlanta, director, was shown to have held 100 shares of Monogram common stock at the close of July and, through Monogram southern, to have acquired 5,670 shares in June, 1,036 shares in July and 5,571 shares in August, when he held a total of 15,777 shares. Howard W. Stubbins, Los Angeles, director, holding 328 shares of common direct, acquired 2,588 shares through Monogram Pictures of California and 1,295 shares through Monogram Pictures of the Northwest in August, and Charles W. Trampe, Milwaukee, director, holding 367 shares direct, received 2,306 shares from Monogram Midwest Film Company in settlement of a debt.

A report on the holdings of persons becoming officers or directors of registered corporations showed that William F. Rodgers, New York, held 67 shares of Loews, Inc., common stock through a holding company when he became an officer in that company September 3.

A report on transactions in closed-end investment companies showed that Robert R. Young, Pathe director, Cleveland, disposed of 6,500 shares of the company's common stock in September, leaving him with 13,997 shares.

The SEC reported this week that salaries of General Theatres Equipment Corp. executives were disclosed in an amendment to the company's 1940 report. Earl Hines, GTE president, was paid $40,630 in salary and fees by the firm and its subsidiaries; W. E. Green, president of subsidiary companies, received $24,280, and J. E. McAuley, president of an affiliate, $16,300.

Pathé Tax Free In Stock Shift

Both the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Securities and Exchange Commission issued rulings last week which will permit consummation of the plan whereby Pathé Film Corp., after exchanging its holdings in the du Pont Film Manufacturing Corp. for common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, will be dissolved. Pathé attorneys, Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin and Krim, were apprised of the tax exemption rulings.

The Commissioner declared that the exchange of stock constituted a non-taxable reorganization and that no tax would be imposed on Pathé upon receipt of the du Pont shares. The SEC order said that the plan was fair and equitable to Pathé stockholders. The decisions came as the result of a hearing in Washington on September 12th before a trial examiner of the SEC.

The transfer involves Pathé's 3,500 shares of du Pont Film stock for 56,750 shares of E. I. du Pont de Nemours' common stock. The exemption also covers the payment by Pathé Film of 300 shares of common stock of du Pont de Nemours to T. C. Davis, one of the Pathé directors, for services rendered in connection with the foregoing transaction. This exemption was conditioned on the approval by holders of at least two-thirds of Pathé stock.

Wage Dividend Announced by Eastman Kodak

As a result of the rulings, the reorganization plan will be placed in operation immediately, following which Pathé Film Corp. will be dissolved. Pathé stockholders will receive approximately one share of du Pont for each 10.3 Pathé shares.

Kodak Wage Dividend

Eastman Kodak Company announced in Rochester last week a wage dividend for 1942 of $4,200,000 and an extra stock dividend of $1, based upon common stock dividends. The extra stock dividend is an addition to a quarter dividend of $1.50. The wage share is $645,000 higher than the previous largest amount distributed to employes, $3,555,000 in 1937, and is $1,575,000 more than last year's wage dividend of $2,625,000. It will be distributed in March.

The company announced that the $1 extra dividend on common stock brought declarations for the year to $7, an increase of $1 over 1940.

Since Eastman Kodak was founded in 1912, total wage payments issued annually to employes amounted to a sum in excess of $51,000,000.

Warner Board Meeting

The annual meeting of stockholders of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., will be held December 8th in Wilmington, Del. Six directors have been nominated by preferred stockholders for re-election to the board of directors for two-year terms. The directors are Joseph Bernhard, Waddill Catchings, Robert W. Perkins, Albert Warner, Harry M. Warner and Jack L. Warner. Their reelection will be one of the actions taken at the board meeting.

Philco Corp.'s board of directors declared a dividend in Philadelphia on Tuesday, of 25c per share, payable December 21st, to stockholders of record on November 28th. This is the company's fourth dividend of 25c per share declared this year, and the 129th cash dividend since the firm was established.

Midwest Radio Improving

Reorganization proceedings of the Midwest Radio Corp. in Cincinnati was lifted by a court order entered last week. The company manufactures radio receiving sets. When proceedings under 77-B were ordered on March 9, 1938, Midwest had liabilities of $531,327.46, as a result of the 1937 business recession, which caused excessive inventories and receivables on hand, it was stated. With exception of $21,537.80, all indebtedness has been met and arrangements made for settlement of the balance before next September.

Total assets as of October 31st this year were $161,067.29; liabilities, $113,694.54.

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., has declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the $2 preferred stock, payable on account of accumulations on December 26th to stock of record December 5th.

Shearer Acquires Theatre

Ben F. Shearer, head of the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle and Los Angeles, and owner of a string of theatres in Washington, Alaska and California towns, has acquired the ownership of the State theatre in Santa Barbara. He has appointed Colonel Dow, former Bremerton exhibitor, as manager of the house.

Tacoma Establishes New Censor System

Censorship of movies, stage plays and other public presentation will hereafter be the concern of the Tacoma, Wash., City Council, rather than left solely to the public safety commissioner, under the terms of a new ordinance introduced by Mayor Harry P. Cain.

The amendment permits the safety commissioner to appoint a board of seven censors, but the appointments will be subject to approval of the city council. Another change provides that any person, firm or corporation adversely affected by a censorship ruling would have the right of appeal to the council, whose decision would be final.

B. &. K. Shifts Policy At Chicago Theatres

Following several weeks operation as a double feature house, Balaban & Katz have designated their Roosevelt Theatre, in Chicago, a unit exploitation house. Commencing November 5th the two features booked at the theatre were given extra exploitation and publicity as a unit and will play the entire circuit as such. Heretofore combinations have been broken when playing the neighborhood circuit.

With the change, Charles Cottle, manager of the State-Lake Theatre, and Miles Concannon, manager of the Roosevelt Theatre, have switched places. Nate Platt has assumed supervision of the Roosevelt Theatre, which has been under the district managership of Dave Wallerstein. The Apollo, another Balaban & Katz house, went into double features on November 14th with the showing of "Niagara Falls" and "International Lady."

New Bessemer Tax

The Bessemer, Ala., City Council has imposed an amusement tax of 1 cent for tickets for 10 cents or under, and 2 cents for any ticket over 15 cents. Motion pictures, football games and any other class of public amusement will fall in the classification. The amusement tax vigorously opposed by operators of motion picture houses, who claimed that it was unfair to tax one business alone and attempted to show that where the tax was collected in the state there had been a sharp decrease in receipts.

Bank Night Held Lottery

The Wisconsin supreme court has reaffirmed the decision holding bank night a lottery in dismissing a suit for $1,007.50 brought by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., Denver, Colo., against the Miner Amusement Corp., Ricelake, Wis., for alleged failure to pay bank night fees.

Chicago Owners Set Christmas Basket Plans

Plans were formulated for Chicago exhibitors seventh annual Movie Christmas Basket Party at a meeting this week, in Chicago, conducted jointly by Morris G. Leonard, president of the Exhibitor's Association of Chicago, and Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois.

The party this year has been set for December 23rd, when a special morning children's show will be held at all the participating theaters at which a contribution for the baskets is thep rice of admission. Food collected at these special shows throughout the city are made up in baskets and distributed the following day to needy families. Last year 192 theaters joined in the movement and over 47,000 baskets were distributed.

The motion picture operators, stage hands, film exchange employees, janitors, engineers and electricians' unions all contribute their services as required for the cause.

Committees assigned to handle publicity for the party are: Jack Kirsch, Archie Herzoff, L. S. Stein, Norman Kassell, Dorothy Deere, Jack Garber, W K. Hollander, Dan Newman, Hal Tate, Sam Krimstein, I. Edelson, Irving Yergin, Lou Abramson, Joe Esler, F. Langdon Morgan, and Chris Otto.

War-Aid Party

Screen and stage stars became honorary members this week for the "Threads of Friendship" party which will be held for the benefit of the British - American Ambulance Corps, next Thursday, at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Committee members include: Merle Oberon, Rosemary Lane, Boris Karloff, Raymond Massey, Jessie Matthews, Wendy Barrie, Margo, Elissa Landi, Lily Pons, Dudley Digges, Grace George, Helen Hays, Brock Pemberton, Peggy Wood, Lotte Lehmann, Jessica Dragonette, Janet Fox, Nat Karson and Natalie Bodanya.

Danny Kaye, start of the Broadway musical comedy, "Let's Face it," will be the master of ceremonies. Leonora Corbett, start of "Blithe Spirit," Broadway play, will contribute as fashion commentator for the first all-crochet fashion show which will be one of the features at the party.

Entire proceeds will go to the British-American Ambulance Corps. Admission tickets are $2.50.

"Night of Stars"

Nathan Straus, U. S. Housing Authority Administrator, gave a cocktail party last week at the Hotel Astor in New York, for members of the "Night of Stars" committee, of which he is chairman. Marvin Schenck, chairman of the producers' committee for "Night of Stars," was one of the speakers.

The committee presented a drawing by Arthur Szyk, Polish artist, to Mr. Straus, for the cover design of the United Palestine Appeal yearbook, published for the entertainment event which is held annually at Madison Square Garden. "Night of Stars" this year will be on November 26th.

On Thanksgiving eve, the 22nd annual charity dinner-dance of the motion picture associates of "Night of Stars" was given at the Hotel Astor, proceeds for which were donated to the motion picture charity fund. Admission was $7.50 per person.

COERCION NOT PROVEN IN U.S. CASE, SAYS CRESCENT; 2 OTHER SUITS END

Interstate Commerce Is Point in Defense Brief; Trial To End Early in December; Reading Suit Is Dismissed

Attacking the Government's claim of violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in the action taken in Tennessee against Crescent Amusement Company and the "little three" distributors, Crescent attorneys this week filed a 124-page, 30,000-word main brief in U.S. District Court, Nashville, contending that the Government failed to prove coercion and also failed to prove that exhibition of films was interstate commerce.

The brief declared "the Government has failed to prove any coercion of the distributors by the defendant exhibitors other than the ordinary and normal coercion which takes place in any business, resulting from normal competitive activities."

Immediately following filing of the main brief, defendants' attorneys prepared and filed an 84-page brief which purported to show that the Government's "theory of liability" was not substantiated. This reply declared the main brief was filed because the defendants desired to get before the court the facts and law "without at the same time discussing the conclusions drawn by the plaintiff from the facts."

No "Unreasonable Use" Claimed

The defendant circuit, the brief further charged, had not made unreasonable use of whatever circuit buying power of films they might possess, and with respect to agreements Crescent made with independent exhibitors not to compete with Crescent after selling their theatres, it asserted, "It is well settled that reasonable agreements not to compete made in conection with the sale of a business do not violate the Sherman Act." It submitted, "Neither the principles enumerated in plaintiff's preliminary statement nor the rules which the plaintiff deduces therefrom are accurate, applicable statements of the law."

Final arguments in the anti-trust trial, which was argued for seven weeks late this summer, were set for December 1st. George H. Armstead, Jr., and William Waller, Crescent attorneys, filed the reply brief to the Government's brief, as will W. H. Mitchell, representing Muscle Shoals Theatres, an associated defendant. J. D. Mosby, of counsel for Universal and United Artists, announced his clients' brief would be filed within ten days.

Crescent's main brief, meanwhile, declared the anti-trust action was the result of complaints made to the Department of Justice by Tim. W. Smith, W. F. Roth, Fred Gorman and Mac Buchanan. It stated that Judge Elmer Davies, the trial judge, "observed the manner and demeanor of these witnesses while on the witness stand and on more than one occasion, in substance, stated that Smith was entitled to little or no credence—that he appeared to be anxious to give answers which he thought would meet with the approval of counsel for the plaintiff."

Section 2 of the Sherman Act is not applicable, the brief asserted: "All of the complaints against the defendant exhibitors have come from so-called independents and have not concerned the quantity of pictures but quality and dating. The charge is that the defendant exhibitors have bought and played the best pictures or that they have been able to play them earlier. It is perfectly obvious that the defendant exhibitors have not 'monopolized' the supply of films in any sense of the word."

Citations from other film litigations to prove these contentions were offered: the case of Sugar Institute vs. U.S. (1936) 297 U.S. 553, 600, cited as proof that "each Sherman anti-trust case must be decided on its own particular facts." Binderup vs. Exchange (1923), 263 U.S., 291 and Interstate Circuit, Inc., vs. U.S. (1939) 306 U. S., 208 were cited to establish the premise that "the distribution of motion picture films across state lines, including the contracts calling for transportation to the states, constitutes interstate commerce"; and the case of Mutual Film Corporation vs. Industrial Commission of Ohio, (1915), 236 U.S., 230, was cited to establish the point that "such interstate commerce ends when the films are delivered in the state where they are to be exhibited."

Finally, the lengthy legal document asserted that Crescent operations exerted no unreasonable restraint on interstate commerce, adding, "It is absurd to say of such a commodity that the buyer in one locality 'controls the market' even if he be the only buyer in that locality. Prints may be shipped in one direction as easily as in another and the distribution alone controls the market. The Department of Justice engages in pure sophistry when it speaks of control by exhibitors of a local or geographical market."

SOUTH, MIDDLE WEST REPORT UPTURN

Theatre business is "uniformly" good in all sections of the south, southeast and middle west, according to R. M. Savini, president of Astor Pictures Corp. who returned to New York this week following a tour of exchanges in those areas.

Mr. Savini noted that throughout the middle west and southeast independent exhibitors were coming back into the business "in great numbers," building theatres in many towns against the circuits. This, he said, has resulted in better business for the independent distributor, and, he said, independents are going back to low admission policies plus double features. Independents, he said, are catering strictly to "the lower bracket income groups which built the business and will always be the backbone of the industry."

Hearing on Nebraska Trust

Date of a preliminary hearing in Nebraska's anti-trust suit against the R. D. Goldberg circuit and nine distributors, including Republic Pictures Midwest, Inc., was to be set in Omaha, this week.

Attorney General Walter R. Johnson of that state, brought charges last week against the circuit and distributors, asserting they conspired in violation of the state anti-trust laws to put out of business the Epstein Theatres Corp. and the A. H. Blank-Green Admiral Theatre.

The attorney general charged the distributors agreed to accept higher film terms from Mr. Goldberg, in return for which the Epstein theatres, which formerly played day and date with Mr. Goldberg's, would be relegated to a playing position after the Goldberg theatres. The Admiral, which is operated by the Blank Omaha interests, is the first new house to be built in 15 years in that city.

Another charge in the suit was that the Goldberg houses raised admissions from 30 to 35 cents as a part of the alleged conspiracy. The equity action seeks an injunction to restrain the contemplated film deals and clearance revisions. The Blank firm is affiliated with Paramount, which is one of the distributors charged by the state with conspiring with Mr. Goldberg against Blank's new Admiral. Mr. Johnson's action is in direct conflict with an anti-trust suit filed by Mr. Goldberg charging the major distributing firms with a similar conspiracy with Blank against Goldberg theatres. In all, a total of more than 20 of Omaha's 32 theatres are involved in all actions.

Dismiss Block-Sork Anti-Trust Suit

The anti-trust suit of Harry Block and Henry Sork, operators of the Rio theatres in Reading and Schuylkill Haven, Pa., was dismissed on Monday (17) after it was called for hearing in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia before Federal Judge Guy K. Bard. Originally filed the day the consent decree was handed down, the suit sought triple damages of $60,000 against the major distributors and a group of exhibitors including the Warner and Comerford circuits.

It is understood the defendants rejected a move on the part of Ben Sork, counsel for the plaintiffs, to effect an out-of-court settlement, after which he agreed that the case be dismissed, Morris Wolf, attorney for Warners, advised the court that the plaintiffs had agreed the case should be dismissed and Mr. Sork substantiated that statement. Much pre-trial testimony had been taken earlier in the year and all the parties agreed to bear their own expenditures.

The anti-trust suit of Milton Rogasner, operator of the Iris Theatre, Philadelphia, also seeking triple damages against Warners and the major distributors, was deferred until the next term of the court, probably in January.

B. & K. Retain Edmund Adcock

Edmund Adcock, of Spitz and Adcock, was retained last week to represent Balaban and Katz and the Paramount interests in the anti-trust suit filed in Federal Court, Chicago district, by Thomas A. Murray. Morris G. Leonard, who was named as an individual in the suit, will represent himself. Now general counsel for Balaban & Katz, Mr. Leonard formerly was attorney for the Milo Theater Corp., another defendant in the case.

Burnett Wolfson, representing the Monrovia Theatres Corporation of Portland, Ore., in its anti-trust suit against Fox West Coast theatres, asked for and received a dismissal in the California court, it was reported last week. Immediately thereafter, Dietrich and Feldstein, operators of the Monrovia Theatres sold that house to the Euclid-Colorado Corporation, a FWC subsidiary.

The Pickwick theatre, Greenwich, Conn., filed interrogatories in New Haven federal court Tuesday asking 20th Century-Fox to disclose subsidiaries and contracts by November 28th. The $5,452,575 trust suit names eight majors.

REPUBLIC CLAIMS EIGHT MILLIONS IN BOOKINGS

Record Claimed by Grainger for First Half of Season; Universal Has Sales Session

Sales of Republic Pictures Corporation's 1941-42 product have surpassed all previous records for the company, with over $8,000,000 worth of new season bookings sold during the first half of the season, J. R. Grainger, president, said this week. He announced the sales statistics at the close of a two day regional sales meeting at the New York Athletic Club last Thursday.

Republic's new season pictures are approximately 40 per cent ahead of last year he said. The 1941-42 total will reach $15,000,000, he predicted, as eastern branch managers conferred on third quarter plans. Over 1000 new accounts have been closed to date, he added, including all but two of the country's affiliated and independent circuits. Deals with these two circuits are pending and will probably be closed this week.

Quarter Schedule Set

Nine feature pictures, seven westerns and four serials will be released by Republic during the third quarter of the current sales year it was announced at the meeting.

Mr. Grainger attributed the marked increase in sales for the first two quarters of the year to the fact that Republic salesmen were ready to start selling 1941-42 pictures on May 1st, four full months ahead of the decree restricted majors. The record pace is continuing, he said, with heavy exhibitor demand for the company's increased budget features.

Herbert J. Yates, following the luncheon for sales managers, said that British revenue and sales in Australia and New Zealand were double those of last year.

Morris J. Siegel, head of Republic studios, reported plans to spend approximately a million dollars in advertising and promotion next year. A large portion of it he revealed, will be used to build many of the company's contract players to star status. Mary Lee, Fay McKenzie and Ray Middleton were mentioned as among the first Republic players to be given star promotion. They, and others, will soon be sent on personal appearance tours, it was said.

Reporting an increase of almost 1,500 new accounts for the Gene Autry special "Down Mexico Way" Mr. Siegel said all of the Autry pictures next year would be scheduled as special high budget productions. Two of his pictures were in the top category this year.

Eastern sales representatives at the New York meeting included:

Universal Calls Eastern Conference

Universal's eastern and southern branch and district managers were unofficial parties to the contract-signing, over the week-end, by which Universal is to release Walter Wanger's story of American volunteers in the R.A.F., "Eagle Squadron."

Meeting in mid-season sales convention at New York's Astor Hotel under W. A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager, they witnessed Mr. Wanger and "U's" president, N. J. Blumberg, sign the releasing contract.

Three other newly acquired "U" properties are the Frank Lloyd production, "Saboteur," to be directed by Alfred Hitchcock; "The Spoilers," with John Wayne, Marlene Dietrich and Randolph Scott; and "River Lady."

Robert Cummings and Priscilla Lane will be starred in "Saboteur," according to Matthew Fox, vice-president stationed at the studio, who also reviewed production plans at the sales meeting.

Others at the speaker's table were: J. J. O'Connor, vice president; F. J. A. McCarthy, southern and Canadian division manager; Fred Meyers, eastern division manager; E. T. Gomersall, western division manager; J. H. Seidelman, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs; Budd Rogers, Universal board director; B. B. Kreisler, short subjects manager; F. T. Murray, manager branch operations and J. J. Jordan, playdate-contract manager.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board of directors analyzed the financial set-up of the company in relation to the balance necessary between production and sales.

Canada was represented by Paul Nathanson, president of Odeon Theatres and Empire-Universal Films; A. W. Perry, general manager of the latter company and Clair Hague, Universal representative with Empire-Universal.

Universal field representatives who attended the two-day session were David Levy, manager of the Big U exchange in New York and Nat Goldberg, assistant to Mr. Levy; district managers Harry D. Graham, Dave Miller and Jules Lapidus; also, branch managers W. M. Richardson, Atlanta; J. A. Prichard, Charlotte; H. I. Mansfield, Memphis; Leroy Brauer, New Orleans; J. J. Spandau, Albany, J. J. Scully, Buffalo; J. V. Frew, Cleveland; P. T. Dana, Pittsburgh; Paul Baron, Boston; J. V. Pavone, New Haven; George Schwartz, Philadelphia and Max Cohen, Washington.

Paramount Partners Meet in Hollywood

Sam Dembow, Jr. arrived in Los Angeles Monday to confer with E. V. Richards, A. H. Blank and Bob O'Donnell on the "Salute to Y. Frank Freeman" campaign and to discuss plans for a dinner to the winners to be held in Los Angeles late in January.

While in Los Angeles Mr. Dembow is also inspecting progress on the remodeling and modernizing the former El Capitan Theatre in Hollywood, which is slated to be opened soon as the Paramount Hollywood Theatre.

Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager of Producers Releasing Corp., conducted a regional sales meeting in Dallas this week, followed by another at Oklahoma City Monday. From there he will visit Kansas City, Omaha, Denver and Hollywood, before returning to the home office. Sales conferences will be held in all of the cities throughout the country.

Brandt Circuit Acquires Six

The Brandt circuit has added six theatres to its roster, bringing the total to 103 houses. The latest additions are in Yonkers, The Bronx, Brooklyn and Harlem.

The Terrace and Kent theatres in Yonkers and the University in the Bronx were acquired from Harold Friedman. The National and Terminal in Brooklyn were taken over from Herman Eisenstadt, and the Regun in Harlem was acquired.

Harmon To Lecture On Public Relations

Francis S. Harmon, of the MPPDA and coordinator of the motion picture national defense committee, will be one of the lecturers at the short course on public relations to be conducted by the American Council on Public Relations, January 26th-30th. The course will be held at the Harvard Club of New York City. Mr. Harmon's subject will be "The Public Relations of Motion Pictures."

Rex. F. Harlow, president of the council and associate professor of public relations at Stanford University, will conduct the course. A similar series of lectures and discussions was held at the Harvard Club last year. The Council also conducted courses this summer at the University of California in Los Angeles and at Stanford.

A special panel on defense problems in connection with public relations is planned for the course with the following governmental representatives participating: Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, director of public relations, U. S. Navy; Brigadier General Alexander D. Surles, director, Bureau of Public Relations, U. S. Army, and Harford Powel, director of information, Defense Bonds, U. S. Treasury.

CIO GIVEN ANOTHER SET-BACK IN FILM FIELD

Screen Publicists' Guild in New York Rejects Move for National Affiliation

The CIO last week was rebuffed for the first time in its present drive to wedge itself into the film industry—an industry in which the majority of unions belong to William Green's American Federation of Labor. Members of the Screen Publicists Guild were told in New York meeting Thursday night, November 13th, that their vote, by mail, had rejected affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Officers of the Guild had urged affiliation and there had been several weeks' discussion. Agents from the rival groups addressed the Guild. The CIO United Office and Professional Workers of America made its entrance into the industry, chartering the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, and gaining chapters at Loew's, Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox, and the adherence of the Screen Readers Guild.

Nevertheless, the publicists rejected the affiliation; and, shortly afterward the Guild executive council said the vote resulted from many members' belief that affiliation apparently was not necessary to secure "a speedy and acceptable contract" from the majors' home offices—the immediate goal of the Guild.

Agreement in Hollywood

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, the Screen Office Employees Guild and the producers reached an accord, with contracts to be drawn and signed probably this week.

At the conferences last week were Fred Pelton, producers' labor contact, and Homer Mitchell, their attorney; Glenn Pratt, the union's business agent; Herbert Sorrell, business agent of the Moving Picture Painters Local 644; George E. Bodle, union attorney; and Lyle Shrader, international representative of the Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers brotherhood.

New officers of the Screen Writers Guild are Sidney Buchman, president; Ralph Block, vice-president; Robert Rossen, secretary. Lester Cole was reelected treasurer. On the executive board are Claude Binyon, Ralph Block, Marc Connelly, Joseph Fields, Richard Maibaum, Sheridan Gibney, Mary C. McCall, Jr., Allan Scott, Robert Rossen, Stanley Rubin, Dwight Taylor, Harry Tugend; alternates, Jerome Chodorov, Phillip Dunne, Francis Faragoh, Leonard Lee, Maurice Rapf, and John Howard Lawson.

The annual election of the studio projectionists local, 165, will be held December 2nd. It is expected James Brigham will be reelected president.

In Philadelphia, the American Guild of Variety Artists and the American Federation of Musicians chapters have signed an alliance.

Local 488, IATSE, in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, will elect officers December 21st.

Frank L. Diefenderfer, incumbent, and William Smeck were nominated for the presidency of the Reading, Pennsylvania, musicians' union. Other nominations were George S. Haller and George W. Bierman, vice-president; George W. Snyder, treasurer; Edward A. Glicker and William E. Zink, secretary; and Daniel H. Gehret, assistant secretary. The election is scheduled for Dec. 7th.

RCA Communications employees won a new two year contract, with a 12 per cent wage increase, in New York last week. The agreement averted a strike.

Local 273, New Haven projectionists' union, elected officers last week. They are Anthony Basilicato, president; John Griffiths, Jr., vice-president; Ernest DeGross, secretary; Edward Boppert, treasurer; Matthew Kennedy, business agent. The meeting also reviewed the three year contracts negotiated with the area's circuits.

In Hollywood, Leo Morrison's petition to restrain the Screen Actors Guild from disciplining him, was rejected in Federal Court. Mr. Morrision is a talent agent.

Some Raise, Others Drop Price Scales

Faced with increasing operating costs, a group of theatres on Milwaukee's west side has increased its admission prices from five to 15 cents and has discontinued dime nights. Theatres in the area putting the new price scales into effect include the Violet, Parkway, Lyric, Rainbow, Rivoli, Comet and Liberty.

At Antigo, Wis., John Hanus has announced new low prices at his Home theatre, with 25-cent admission prevailing Wednesdays through Saturdays and 33-cent Sundays through Tuesdays.

The Studio theatre, in Chicago's downtown district, has increased its Sunday admission prices. Formerly 35 cents until 2 P.M., 40 cents until 6:30 P.M., and 50 cents thereafter, they are now 40 cents until 2 P.M., and 50 cents thereafter, all plus tax.

In Lewistown, Pa., all local theatres have raised their admission prices. Taxes included, the Embassy and Rialto increased adult admissions to 39 cents evenings and 28 cents matinees with children's prices correspondingly 17 and 11 cents. In addition, both houses scaled the box-office at half price for all service men in uniform. New prices at the Pastime theatre were raised to 22 cents evenings and 17 cents matinees for adults.

The Times, a downtown subsequent run theatre in Cincinnati, operated by the Isaac Lisbon interests, has reduced matinee price to 20 cents, compared with the previous scale of 22 cents. Both past and present prices include all taxes. The 1-400-seat RKO Lyric theatre, in Cincinnati, which heretofore has been playing moveover weeks at 28, 33 and 42 cents, including all taxes, has inaugurated a double feature policy, changing each Thursday, at a matinee scale of 28 cents, with a 28 and 40-cent evening rate, including taxes.

RKO Studio Promotions

William Gordon has been signed to handle foreign publicity and censorship contact between the RKO studio in Hollywood and the Hays office. Dario Sabatello, for the past five years in Warner's studio foreign department will assist Mr. Gordon. Lee Churchin has been appointed head of the Publicity Still Room at the studio. He was formerly assistant to the head of the transportation department.

NBC Observes its 15th Anniversary with 3-Hour Show

The 15th anniversary of National Broadcasting was marked last Saturday night by one of the most extensive hook-ups in radio's history, carrying special messages from President Roosevelt, government officials and screen, radio and stage stars throughout the United States and South America. A three-hour program broadcast the proceedings over 243 independent stations affiliated with the NBC Blue and Red networks, and over more than 100 stations affiliated with the company's Pan-American network. A special two-way transmission between NBC's foreign correspondents also was arranged to commemorate the event.

President Roosevelt's letter to Niles Trammel, president of NBC, declared he was confident that members of the broadcasting industry would rededicate "their vast resources to the maintenance of our democratic traditions while at the same time they work with redoubled zeal to make our own American system of broadcasting the best in the world.

Knox Broadcasts

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, broadcasting from Washington, expressed gratitude to NBC for its cooperation with the Navy. "Radio," he said, "is doing its part to bring about that unity of determination, unity of effort and unity of ideals which must culminate in this nation's unity of purpose."

Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, speaking from Washington, Mr. Trammell, and James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, also addressed the huge audience listening to the gala program.

Meanwhile, NBC's research division, in an effort to contribute its share to the networks' big birthday party, highlighted some interesting facts and contrasts between 1926 and 1941 in the company's history.

Time costs, for instance, rose about 2,000 per cent. Production of programs, tripled. About two-thirds of all program material was music, the researchers discovered, as compared with one-half used today, but there are twice as many music-hours on the air now as compared with 1926.

Dramatic shows have increased from three hours weekly to 65, chiefly because of the rapid growth of daytime serials, or "soap operas." Talks and discussions increased from approximately five hours weekly to 27. Morning exercise broadcasts disappeared from the network, but two new kinds of shows appeared during the 15-year period, quiz shows and news and special events.

The average number of station-sponsored hours on the Red network increased from 149 to 3,709 weekly, and on the Blue, from 24 to 1,443. Average number of stations used on each sponsored program rose from nine to 55 on the Red and from three to 57 on the Blue. Sponsored programs filled 15 per cent of all broadcast time in 1926 and 27 per cent in 1941.

FCC Order Suspended

NBC announced last week that stipulations were entered into between its counsel, two NBC co-plaintiffs, Woodman of the World Life Insurance Society, Stromberg Carlson Telephone Manufacturing Company, and the FCC, whereby the recent order of the Commission concerning network broadcasting, will be suspended until the Court has passed upon the motion of the plaintiffs for a preliminary injunction, now set for hearing on December 15th.

Networks Barred in Reich

Berlin officials announced last week that the National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System were banned from the air in Germany. American radio companies were ousted, according to official pronouncement in Berlin, because their "Berlin representatives transmitted to New York unjustified complaints without consulting the Reichsrundfunk Gessellschaft (German radio organization) about their wishes. This procedure, after years of long and good cooperation, is unusual in the history of journalism."

The three networks agreed, however, that they had discontinued broadcasts from their Berlin correspondents because of the imposed-Nazi censorship which made news reports "useless."

RCA Lab to Aid Defense

The new RCA radio research laboratory, now under construction near Princeton, N. J., was pledged last Saturday by officials of the Radio Corporation of America to the defense of the United States. Major General J. G. Harbord, chairman of the board of RCA, and David Sarnoff, president, joined in the pledge at ceremonies marking the laying of the cornerstone of the research center. Mr. Sarnoff's talk came via radio from the S. S. Matsonia about 5,000 miles away in the Pacific Ocean.

Scheduled for completion in the spring of next year, the laboratory will employ about 600 research workers. According to RCA, it will be the largest radio research center in the world.

Drama Guild Elects Elmer Rice President

Elmer Rice has been reelected president of the Dramatists Guild in New York for a term of two years. George S. Kaufman was named vice-president and Richard Rogers, secretary. The elections were held at the annual meeting of the group at the Lyceum theatre, Friday, November 7th.

An amendment to the minimum basic agreement with legitimate stage producers was approved which extended the period during which a producer shares in motion picture rights to a play from 10 to 18 years, but with diminishing percentages during the last eight years. Another amendment approved was an exemption from the requirement for membership in the Guild to foreign playwrights writing in a foreign language and living abroad.

Elected to the Guild council were Philip Barry, Edward Childs Carpenter, Marc Connelly, Rose Franken, Lorentz Hart, Howard Lindsay, John Monks, Jr., Arthur Schwartz, George Sklar and Victor Wolfson.

Representatives of the Guild who were elected to membership on the council of the Authors League of America, the parent body, were Irving Berlin, Mr. Connelly, Russel Crouse, Frances Goodrich, Moss Hart, Sidney Kingsley, John Howard Lawson, Kenyon Nickolson, Arthur Richman, A. E. Thomas, Rita Weiman and Stanley Young.

Mexico to Give Best Film Award

by LUIS BACERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Help for the motion picture industry is being worked out by the Federal Film Censoring and Supervision Department in the form of money-prize awards for outstanding work during 1941, announces Felipe Gregorio Castillo, head of the Department. The awards are to total $4,250 for the best production, direction and writing and for the outstanding film actor and actress of this year.

The choosing is to be done by judges representing the Department and the industry. The rewards are to be bestowed at a party set for the end of January. This will make four organizations that are awarding annual prizes for the best showings of the year by the industry,—the industry itself, the picture workers' union and the Mexican Association of Film Journalists also give awards.

National Stage Week

National theatre (stage) week was to be celebrated with various events throughout Mexico from November 20th, the 31st anniversary of the start of the Revolution, to the 27th. Screen stars were to help the thespians make a success of their show, in reciprocation for the stagefolks' contribution to second national cinematographic week that was held in conjunction with the Mexican Independence observance holidays last September.

The new kind of picture version of "Romeo and Juliet" being prepared by Marco-Aurelio Galindo, noted scenarist-director, brother of Alejandro Galindo, who is one of Mexico's leading directors, for production by Cinematografica Maga, S.A., is to start late in November. Sr. Galindo has made a blank-verse translation of the play and written the script. The cast is headed by Tomas Perrin, Marina Tamayo and Julian Soler. Art work is to be done by Miguel Covarrubias, famous Mexican painter, and Gabriel Figueroa will be the cameraman. All players are to wear regional Mexican costumes and the picture is to be made in Michoacan state, a picturesque zone that boasts many buildings and scenery reminiscent of 16th Century Italy.

Studio Improvements

As part of their program for quantity and quality production in 1942, studios are installing modern equipment. Clasa, the largest local studio, owned by interests concerned with Ing. Alberto J. Pani, ex-Minister of Finance and one of Mexico's leading financiers, has just put into service a camera crane that allows picture making from any angle. All the studios are scrapping old equipment and putting in new.

This phase of the studios' improvements program is being carried out as rapidly as funds for the purpose permit.

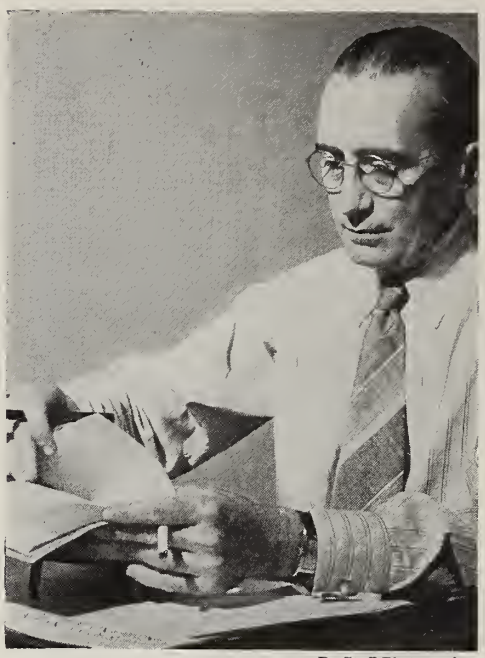
What the producers advertise as a Mexican picture that can compare with "Gone With the Wind" in scope and length, "Simon Bolivar," story of the Liberator of Venezuela, has just been completed here by Miguel Contreras Torres, veteran producer-director who has had Hollywood experience, and Jesus Grovas, president of Grovas & Co., producers, former local Paramount manager. This is the longest picture ever made in Mexico, running 25 reels.



Like "GWTW," this picture will be exhibited with an intermission in the middle. Sres. Contreras Torres and Grovas are arranging for a world premiere for their production, simultaneously here and in some South American capital, most probably Bogota, Colombia, because that country has demonstrated unusual interest in the production. This debut is expected to be some time in December.

Costs of this picture are reported to have been about $215,000, the most ever spent for making a film in Mexico.

Chile is keenly interested in the Mexican picture industry, it is shown by a request from the Valparaiso Central Chamber of Commerce to leading producers and the Government for complete data about the business—history, progress, capital investment, average annual investment, yearly production, taxes paid, prizes and subsidiaries granted by the Government, import duties, copyright laws, picture and its industry laws, exhibition and distribution regulations and the status of film labor.

HERALD PEOPLE

By Staff Photographer

RAYMOND EDWARD GALLAGHER, advertising representative of the Herald, says he is the youngest member of the Motion Picture Pioneers. He entered the business after a brief childhood in Brooklyn—where he has lived ever since—in 1910 as a member of Vitagraph's publicity and advertising department at the Brooklyn studios. In fact, he was the department, under Sam Spedon. Later he worked with the late J. Stuart Blackton, general production executive at Vitagraph, but left that company to join Sidney Kent's staff at General Film. He was Albany branch manager for General until 1918 when he transferred his merchandising ability to the motion picture department of the New York Morning Telegraph. In February, 1921, he joined the advertising staff of Motion Picture News, from thence to the Herald.

He has an array of cups and medals for handball ability, won mostly at the Friars Club, and he was a championship quartermiler; but his favorite sports now are less strenuous. He admits to being in great demand as a golf partner, because he is insurance for at least the high score prize, and he has never drawn to an inside straight.

New Groups Join Army and Navy

In recent weeks more employes from the various branches of the motion picture industry have joined the Army, Navy, Marine, and Air Corps divisions of the Government's armed forces. Others formerly employed by the industry and who have already been in the different Government branches have received promotions, while some have been released in accordance with the proclamation to release men over 28 years of age. The following men from the film industry have been or will be inducted:

Bernard B. Keeney, son of C. G. Keeney, manager of the Park theatre in Reading, Pa., has been accepted by the Royal Canadian Air Force; Samuel Kreisler, a home office publicity representative for United Artists; J. Wallack, assistant manager of the Strand in New Britain, Conn.; Billy Briant, Twentieth Century-Fox booker in New Orleans; Harvey Kelly, assistant manager of the Grand theatre in Richmond, Va.; Mike Serabo of Warners' Chicago exchange; Charles Burns, manager of the Rialto in Kingsport, Tenn.; Herbert Anderson, Warner actor; Joe Phillips, assistant manager of the Strand in Scranton, Pa., and Robert J. Libson, manager of the Times theatre, Cincinnati.

Ray Thomas, assistant to T. C. Wright of Warners' production department in Burbank, Cal.; Jack Kerz of the Balaban & Katz accounting department in Chicago; John Sharp of the Balaban & Katz Roosevelt theatre in Chicago; Ralph Lehman, manager of the Ritz theatre in McGehee, Ark.; W. Durwood Thompson, manager of the Strand in Duluth, Minn.; Neil McGill, manager of the Carolina in Charlotte, N. C.; James Harris, publicity director of Loew's Theatres in Cleveland; William Kapourelas, manager of the Family theatre in Indianapolis; Kay Nayfa, manager of the Empire in Placerville, Cal.

Meanwhile, a total of 28 men have left or will leave shortly the Training Film Production Laboratory at Fort Monmouth, N. J., including: John W. Logan, MGM cutter; Eugene Mudge, freelance writer; Franklin Coen, Columbia writer; Robert Churchill, documentary cameraman; Irving Smith, newsreel cameraman; Leonard Baker, television director; Barton Hayes, film cutter; Robert Russell, documentary script writer; Arthur Wilmurt, Yale drama staff; Frank A. Baldridge, film editor; Jaro Fabry, illustrator; Neal Gerard, color film cutter; Robert L. Jennes, Columbia animation cameraman; William H. Reynolds, Loew-Lewin cutter; Kurt W. Simon, Warner production staff; and Albert Shaff, cutter at Columbia.

Also Granville (Owen) Scofield, film actor; Herman Cohen, Schlesinger Studios; Berk Anthony, Disney Studios; Floyd Foran and Austin Doyle, Technicolor; Joe Thompson, NBC production staff in California; Dick Blake, screen writer; Bob Hoover, Columbia writer; John Logan, film cutter; Jerry Bergman, MGM production department, and Bill Reynolds, Universal cutter.

Kanin With OEM

Garson Kanin, RKO director, who has been released from active duty at the Training Film Production Laboratory, will continue in Governmental service in Washington with the Office of Emergency Management. Mr. Kanin's work will be to continue with the program of short subjects being made by the OEM for civilian defense training and education. However, a little of his time will be reserved for one or two pictures a year at RKO.

Those released from the various branches of the service, other than the Army Signal Corps, include: Vic Carlson, Twentieth Century-Fox employe in Chicago; Morris Cohn, Columbia salesman in Albany, N. Y.; Sidney Lax, formerly with Columbia in New Haven, Conn.; Bob Nero of the Monogram exchange in Cleveland, and Ed Kelley, former assistant to Vic Gauntlett, advertising manager of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit in Seattle.

Other former film employes now in the Government's armed forces who have been promoted include: Edwin P. Curtin, former New York radio, publicity and advertising man, has been promoted to the rank of captain at Camp Wheeler; Sterling Campbell, formerly an assistant director and technical adviser with Universal and Warner in Hollywood, has been promoted to squadron leader in the Royal Canadian Air Force; Richard J. Maher, formerly with Bausch & Lomb in Rochester, promoted to sergeant at Fort Shafer, Honolulu.

Aiding the boys in uniform, Will Horwitz recently opened a Soldier's Service Club in his Uptown Theatre Center in Houston, Tex. The Center includes game tables for cards, dominoes, checkers, pool, pingpong and other games. Radios, a juke box, writing desks and reading tables are also included.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

This is the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address your reports to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Associated British Film Dist.

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements—This junk hit a new high for walkouts. Brother, no more foreign pictures for me. After this one, "Night Train," etc., I've paid for my last one. Played October 22-23.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce—A very fine piece of entertainment, most suitable for American audiences. Although we could have had more business, we received many favorable comments.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLONDE FROM SINGAPORE, THE: Florence Rice—Just a picture. Should be doubled with something good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 22-23.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

KING OF DODGE CITY: Bill Elliott—Usual shoot-'em-up to good Saturday business. Running time, 56 minutes. Played November 8.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Binnie Barnes, Allyn Joslyn—Here is real comedy without recourse to slap-stick. A galaxy of stars including Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Allyn Joslyn, Binnie Barnes and several others work in perfect harmony to put across this excellent, mirthful production. There is not a flaw in this spicy story of marital "high-jinks" and there is never a lagging moment as the tempo of hilarity increases as the story leads up to its climax. There should be no complaints if you show this really clever picture. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 8.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane—Got by on Friday-Saturday double bill. Nothing to boast about.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane—Did very good. Think it was due to Foto Nite.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—The stars brought them in and they were satisfied, but didn't like it as well as "Boom Town." Lots of laughs and fair box office. Played October 31-November 1.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner—This was a splendid picture. Tracy did a very good job of playing the dual role in this picture. It did not seem to have any appeal, though, and as a result, business was a shade slower than average. Running time, 123 minutes. Played October 28-30.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Best of this series. Good any day in week. Played November 4-6.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Why did they have to do it? Why couldn't they have married "Mary Lamont" to "Kildare" and gradually moved her out of the series? It seemed a shame to take her out in this manner and made this picture the least liked of any of them. Played October 31-November 1.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GET AWAY, THE: Charles Winninger, Robert Sterling—O. K. programer. Action and some suspense. Played October 29-30.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

I'LL WAIT FOR YOU: Robert Sterling, Marsha Hunt, Paul Kelly—Very nice little program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone—I was determined I would get one good crowd this Fall, come what may, so I ran this with "Charley's Aunt" and succeeded quite well. This Hardy picture is very well done, but the attraction of the series is lessening. They are getting too scarce on the comedy end. There are very few laughs in this one. It seemed too long drawn out. However, I'll keep on looking forward to the next one for quite a while yet. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 7-8.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone—Another fine Hardy picture which did not do usual business, principally because we had a bad storm all day Sunday and it carried over into Monday. Where does MGM pick up all those honeyed gals like Patricia Dane? There's always someone like her springing up in some of their pictures. Will be looking forward to her next. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, James Stewtart—Was pleasantly surprised with this one as I had expected it was for the big cities only. But they came and did not hear one complaint and many praises. Everyone likes James Stewart and Hepburn really pleased in this role. Played October 17-18.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Mary Howard, Billie Burke—Very poor, as I suspected from reports. Tried to get out of running it, but MGM insisted it was O. K. for me. Even the kids walked out on it. Running time, 80 minutes.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

Paramount

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Played repeat showing to satisfactory business.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Lynne Overman—There's lots of hocus-pocus in this Hope-opus and my customers (bless-'em) really reveled in it. Their only complaint was that they laughed so hard they missed much of the dialogue. Miss Lamour always had a substantial following in this situation, but never before this could I put so much faith in Hope! Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 16-18.—Del. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—The picture is Hope's best and everyone enjoyed it immensely. Business was good. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 30-November 1.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Bob Hope is O. K. in this picture and that's the kind of picture my fans like to have at this time. It's a swell grosser and is a small town natural. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 22-23.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

FORCED LANDING: Richard Arlen—Too many of this kind on the market. Every producer has one as good, or better. This one is hard to understand on account of the foreign accent.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: James Lydon, Charles Smith, June Preisser—Dandy entertainment. Action, thrills, comedy. Business good. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 4-5.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—Good picture. Good box office. Too long for the staff after the first run, but don't think audience mind sitting through it. It's timely and the air scenes magnificent. The loyalty angle among the air force boys goes over big here. Enjoyed by all. Played October 24-25.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

KISS THE BOYS GOODBYE: Mary Martin, Don Ameche, Oscar Levant—An average musical that tries hard to be different, but winds up with the rest. The title led many to believe it was a service story. Miss Martin sings nicely, but some of her Southern accent was difficult for "us furriners" to grasp. "Rochester" was wasted. It's a "C" picture with Don Ameche and twenty minutes added. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Nov. 3-5.—Del. Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff—Picture pleasing. Nothing big. Business average Sunday and Monday. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 2-3.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard—After this had played around this district on all sides with a traveling circuit, I managed to pick up the balance of the folks of the district who enjoyed this epic of this world-famed police force. However, on the percentage asked by the company, there was no gravy for the exhibitor. However, it was very much enjoyed by all my patrons. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SANTA FE MARSHAL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—The average "Hopalong Cassidy" picture. Without George "Windy" Hayes they are not so good. This one did not go over. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—Biggest mid-week business in seven months. Where did they get the story? It's nothing like the book. Played in cold, rainy weather and still they turned out. Played November 5-6.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray—Picked up this old one and did a whale of a business. Which goes to show that it doesn't pay to play them too hot. Many said it was far better than "G.W.T.W." Played October 19-20.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

WORLD PREMIERE: John Barrymore, Francis Farmer—This one failed to hold interest. Even Mr. Barrymore's talent cannot hold up such a weak story as this. Business way below average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 29-30.—Rae Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Producers Releasing Corp.

ARIZONA GANG BUSTERS: Tim McCoy—P. R.

C. ruincd a good western series with this one. The folks who like this type of picture don't want any sabotage or international situations in their horse operas. The balance of the series is very good. Played October 31-November 1.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

BARNYARD FOLLIES: Mary Lee, Rufe Davis, June Storey—Swell show. My patrons ate it up. A little old, but it doesn't make any difference with this type of picture. Played October 29-30.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOWN MEXICO WAY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—We had to hang the S. R. O. sign on this one twice on Sunday evening. This was double-billed with "You'll Never Get Rich" which was also a good draw. Autry always goes over big here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 26-27.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

MOUNTAIN MOONLIGHT: Weaver Bros. and Elviry—Good program picture and good draw. Not enough of the hillbilly singing to suit some of my patrons. Played November 5-6.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

PUDDIN' HEAD: Judy Canova, Francis Lederer, "Slim" Summerville—Just got by for Judy. Not as good as her former pictures. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 15-16.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

PUDDIN' HEAD: Judy Canova, Francis Lederer, "Slim" Summerville—Not much to this one. Too much Judy and not enough 'Slim." How Judy ever got into the movies is beyond me.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingshead, Ga. General patronage.

UNDER FIESTA STARS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Good old Gene, he really drives the blues away.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DEVIL AND MISS JONES, THE: Jean Arthur, Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn—Good entertainment. Held up for second day run. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 26-27.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—Real good. Business above average. Thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. The best yet.—Harland Rankin, Center Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck—Played this on a week-end instead of a western. It was fairly well received in bad weather. I'll still take a horse-opery on Saturday. Played November 7-8.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

LET'S MAKE MUSIC: Bob Crosby, Jean Rogers—If Bob Crosby is an actor, I'm a millionaire. He will never be an actor and I'll never attain my goal with stuff like this. Take Elisabeth Risdon out of the picture and you might as well leave it in the can. Played October 15-16.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH: Carole Lombard, Robert Montgomery, Gene Raymond—Played it second run to disappointing business.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MY LIFE WITH CAROLINE: Ronald Colman, Anna Lee—I was under the impression that this was an hilarious comedy. But the funniest part of it was the way the staff disappeared when both customers came out. Not a very auspicious debut for Miss Lee. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 20-22.—Del Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PARACHUTE BATTALION: Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly, Edmond O'Brien, Harry Carey—Had Dick Stabile's Orchestra on the stage. Drew a good crowd, but lost money. He certainly puts on a good show for for those of you who use orchestras. This was our first try at it. Our town just is not big enough, but it was fun while it lasted. The crowd enjoyed the picture and said it was peppy and had a good amount of comedy. The jumping is excellent and there are educational aspects to this picture. Many said "You don't often get as good a picture as that one when a theatre is featuring a band." Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 5.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

RELUCTANT DRAGON, THE: Robert Benchley—My gross on these feature-cartoons drops about 30 per cent from the previous one and this was no exception. The consensus of patron opinion is that "Dragon" is interesting, instructive. Goofy steals the show. The "Dragon" sequence was the weakest spot. But little do they know that I paid too much rental in proportion to the returns. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 23-25. Del. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SUED FOR LIBEL: Kent Taylor, Linda Hayes—Well received. Most enjoyable. Program suitable for dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, Edward Everett Horton—A dandy picture with grand music which was a complete washout at the box office. Smallest attendance we have had in months. Cannot understand why this gal doesn't draw here. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 2-3.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SUNNY: Anna Neagle, Ray Bolger, Helen Westley—Too much music in this. Much too long. Did not hold interest. Helen Westley stole the show. Played November 2-3.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy—This was double-billed with "Law of the Tropics" and did not draw at all. We had very poor business on this. Poorest business for a long time. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 5-6.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy, Burgess Meredith—Did average business, but received many complaints from patrons. My people did not care for it. If you haven't already run this feature, be sure and listen closely at first part of Reel Two where the operator next to Ginger Rogers is announcing the time. Listen closely and see if she doesn't make a mistake along about the third or fourth time she announces it. If you notice it, please mention it in this department when reporting on the above picture. I'd like to know whether I'm wrong or not. Could have been that I misunderstood what operator said.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ACCENT ON LOVE: George Montgomery, Osa Massen—Very good program picture. Suitable for dual billing.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney, Dana Andrews—Both Scott and Tierney did great in this picture. Lots of good action and color photography was good. Good business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 21-23.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

BELLE STARR: Randolph Scott, Gene Tierney—Here's a swell action picture; good color and scenery. If your patrons want action, get this one and push it. —J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis—I wondered this Fall whether there were enough people left around here to give us a good crowd. We hadn't had one in so long. I ran this with "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," knowing I couldn't make much money, but knowing that if anyone were nearby, the show would be irresistible. Well, we had a good crowd, as you would expect, and this picture brought out many laughs that I haven't heard in a long time. The picture is just right. Now I know that the people are here, may be can get them out again. Running time, 81 minutes. Played November 7-8.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis—We did O. K. on this picture. Jack Benny always does good here, although this was not Benny's type. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 7-9.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis—Here's a natural if there ever was one. If your patrons can't laugh, better tell them to stay away.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

CHARLEY'S AUNT: Jack Benny, Kay Francis, James Ellison—Jack Benny delivers top performance. Good picture. Good business. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 2-3.—Rae Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN RIO: Sidney Toler, Mary Beth Hughes—Every one likes "Charlie Chan" and we always have a moderate business on these pictures. Double billed it with "The Kid from Kansas," which, in my opinion, is just another horse opera. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 17-18.—J. M. Thomsen, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Very good, but was rained out two nights. Played November 2-3.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne—It is an old picture, but there were many who had not seen it, and many who wanted to see it again. The color was very good and the acting superb. Played double bill to good receipts. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 3-5.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN: Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison—Swell suspense story made in England which did not help it any. But it pleased a Giveaway crowd and kept them interested until the end. Played October 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra, Milton Berle—This was double featured with "Mob Town" and we really packed them in with this program. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 19-20.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Milton Berle—They will enjoy it if you can get them in. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 29-30.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

WE GO FAST: Lynn Bari, Alan Curtis—If you can find anything else to run, better run it. However, it will fill, but that's all—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randoph Scott, Virginia Gilmore—Very good picture. Color very beautiful. Pictures with Indian fights always draw well. Give us more of them. Played October 31-November 1.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

WILD GEESE CALLING: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett—This picture was very good and did better than average business. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 30-October 2.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

WILD GEESE CALLING: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett, Warren William—This should be shown to adults only. Too much ado over having a baby, for children, and it might be embarrassing to sweethearts.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

YANK IN THE R. A. F.: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Here's one you can use your surplus advertising budget on. This has everything the others left out. My print had perfect sound, and had good business due to getting it early.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

United Artists

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—A good show, well acted, but the type that will not go over in the small town. Many walk-outs. It will please the women; few men liked it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Can. Small town patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Wonderful picture though complaints from some who don't understand the genius of Chaplin, but the majority liked it and box office good considering heavy snow storm. Played October 27-28.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—It's not what my fans expected. It was silly, dilly, and the film rental was

NEW CONTRIBUTOR TO DEPARTMENT

A new contributor reported to the What the Picture Did for Me Department this week, and six others resumed after a lapse of some time. The new contributor is:

DEL. FOX, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Canada.

The contributors who resumed after an absence are:

J. M. THOMSEN, Center Theatre, Mariette, Mich.

VIC STEPHANO, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex.

C. W. RITENOUR, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill.

M. D. STEWART, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex.

H. T. NOKES, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo.

EDWARD L. ORNSTEIN, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind.

Read the reports from these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

over my head. Don't worry yourself over it. Running time, 128 minutes. Played October 24-25.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari, Dana Andrews—Nice picture for action lovers, with satisfactory week-end grosses.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WESTERNER, THE: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Fred Stone—Played this one late, but Mr. Cooper is one of the few actors who can be depended upon to overcome this handicap. His ability to express himself by not saying anything made the proceedings drag here and there; but as long as business is above average, I won't criticize the way it's done. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 30-November 1.—Del. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA: Robert Stack, Ann Rutherford, Richard Dix—This picture had plenty of action and everyone who saw it enjoyed it. Double featured with "The Bride Wore Crutches," which is just a program picture. Business was just fair. Running time, 74 minutes. Played October 3-4.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA: Robert Stack, Ann Rutherford, Richard Dix—Swell western. Played Sunday-Monday. Good turnout. I'll take Universal for a small town. Played October 5-6.—E. L. Ornstein, Rialto Theatre, Marengo, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BRIDE CAME C.O.D., THE: Bette Davis, James Cagney—Warners collected top rental on another programer, it seems to me. Davis always poor here and even Cagney couldn't carry her in this. Played October 26-27.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

COMET OVER BROADWAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, John Litel—Very good programer, that was played with "Mr. and Mrs. Smith." Business below par.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy—This made a perfect three-point landing in this situation and came very near establishing a new ceiling at the box-office for a Monday-Wednesday date. No one complained at the unusual length, but I did find myself mentally shooting down a lot of those aeroplanes that were constantly blitzing the dialogue. But I have no kick coming; this is a story of aeroplanes. And those machines do turn out the patrons. Running time, 137 minutes. Played October 27-29.—Del. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

DIVE BOMBER: Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray—Very good color photography and packed with plenty of thrills from start to finish. Did better than average on this one. Running time, 132 minutes. Played October 15-16.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

EAST OF THE RIVER: John Garfield, Brenda Marshall, Marjorie Rambeau—A real good picture that did business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy—This one fell down badly and with star attraction. Would not recommend this one for a small town product. Running time, 98 minutes. Played October 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino, Joan Leslie—This product was originally dated to me in June of this year, and having redated this product three times, I have at last had the privilege of playing same. Just down the alley for a small town and rural community. Play it in any spot. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan, James Stephenson, Julie Bishop—We did an average business on this. Double featured with "Our Wife." Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 12-13.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SQUADRON: Ronald Reagan, James Stephenson, Julie Bishop—A swell show and it's a grand airplane picture. Plenty of action of the R. A. F. That Reagan is a coming star. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 26-27.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

KNOCKOUT: Arthur Kennedy, Olympe Bradna—Another cheap little program picture to fill a booking. And my friend, the exhibitor, figure the spot we are in under the Decree, this season. Some like this will come in every block and you have no out. A meddling bureaucrat, that did not know the first thing about the picture business, forced this on an unwilling industry, upsetting a practice that had been in use for years, that of a substantial cancellation, that you now have been deprived of. And which was satisfactory. This decree, as I understand it, expires some time in June. Speaking for myself alone, I think that a united industry should make every effort to get out from under this. It is not working out for us, and I don't think that it is, in general.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—Although played late, one of the best, least-known pictures on 1940-41 product. Pat O'Brien's part as "Knute Rockne" very excellently acted. Had more customer approval on this than any played from Warners from '40-'41 product. Played November 3-5.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MALTESE FALCON, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Gladys George—It will pass, but don't expect too much. It's a rough-talking movie. It won't hurt you to play it. You will see some good acting. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 7-9.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich, George Raft—Good, thrilling picture with dandy comedy in the mood of "They Drive By Night." All who saw it liked it a lot, but there were very few there. A second night would have helped by word of mouth. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 6.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—Better than most Warners this year. Average at box office. Played October 31-November 1.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley—This picture did a good business although it was billed with "Harmon of Michigan," which, no doubt, drew a great number of patrons due to this being Harmon's so-called stamping ground. Business was considerably above average on this program. Running time, 108 minutes. Played September 28-29.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

NAVY BLUES: Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye—Ann Sheridan deserves better treatment. Picture only fair. Business good. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 6-7.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

THIEVES FALL OUT: Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, Jane Darwell—A fair program picture.—Harland Rankin, Park Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—Business was good, but due only to the large number of men from R.C.A.F. school which is located here, who attended. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 6-8.—Mel Jolley, Columbia Theatre, St. Thomas, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AN ACHE IN EVERY STAKE: Stooges—The Stooges go pretty well although I think they repeat some of their antics too often in their reels. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: Our patrons really love these "Community Sing." They have a little trouble joining in, but by the end of the reel they are going in pretty good shape. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GOOSE GOES SOUTH: Technicolor Cartoons—Best fable we have had in a long while.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

HOMELESS FLEA, THE: MGM Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Would have been better if the flea had made the dog itch instead of setting him on fire.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN WHO CHANGED THE WORLD, THE: Miniatures—Good, as these usually are.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

or cartoon. Enjoyed by all. The woodpecker really got the laughs.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RESPECT THE LAW: Crime Does Not Pay Series—This type of short all O.K. Running time, 18 minutes.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

TRIFLES OF IMPORTANCE: Passing Parade—Another good Passing Parade reel. We have yet to play one that didn't please.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

DIPSY GYPSY: Madcap Model Series—This new type cartoon is very clever and the music is superb. Give us some more. Running time, 9 minutes.—Rae Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

GABBY GOES FISHING: Gabby Color Cartoons—This was one of Gabby's best. These Gabby Color Cartoons are enjoyed by all. They should make more of these. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

GAY KNIGHTIES, THE: Madcap Models—These "Madcap Model" cartoons please the kiddies, but the adults don't think much of them. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

HOOLA BOOLA: Madcap Models—O.K. for kids, but adults don't like them very well. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

I'LL NEVER CROW AGAIN: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye Cartoons are always enjoyed, but this was not as good as average. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

KING FOR A DAY: Gabby Color Cartoons—Just another color cartoon—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Best newsreel on the market. Getting better every week.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SUN FUN: Sportlights—Good Sportlight subject.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: Run them all. Nice color. Interesting and different.—Walter R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

MEET ROY ROGERS: Meet the Stars Series—A nice little short from Republic. A perfect dish for the Western addicts as it introduces not only Roy Rogers, but also many other favorites. A few songs and a bit of music complement the film. Harriet Parsons as commentator has a most pleasing voice. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

CANINE CADDY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good. I wish they would make more of these. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

EYES ON BRAZIL: Special—Good. My patrons like to travel.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 1: John Gunther John Gunther is guest this time in this average but well-liked issue of a series that is always welcomed here. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 1: "Thumbs Up, Texas"—Best of the short subjects. Interesting and educating. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 1: "Thumbs Up, Texas"—The March of Time is always enjoyed by the adults. Most of them are very interesting and this is one of them. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: "Norway in Revolt"—One of the best issues of recent releases of these timely subjects. Played early. Running time, 18 minutes.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 13: "Peace—By Adolf Hitler"—Very good. This one kind of made the patrons sit up and take notice and gave them something to think about. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

NIFTY NINETIES: Walt Disney Cartoons—Most Disney cartoons are very good and liked by all, but this was not quite up to Disney's high standard. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

ROLLING RYHTHM: Sportscope—Roller skating, particularly at the Radio City sunken rink. Good enough of its kind. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANZACS IN ACTION: The World Today—These subjects (The World Today) don't seem to create much interest. They seem to be rather dry. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

FROZEN NORTH, THE: Terrytoons—These Terrytoons are generally quite good. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

ICE CARNIVAL, THE: Terrytoons—O.K. black and white cartoon.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

WHAT HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Terrytoons—This was a fair Terrytoon color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

WINTER IN ESKIMO LAND: Father Hubbard Alaskan Adventures—These reels of Father Hubbard's adventures are well enjoyed. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

Vitaphone

ALL THIS AND RABBIT STEW: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Swell comedy and all of your fans will like it. Running time, 7 minutes.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

BRAVE LITTLE BAT, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—My patronage rave for this kind of cartoon, and they are grand. Running time, 7 minutes.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

BRAVE LITTLE BAT, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Cute enough color cartoon but rather pointless and not up to the average of this series. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

CLIFF EDWARDS AND HIS BUCKAROOS: Melody Masters—Cliff Edwards is a favorite here, so this short was well received. A dash of comedy plus good music and singing make this reel a satisfactory addition to any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HUNTING THE HARD WAY: Howard Hill—This was good. Everyone liked this. Hill gives a brilliant demonstration of his amazing skill with the bow and arrow. Running time, 16 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

MARIE GREENE AND HER GANG: Melody Masters—Very good single musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTES TO YOU: Looney Tunes Cartoons—This was a good Porky cartoon. I believe it was a little better than average. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

OF FOX AND HOUNDS: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—One of the best of colored cartoon shorts.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

ROOKIE REVUE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—This is a swell short. Play it.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SNOW TIME FOR COMEDY: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very funny. These compare to the Disney cartoons. Running time, 7 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax, Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

SOCKEROO: Maxie Rosenbloom—Maxie Rosenbloom is about as good an actor as he is a prize fighter and that is pretty bad. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

SPORT CHUMPIONS: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—I didn't think much of this. Just something to fill out the program. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

TANKS ARE COMING, THE: Service Special—It's right up my fans' alley and let's have more of them. Running time, 18 minutes.—Vic Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

WE, THE ANIMALS, SQUEAK: Looney Tunes Cartoons—In my opinion, this was not up to Porky Pig's standard. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Rural patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THEY GET TOGETHER

Folks, study the picture on this page. Well, say you, what's what about a group shot of managers that calls for such editorial emphasis?

The answer: It is not just a "group shot of managers". The picture represents all of the managers in London, Ontario, Canada. These are members of the Theatre Managers' Association.

The organization is a year old. In that short time, it has accomplished a complete revolution in newspaper handling of theatre and amusement news.

Previous to the formation of the Association, as told by F. B. Jackson, secretary-treasurer, and Loew's manager, the theatremen were completely at odds. Cut-throating was fashionable. As a result, newspaper cooperation was impossible to obtain. Amusement advertising was carried on the classified and obituary pages. Efforts by individual managers for a better break met with complete failure.

According to Jackson, it was due importantly to Charles E. Kurtzman, Loew district manager, that this unhealthy condition was cured. On his first trip to London, Mr. Kurtzman, disturbed with the situation, called upon the publisher, strenuously objected to the treatment accorded all the theatres. He pressed for a change.

The paper insisted that, before anything was done, the managers would have to get together, present their complaints in a body. Mr. Kurtzman immediately called a meeting for the purpose. Organization resulted. The Association came about.

Within a period of four weeks the paper fell in line. All complaints were adjusted.

On this desk are tear sheets of the London campaign for the New Fall Movie Season. Pages and pages were given over to the coming product. House ads were conspicuous. The group shot, here reproduced, was run in a four-column layout. A stirring half-column editorial praising the work of the Association was featured.

There is a new spirit in London. Hitherto unapproachable officials are now receptive. Leading merchants gladly cooperate on theatre campaigns. The Association is represented in important communal projects. The theatremen have built further goodwill with solid support of war drives.

Grosses are better. The managers are firm friends. They work "one for all and all for one".

BESA SHORT TELLS HOW

Praises well earned by the short-subjects department heads for last week's A. M. P. A. meeting are best to be expressed in the honors paid to Besa Short, guest of honor, who came up from Texas to represent the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell forces, to tell how Interstate does it. The impression made by Besa before the competent audience was distinctly in keeping with the admirable job the Dallas girl is doing to spotlight Interstate's box-office handling of short-subject promotion.

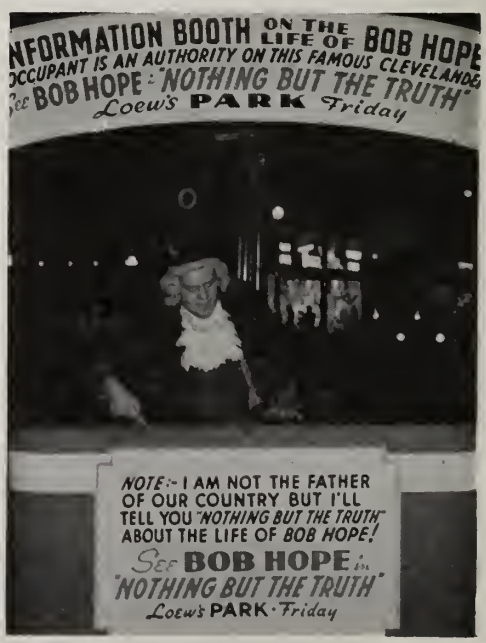
ROUND TABLE IN PICTURES

Fitted with regular chairs, screen and projector, is R. Lee Kline's lobby miniature theatre, at Warner's Orpheum, Philadelphia, to show trailers on coming pictures, in this instance for "Lady Be Good". Music was furnished by victrola behind the screen playing hit numbers from the picture. It proved a popular place for patrons, a week ahead, Kline notes.

One of the main floats in the three-block street parade arranged by Ken Hoel for "A Yank in the R.A.F." at the Harris Senator, Pittsburgh. Army and Marine Corps equipment was featured with special decoration of banners along the line of march.



Seasonal and colorful is the attractive foyer panel currently installed at Loew's State, Boston, and reported by Joe Longo, publicity head.

Portable information booth on the streets of Cleveland for "Nothing but the Truth", at Loew's Park, proved a winner for Arnold Gates. The "authority" was a well-known amateur comedian.

One of the neatest front displays he has had occasion to use recently was the flash at the Palace, Pittsfield, Mass., by Manager Norman T. Prager, for "Navy Blues". The job was mostly paste-up, artistically arranged, with all the material in the layout taken from the 24's, the 6's and 3's on the picture.

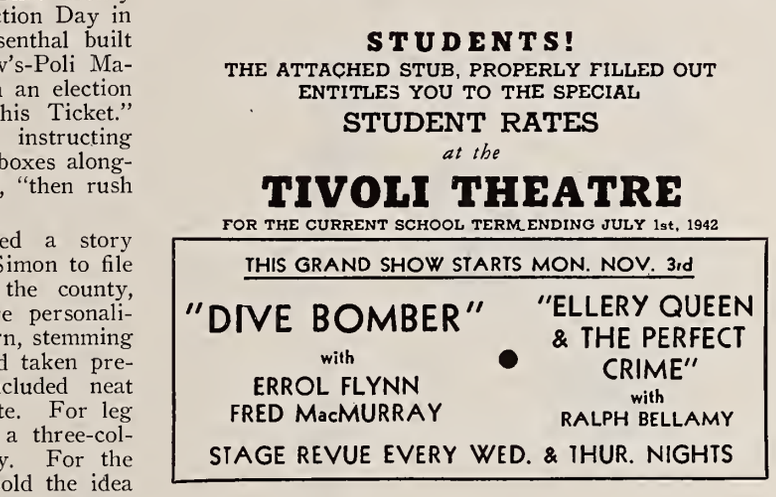
Daniel Webster In Bridgeport

Since his opening of "All That Money Can Buy" came just after Election Day in Bridgeport, Conn., Morris Rosenthal built up interest in the date at Loew's-Poli Majestic and flooded the city with an election herald headed: "Vote (X) This Ticket." Immediately below was copy instructing readers to place an "x" in the boxes alongside of the theatre's attractions, "then rush to the Majestic to see," etc.

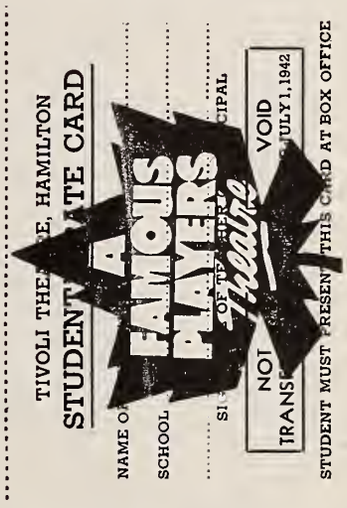
Newspaper publicity featured a story wherein Rosy invited Simone Simon to file her naturalization papers in the county, pointing out that other picture personalities had done likewise. The yarn, stemming from the fact that the star had taken preliminary action, of course, included neat mention of the picture and date. For leg art, Morris was able to plant a three-column art shot of Anne Shirley. For the classified page, the Loewman sold the idea of a streamer across the top, using the title.

On a daily street broadcast, the Round Tabler gave some guest tickets which the commentator offered to those who could answer questions about Daniel Webster, around whom the story is told. Further radio aid was obtained from WNAD's "1450 Club," on the air six hours daily, the manager giving guest tickets in exchange for screen plugs. The Webster name secured a still display in all branches of the public library, and Rosy brought the picture to the attention of clergymen for possible sermon treatment. Smash Postal wire messages were distributed by messengers to offices and factories, on a co-op deal, and leading stores gave over windows built around the line "All that money can buy won't purchase better values."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"



Williams "Blossoms" Campaign Aims at Class and Mass



To insure coverage of all possible patronage sources for "Blossoms In the Dust" at Schine's Holland, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Manager Fred Williams, successfully used different slants to attract the city's prominents and the rest of the customers. For the former he held a special screening for 50 leading women, furnishing comment cards collected after the showing. Williams also had an extension of the phone placed in the lobby with a card alongside inviting the women to "call your friends now and tell them about 'Blossoms In the Dust'." Over a hundred calls resulted.

Fred then selected a representation of the comments, picking quotes, from the best known women for his newspaper ads. All the cards were posted out front a week ahead. For further word-of-mouth, the Schiner distributed post cards to the audience to write to friends in the drawing area.

The mass exploitation was built around a series of teaser cards using the punch lines from the picture such as "Bad girls don't have babies", "There are no illegitimate children, only illegitimate parents", etc. These were distributed house to house, smoke shops, pool halls, also at the county fair. Similar copy was used on tack cards.

Warren Card for Students Solves Boxoffice Problem

THE policy of the Famous Players Canadian Tivoli, in Hamilton, Ontario, includes a student's price, pegged somewhat between the children's and adult's admission. This proved annoying at times, according to Manager E. G. Warren especially in the handling of patrons not entitled to the concession, including those who used the younger people to purchase their tickets. Others waited until there were lines at the boxoffice to request the lower-price tickets. The time lost by cashiers and manager in arguing with these customers, the criticism by other patrons kept waiting as a result, caused the theatreman to seek a way out. The problem became more immediate since the board of education consistently refused to cooperate with the theatre in finding a method to identify the huge student body of over six thousand.

After trying one thing and another, Warren finally struck upon the non-transferable student card, reproduced above. Six inches by three, perforated for easy removal of the stub at the boxoffice, the card was distributed at schools directly to the students, required to fill in their names, schools, and obtain teacher or principal identification as noted. Comprehensive coverage was obtained by having the theatre staff handle each school separately, starting at eight in the morning, cards given out at each entrance. Distribution was also extended to schools in surrounding towns from which the theatre draws.

On presentation of the entire card, the cashier returns the filled-in stub to holder for further use during the school term. Warren continues to issue the cards to those entitled to them. Cards are also used to advertise the coming attractions, as noted.

Through this device, Warren credits an increase of student attendance of from 35 to 45 per cent. There are no more hold-ups at the boxoffice, no embarrassing arguments. The Round Tabler recommends the idea for other theatres with similar situations.

Kalberer Tells Rotary Of Industry Defense Work

Featured at a recent Rotary meeting in Washington, Ind., was a talk by "Kal" Kalberer on the part of the motion picture industry in defense. After the gathering, the Switow circuit city manager took the club over to the Liberty, which does not run weekday matinees, and ran a program of patriotic shorts. Front page in the two dailies was a result.

Kalberer did his page-one act again, this time with a contest on "When Ladies Meet", at the Indiana, wherein an inquiring reporter roamed the town, asking men and women what the chief topic of conversation was when-ladies-meet. Tiein ran from Monday through Friday, and of all the replies received each day, six of the snappiest were selected for guest tickets, divided equally between men and women. Paper got behind the contest, running a lot of follow-up daily including the answers of all those queried, their names and addresses.

Promotes Navy Photo Exhibit For "Eyes of the Navy" Date

Proceeding along the successful lines he has been pursuing for shorts exploitation at the Fox, Glendale, Cal., Ed Harris reports a whale of a drive behind M-G-M's "Eyes of the Navy", obtaining full support from the local recruiting hearquarters which supplied the theatreman with exclusive photos for lobby display showing all branches of Navy activities in action. The flying shots gave Harris an opportunity to hook in with the plane manufacturers in the area, executing many tieups with Lockheed and other allied industries.

Each night, a week ahead, Ed presented five-minute speakers who covered various branches of defense and referred to the coming short, Harris familiarizing them with the contents with a special advance showing. Then, during the run, a community sing was held with each evening program. Master of ceremonies in naval uniform led the audience in Navy and other patriotic selections.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Scott, Jennings Set Style Shows

Down in Atmore, Ala., at the Martin circuit's Strand, Manager Mack Jennings staged a fashion revue, hooking up three of the best women's stores to furnish all the fixings and the models, some 40 in number. One of the city's prominent women acted as the commentator, and for decorations, Jennings promoted a furniture merchant for stage settings. Flowers and model coiffure were secured through similar persuasions on other promotions, the usual credits given by the theatreman in exchange.

Mack built a platform from the stage over the first two rows of seats, giving it special lighting. Models thus were able to parade close to the audience which gave extra tone to the added attraction. Total cost was little and since the show was presented on a Tuesday, normally a weak day, grosses were much over usual with the theatreman building up his goodwill in addition.

Fur Revue by Scott in Canada

From way up in Sudbury, Ontario, Sid Scott also reports a smart fur style show at the F P C Capitol, in cooperation with the leading department store for a two-night showing. Scott sold the merchants on coming in in conjunction with "When Ladies Meet", arguing it was one of the year's biggest pictures and would draw heavily among the women. The store supplied everything, including models and orchestra, plus newspaper advertising and radio. In addition, Sid promoted an expensive Hudson seal coat for a door prize plus other inducements.

Charninsky Campaigns For Safety via Short

Highlight of Louis Charninsky's campaign for "Coffin on Wheels," MGM Crime Does Not Pay short, was a special screening for the Dallas Citizens Traffic Commission, P. T. A. members and heads of State Highway Department of Public Safety. Superintendents of public schools also attended the screening and spread the word around to the students urging attendance at the Palace showing.

Charninsky also plugged the date before a luncheon of the Traffic Commission personnel and arranged for displays at used car lots and parking spaces. Spectacular lobby exhibit featured a wrecked car peopled with life-like dummies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Fifth Column" Ad Planted In Fifth Column of Paper

To intensify the atmosphere of "Parachute Battalion" at Warners' Liberty, Sharon, Pa., Manager Robert Wanamaker set up an intriguing one-column, four-inch ad, which he carefully had placed for two days running at the bottom of the fifth column of the amusement page. The reason for the preferred position is noted in the copy, as follows:

"This is the Fifth Column of the paper. It cannot be purchased at any price by representatives of unfriendly powers seeking to spread their poisonous propaganda. . . . On the other hand, it can be used to call your attention to a thrilling patriotic drama "Parachute Battalion" which shows Uncle Sam's new parachute troops in action for the first time on the screen. . . Coming Saturday, at the Liberty," etc., etc.

Baby Swim Star Tied to Newsreel

Short time back, Universal took newsreel shots in St. Peter, Minn., of a local two-and-a-half year old swimming prodigy, daughter of the swimming coach at the local college. Plenty of publicity was had during the shooting at the municipal pool where crowds assembled. The clip was shown nationally and when it was booked at the State theatre, Manager Raymond C. Langfit, arranged to have the baby swim star make personal appearances for two night and one matinee performances, the last especially for the children.

Langfitt tied in with the leading merchants to donate gifts to the girl in appreciation of the national advertising secured by the town through the newsreel. The presents were displayed at the theatre for two weeks ahead, individual store names plus thank-you copy tagged to each gift. Local school heads held public assemblies of the student body to urge attendance at the showings, and announcements were made at the college.

College Band Heads Parade

Publicity, local and in the nearby Twin Cities papers, was comprehensive, the big town papers sending photographers to cover the event, and especially to shoot presentation of gift from Governor Stassen to the girl. The local dailies went for the promotion with plenty of front page publicity and photos. Station KYSM, in nearby Mankato, gave the appearance attention in a series of broadcasts, also sending over a popular sports announcer to act as master of ceremonies.

The starlet was escorted to the theatre at the head of a motor parade, music supplied by the college band which also put on a concert at the theatre. Congratulatory wires, read from the stage, were received from such aquatic luminaries as champions Gloria Callen and Helene Rains, the entire campaign winding up to terrific business. Costs were little, writes the Round Tabler, the expense totalling about four dollars.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Field Day for Shoe Stores On Rankin's "Shoes" Date

The possibility of promoting foot comfort in conjunction with his date on "Tight Shoes" at the Centre, Chatham, Ontario, were brought to the attention of the leading shoe stores by Harland Rankin, five merchants coming in with windows and other advertising aids. Similar tieins were made with drug stores on foot remedies. At opening matinee, until five o'clock, children were allowed free admission in exchange for a pair of shoes, which turned over to the city welfare department brought Rankin some neat publicity.

On "Almost a Gentleman", Harland telephoned the local dog fanciers about the prominent part played by the dog in the picture. For "Topper Returns", a giant hat large enough to conceal a boy inside was moved about the city by the juvenile footpower. To stir up some extra excitement on the theatre street, the Round Tabler invited the bugle band of a regiment stationed nearby to parade to the theatre.

THREE "FORTNIGHTS" LEFT TO GO

Names and situations listed below are those selected for Fortnight Appointments in the Fourth Fortnight period of the Fourth and final Quarter of the 1941 Quigley Awards.

In all, there were 64 Appointments taken down by 67 theatremen, the added three accounted for by the double-credits on entries, of manager and publicity man.

The Fifth preliminary period in the Fourth Quarter is now current, which means that but three Fortnights remain until the ending of the Awards year, the Competitions closing in January.

Again it is stressed, as previously, that consideration for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations will first be given to entrants represented best during the Quarter's Fortnights.

Lobby Emergency Service Plugs Spook Show Laughs

For his first spook show promotion at the Van Der Vaart, Sheboygan, Wisc., Manager Lester Kolste used a flock of chill stunts in connection with the showing of Horror Island and Man Made Monster. Aimed for most attention in the lobby was a Red Cross cabinet finished in red and white, the shelves stocked with gag items to fit. Labelled accordingly, these included hair dye for patrons whose hair turned white, candles for those afraid to walk home alone, slickem for hair that stood on end, hot water bags for the chilled, and suchlike.

Cutout skeletons were suspended from the marquee, and a boy covered with a black cape, black hat, gloves and mask, roamed the streets with a sign, "I'm the phantom killer of Horror Island on my way to see", etc. Kolste also used the ghost picket gag in front of the theatre to plug the other feature on the bill.

Griffith Holds Auction To Aid U.S.O. Drive

Back in the fold as manager of the neighborhood Plaisance, Chicago, Bob Griffith reports a new idea to participate in fund-raising drives through what he terms a "U.S.O. Auction" for the recent national drive. Instead of turning up the house lights and making the usual collection, Griffith teamed with the merchants in that area, promoting candy and cakes which were sold to the highest bidder, between shows of a Tuesday night.

The slant brought some fine publicity from the downtown papers and went over very well with the customers, according to Bob. Quite a sum was raised and acknowledged by the U. S. O. officials, which endorsement was publicised in the theatre program. The Round Tabler recommends the idea for other situations and intends repeating it for the coming community fund drive.

Selling nine merchants on the idea, Manager Bob Bowman, Warners Strand, Ridgway, Pa., broke out an extra page of co-op advertising for the daily built around an offer of free prizes to the first baby born in the county during the run of "Blossoms In the Dust". Paper was pleased with the space and offer, showing appreciation with three first-page stories. When winner proved to be from another town, the daily in that spot also gave the tiein in a page-one break.

Teaser treatment by Bowman followed title initial idea with small display ads five days ahead emphasizing "B.I.T.D." and explained when the main advertising broke. Mailing list and telephone calls were other contacts, with many displays around the different stars hooked to windows on hats, men's wear, baby clothes and other such merchandise cooperations.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Snowballs made of crushed ice thrown from a decorated float on the main street startled folks in New Orleans recently, on the Saenger theatre exploitation for "Sun Valley Serenade". Passes and certificates for other prizes were concealed in some of the home-made missiles.

On a double-feature horror program, Bill Elliott, at the Palace, McAdoo, Pa., set up graves on either side of the lobby headed with tombstones made of compo board. Green spotlights focused on the displays at night contributed a weird effect.

The journalism class of the high school worked with Manager Clarence Golder, Civic Center, Great Falls, Mont., on "Citizen Kane". Under supervision of the instructor, a "city room" was set up in the lobby of the theatre to cover the opening and review of the picture.

Newsreel shots of a local business men's association bathing beauty contest, taken exclusively by Pathe in collaboration with the Times-Star were promoted by Dinny Dinerman, for showing at the RKO Palace, Cincinnati, the paper giving over a two-column ad to the announcement. Listed in addition, were the rest of the circuit houses where the picture was booked.

Family portraits for lobby display at the Ambassador, St. Louis, were sought by Manager Harry Crawford for his date on "One Foot In Heaven". Classified ads were used for the round-up, Crawford making the request more potent with offers of guest tickets for all those accepted for exhibition.

J. M. "Pop" Graver, manager of Warners' Grove, Willow Grove, Pa., worked out a novel lobby display for "In the Navy" with model battleships along with picture stills and playdate cards. The battleships were set up in a realistic background. Front of the theatre was decorated with signal flags, laugh-life preservers and anchor. Teaser cards were attached to all the life preservers.

A "Nothing But the Truth" contest was sponsored for the Bob Hope picture by Joe Murdock, manager of Warners' Stanley Theatre, Camden, N. J. A chance to win free tickets to the theatre was provided for those sending in an experience that stands out most in the person's memory, either humorous, dangerous, thrilling or expensive.

Teaser heralds for "Shining Victory" were utilized by Manager Johnny Sassenroth,, manager of Warners' Columbia Theatre, Philadelphia. Each herald carried a lucky number who were to be guests to see the picture. He used a special endorsement trailer two full weeks in advance and personally endorsed the picture over the p.a.

Sharing the costs with one of the leading cafes, Manager D. M. Dillenbeck, put out an "Unfair" herald on "Hold That Ghost", inside copy referring to the fact that the picture was unfair to serious ghosts. Back page was given over to the co-op copy.

Code Novelty

Using the continental telegraph code for a trick idea on "When Ladies Meet" at Loew's Park, Cleveland, Arnold Gates had the message planted across the top of a mimeographed sheet with identification of the code letters below, as reproduced above. Star and theatre were carried to insure immediate attention to the date.

Following up the regular collections during intermissions for the U.S.O., Manager Dave Martin, Fox Granada, Inglewood, Cal., planted a life-sized cutout of an usherette in the foyer. To cutout was fastened sign and container for further contributions.

On the day ahead of "Whistling In the Dark," at the Senate, Harrisburg, Pa., Bob Sidman turned loose six boys, wearing skeleton outfits and red wigs to roam the town. The boys carried back banners.

Center of attraction for Bill Elder's date for "Lady Be Good" at Loew's, Indianapolis, Ind., was an elaborate Wurlitzer reproducing machine which the theatreman promoted, the instrument containing recordings of the picture's song hits and so noted in poster above.

From date of this issue, there are exactly 33 days to Christmas. Are you preparing to get your share of the holiday money?

For the first time since they arrived in America for duty at the British Embassy in Washington, members of England's Women's Auxiliary Air Forces — the famed WAAF, wore their uniforms to pose with the Betty Grable double secured by Dan Terrell on "A Yank in the R.A.F." at Loew's Palace. Double wore the star's costume from the picture, which was shown at a private screening for members of the women's corps, drama critics and Royal Air Force officers attached to the Embassy.

Now situated at the Tujunga, a unit of the Edwards circuit in Tujunga, Cal., Manager James Graff reports a campaign on "Tobacco Road", the feature of which was a lobby reproduction of the shack in the picture. In keeping with the construction, it was built of compo board, painted over, and dry rotted scrap lumber. The cost came to about two dollars, says Jim, and made plenty of boxoffice talk.

"Ride the waves with Barnicle Bill" read the canvas sign that covered the side of the boat constructed by Hal Thomas for lobby display on the date at the Malco Fulton, Fulton, Ky., Title and play dates were lettered on life-preservers and anchor suspended from the ends. Boat was moved out front during the run.

For "Sergeant York" at the Ritz, Parkersburg, W. Va., Manager Lee Byers worked the parking meter stunt, depositing fresh nickels in those where cars were parked overtime. Copy: "Your parking time was up. So we deposited a nickel for you. We hope this will be enough until you see."

Football guessing score card used by Manger Frank H. Boll, at the Arcade, Fort Myers, Fla., tied the picture to the idea with copy at top reading: "Perhaps 'You'll Never Get Rich', but you can win a free ticket", etc. Those turning in the greatest percentage of winners on listed local high school and nearby college games received guest tickets.

Local merchants contributed to a baby layette given to the first child born locally during the run of "Blossoms In the Dust" at the Time, Sioux Falls, Dakota. Promoted by Manager Clifford Knoll. The gifts were displayed at the theatre in advance.

Usher dressed as aviator and wearing parachute equipment was used by Dick Feldman for street ballyhoo on "Parachute Battalion" at Schine's Paramount, Syracuse, N. Y. Attracting attention on opening night was attendance of graduating class of the local Civil Pilot Training Squadron from the nearby airport. The boys wore their aviator's uniforms.

Resemblance contest on behalf of "Belle Starr" at the Carolina, Charlotte, N. C., invited girls resembling Gene Tierney to send their photos to enter. Winner was honor guest at the Variety Club and at the theatre was presented with a loving cup. Manager Jack Austin, who put the campaign together, acted as master of ceremonies in presenting the entrants.

Hallowe'en Shows In the Spotlight

"There are always two very good reasons for doing something for your kids at Hallowe'en," writes Art Wartha, "first of all because you owe them this treat, that one afternoon when they can get on that costume, parade downtown to the theatre and show themselves off during Kiddie Club. Secondly, because it has always been good box-office here."

With this introduction, the Manta-man details what he did to interest the youngsters at the Indiana, Indiana Harbor, Ind., on the Saturday before and, as important, his holiday party for the adults on Hallowe'en night. In addition to the costume party for the juveniles, Wartha put on a lot of the traditional games—apple ducking, pie and cracker eating, and such like. The kids began to line up at the theatre hours before to take in the fun and also the specially-booked six-unit screen show. On every count, the party was slightly terrific for the youngsters and also the grosses, the local daily recognizing the party with a front-page cut and story.

The celebration for the grown-ups was as spirited, and as profitable. Art spread the word wide that cash prizes would be given for costumes, to winners of the various games, promoting one of the merchants for $75 for the awards. The men lined up on the stage for balloon-blowing, beer-drinking and doughnut eating games. For the women, Wartha thought up such cute exercises as driving spikes in a four-by-four, wood-sawing and other antics as amusing. The show was topped off with an organ community song fest, taking in old-time favorites, college and patriotic songs, and also a bit of "jive." Doughnuts and cider were on the house.

Audience Acts As Judges

In Syracuse, at Loew's State, Frank Murphy also put on a whale of a time for his Hallowe'en doings, all built around a colorful Spook Show that scared and pleased the capacity house. The stage performance included magic acts, ghost and goblin special effects were used effectively on stage and through the auditorium, and of course there was a costume contest, patrons invited to come dressed as their favorite Hallowe'en character, news personality, screen star, etc. To make it more exciting, Murphy chose some of the judges from among the audience. Decorations were in keeping, the lobby tricked up with harvest atmosphere, pumpkins, witches, and such.

Tie Hallowe'en to "Eve"

Since Hallowe'en came a few days ahead of their opening of "It Started With Eve," at the RKO Albee, Providence, R. I., the George French-Bill Morton duo used the holiday to plug the date with an apple-bobbing contest in the lobby, that was pepped with a special broadcast. Each contestant received a prize apple as a gift from Deanna Durbin, which explained the tieup. Morton was careful to emphasize this over the radio, handling the microphone for the purpose. He reports the lobby jammed with entrants eager to get in on the prizes.

Prizes for his Hallowe'en Show at the L & J Palace, Athens, Ga., proved to be different, "Bic" Bickerstaff offering defense stamps to winners in the stage contest-apple-bobbing, balloon-blowing, eating-crackers-and-whistling, etc. The screen entertainment was a Spook Show, and since the party was put on after an early evening high school football game, "Bic" planted a sign at the game which brought in a lot of the high school crowd after the battle.

As an instance of the Schines' activities, was the program at the Strand, Lexington, Ky., by Harry Stearns. Ushers, dressed in overalls and farmer hats, carried lanterns, instead of the usual flashlight. From time to time, usher would hand lantern to patron, asking to be seated. Doormen dressed in old-fashioned nightgowns and grandpa's hat. Popcorn boy was dressed as Napoleon. Newsreels were run backward, plants came up on the stage, seated themselves in folding chairs, opened newspapers, etc. That's just a sample of the program's "screwiness."

At Warners' Uptown, Cleveland, Manager Julius Lamm put on his usual smash Kiddie Hallowe'en Carnival, the Saturday before, promoting a lot of gifts for prizes for the holiday contests.

ACE RADIO HOOKUPS MADE BY UNTERFORT

Playing vaudeville and legitimate shows at the Empire, Harry Unterfort, Schine Syracuse city manager, has arranged with Station WAGE to put in a direct line backstage for interviews with visiting stars on the bills and plugs for the shows. Costs will be paid by participating Pontiac dealer.

Since the March of Time subjects are shown at the Paramount, Harry is set with Station WSYR, local broadcasters of the M.O.T. radio show, for spot announcements whenever the subject plays. Features and other units will also be announced.

Co-op Campaigns Sell Americanism

Impressive and prestige building was the series of patriotic projects initiated by Chris Chamales, of the Roxy, Delhi, Ind., the Round Tabler taking many bows for his giant poster in the lobby, headed by the "Allegiance to the Flag", space below for signatures of the public. On display for 30 days, the poster scored 100 percent.

Co-operative heralds gotten out by Chris carried outside advertising along the borders with theatre copy in center. This is topped with Americanism copy, such as extracts from Bill of Rights, etc. Another slant was a Stars and Stripes Forever Americanism Club started by the Round Table, membership cards distributed with names filled in to all buying defense bonds or stamps, or contributing to the aluminum drive. Name of the theatre appeared as sponsor, the cards distributed by postmasters in the nearby rural communities.

Broadcasts President's Talk

For "Harmon of Michigan" at the New Vernon Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ind., Lou Davis worked out cooperation with the high school junior class to sponsor the showing. The class received percentage of tickets sold by the students in advance, the tiein being duly noted by the dailies.

To assure attendance on the night of one of the President's recent radio addresses, Davis took extra newspaper space to inform the public that the talk would be broadcast from the theatre, running his evening schedule to detail the time of the various units. Copy read, "We believe the people of Posey County are interested in hearing what our President will say tonight! We also believe you are interested in entertainment! For your accommodation and convenience, we have arranged to satisfy both your desires!"

OBITUARIES

Richard Pitman Dies, Theatrical Agent

Richard Pitman, theatrical agent and actor, died Thursday, November 13th, in the Mary Immaculate Hospital, Queens, N. Y., after being ill since last spring and suffering a relapse a month ago. He was 67 years old.

Before giving up acting to become an agent representing Broadway and Hollywood stars, Mr. Pitman appeared on the stage with such famous players as Maude Adams, E. H. Sothern and John Drew. A native of Boston, he was the son of Jarmes R. Pitman, then one of Boston's leading stage producers. He decided to go on the stage while a sophomore in Harvard University. After becoming an agent, Mr. Pitman represented Philip Merivale, Gladys Cooper, Maude Adams and other stars. He is survived by one sister.

Isidore Axler

Isidore Axler, owner of the Victory theatre in Toronto, and former president of the McCaul Street Synagogue, died in his office at the theatre Tuesday, November 11th, from a heart attack. Myer Axler, maintenance manager of the 20th Century Theatres, is a son of Mr. Axler.

Lieutenant Carlo Petersen

Lieutenant Carlo Petersen, 44, of the United States Naval Reserve, veteran of the first two Byrd expeditions to the Antarctic, and Paramount News cameraman, died of a heart attack at the Marine Hospital in Portland, Maine, Wednesday, November 12th. He was stricken Sunday, November 9th, aboard the aircraft carrier Ranger and rushed to the hospital.

Frank L. Armstrong

Frank L. Armstrong, formerly an actor and photographer at the Paramount Long Island studios and later connected with the productions of commercial pictures, died at Ottawa, Ont., Friday, November 14th. He was a second lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps at the time of his death. Surviving are his wife and mother.

Richard L. Hargraves

Richard L. Hargraves, 52, Beverly Hills banker and husband of Helen Ferguson, star of the silent screen, died in Hollywood Monday, November 10th, of a heart attack.

Charles H. Powell

Charles H. Powell, 55, salesman for National Screen Service for 12 years, died Tuesday, November 11th, in Detroit as a result of an automobile accident.

Fred J. Penfound

Fred J. Penfound, formerly manager of theatres in Minneapolis and Hibbling, Minn., died Friday, November 14th, of pneumonia while visiting his sister in Seattle.

Kirby Buckner

Kirby Buckner, owner of the Palace theatre in Grapevine, Tex., died Thursday, November 13th.

Mrs. Marie Saxon Silverman

Private funeral services for Mrs. Marie Saxon Silverman, 37, wife of Sid Silverman, publisher of Variety, were held Friday, November 14th, in White Plains, N. Y. Mrs. Silverman, who was known on the musical comedy stage as Marie Saxon, died Wednesday, November 12th, at her home in Harrison, N. Y. Surviving are her husband, her mother, a brother and one son.

Victor Hyman Kahn

Victor Hyman Kahn, a comedian who appeared on Broadway many years ago, died in Baltimore, Md., Thursday night, Novem- 13th, at the Church Home and Infirmary. He was 58 years old. He appeared in George White's "Scandals" both on Broadway and in Hollywood in the 1920's. Surviving is his wife.

Otto Willkomm

Otto Wilkinson, 54, former screen comedian and vaudeville acrobat, died in Milwaukee, Wis., Friday, November 14th.

IN COURTS

Paramount Sues Theatre

In the first legal action in several years against a theatre for failure to play pictures under contract has been filed by Paramount in Indianapolis. The suit was filed last week in Federal court against the Apollo theatre, Indianapolis, to recover damages amounting to $5,847.63. Paramount charges that the Apollo failed to play 26 features on the 1939-40 program. Judgement is asked for breach of contract.

Trial Date Delayed

The date for a trial of the copyright suit of six majors against Dixie Theatres Co., for $4,750, will be set in Federal court in Chattanooga, Tenn., after December 1st. The plaintiffs allege unauthorized showing of 19 films at the circuit's Volunteer theatre in that city. The plaintiffs are; Loew's, Columbia, Warners, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and Universal.

$175,000 Alabama Fire Loss

Fire which broke out in the Berry theatre, Berry, Ala., and spread through the business section on Saturday, November 1st, caused an estimated $175,000 damage, according to Fayette County officials. Four women were injured as the audience of 200 rushed from the theatre. Police Chief Oscar Davis said flames spread from the projection room following a film explosion. Three adjacent store buildings were gutted.

Third Complaint Due in Tax Suit

A third complaint is to be filed in the Circuit Court in Wabash, Ind., during the next few days seeking to test the validity of the "wagon show" tax as applied to operators of free movies.

In the hearing held last week before Judge Byron C. Kennedy, arguments regarding the jurisdiction of the court in the matter eased when the plaintiffs decided to abandon the injunctive proceedings and file a new suit asking solely for a declaratory judgment on the 1917 law which would impose a $1 tax each day for "wagon shows."

This was not done, however, until after representatives of the attorney-general's office said that no attempt would be made to collect the tax while the suit was in litigation.

Hoffberg Acquires Films

Hoffberg Productions, Inc., New York City, has acquired from Walter Futter the rights for New York State and Northern New Jersey to the Charlie Chaplin revival feature, "Cavalcade of Laughs" and four former Universal pictures for reissue, "The Lady in the Morgue," "Danger on the Air," "The Westland Case" and "The Black Doll."

Normanly Leaves "U"

James Normanly, formerly of the Bank of America, and for the past five years the business manager of the Universal studio, is to leave the latter post Sunday. He will vacation until January 1st.

They Died With Their Boots On

(Warner Brothers)

Saga of General Custer

The story of General Custer is told here with all the thoroughness which marked the same studio's telling of the story of Sergeant York, than which it is three minutes longer and no less a tale of American heroism under arms. The chronicle is as different as its hero, his time and his objectives were different. But the two films compare directly in point of scale, sweep and essence. The record of the one as a commercial prosperity would seem to be in extraordinary degree, a standard for estimating the commercial value of the other.

In common with the treatment accorded the York story, the Custer story is rounded out with little known detail in its early stages by way of preparation for the known climax. It opens with Custer entering West Point as a headstrong young patriot restive under discipline, catapults him into command of cavalry for a series of spectacular feats in the Civil War, then takes him into a discontented peace time retirement from which he is called to command of the Seventh Cavalry on frontier duty.

An hour and seventeen minutes are consumed with this unfamiliar material. All of it in fact and much in violent tempo before the appearance of the first Indian. It is another hour from that point to the fatal finish of the massacre at the Little Big Horn, and this more familiar portion of the story is told at breakneck speed.

Production, by Robert Fellows as associate to executive producer Hal B. Wallis is on a vast scale. It may be advertised with confidence that no other conflict between Indians and cavalry has approached this one in the matter of numbers employed, long shots of embattled terrain, closeups of struggle, realism by and large. The Civil War sequences measure up to these.

Direction by Raoul Walsh displays equal facility in the handling of the passages at arms and the domestic interludes wherein romance is attended to without sacrifice on narrative momentum. The screen play by Wally Kline and Aeneas Mackenzie conveys a wealth of material compactly and with unfailing clarity.

Errol Flynn's portrayal of the heroic cavalryman is marked by the dash which his followers have admired, and Olivia De Haviland as sweetheart and wife gets more out of her role than is customary in this type of assignment. The many others supply a background of solid support, none overshadowing the others save momentarily in an account which covers a long period.

Previewed at the studio to an audience of perhaps a hundred press and professional guests who displayed audible approval and found themselves comparing timepieces after the showing, to convince themselves that the picture was as long as it is—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Secrets of the Lone Wolf

(Columbia)

Crime Without Punishment

For those who like their crime and detection full of action and unhindered by romance, Warren William is back in another "Lone Wolf" story by Louis Joseph Vance, supported by his indispensable valet played by Eric Blore.

His character of gentleman-thief in honest retirement is established early in the film when he is summoned forcibly from a ladies'-club lecture on "Crime Does Not Pay" to a conference with Inspector Crane on the subject of jewel robberies. Not that the "Lone Wolf" is suspected, yet. But his opinion is sought on the possibilities of stealing the Napoleonic jewels from a yacht in the harbor. When he suggests the ingenious method he had used in another case, steps are ordered to prevent a recurrence of method and perpetrator alike. That Lanyard escapes from custody, implicates himself in the plot, and finally solves the crime at the risk of his life, is all in the nature of this fast-moving series.

The background of fog in a harbor at night adds to the atmosphere of mystery and suspense, and only occasionally serves to confuse the audience. Jack Fier has produced a film that will not disappoint the followers of this series under the able direction of Edward Dmytryk.

A Missouri Outlaw

(Republic)

Serious Western

Without the usual accompaniments of strumming guitars and humor, "A Missouri Outlaw," a more serious type of western, confines itself rigorously to the business at hand, which is action, shooting and the law of retributive justice.

The plot is focused on the attempts of the sheriff of Sundown to identify and arrest a racketeering "Protective Association," that intimidates and terrorizes farmers, cattlemen and others into joining its ranks. The sheriff is killed in the discharge of his duty, and his own son, unjustly accused of the murder, finally forces the real murderer to confess.

Don "Red" Barry is the hero who is dexterous with a gun, a horse and in the art of getting himself into trouble. Noah Beery as his father and the sheriff of Sundown injects color into his characterization. Other members of the cast include Lynn Merrick and Paul Fix.

The more observant and critical may have occasion to raise their eyebrows at the appearance of a "protective association" in a western of this vintage. Then, too, Barry, intent on ascertaining the murderer of his father, is indirectly responsible for the death of two or three accomplices before the real murderer confesses, which makes one dubious of the standards of justice involved.

Once these incidental mental questionings have been dispelled, however, the audience will find a western that has an abundance of action, shooting and a story calculated to hold their interest.

Associate producer-director George Sherman has kept this moving picture moving.

Cyclone on Horseback

(RKO Radio, 1940-41)

Musical, Action Western

Produced by Bert Gilroy and directed by Edward Killy, "Cyclone on Horseback" is a better than average western in which the elements of action, comedy, romance and music have been liberally mixed to make it entertaining western film fare.

Tim Holt heads the cast as the young rancher who goes to the aid of a construction engineer for a telephone company, while Ray Whitley, rendering a number of musical numbers, and Lee "Lasses" White are the aides of the young rancher, Marjorie Reynolds, as the sister of the engineer, supplies the romance, and Dennis Moore performs capably.

Like many of its western predecessors that have attracted patrons since the early days of the industry, the film makes no claim to distinction but presents the maximum in entertainment allowed by its budget.

Wings of Victory

(Artkino)

Life of a Russian Aviator

This film tells the story of Valeri Chkalov, Soviet air hero who flew from Russia to the United States in 1937. Outside of several speeches glorifying the Soviet Union, the chief elements of propaganda are several scenes which attempt to show that Stalin is a kind and human man. Obviously the film was made to bolster morale within Russia.

Near the beginning of the picture Chkalov is dismissed from the Russian Army air force for reckless and dangerous flying. He is very unhappy though his wife and his former commander try to comfort him. He becomes a test pilot and a mock duel against an army plane shows the superiority of a modern craft. Finally he succeeds as a long distance pilot and leads the flight across the polar region to America.

General American audiences will not be interested in this film but theatres which have had success with Russian films and special pictures of a topical nature may find it acceptable. Technically it is very uneven, with good and bad spots. Some of the acting is good. But the length should be cut about a third. Dialogue is Russian but English titles make it easy to follow the plot. Mikhail Kalatozov directed.

MONOGRAM REISSUING SOUTH SEAS FILM

Monogram is reissuing "Paradise Isle" under the title, "Siren of the South Seas". Starring Movita and Warren Hull, the picture was reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 14, 1937.

The review said: "An authentic South Seas setting and a cast composed principally of natives lend charm to this story of the romance of a native girl and a white man. In tempo the picture is slow and possible plot developments are discarded in favor of what is practically a straight story of a simple romance, but the picture has a certain strength in the telling of it and it is greatly enhanced by its picturesque setting. It is an unassuming production that merits favor in many situations." The current release date is November 7th.

The Perfect Snob

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy-Romance

Here is another film about a girl whose social-climbing mother has persuaded her to marry for money, but whose father, a well-meaning veterinarian, manages with the help of a personable young man, to have her settle for love. Producer Walter Morosco has made few deviations from the basic story—set this time on the shores and amid the sugar plantations of Hawaii—and even Charlotte Greenwood and Charlie Ruggles as the opposing parents fail to make it sufficiently fresh.

Lynn Bari, a rather bewildered gold-digger, tries out two unlikely prospects before resigning herself to a marriage of budget-planning over hot stoves. But the young man who gets her, played by Cornel Wilde in his first leading role, has more than his self-conscious good looks, as she is about to discover as the picture ends. Anthony Quinn and Alan Mowbray are also in the cast.

Director Ray McCarey did fairly well with an unpromising script.

Marry the Boss's Daughter

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Business Plus Romance

Here is a light and amiable little drama about a young man from Kansas who comes to the big city—New York—to revolutionize things in the business world. A handy man to have around when it comes to figuring income tax, he fancies himself an efficiency expert. In the course of being efficient he causes a social problem by putting several people out of work, loses the respect of his employers and the love of the boss's daughter. But then, as said before, this is an amiable little drama, and so, he blunders right baek in to the good graces of all concerned.

Suggested by the story "A Girl, a Boy and a Dog," the theme naturally revolves around those three but there are other touches that contribute a good deal to any enjoyment of the picture. Of these, George Barbier, as the business tycoon, is properly bombastic and convincing, and Hardie Albright, as the Harvard grad and vice-president of Barbier's far-flung enterprises, is true to most people's conception of the same. He loses the girl. The principals are Brenda Joyce and Bruce Edwards. Miss Joyce is a vision of blonde loveliness and Edwards is capable, if not dynamic.

What the picture amounts to in sum total is a minor but passably entertaining effort.

Direction was by Thornton Freeland.

Cadet Girl

(20th Century-Fox)

Love and Music vs. West Point

Plenty of entertainment has been packed into the 69 minutes of this well acted and well staged production of Sol M. Wurtzel, executive producer, and Ray McCarey, director.

First of all, there are five songs by Leo Robins and Ralph Rainger, several of which give indications of being hit tunes. The numbers are "Uncle Sam Gets Around," "She's a Good Neighbor," "I'll Settle for You," "It Happened, It's Over, Let's Forget" and "My Old Man Was An Army Man." Carole Landis sings pleasantly two of the songs and also does well with the acting requirements, looking very attractive all the while.

Next there is a good performance by John Shepperd, the older brother, who also sings and recites "Uncle Sam Gets Around" in an effective fashion. Then George Montgomery is the romantic hero, with William Tracy and Jane Hazzard and Edna Mae Jones supplying what little humor there is in the film. Janis Carter sings one song. The cast also includes Robert Lowery, Basil Walker, Charles Tannen and Chick Chandler.

The story is not new, but has been dusted off and brought up to date. It concerns a West Point cadet who falls in love during a vacation and wants to marry and give up his career, but in the end goes back to the Point. That plot has been used for straight dramatic pictures. Here in this musical film it serves very well.

In the beginning of the picture Montgomery, playing the cadet brother of a New York orchestra leader, leaves on vacation with four of his classmates. He falls in love with the singer in his brother's orchestra, Carole Landis. Despite the brother's objections, they wish to marry. The cadet starts his own orchestra with his intended wife as singer. They are very successful, but the girl is not sure and will not marry until the vacation is up. At a speeial camp show she realizes that he is meant for the army and arranges with the brother to inspire the boy through a song to return to West Point and follow out the wishes of their father. The song has its desired effect and Montgomery returns with his classmates.

Previewed at the New York home office before an audience of about 50, most of whom were women reviewers. They all seemed to be entertained. Two of the women were heard to protest against the selling spirit of one chorus of the finale song, "Uncle Sam Gets Around." which runs "it won't be fun, but it's got to be done."—M. Q., JR.

Tarzan's Secret Treasure

(MGM)

More of the Same But More So

Again he swings through the air with the greatest of ease does Tarzan, and this time his son does likewise, but with even more ease and abandon do the writers of this stanza swing through the stratosphere of imagination accompanied by a technical crew which makes a multitude of impossibilities seem plausible enough for the juvenile trade of all ages.

The tale, compounded by Myles Connolly and Paul Gangelin, brings explorers to Tarzan's idyllic mountain retreat and they repay his hospitality by attempting to gain possession of gold deposits on the premises. On this storyline is strung an array of conflicts, captures, escapes, rescues and so forth in the Tarzan tradition highlighted by plentiful helpings of comedy provided by an elephant and a monkey. Just about all the other jungle animals, including the elephant herd to the rescue and the crocodiles to devour the villains, figure also in the proceedings.

Produced by B. P. Fineman with no sparing of the budget and directed by Richard Thorpe, the film stacks up as about the best of the Tarzans from the point of view of the Tarzan audience, the only one aimed at.

Previewed at the Academy Theatre, Inglewood, to a paying audience drawn by "The Little Foxes," many of whom left immediately on the flashing of the "Tarzan" title, the others remaining to register approval tinctured with condescension.—W. R. W.

MOVIE QUIZZ, No. 1

(R. U. McIntosh Productions)

Combining freshness akin to the Pete Smith Specialties and the "Information, Please" series a competition angle, R. U. McIntosh in the first of his "quizz" series presents a number of questions on the screen to an audience already given cards on which to mark their answers in a contest, the highest scorer of which wins. The queries must be answered through information already known to the customer or through observation of events on the screen, the latter primarily the case.

Grant Withers, who with writer Jack Harvey will produce the series, appears in the role of questioner and narrator and gets off to an attention compelling start with an easy-going manner. The reel, taking 15 minutes to run, is composed mostly of stock footage with the series of ten questions having wide variety. Aim of the producers is to give theatre owners a substitute for the current games which does not require house lights to be turned up, and at the same time present entertainment. The first one fills the bill.—V. K.

MAIN STREET, U.S.A. (RKO)

March of Time (23,104)

The impact of the war on a typical American community and on one family is shown in this interesting subject which includes a rather detailed picturization of what would happen if the 'New Order' came to the United States, as conceived by the producers of the March of Time.

The treatment is very interesting but it is probable that the audience reaction will be mixed. Some patrons may not like to see, even in a motion picture, Hitler tactics applied in this country. The screen commentator says that some might consider the represented "fantastic."

The typical family is serving 100 percent. The father, an officer of the American Legion, is an air raid warden; the eldest son, a corporal; the younger boy is learning to fly; the mother helps with Red Cross work and the daughter, a Girl Scout, collects aluminum and books for camp and hospital libraries. The 'New Order' sequence shows storm troopers, a boycott, a firing squad and other phases of Nazi life in action in an American town.—M. Q., Jr.

THE BODY DISAPPEARS (Warner Brothers)

Comedy

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: Bryan Foy. Associate Producer: Ben Stoloff. Directed by D. Ross Lederman.

PLAYERS: Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman, Edward Everett Horton, Willie Best, Marguerite Chapman, Natalie Schaeffer, Sidney Bracy.

SYNOPSIS

Jeffrey Lynn drinks himself under the table at a bachelor party on the eve of his wedding to Marguerite Chapman. Playful friends carry him to a slab in the medical room of the college. Edward Everett Horton, who delves in mysterious concoctions, needs a human body on which to experiment. He injects his latest serum into Lynn, who becomes invisible. In his invisible state, Lynn falls in love with Jane Wyman, daughter of the experimenting scientist, learns that his fiancee is marrying him only for his money. Horton is tossed into a sanatorium. Jane takes the serum and invisibly rescues him by injecting him also. Horton is put on trial for insanity but when Lynn makes himself visible before the judge's eyes, the case is dismissed and everything ends happily.

HARVARD HERE I COME (Columbia)

Comedy

PRODUCER: Wallace MacDonald. Directed by Lew Landers.

PLAYERS: Maxie Rosenbloom, Arline Judge, Marie Wilson, Virginia Sale, George McKay.

SYNOPSIS

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom portrays a dumb but happy night club owner who believes he has reached his highest peak when the editors of the Harvard Lampoon give him a special award for supreme pediculousness. When he learns what the word means in the morning newspapers, Maxie takes it good-heartedly and enrolls at Harvard. There he meets a professor, the head of the Antediluvian Department. The professor believes he has discovered the Missing Link. Through subsequent publicity, Maxie is the recipient of countless offers from the nation's manufacturers. Riding the crest of success, Maxie opens a College Inn, sends for his old girl-friend-cashier and extricates himself from the attentions of a broad-shouldered Amazon.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW (Warner Brothers)

Army Comedy

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Ben Stoloff. Directed by Lewis Seiler

PLAYERS: Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman, Phil Silvers, Regis Toomey, Donald McBride, George Meeker.

SYNOPSIS

Jimmy Durante and Phil Silvers are the ace selling team for a vacuum cleaner company. They incur the displeasure of an army colonel, a cavalryman who detests all kinds of machinery, when their vacuum demonstrator backfires. Shortly afterwards they find themselves in the army, attached to the colonel's outfit. Durante further incurs the displeasure of the colonel when he attempts to demonstrate a tank, and lands in the guard house. After several other experiences Durante convinces the colonel that the tank is here to stay.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Marriage Drama

PRODUCER: Joseph L. Mankiewicz. Directed by George Stevens.

PLAYERS: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Fay Bainter, Reginald Owen, Minor Watson, William Bendix, Gladys Blake.

SYNOPSIS

Sam Craig (Spencer Tracy), sports writer for a New York newspaper, takes exception to remarks made by Tess Harding (Katharine Hepburn), who writes an international column for the same newspaper and the two start feuding via their columns. When they meet, Sam is attracted to Tess and after a courtship they are married. Their wedded life reveals that in many respects, they are worlds apart. Tess is voted "America's Outstanding Woman of the Year." Sam walks out on Tess and proceeds to get drunk. Tess writes his column for him, and, although it makes him the laughing stock of the sports world, it serves to bring them together again.

STEEL AGAINST THE SKY (Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Edmund Grainger. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland.

PLAYERS: Lloyd Nolan, Alexis Smith, Craig Stevens, Gene Lockhart, Edward Ellis, Walter Catlett, Howard da Silva.

SYNOPSIS

This is a story of men who build bridges, and particularly as it concerns one family, the Evans. There is "Pop" (Edward Ellis) who keeps a home for his three sons (Lloyd Nolan, Craig Stevens and Edward Brophy). Lloyd is foreman of the fitters' gang while Brophy is one of the fitters. Stevens takes things easy. Nolan is in love with the daughter (Alexis Smith) of the head of the bridge construction company. When Stevens meets her, he falls in love with her and she with him. Nolan and Stevens become bitter enemies and Stevens leaves home. Meanwhile, Stevens has become a fitter, working under his brother. Stevens saves Nolan's life when a torn spinner is torn loose and the brothers make up.

MELODY LANE (Universal)

Romance, Music, Comedy

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Charles Lamont.

PLAYERS: Baby Sandy, The Merry Macs, Robert Paige, Anne Gwynne, Leon Errol, Butch and Buddy, Don Douglas.

SYNOPSIS

Don Douglas as head of an advertising agency is unable to obtain a name band for a zany client (Leon Errol) because the client insists on interfering with the broadcasts. Hearing of a jive combination in Iowa, he sends his assistant (Anne Gwynne) to sign them up. They (Robert Paige and the Merry Macs) are reluctant to leave because Paige doesn't believe New York is the place to bring up his orphaned niece, Baby Sandy. Anne uses her wiles on Paige and wins him over, but incurs the wrath of Mary Lou Cook of The Merry Macs. In New York, Baby Sandy disappears and is the object of a kidnappers search. Everything is smoothed out in the end and the show goes on.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN (Paramount)

Feature Length Cartoon in Color

PRODUCED by Dave Fleischer.

SYNOPSIS

"Mr. Bug Goes to Town" is a pioneering step in the feature cartoon field in that it is neither fable nor fantasy. It's a modern story, a comedy-drama, in which a community of humanized insects who live 45 inches from Broadway battle for existence against 7,000,000 New Yorkers—and one of their own members who is greedy and unscrupulous. The music for the picture was written by Hoagy Carmichael and lyrics are by Frank Loesser.

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: Hal B. Wallis. Associate Producer: Jerry Wald.

PLAYERS: Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt, Kaaren Verne, Jane Darwell, Frank McHugh, Jackie Gleason, Judith Anderson, Peter Lorre.

SYNOPSIS

In this Humphrey Bogart plays a one-time mobster turned gambler to support his mother (Jane Darwell) and the remnants of his gang. He becomes involved in a murder case. The people responsible for the murder are called "Fivers"—fifth columnists. Bogart sets out to disrupt their sabotage program and succeeds after some harrowing experiences with the sabotage gang and with the police. Also involved is a girl (Kaaren Verne), who does the gang's bidding under duress.

FLY BY NIGHT (Paramount)

Melodrama.

PRODUCER: Sol C. Siegel. Associate producer, Colbert Clark. Directed by Robert Siodmak.

PLAYERS: Nancy Kelly, Richard Carlson, Albert Basserman, Martin Kosleck.

SYNOPSIS

Richard Carlson, a young interne, gets tangled up in a murder accidentally and finds himself being hounded by police. In escaping he forces Nancy Kelly, an artist, to flee with him. Using novel twists on ways and means to elude police, the story moves to an unexpected climax. Albert Basserman and Martin Kosleck appear in roles different from the types they usually portray.

BILLY THE KID'S ROUND-UP (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Western

PRODUCER: Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Sherman Scott.

PLAYERS: Buster Crabbe, Al St. John, Carleton Young, Joan Barclay, Glenn Strange.

SYNOPSIS

Billy (Buster Crabbe) and his two pals, Fuzzy and Jeff, are sent for by Sheriff Hanley to help him combat the unlawful element. Landreau, saloon keeper, has the sheriff murdered and sends one of his henchmen to ambush the trio. The ambush fails. Billy decides to help the local newspaper editor in his campaign for honest government. Landreau retaliates by kidnapping the editor's daughter. Billy and his pals rescue her but find the newspaper office a shambles on their return to town. In the showdown, Landreau and his gang are routed.

DICK TRACY VS. CRIME, INC.
Serial—15 Episodes (182)

Dick Tracy (Ralph Byrd) is summoned from Washington to halt the depredations of a master criminal known only as "The Ghost," whose signature—left with each crime—is a thumbprint of "Rackets" Reagan, a former crime czar who was executed at Sing Sing through the efforts of Tracy.

The Ghost is suspected of being a member of the "Council of Eight," a body of influential citizens organized to rid New York of Reagan's reign of crime. Because, through the genius of a mad fanatic known as "Lucifer" (John Davidson), he is able to make himself invisible at times, he has thus far been able to murder three other members of the "Council of Eight" without leaving a clue to his identity.

Dick Tracy embarks upon a long and perilous campaign to expose the Ghost by modern, scientific methods of crime deduction. With his pal, Bill Carr (Michael Owen), Tracy prevents a catastrophic earthquake which the Ghost seeks to bring about by dynamiting a volcanic fault in New York harbor.

Brewster (Robert Frazer), an industrial scientist, has developed an aerial torpedo which the Ghost is anxious to steal, presumably to sell to a foreign power. Tracy and Carr have several hair-breadth escapes in their efforts to guard this torpedo.

After several attempts are made to gain possession of the aerial torpedo, Tracy narrows the suspects down to two men, Weldon (John Dilson) or Morton (Ralph Morgan). Tracy corners these two, and by this time has developed a counter-ray which prevents the Ghost from becoming invisible. The Ghost turns out to be Morton, who was secretly the brother of Reagan. Trying to escape he is electrocuted on high-tension wires.

GAUCHO SPORTS (RKO)
Sportscope (24,303)

The Argentine cowboy is known as the gaucho. Here, on the acres of the estancia "Tres Bonetes," traditional gaucho pastimes are photographed. One of the most popular Argentine instruments used both in sports and work is known as the Boleador. This consists of three leather wrapped weights suspended by rawhide thongs. When the Boleador is released it fans out and wraps itself around the legs of an animal. Its uses is demonstrated in a game with the "avastruz," the Argentine ostrich. In roping calves the gaucho uses a different technique than the northern cowpuncher. He throws two ropes, the first keeps the calf within range, and the second provides a long running loop which catches his forelegs. The subject ends with a bareback horserace.

FANCY ANSWERS (MGM)
Pete Smith Specialty (S-362)

This is the fifth in Pete Smith's series of quiz shorts in which the audience participates in guessing the answers. One question has to do with a hemisemidemiquaver, whatever that is. Another seeks to identify a south seas costume, something between a sarong and a sheet. A third question attempts to determine whether a zebar is white with black stripes or vice versa. Other questions have to do with a guinea pig's tail, a "claque" and a "quitch."
Release date, November 1, 1941 10 Minutes

IN THE ZOO (Par.)
Speaking of Animals (*Y*1-2)

This is another in this unique series wherein birds and animals speak. Clever animation and trick photography are used to obtain this result. Among the beasts that do the talking are a black bear, a giraffe, a wart hog, bison, wallaby, iguana, hippopotamus, 'possum, seal, camel, monkey, sacred cow, bear and skunk.

THE FLYING BEAR (MGM)
Color Cartoon (W-253)

This reports on the second escapade of Barney Bear in the armed service of the country. Having investigated the infantry, he now turns to the air force. Not satisfied with the huge machines coming off the line, Barney builds his own plane. He takes off in the contraption and everything is swell until he gets into a dog fight with a pelican. The bird gets the better of the battle and the ship, no longer controllable, zooms high into the stratosphere. Barney is frozen into an ice cube. Then the plane breaks up and the bear falls down, down into a flying fortress which he doesn't know how to fly. Finally he and the plane crack up and Barney goes back to his job as a "grease monkey."

VIVA MEXICO (MGM)
Miniature (M-240)

This Miniature, narrated by James FitzPatrick, is dedicated to the establishment of a better understanding of the customs and habits of the Mexican people in order to bring important sections of the Western Hemisphere into closer, friendlier contact. The subject shows rural Mexico first, then moves to the capital, Mexico City, to show the huge modern city in all its glory. Various government buildings are depicted. Then the camera dwells on the local police band and dancers performing a native dance.

WOMEN IN PHOTOGRAPHY (Col.)
Cinescope (3974)

Four of America's leading women photographers here demonstrate the heartache and backache that go into the making of fine photographs. The camera visits Margaret Bourke-White, Bernice Abbott, Ruth Nichols and Toni Frissell as they go about their work. They climb to practically inaccessible structures, in howling winds and burning heat. They pose models ranging from babies to beauties. They develop and print their own pictures.

ROAD IN INDIA (Par.)
Fascinating Journey (Color) (*M*1-1)

This is a journey along the famed Indian road that winds for many thousands of miles through fertile plains and over desolate mountains, across burning desert and through mysterious jungle. Although the public highway is modern, the travelers who use it are of yesterday. Squatting Yogis are part of the panorama of the Indian road. In sharp contrast is the mode of travel of a local Rajah. He travels in state with his ceremonial sword bearers, his drummers and his dancing girls.

Blackmail

NOT OF THE BRAND TO WHICH THE HEADS OF THE INDUSTRY HAVE TESTIFIED TO . . .

but worse

of the kind practiced against you you and you—day in and day out!

Circuits as well as individuals lose hundreds and in some cases thousands of dollars, yearly, to the quiet, sharp-brained violators of cash receipts.

You are giving-in to involuntary BLACKMAIL . . . and all because neither your method nor any of the varied systems of cash control now in existence is adequate . . . although every exhibitor believes his is the 'thief-proof' system . . . we know better.

SEVERAL RIDICULOUS PRACTICES THAT ENCOURAGE TICKET-TAMPERING

1 . . . many totally disregard the register on the machine — by saying, "they can't make the register numbers jibe with the ticket numbers."

2 . . . no check is made of the torn stubs in the doorman's ticket-box.

3 . . . a few do not control their refunds. It is a fine "good will policy" but it would be much better if the refunded tickets were checked with a time-stamp.

4 . . . some circuits and individuals rely upon the advice of the cashier as to the worthiness of a cash control system. Common sense dictates that it's the job of the home office executives . . . they ought to know.

5 . . . some object to changing-over or improving their present system because it requires some change in home office filing. Inconsistent with a 'making-money' policy.

All the smart picture buying can't do you any good unless the boxoffice, where your living comes from is protected. Wake-up NOW . . . it will be to your credit to look into the Unicon System of Cash Control. It may not be essential to purchase the entire system. One of its parts may be all that is necessary to plug-up the leak in your boxoffice.

Are You the "ALL YOUR EGGS IN ONE BASKET" Kind Of Showman?

Do you rely entirely on one method of advertising?

If you do, DON'T! You'll never hit the high-spots unless you hit hard everywhere.

Lots of people out for a walk will "go for" a good poster display or a dramatic 24-sheet. Lots of people out for a stroll look in windows. Lots of people ambling along are attracted by bright lights and colorful display.

Don't put all your advertising eggs in one basket. Spread them around. Yell your head off with good, readable, colorful, peppy posters, banners, flyers, snipes, novelties, displays.

Use your head. It will show on the BLACK side in your box office.

ON AND FOR BROADWAY

WITH much more decor and perhaps even less decorum, Broadway is now having a burlesque hit under the guise of musical comedy and the title of "Let's Face It."

Being a hit, one can anticipate that even now Hollywood production is reading reports and synopses, with a rival interest perhaps spurred by the "G-String Murder" project reported in the initial steps toward the camera.

"Let's Face It" is exceedingly competent Minsky. The pure Minsky used to be marketed at about 50 cents top, while the Broadway musical asks and gets $4.40. That is, perhaps, only fair in that the rich are as much entitled to access to such art as the poor.

The production is so rich in material and so glossy of treatment that it is hard to be sure, but to some observers the high point is achieved in Danny Kay's number of terpsichorean parthenogenetic pantomime in which he faces the military draft as an isogamous isolationist. That part of the script was probably first written on a fence.

TELEVISION MURDER!

AMONG the adventurous aspects of contemporary journalism is the manner in which policy and editorial responsibility are an old fetish observed by the front end of the paper, up to and including the editorial page, while the rest of the sheet gallops off in many directions at the whim of film and book reviewers and assorted columnists.

Conspicuous among such manifestations at this moment is a piece by Mr. Nat Karson, distinguished scenic artist, on the radio page of last Sunday's New York Times, in which he is permitted to fire a broadside of indictment against the radio industry that elsewhere in the paper would have been a cataclysm.

Mr. Karson charges that radio executives have been hindering television to a degree, "nothing short of a crime," . . . "ignoring the public's interest," . . . charging that a terrific new art is being throttled to protect "an $80,000,000 investment," which he says "radio has paid off."

If Mr. Karson could say that on the Times editorial page, a number of persons would be in communication with the management. Meanwhile, it is still what "The Times says."

COMES "THE SUN"

THAT new Chicago daily which Mr. Marshall Field III is a-starting in Chicago, apparently because he does not approve of the Chicago Tribune, is announced as "The Chicago Sun," a morning paper, in page advertisements in the New York metropolitan press. Outstanding is Mr. Field's signed assertion that it is to be an "objective" paper. That might lead to speculation as to whether that means a distinction in policy from his New York daily, "PM," which has so many utterly subjective aspects. The objective Chicago paper is going to take advertising, while the subjective New York paper does not. So far the subjectivity demonstrated has tended to the pink, if not the red. Apparently the plan is to put the rising "Sun" into the black. It's going to be fun. Incidentally, as our news columns disclose, "The Sun" has a motion picture policy.

NO MIRACLE

THE lay press is again a-twitter with a new story of the miracle of stereoscopic motion pictures, "with the present standard equipment". This time it is a misconstruction of an article from the Journal of the Optical Society of America concerning the use of polaroid filters in cinematography. Polaroid can polarize light so that it vibrates in a single plane. By photographing a scene with the viewpoints of the two eyes filtered perpendicularly to each other, there results a pair of images that can be sorted out for the two eyes, by polaroid spectacles, with precisely that same sort of stereoscopic effect that was had by using the familiar red and green color separations applied nearly forty years ago. The red and green lorgnettes have been passed through many a theatre audience for special presentations. There is not yet, and certainly is never likely to be, a stereoscopic motion picture without a viewing device. Stereoscopic seeing is in the brain, not on any screen, not in any scene, not in any eyes. Promoters never admit that.

GRANITE CLOSE-UP

A PICTURE, started fourteen years ago, presenting in stone the faces of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt up on Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, has just been completed, under the direction of Lincoln Borglum, son of Gutzon whose project outlived him. The production cost is $836,000, paid by the United States. It is a close-up with the heads in the dimensions of men 465 feet tall, even too big for the Music Hall in New York. Most of the chiseling was done with dynamite. This story in stone is expected to stay said quite awhile, since the granite weathers less than a sixteenth of an inch in a hundred years. In 2041 it will look about the same, whether the rest of the country does or not.

IF it is a home, it will have in it a clock that ticks the minutes away so that in the still hours one can hear them pass. It will be a clock which is wound with a key, and it will be all the better if it is a tall one with weights, the kind that gets oiled with a turkey feather now and again. With such a clock you can possess your time, but with those electric gadgets, synchronized and controlled from some remote powerhouse, the hours go slithering and sneaking by at the behest of network and belong to a system. —Terry Ramsaye

This Week in the News

One Round for F-P

THE rivalry between the N. L. Nathanson theatre interests and the Famous Players Canadian circuit in Canada—a rivalry marked at first by rapid theatre buying and acquisition of executive personnel, and which brought the two groups into the law courts—has now reverted to more normal competitive methods, it would appear, with the settlement out of court, this week, of their dispute over ownership of the Broadway Theatre, Timmins, Ontario.

Through Paramount, J. J. Fitzgibbons, FPC president, announced Tuesday that his company's legal action against Mr. Nathanson's Empire Universal Films, Ltd., and Associated Theatres, Ltd., and against Oscar R. Hanson, and the Broadway Theatre, had been settled out of court, "with the defendant admitting Famous Players' claim."

The settlement gives FPC ownership of the Broadway. It also owns the Cartier, and has an interest in the Palace, Goldfield and New Empire, all in Timmins.

Meanwhile, Oscar Hanson, who came from FPC with Mr. Nathanson to organize the Odeon circuit of approximately 85 houses, and who broke with Mr. Nathanson four weeks ago to organize his own theatre circuit and film distributing companies, this week acquired Alliance Films, Ltd., independent exchange, and Colonial Pictures, Ltd., both of Toronto.

While $20,000,000 Wait

ALLOWED by the British to withdraw $20,000,000 of their film rentals from the British Isles during this and the next 11 months, American film companies—who were to establish among themselves their shares of that $20,000,000—have been delayed, it is reported, by disagreement over apportionment. The report has Loew's the chief dissident. The seven other majors, it is related, favor apportionment on last year's basis: percentages equal to each company's comparative gross billings the year previous.

Loew's disapproved this formula last year. Its opposition went under arbitration and the decision favored the other companies. Loew's warned it would not again submit to the formula. The company is said to advocate apportionment based on net earnings, rather than gross billings.

The $20,000,000 is payable by the British in equal quarterly instalments.

Meanwhile, the companies have broken the financial jam at Shanghai: they may withdraw $18,000 monthly. Previously, the city's Exchange Control Board had removed the companies from its preferred list and frozen their money. The city and area contribute approximately 50 per cent of the U. S. distributors' Chinese revenues.

Off to Jail They Go

APPARENTLY it was more than coincidence that caused Willie Bioff and George E. Browne to elect this week to start serving their respective 10 and 8-year jail sentences, for, on the day before they made known their decisions, the U. S. Supreme Court in Washington refused to review decision of the lower courts convicting two other IATSE chiefs, John P. (Big) Nick and Clyde A. Weston, of St. Louis. All four had been found guilty of violating the Federal anti-racket law, Bioff and Browne in the New York extortion case, and Nick and Weston for extorting from St. Louis exhibitors.

Bioff and Browne are awaiting a hearing on an appeal, and have been in the House of Detention in New York. If their appeal is refused the time spent there would not be applied to their prison terms. Freedom on bail pending an appeal had been denied.

Both have been examined by the U. S. Attorney General's office in New York to determine whether they can pay the $20,000 fines levied against them.

The Supreme Court's refusal to review the Nick-Weston convictions was seen in Washington as an indication of what Bioff and Browne might expect.

"Big" Nick and Clyde Weston must serve five year prison terms. The two had been president and business agent, respectively, of St. Louis IATSE Local No. 143, had been deposed, and then convicted in Federal Court last year of extorting thousands of dollars from theatre owners in 1936 and 1937, by asking excessively high wages in new projectionists' contracts, and then taking the "payoffs" from exhibitors for lower wages.

IATSE locals, it is understood, are contemplating protests against payment by the union of the legal expenses of Bioff and Browne, expenses incurred defending themselves against the Government's charges of extortion.

Lloyd a Governor?

HAROLD LLOYD is a potential candidate for California's next gubernatorial election, in 1942. The Republicans this week asked the movie comedian of wide-rim glasses (without any glass) to seek the nomination in the GOP's August primaries. Mr. Lloyd said he would make known his decision around the New York holiday.

Harold Lloyd has been around theatricals some 36 years, starting with Little Abe in "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," on the stage, in Omaha, at 12, and starting in pictures in 1913 with Edison. He hasn't been doing much in movies of late, however; his last picture having been "Professor Beware," for Paramount, three years ago. He produced "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," for RKO, 18 months ago.

'Haysapoppin'

THE Indiana Society of Chicago this week picked Will Harrison Hays, of Sullivan, Ind., Washington, D. C., New York and Hollywood as the No. 1 Hoosierite for 1941. Rising from a country lawyer to a president-maker—he was Warren G. Harding's campaign manager—on President Harding's election he assumed the traditional post of Postmaster General, from where he went, in 1922, to the head of the organized motion picture industry. Mr. Hays will be the Society's guest of honor at its traditional annual "favorite son" dinner on Saturday, December 13th, at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago. They're calling it the "Haysapoppin" dinner.

Each year for 20 the Society has chosen a prominent native of Indiana as its guest for the dinner, which some 1,400 Hoosiers usually attend. Last year, cartoonist John T. McCutcheon was honored. Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, born in Franklin, Indiana, was similarly feted. This year, for Mr. Hays, the Hoosiers are planning to build a theatre marquee at the entrance of the Stevens' grand ballroom, and a Hollywood opening-night atmosphere is promised for the occasion.

The March of Dimes

NICHOLAS M. SCHENCK, president of Loew's, Inc., has accepted appointment as national chairman of the Motion Picture Committee for the 1942 March of Dimes campaign to take place in January, it was announced by Loew's on Tuesday in New York. Proceeds of the drive, conducted in connection with President Roosevelt's birthday, are devoted to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which helps Mr. Roosevelt's Warm Springs, Ga., institution, and others.

Joseph Bernhard, vice-president of Warner Bros., Harry Brandt, president of Independent Theatre Owners and C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's theatre executive, were appointed co-chairmen to serve with Mr. Schenck. Oscar A. Doob, advertising director of Loew's, was named national publicity chairman for the motion picture committee.

Field's Sun's Rates

MARSHALL FIELD, who publishes New York's newspaper, PM, enters the newspaper preserve of Colonel Robert R. (Bertie) McCormick and William Randolph Hearst, on Monday, with a new morning newspaper, the Chicago Sun, touching off a circulation and advertising war that already has the country's interest. It may benefit local theatres by lowering theatrical advertising rates.

These rates are: for the new Sun, 40 cents per line for downtown theatres and 25 cents for suburban, with a five per cent discount for consecutive insertions running one year or more; for the Chicago Daily News (Colonel Frank Knox), and the Herald American (Hearst), 75 cents, and 65 cents for the respective categories mentioned; and for the Tribune (McCormick), 94 cents, and 79 cents, on contract.

The Sun's amusement department so far contains Ted Weber, amusement advertising manager; Claudia Cassidy, drama and music critic; Wolfe Kaufman, film editor; Carl Combs, "second string" drama and film critic; George Shaffer, Coast correspondent. More will be hired.

Mr. Kaufman said this week "Films will be called as the critics see them." All films will be reviewed in print the day after the first showing in the city's downtown houses, he added.

Going, Going . . . ?

POSTPONEMENT indefinitely of further Senate hearings on motion picture propaganda was ordered Wednesday by Senator D. Worth Clark of Idaho, chairman of the inquiry subcommittee. There is little probability that anything further will be done with the investigation this year, Washington reported—if at anytime.

So many important matters are pending in Congress that members of the Interstate Commerce Committee subcommittee have no time for the investigations, it was explained.

Two months have elapsed since the hearings were recessed, with members of the group repeatedly promising that they would get together "soon" to decide upon their future program.

Karl Wiesel

THE death of Karl Wiesel of Munich, Germany, has just now come to the attention of the trade. Mr. Wiesel was a passenger on the ill-fated Spanish refugee ship, S.S. Navemar, which arrived in New York harbor late last Summer after touching at Bermuda and Havana. It will be recalled that upon the arrival of the ship here passengers reported that conditions of dire distress had been experienced en route due to overcrowding, lack of sanitation and scarcity and poor quality of food and water.

The experiences of the passage, following months of desperate existence on the Continent, proved a too great tax on the physical resources of Mr. Wiesel and he expired at sea on August 24th.

Mr. Wiesel was one of the leading film executives of pre-Hitler Germany. Born in Austria, he lived for many years in Munich. He was one of the founders of Bayrische Film Gesellschaft Fett & Wiesel, which was eventually expanded and reorganized into the Emelkaconcern of which he remained a principal director. He was a founder of one of the principal synagogues in Munich which, incidentally, is the only synagogue still standing in Munich and still holding services, and was well known as a patron of hospitals, orphanages and vacation camps for children. Surviving is a nephew, J. Epstein, Mexico City manager for Universal.

Whitney Says . . .

CLOAKED in secrecy, and answers of "confidential" to Hollywood press inquiries, John Hay Whitney, in charge of the film program of Nelson Rockefeller's Office of Inter-American Affairs this week called together in Los Angeles studio chiefs for a conclave on how the U. S. Government wants motion pictures to present the "true American way" for foreign screens. Last week MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported Mr. Whitney's urgings that films, whether Hollywood-made or non-theatrical, be "utterly truthful and authentic picturizations of American life and objectives."

Mr. Whitney recently returned from a two-months tour of South America.

The Hollywood meetings between Mr. Whitney, his assistant, Francis Alstock, and the film executives were to thrash out all details of putting the Whitney-Rockefeller film program into action. Phil Reisman, RKO foreign manager, who is to set up a distribution system to exchange non-theatrical films with South America, was also in Hollywood for the conferences.

Out of the meetings was to come, presumably, a detailed program of documentary pictures to be made here and in Latin America assigned to each studio. At midweek from the meetings, and from Mr. Whitney's Beverly-Wilshire suite, nothing but silence had emanated.

WHO'S BUYING WHAT IN FEATURE PRODUCT FROM THE DISTRIBUTORS

Circuit Deals Completed for 1941-42 Product; Paramount National Theatres Dispute Settled; RKO, UA Report Sales

Large and small circuits are now buying majors' product with virtually no letup, with none of the hesitation that appeared earlier in the season because of the newness and unfamiliarity of the consent decree selling system. Majors not bound by the decree, additionally, appear to be at full tilt in their 1941-42 product deals.

Paramount and National Theatres appear to have patched up differences over product terms, disclosed three weeks ago in a public announcement by Paramount, that it was selling away from Fox Intermountain, Fox Wisconsin, and other units of the circuit. The company later asserted it had sold blocks one and two of its new season product to Fox Intermountain, Fox Wisconsin, and to the Evergreen State Theatres circuit.

The deals were negotiated by Charles Reagan, Paramount's assistant sales manager, during visits to Kansas City, Denver, and Los Angeles, and they followed discussions a few weeks ago between Neil Agnew, the company's general sales manager, and Spyros Skouras, National Theatres chieftain.

215 Theatres Buy RKO Blocks

Three more large circuits, aggregating 215 theatres, have bought RKO blocks since the last report in these pages on 1941-42 buying.

The Malco chain of 105 houses in Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee bought the company's second block, previously having signed for the first. The 85 theatres of the Robb and Rowley in Texas Territory group bought both blocks. And the Associated Circuit of 25 theatres in Ohio also took two blocks.

The deals were made in the field.

United Artists last week disclosed many circuit deals in the Chicago territory, thus: the F. W. Anderson, Reinheimer, Jack Rose, J. Lasker, Joe Stern, Van Nomikas, Essaness, Great States and the Warner Brothers circuits.

A deal was also completed with the Balaban & Katz first-run houses.

MGM sold its new pictures to Paramount-Richards' 64 theatres in the Louisiana area. This chain was termed the last of the Paramount affiliates to buy the company's product.

Republic Product Purchased

The Fanchon & Marco, and St. Louis Amusement company first-run and neighborhood houses in that area have bought the new Republic lineup, after a visit to the city by James R. Grainger, president of Republic.

In the same city, the Paramount exchange reported selling its first two blocks to 280 houses in adjacent areas, and Illinois. These sales do not represent the city, where deals are in abeyance pending clearance establishment; but they include the Rogers and Frisina circuits.

Ray Nolan, head of the RKO branch in St. Louis, reported sales of his company's new product were moving "very favorably," with the St. Louis Amusement Company, operators of 25 neighborhood houses, among those already sold. Deals with the Wehrenberg-Kaimann chain of 24 houses are pending, Mr. Nolan said.

Twentieth Century Fox has chalked up an impressive record in the St. Louis area, said Ben Reingold, branch manager. Out of 403 prospective customers, 340 theaters have been sold the first group of five; 330 the second group of two; 231 the third group of five and 93 have been sold the fourth group of four so far, said Mr. Reingold.

In between the sales on these four groups, Mr. Reingold said 240 contracts were negotiated for two Zane Grey films. He said the St. Louis Amusement chain had bought all but the last group. Among those sold according to him, were the Frisina, Rogers and Gasconade circuits in outstate Missouri and Illinois. The Wehrenberg-Kaimann chain in St. Louis has been sold the first two groups, he said.

Minnesota Buys Fox Lineup

Minnesota Amusement Company, Paramount's circuit affiliate in that state, has bought the Twentieth Century-Fox lineup, under the state's law requiring selling of an entire season's product at one time. The circuit is also reported buing product of UA.

In New York, delays are reported in Paramount-Loew circuit negotiations, with consequent lack of new Paramount product in the circuits which ordinarily follow Loew's.

Producers Releasing Corporation this week released a list of circuits with which deals for 1941-42 product have been closed since November 1st, as follows: Boston Exchange: Harry Asher closed with the Charles Morse circuit. Detroit: Bill Flemion completed a deal with the Mutual theatres. Indianapolis: John Servaas circuit signed by Sam Abrams. Dallas: The Lewis theatres in Houston closed by Jack Adams. Pittsburgh: Godfrey Lefton of the Pittsburgh office closed with the Clearfield Amusement Company-Mid State theatres in the Pittsburgh territory. Lew Lefton also consummated a deal with the Alpine Theatres in Pittsburgh. New Orleans: Theatres Service Corporation signed by Fred Goodrow. Cleveland: Bernard Rubin secured a deal with Max Lefkowitz of Community Theatres for the Circle theatre in Cleveland on the 1941-42 product. This is the first time this exhibitor has given an independent company a commitment for this house. George Becker of Cleveland also closed a deal for the Bijou and Avalon theatres in Toledo, Ohio. This marks the introduction of P. R. C. product into this situation.

Additional deals, reported later, have been in Indianapolis, with the Manny Marcus, Rex Carr, Dudley Williston, and Sam Switow circuits; in Washington, with the Lightman, Warner, and Notes theatres; in Atlanta, with the Bijou and Martin circuits; in Chicago, with the Indiana-Illinois and Gollos Brothers chains; and, in Seattle, with the P. J. D. houses.

Also, in Pittsburgh, with the E. L. Keesling circuit; in Detroit, with the Carl Moule, Midwest, and Bernstein circuits; in Atlanta, with the Lucas and Jenkins, and Cumberland Amusement Company groups; in Minneapolis, with the Gus Baehr circuit; in San Francisco, with the Aaron Goldberg Theatres; and in Charlotte, North Carolina, with the Everette Theatres, Inc.

American film companies have virtually "sewn up" the Latin-American market, according to Roberto Socas, Producers Releasing Corporation foreign sales manager, who returned to the New York office two weeks ago, after a two month business trip to that area, with the observation that, in all his travels, he did not see one film from Europe.

American Films Most Popular

The report of foreign film competition, Mr. Socas labeled "just reports," adding that not only are North American films popular, but also the foreign policy of this country.

He reported closing a distribution deal, for this year's and next year's P. R. C. product, with Clemente Lococo, Argentine distributor and theatre owner. Territories covered are Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay and Chile.

The company has opened its own office in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, with Alberto Carvalho in charge.

The acceptance by Mr. Lococo of P. R. C. pictures for distribution, Mr. Socas said, was a tribute to his company's product—liked, in Latin America, he noted, because they contain action and hence are understandable in sections of high illiteracy.

Monogram recently disclosed deals made with theatres belonging to the Griffith circuit in Oklahoma, Texas, and Missouri (164); the Comerford circuit of Pennsylvania, and New York (78); the Everett circuit, Charlotte, North Carolina; the Frisina circuit, St. Louis; the Harris circuit, Pittsburgh; the Theatrical Managers, Inc., Indianapolis; the Kallet circuit, Albany; and the Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Detroit.

In San Francisco, MGM was reported selling away from Golden States circuit to independent theatres.

In Cleveland, Cooperative Theatres circuit reported buying the first block from Paramount, the second and first from Warners; the same from MGM and Fox; and it added it has bought all of Columbia and United Artists new product.

The Joy Houck and the Film Service, Inc., circuits, of New Orleans, have bought Republic's new lineup.

UA Drops Detroit Deal

United Detroit circuit's purchase of United Artists' product for its downtown Detroit houses is seen, in that city, ending the releasing company's plan to acquire a theatre in pursuit of its circuit building. UA had been reported attempting to buy the former RKO Downtown Theatre, lately a night club.

It is said the United Detroit deal with UA is only its second for new product. It has bought Columbia's new pictures. No scarcity in screen fare is seen, however, observers remarking slowness of buying is a characteristic of the Detroit scene.

PARAMOUNT DEALS IN MINNESOTA

Paramount has closed deals with more than 50 per cent of its customers in Minnesota, Charles M. Reagan, assistant sales manager, reported in New York on Monday, since Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard signed the order on November 3rd, modifying the New York consent decree to permit the company to sell in that state under the terms of the Minnesota anti-five block law.

U. S. WILL PROSECUTE 'LITTLE THREE' IN NEW YORK ANTI-TRUST ACTION

Early Trial Date Sought for Key Action; Georgia Action Against Distributors, Circuit Seeks $1,500,000 Damages

The United States Government not only has no intentions of dropping its anti-trust prosecution of Columbia, United Artists and Universal, non-consent decree signatories in the key anti-trust action in New York, but it has quietly advanced plans for resuming its action.

The "Little Three" action will be brought to trial soon after January 1st at New York by the Department of Justice, it was learned this week from authoritative sources in Washington.

The U. S. District Court at New York has already been approached by the government for a trial date soon after the first of the year and preparations for the case are being pushed rapidly in both New York and Washington. A formal request for a trial before Judge Henry W. Goddard, who presided during the trial which resulted in the consent decree, is scheduled to be filed this week.

Plans to set the government case against Columbia, United Artists and Universal in motion again have been under consideration for some time it was learned. Trial preparations are said to be well along now and the Department of Justice has instructed its New York office manager to seek an early date on the court calendar.

The action sets at rest widespread speculaion on what the government intended to do about the Little Three case and ends reports that it depended on the outcome of trust actions elsewhere.

Meanwhile a million and a half dollar anti-trust complaint was filed in Atlanta, Ga., against distributors and the Lucas and Jenkins Circuit. The Crescent and Schad cases in Nashville and Philadelphia neared completion and the Schine suit at Buffalo and various other anti-trust actions were still being prepared.

Attorneys for the Little Three, it was reported at New York, have told the government that they will oppose any move to bring the case to trial before April. They are said to feel that it would be impossible to defend it and the Schine case, now on the Buffalo docket for mid-January, at the same time. From the Washington reports it is considered likely that the government will insist on precedence for the New York block-booking issues.

Robert Wright, assistant attorney general in charge of the motion picture section of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, maintained the official department reticence on pending actions when questioned about the Little Three case at Washington on Friday. "I am unable to say when the action against the Little Three will start," he said.

It is known, however, that the case, held in abeyance since the entry of the consent decree with the Big Five a year ago, has been occupying a considerable portion of his attention in recent weeks.

Actual trial of the case may not start until mid-February or March, according to New York sources familiar with the district court docket, unless Judge Goddard sets the case ahead.
